STAFFORD. — LYCEUM THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—The Babes in the Wood pantomime, as presented here this week by Mr. and Mrs. John Walters' company, is guaranteed to cure the worst fit of the blues, and, in addition to the book, specialities are given by the Sweet Sixteen Ballet Troupe, Hulme and Kedward, Tom Lewes, Alley M. Benson, Emerald Quartette, and the Cattanio Troupe of Italian Athletes. Mr. Tom Lewis as the Wicked Uncle is decidedly funny, and works in conjunction with Mr. Martin Haley and Mr. Dan Rayner, as Blustering Bill and Wavering Wally; Mr. Ally M. Benson is an amusing Dame; and Mr. Tom Hulme a big success as Tommy. The Babes, by Mr. F. Parkinson and Miss Kitty Chester, are cleverly portrayed; and Miss Violet Thorne makes a good Robin Hood; Miss Lilly Miller being successful as Maid Marion.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—His Wife No Longer was played here for three nights by Mr. Stephen Pritt's drama répertoire company, the other three nights being occupied by the same company in A Woman's Passion. In the former play Mr. Archie Helsby takes the principal part, Anthony Merivale, and makes the character a realistic one; Miss Rosa Mervyn appears as Mrs. Merivale, another delineation that is altogether successful; Harold Medworth is in the capable hands of Mr. E. Paul Neville; and Mr. Edmund Grogan is good as the Rev. Frank Willacy. Mr. A. B. Douglass' Daniel Trench shows care and study; Mr. David McFarlane's impersonation of Tommy is refreshing; Mr. L. A. Baines gets good fun out of P.C. Michael Flanagan; Miss Nellie Lawson as Lucy Hooper presents a graceful picture of the American lady; and Miss Emmie Barton does well and looks sweet as Marion Jefferies. On Thursday evening Mr. McLeod Loader took his annual benefit.

HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo. Weisker.—A programme in which fun is the special feature is presented this week. The Bouncing Dillons create endless amusement as well as admiration in their gymnastic act; Coram's clever performance as a ventriloquist is received with applause; J. W. Rowley keeps the house in a state of hilarity with his songs and patter; and Howard and Collinson are interesting in their act, The Porter and the Parcel. F. S. Hulme, the Orchide, and Harry Mantell complete the evening's entertainment.

STOCKPORT. — THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Thoroughly interesting have been the representations of Her Love Against the World, given here this week by Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's company. Mr. Fred Emery acts with much power and feeling as Eric; Mr. Lewis Gilbert gives a talented impersonation of Ulric; and Mr. W. H. Hallatt's portrayal of Prince Othmar is a most acceptable one. As Iris, Miss Grace Heywood is charmingly sympathetic; Miss Blanche Steele acts effectively as Shulah; and Miss Rossie St. John admirably presents the youthful Lionel.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—Ferguson and Mack, comedians, with their funny patter, head the bill here, which also includes that clever comedian Henry Carlton and his company in an amusing sketch The Pierrot. Among others appearing are Mlle. Marjutte, a graceful contortionist; Marie Glenn, who sings Scotch ballads delightfully; the Brothers Bradshaw, genuinely amusing acrobats; Tim Morris, whistler of operatic selections; and W. B. Raby, a favourite comedian here.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES. — CASTLE THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Cecil Imeson.—Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton, with their company, opened on Monday in The Taming of the Shrew. Miss Lily Brayton as Katharina acted with wonderful passion; and Bianca was admirably played by Miss Elerida Clement. Miss Caroline Bayley ably enacted the part of the Widow well; the rôle of Petruchio was excellently presented by Mr. Oscar Asche; the character of Baptista was in the safe keeping of Mr. Herbert Grimwood; and those of Vincentio and Lucentio were in the hands of Messrs. J. Fritz Russell and G. Kay Souper respectively. Gremio and Hortensio, suitors to Bianca, were well represented by Mr. Caleb Porter and Mr. R. Ian Penny; Mr. Athol Forde as Grumio was very funny; as was also Mr. Tripp Edgar as Tranio. Othello was billed for Friday night.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton.—The Pichel Troupe of risley acrobats provide an excellent top of the bill here this week; Harry "Curly" Beaumont's Rochez ponies and dogs are very clever; Dan Whitley, eccentric character comedian, won considerable favour; some capital music is rendered by the Barton and Franklin Trio; Halma, the Scottish Society juggler, is given a flattering reception; Drum and Major appear in their latest success, "Why, why, why"; and other good turns are furnished by Maizie Hibbs, dancer; Crissie Cross, singer and dancer; the Bioscope concluding with A Village Tragedy and The Hands of a Wizard.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery's stock company is here, with The Beautiful Avenger. The leading characters are represented by Miss Lilian Beaumont, Miss Lina Nazeby, Mr. Ernest Wingfield, Mr. Frank S. Strickland, and Mr. Leslie Nolan. Some capital pictures on Payne's Biophotoscope are exhibited.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Moroney.—Archie Goodall, the old International footballer, performs the novel and wonderful feat of walking the hoop. The endurance required to accomplish this must be little short of marvellous, seeing that Goodall gives a display of his strength lasting nearly ten minutes while he is suspended from the top of the hoop head downwards. The Wedburns are amusing and refined comedy entertainers; the Saletos give a finished exhibition of head and hand balancing; the Three Sisters Lee are graceful acrobats; and also appearing are Edna West, Ronald George, Johnnie Walker, and Syd Herman.

STOURBRIDGE.—ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Douglas C. Phelps; Manageress, Miss Maude Lynton.—Messrs. O. Silverstone and H. Wright's company are playing The Nihilist here. Mr. William Armour takes the part of Ivan Nowasky very finely; Mr. Cowell Clarke as Karl Orloff plays realistically; Mr. O. Silverstone has a difficult part in that of Prince Alexander, and handles it admirably; Mr. Henry Wright as Bobbie Smart deserves special mention; Mr. J. Brunelle Harvey plays Father Gourko in a finished style; Miss Florry Kelsey as Princess Olga acts in excellent style; Miss Edna Clarke as Alexina Orloff must be highly spoken of; Miss Jessica Ford as Katrina Zindoff causes much amusement; little Ella Nixon as Little Alexina shows great promise; Mr. C. Newton Buckland as Piertree Petoff is very smart; Mr. Morgan Dale as Sergeant Markoff has a good part, and does justice to it; Mr. S. G. Eugene as Adolphus is well suited; Mr. Edward Dowds as Kopski and Mr. James Hamilton as Seavoritch fill their respective rôles with ability.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Alexander Telford.—Mr. Wilfred Cotton's company in Butterflies, is drawing crowded houses. Mr. W. Louis Bradfield handles the rôle of Widgery Blake in a commendable manner, and sings the new song "Puck" with such verve and feeling as to touch the heart as well as charm the ear; Mr. Richard Green gives a finished portrayal of Max Riadore; Messrs. Alfred Selby and Roy Sidney are excellent in their respective parts of Paul and Peter; Mr. Blake Adams gives an irresistibly humorous rendering of Christopher Podmore; and Mr. William Spray, alert and irrepressible, is thoroughly in his element as Yarker, the chauffeur, his rich humour being much enjoyed. Miss Georgie Corlass as Rodanthe, "the witch," is clever, graceful, and charming; Misses Stella St. Audrey and Constance Clive as Nora and Elsie Podmore give faithful representations of their parts. The dance of the Parisians in Acts II. and III. is exceedingly pretty and effective. A feature in the play is the classical dance, entitled "La Naissance du Papillon," illustrating the birth of a butterfly, danced by Miss Phyllis Monkman. The dresses and scenery are particularly fine.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Dunn.—Messrs. Frank Adair and company are presenting The Heathen and the Christian, and the house is well filled each night. Miss Louis Adair gave an artistic rendering of May Berresford; Lord Allendale was well taken by Mr. Herbert Robinson; Mr. Frank Adair was seen to advantage as Li, the avenger, his performance stamping him an artist of exceptional ability; Mr. Hugh Mewburn was a decided success as the rascally Lung Hi; and Admiral Freebold was well portrayed by Mr. Gerald Turner. Joshua Sampson, a wealthy ignoramus, was skilfully played by Mr. Fred. Waring; the daughter, Mira, received an excellent handling from Miss Adeline Raby; Miss Eva Reed was a very funny Becky Fibbins, her songs and dances meeting with warm applause.

EMPIRE THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—George Auger, described as the tallest actor in the world, and his company, are heading the programme this week in their original and humorous extravaganza, Jack the Giant Killer, Jack being played by Ernest Rommel. The playlet made a great hit. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Meymott presented their vaudeville comedietta, Semi-Detached, with great success; N. T. Kioto and C. H. Esa gave a sensational equilibristic act; Cliff Ryland, comedian, contributed a song freely embellished with laughable patter; Ernest Clifford, comedian, also made himself sociable with his audience, and proved himself a skilful dancer; J. H. Milburn's powerful voice was heard in capital songs; M'Cann's troupe of performing dogs; Lily Esplin, comedienne; and George M. Baker and Lilian Balfe, xylophone experts, also gave interesting turns.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Foulkes Edwards.—The pictures and vaudeville entertainment at this house continue to draw crowded audiences. This week a topical film of The Visit of the King and Queen to Berlin is being shown. An important picture is that depicting many thrilling adventures of the French criminal, Cartouche; The Fairy's Present is a coloured film which gives evidence of skilful work; "Put me among the girls" proves a popular singing picture; Will Close gives a capital clog dance, and an orchestra of ladies plays a pretty overture.

PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Henry N. Phillips; Resident-Manager, Mr. Francis MacDermott.—An excellent programme of pictures is being submitted here this week to full houses. The chief film is that of Viscount Marco, which was fully appreciated. Arabian Pottery proved an engrossing picture; and Pyrenees was of special interest. Miss Madge Clements is a clever and capable pianist. The singing competition is proving a great draw, and the winner of last week's contest contributes a song.

SWANSEA.—THE GRAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brookes; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. W. Page.—Mr. Leonard Boyne's company in Raffles is here. Mr. Eille Norwood is alert as Raffles, and is responsible for a remarkably fine performance; Mr. E. W. Thomas as the detective makes the most of his part; Harry Manders is played capably by Mr. Harold West; Miss B. Fitzgerald figures to advantage as Lady Ethel, and Miss May Brooke makes a charming Lady Vidal.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell. — Mr. Walter Melville's company is here with The Girl Who Wrecked His Home. Bertha is powerfully played by Miss Louise Hampton; Mr. Frederick Goddar is effective in the rôle of Jack Marshall; Mr. Walter Gregory is a good Lieutenant Kenyon; humour is provided by Miss Ida Thompson and Mr. D. Evans as Winnie Marshall and Billie Stevenson.

THE EMPIRE. — Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—The Bailiff, by Fred Karno's company, is one of the best farcical absurdities that has been seen here. Austin Rudd, a local favourite, does well; Van Allen is a versatile musician; wonderful examples of hoop juggling are given by Stylo; and John Macaulay renders several ballads effectively; Baby Boden is an extremely clever child serio; Beatrice Bonnie pleases all, and the Kroney Brothers excel in a comic tumbling act

THE PALACE.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Excellent pictures are again displayed this week.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—Mr. Haldane Crichton is presenting The Cingalee here. The Hon. Harry Vereker is well taken by Mr. Arthur Cartwright, who possesses a powerful voice; Mr. Jack Crichton is a funny Chambhuddy Ram; Mr. Douglas Munro makes an imposing Boobhamba; Sir Peter is in the able hands of Mr. F. W. Ford; and Mr. Harry E. Ray is particularly good as Myamgah. Mr. Scott Cullen gives a spirited impersonation of Bobby Warren; Peggy Sabine is daintily portrayed by Miss Alice Nixon; and Miss Molly Wolstenhulme charmingly represents Nanoya. Miss Pauline Hague is a pleasing Lady Patricia; Angy Loftus is gracefully taken by Miss Margaret Pitts; and a pas seul is introduced in Act II. by Miss Geraldine Somerset.

G.W.R. MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.—Secretary, Mr. H. J. Southwell.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in Hall Caine's great drama The Prodigal Son appeared here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—The Vedrenne-Barker Company is here this week, and is playing Mr. Bernard Shaw's successful comedy You Never Can Tell. Miss Lena Halliday is seen to great advantage in the rôle of Mrs. Clandon, and portrays the varying moods of that character with conspicuous success. Equally capable is Miss Muriel Dole as Gloria Clandon, her representation being most commendable; Miss Clara Earle has a vivacious and winsome personality, and has plenty of scope as the piquant Dolly Clandon, in which part she does exceedingly well; Mr. Percy Crawford makes a delightfully boyish and light-hearted Philip Crandon; whilst Mr. Leslie Hamer is an attractive Valentine. As Fergus Crampton Mr. J. Edward Pearce performs with much vigour and energy, typifying exactly the character which he represents; and Mr. George Howard is a powerful and forceful Bohun. An excellent impersonation of the good-natured waiter is rendered by Mr. Trevor Lowe, who is decidedly quaint, and at times pathetic; whilst the other parts are well sustained.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Wilton Dale; Manager, Mr. V. Hoskins.—Mouillot and De Freece Hippodrome Season.—The Mahatma is giving a very clever thought-reading act this week; Mildred Parr is much applauded in her musical sketch; the Rosana Quartette are clever dancers; Madley Barrett's songs "fetch" the house; and Ulrick, in his equilibristic feats, is also well received. The Bioscope (including the Royal Visit to Berlin), and that amusing sketch Rejected Remounts complete an excellent bill. On Tuesday the Hildenborough Players were well received at a special matinée.

TYLDESLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. W. Brierley.—Messrs. Forbes and Batersby's company is appearing here this week in The Empty Cradle. Miss Nancy Battersby fills the rôle of Ida Boswell with conspicuous success; Mr. David Urquhart earns distinction by his manly portrayal of Kenneth Bloodworth; the villainy of Carnaby Bloodworth is forcibly depicted by Mr. St. Clair Forbes; Mr. Fred Wells gives a clever study of Boswell, the gipsy; and Sir Carnaby Bloodworth is ably treated by Mr. W. E. Turner; Mr. Wallace Black does well as Little Misery, the cripple; Miss Florence Trevoir deserves praise for her impersonation of Mary Barton; Mr. Kenneth Scott as the Hon. St. Clair Selby and Miss Marion Mayne as Sarah Puddicomb are exceedingly funny.

WAKEFIELD. — OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Sherwood and Co.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is here this week in The Soldier's Wedding. Mr. Wingold Lawrence gives a fine representation of Jack Brown; Mr. Beresford Whitcomb plays well the part of Colonel Graham; Mr. J. Jordan does full justice to the part of Charles Courteney; Mr. J. Chippendale gives a capital portrayal of Tommy Spratt; Mr. Fred Yarnold is good as Nathaniel Lee; Mr. F. Biron commendable as David Munroe; Miss Dorothy Richardson fills with ability and charm the rôle of Nancy Lee; Miss Marie McAulay is admirable as Julie de Beauvrais; Miss Marie Everett as Lizzie Walker earns merit; and Miss Mabel Lowe is well suited as Peggy Munroe.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—Mr. J. Alexander and company cause much merriment in a sketch, Our Lodger; Sibb and Sibb are clever trapeze artists; Cora Carina, protean artist, gives a popular turn; the Sisters Northcotes earn applause by their excellent vocalism. Other items comprise Leo, ventriloquist; Miss Jessie Starr, Scotch comedienne; and Sam Spira, vocalist, who give acceptable turns.

WALSALL. — HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, the Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—George Leyton gives his military scena, entitled Lucknow, and with his powerful chorus is well received. Other turns include the Coloured Meisters, harmonisers and excellent vocalists; Eily Adair, comedienne and dancer; the McConnell Trio, vocal sketch artists; Harry Lickson, who gives a most perfect performance with animal training; the Vetter Brothers; Jimmy Shields, the clever one-legged comedian and dancer. The American Bioscope completes the bill.

GRAND THEATRE. — Proprietors, the Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Mr. F. C. Leighton's company is here in The Golden Ladder. Mr. Harry Cullenford as Rev. Frank Thornhill plays throughout with good effect; Mr. F. C. Leighton as Michael Severn acts in a manly and vigorous fashion; Miss V. Ennis Lawson as Lilian Grant deserves great praise, and other characters are well sustained.

WARRINGTON. — ROYAL COURT.—Proprietor, Mr. Joseph Beecham; General-Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Sumley.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is here again this week with the popular play The Village Blacksmith. Mr. Livesey in the title-rôle and Miss Maggie Edwards as Ruth Strong again winning all hearts with their able delineations.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—Fred Karno's troupe head the bill here in The Football Match; Walker and May are dashing coloured vocalists and dancers; Decima Brooke is a dainty comedienne; and Harvey and Holt score well in a neat sketch; Elton and Edwin are clever banjoists, and Cestria is an expert juggler; Hicks and Hunter score as ice skate-dancers, and the Sisters Hampel are a chic pair of comediennes. The pictures, showing The Rival Detectives, are a source of much amusement.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, the Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. J. Waters.—Guy and Welford are scoring a big success here this week with their up-to-date songs and patter; George Clifford is a capable comedian the other members of the company are very capable, the play being well staged.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—A return is made this week to variety, and a very strong programme includes the Gothams, comedians and vocalists of much ability; Helm and Cozens pay a welcome return visit, and their comedy act Blackey, the Boot Proprietor is as popular as ever; Hayes and Merritt, the champion bounding trampolinist, provide an excellent turn; Francis O'Flynn gives a fine performance on the banjo; Tom and Neil are smart in a wrestling turn; and Dolly Nelson and the Sisters Fuller are very capable comediennes; the Hippodrome pictures conclude.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—GRAND.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Manager, Mr. H. E. Feather.—Mr. Fred Granville's pantomime Babes in the Wood commenced a six-nights' visit on Monday, and played to a fairly numerous audience. The scenery is effectively staged, the dresses pretty, and the songs popular. Mr. Alf Brooks as the Dame is responsible for some funny business, and the antics and gags of the Kimberley Boys are thoroughly enjoyed. Two clever, precocious children, Dot Pardy and Violet Wilson, play the parts of the Babes, and very successfully too; Robin Hood is played in dashing style by Miss Mary Poulton, and success is attained by Miss Hettie Lind as Maid Marian.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. A. E. Dobney.—Minerva, the "original woman gaol-breaker," is astounding all here in a marvellous escape from a locked barrel filled with water, and she cleverly demonstrates in full view of her audience her ability to escape from the strait-jacket. The Royal Czar Troupe of Russian singers and dancers are remarkably clever. Their turn is greeted with considerable applause. Some clever dancing is done by the Fordyces; some beautifully illustrated songs are prettily sung by Miss Norah Desmond; Master Richard May, "the boy tenor," sings some songs in good voice; smart dancing is done by the Arntes, coloured artists, and a remarkably pretty effect is produced by A Ba-be's Picture-Postcard Album. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux complete the list.

WEYMOUTH. — PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's No. 1 company is presenting Lady Frederick here, and has been heartily received. Miss Eleanor Delaporte won quite an ovation by her effectual rendering of the title-rôle; and she was most ably seconded by Mr. Robert Minster as Paradine Fouldes. Mr. W. Barnett Parker played exceedingly well as Sir Gerald; and Mr. E. F. Meads was a very good Lord Mereston. Captain Gerald Gambier gave a capital representation of the breezy Admiral Carlisle; Miss Celia Gordon as Lady Mereston played her difficult part carefully and well; Miss Lynn Fontanne as Rose won golden opinions by her ease and charm of manner; Miss Phyllis Manners was capital as Mme. Claude, and Angelique was capably represented. The piece is staged well, and the dresses are superb.

WIDNES.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. P. Swinton.—The Flower Girl holds the boards here; a charming musical comedy, appealing both to the eye and ear, it attracts large audiences. Miss Eva Nelson is capital in the title-rôle; the Lizette de Racquet of Miss Lilian Drake is a chic and pleasing performance; Mr. John McCallum handles the comedy part of Joe Wheeler very ably; Mr. John Latham is an amusing Johnny Wheeler; Miss George de Lacy does well as the Suffragette; Mr. Louis du Cane presents a comical portrait of Reggie Racket; Mr. Henry Adnes plays smartly as Alphonse; Mr. Robert Cranny sings well as Billy Greenbills. The chorus do good work and the staging is excellent.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Company.—A welcome return visit is being paid by Mr. George Dance's principal company in Miss Hook of Holland. In the title-rôle Miss Daisy Manning is a dashing Sally; Miss Cissie Sephton is a huge success as Mina; the character of Mr. Hook is in the capable hands of Mr. Alfred Wellesley; and Mr. Fred Lyne is still excellent as Slinks. Mr. Frank Crimp deserves special mention for his impersonation of the bandmaster; Mr. Walter Balfour is an imposing Captain Paap; while Mr. George Mudie leaves nothing to be desired as Schnapps.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Company.—Jennie Johns, the local favourite, sings in a pleasing manner; D'Arc's Marionettes are manipulated very cleverly, their impersonations being excellent; the Brothers Lawrence prove themselves smart dancers; the animal circus presented by Carl and Mary Ohm causes a great amount of amusement; Rapoli is an exceptionally clever juggler; Richard Finberg's character studies are admirable; and Harry Grey causes quite a furore with his songs; Maxwell and Frances give a laughable comedy scena; Olive Armidale sings in fine style; and Harry Drew is loudly applauded for his vocal selections.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Company; Manager, Mr. H. C. Woon.—Some interesting and instructive films are being shown here.

WILLENHALL.—PICTURE HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Will Hunter.—The entertainments provided here are being well appreciated. This week's programme contains the following pictures:—The Vestal, Revenge of Manuel, Lake Maggiore, The Last Roll Call, Cinematograph Evidence, Music and Poetry, Living Reflections.

WOLVERHAMPTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Gerald Spencer.—It is seldom that the patrons of this popular house have an opportunity of witnessing such excellent dramatic fare as The Eyes of the World, which is being presented this week by Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty's company. The passion and pathos displayed by Miss Ethel Van Praagh as Hélène de l'Orme rivets the attention of the audience throughout; whilst Mr. George D. Daiper treats the rather unsavoury part of her husband, Hector de l'Orme, in a very creditable manner. The two young lovers, Avice and Octave, find two capable representatives in Miss Elsie Capell and Mr. Charles Stirling; Mr. Will Casey is impressive as Gaston de Carnac; Mr. J. Edward Whitty hits off to a nicety the young advocate Archibald Fanfarade; Mr. Charles Sewell plays with quiet dignity as Paul Roqueville; Miss Nellie Garside is responsible for some clever comedy as Susanne Pomfleure; and Miss Beatrice Fitzhugh is good as Esme de Carnac. The drama is beautifully staged, each scene being a perfect picture.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—The leading attraction here is Mr. Sydney Mason's company in The Usurer. As Herbert Vane Mr. Sydney Mason is intensely dramatic, and the part of the erring wife Irene Vane is skilfully portrayed by Miss Theresa Moore. Able support is rendered by the other members of the company. The De Breans, besides being capital jugglers, contribute a pleasing exhibition of shadowgraphy; Slippere, blind musician, excites the sympathy of the audience; Fyne and Hurley, in The Coster and the Dude, take well; Charles Cardow is a smart light comedian with a style of his own; a decidedly novel act is provided by the Hyde and Cody Trio; whilst excellent harmony is the feature of the Three Orleans' performance.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. F. le Warde.—Two Little Vagabonds, after a lengthy absence, is paying a return visit this week, with no sign of diminishing interest in the popular parts of the house. Presented by Hardie and Von Leer's capable company, and staged and costumed in appropriate style, this well-known work of G. R. Sims and Arthur Shirley is likely to maintain its popularity for a very long time. In the part of the jealous husband Mr. George Denham is seen to advantage, and Miss Leonora Costelle undertakes the part of the wronged wife with unqualified success. Miss Mary Hart and Miss Josie Beltram as the two children provide sympathetic impersonations, and Mr. Norman Yates as Major Darville and Miss Florence Radcliffe as Barbara are admirably suited. A humorous vein is introduced by Mr. James Skea as Bill Mullins and Miss Marie Pritchard as Biddy Mullins, while other parts are as successfully portrayed by Messrs. Leo St. Clair, Fred Archer, Bertram Duboise, and Joseph Brandon.

WORKINGTON.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Manager, Mr. Falconer Jacks.—A very good set of pictures, interspersed with first-class variety. Fontainbleau's famous dogs and Mr. Georger Ritter form good items.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. McKenzie Morgan. — Splendid pictures, as usual, Pongorella, the man-monkey, Miss M. Winsome, and the beautiful Zaida on the slack wire.

WORTHING.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Mr. Harry Tilbury's company is here with His Dishonoured Wife. Mr. Victor Rae gives a manly representation of Frank Lindon; Mr. Fred Owen typically portrays the detective; Mr. Horatio Sinclair well enacts the villainies of Lord Devant; Mr. Edwin Brown does well as Tom Redman, as does Mr. Richard Howard as Geoffrey Harvey; and Mr. Harry Tilbury cleverly takes the part of Micky Doolan. Miss Etta Spalding is effective as Araminta, and Miss Belle Tilbury cleverly fills the exacting part of Florence Lindon. On Thursday The Blind Foundling was presented.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. John J. Scott.—The attractions here are The Lynches, smart American song illustrators; the Three Barringtons, in a pretty novelscena, The Old Plantation, introducing harp solos, soon songs, and rag-time dances; Miss Maude Adams, a dainty comedienne; the Deuchars, refined character duettists, patterers, and dancers and Miss Carmen Barrie, a chic comedienne and dancer.

YORK.—ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington. Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—The Catch of the Season is on its second visit, and large audiences have been the rule. Miss Dorothea Clarke has charmed all by her spirited and natural assumption of Angela; Mr. William Greene as the Duke of St. Jermyns is also aptly placed, and is a great success throughout; Mr. Geoffrey Berwick makes the small part of Mr. Gibson stand out as a prominent feature in the production, and Master Joseph Grata is very funny as Bucket; Mr Joseph Bruce is deservedly popular as Lord Dundreary, of whom he gives a polished rendering. Miss Grace Hampton makes a popular Lady Caterham, and Miss Barry Eldon and Miss Kate Robertson as the Sisters give clever performances the former being a very sweet singer.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock. Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—The Cumberlands are paying a welcome return visit, and are well received. Much applause greets the Eight Lancashire Lads, who are exceptionally clever. Graham and Harrington produce a thrilling sketch with fine effect; and the eccentricities of Mr. Arthur Milton are enjoyed. Harry Nelson is very funny; and the Sisters Draycott sing sweetly. The Stellings, in their particular line, are hard to beat, and Alpho causes pleasure as a first-class ventriloquist. Mr. Bert Lytton, comique, and the Bioscope complete the list.

ROYAL PALACE THEATRE, RAMSGATE.

On Sunday evening a record audience was present at the above theatre. Mr. Ernest Mansell, the present lessee, has started a new era in the history of the theatre, which is the property of the famous old showman, Lord George Sanger. Mr. Mansell's life-motion pictures took the town by storm, and the Sunday concerts he has inaugurated have proved quite irresistible. The musical programme is on a high plane, and engagements fulfilled and pending embrace many of the finest military bands from Deal, Dover, and Shorncliffe. Vocalists, too, of no mean order are constantly figuring in the programmes, which are well varied and popular. The theatre itself is a handsome and commodious building, beautifully upholstered and carpeted, lit with electricity, and embraces all the most modern improvements. The Sunday evening audiences embrace many of the leading men in the town. All the latest attractions have been booked for the coming season and the following autumn.

STEINWAY HALL.

On Monday evening a vocal recital was given by the pupils of Mr. John Cross at Steinway Hall, a large audience being present. The programme commenced with Mendelssohn's part-song, "Farewell to the Forest," harmoniously sung by the Misses Elsa Hamilton, Mollie Greathead, Ethel Willis, Beatrice Underwood, Edith Knightley, Mabel Tester, Lallie Woodleigh, and Mrs. Francis Carey, also Messrs. Frank Rogers, Max Butlin, George Hamilton, Herbert Stevens, A. C. Austin, and H. J. West. The same students in the second part of the concert were equally successful in a part-song, "Good-night, beloved" (Pinsuti). Several of Mr. Cross's pupils displayed considerable ability, and others would have had far greater success if they had not attempted such ambitious works. One of the most promising of Mr. John Cross's students was Mr. Herbert Stevens, who received much applause for his really able singing of "Si tra i ceppi," from Handel's opera Berenice; another clever pupil was Miss Lallie Woodleigh, whose pleasing contralto voice was heard to advantage in "Chè farò," from Glück Orfeo e Euridice. An apology being made for Mr. George Hamilton on the score of a cold, he sang "Is she not passing fair?" (E. Elgar) in place of the more exacting "Sound an alarm," from Handel's Judas Maccabæus. By request, Mr. Max Butlin sang "O vision entrancing," from Esmeralda. Mr Butlin was also associated with Mr. Herbert Stevens in an excellent performance of the duet, "Watchman—what of the night?" (Sarjeant); while Miss Mabel Tester, who sang "Ah Rendimi quel core" (Rossi), in the first portion of the programme, achieved far better results in the simpler song, "Angus Macdonald." Miss Mollie Greathead sang "Jerusalem" (Mendelssohn's St. Paul), with a fair amount of success, but was not well advised in attempting such difficult florid music as Bishop's "Lo; here the gentle lark," the flute obbligato of which was cleverly executed by Mr. M. H. Colonieu. Leslie's trio, "Memory," sung by Miss Greathead, Miss Tester, and Mr. John Cross, received hearty applause. Mr. Cross, director of the West Central College of Music, also joined Miss Hamilton and Mr. West in "Terzetto," from Verdi's Attila. Miss Elsa Hamilton gave "Ah fors è lui" (La Traviata), and Mr. A. C. Austin attempted Loewe's difficult German ballad, "Odin's Meeres—Ritt"; while Mr. Reginald Cohen was more successful in "We Two" (Airlie Dix), than in his song, "A Farewell," earlier in the recital. The accompanists were Miss F. Walpole Gray, G.S.M., Miss Ida Phillipin, and Mr. Frank Vincent Walthew.

CHILDREN ON THE STAGE. The Act affecting the Employment of Children on the Stage came into force on Saturday, Oct. 1, 1904. Managers, Agents, Entrepreneurs, and Performers wishing to possess a copy of the Complete Act in a concise form can do so by forwarding three stamps to the Publisher, The Era Offices, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C.

MR. EDWARD COMPTON IN EDINBURGH.

1500TH PERFORMANCE OF DAVY GARRICK."

As Mr. Edward Compton put it to a crowded Lyceum audience last night on the occasion of his 1500th performance as Davy Garrick, he and the play are still "not out." A speech on such an occasion was more than pardonable, and eloquently did the famous actor meet the necessity for a comment. These 1500 performances, said Mr. Compton, were tantamount to a five years' run. "And the best of it is," he continued with pardonable pride, "that the play and the player are not in the least exhausted, but, if I may be allowed to say so, they are both going stronger and better than ever. (Applause.) It would of course, be unbecoming in me to say anything in praise of such an achievement, but at least I may be permitted to leave it to the public to say if I have not cause to be proud and happy at such a result. (Applause.)—When I first produced the play of Davy Garrick, I had no thought or hope of such a consummation, although it was one most devoutly to be wished. I was like a batsman going to the wickets, quite prepared to be bowled out at the first over through the difficulties of the pitch, or stumped by the critical dramatic wicketkeeper, or caught out by the unanimous disapproval of the spectators; instead of which I have gone on piling up my centuries one after the other, until they now stand at the respectable total of 1500; and as I appeal to the public at the close of each innings, bat in hand—or, rather, hat in hand—(laughter)—and, as it were, put the anxious question—How's that, umpire? I am delighted to say that they invariably reply in their charming, applausive manner—Well played—not out!" (Applause.)

As regards the comedy itself, it is not difficult to understand its popularity, for it contains all the essential qualities that go to make a good play—a simple story in which love and romance loom large, a sweetly drawn and devoted heroine, a set of well-contrasted characters, humour and pathos nicely blended; and, overlaying all, the sense of duty, the calm and convincing dignity of a noble man upholding a noble profession; and, last but not least, a sweet spirit of self-abnegation, all embodied in a soul of honour, in the person of the hero, David Garrick. Such pure and wholesome plays redound at once to the credit of the authors who conceive them, the performers who give them life and verisimilitude, and the public who welcome them with cheers, tears, laughter, and applause.

Cordially did last night's audience echo Mr. Compton's words, at the close of a superb performance in which he had invaluable assistance from a company which for all-round excellence it would be hard to surpass. In a clever little comedietta, Miss Viola Compton made quite a hit as a "Proteus in Petticoats."—Edinburgh Press.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Musical Play,
"THE MERRY WIDOW."

Local playgoers are fortunate in securing such an important attraction in their midst as The Merry Widow, the Daly's Theatre phenomenal success, and to show their appreciation they are taxing the holding capacity of the commodious Borough Theatre to such an extent that the management must this week be yearning for the days of the "stretchable" playhouse. The piece is mounted and dressed with all that brilliancy and artistic taste usually associated with productions travelling under the régime of such an experienced entrepreneur as Mr. George Edwardes, and excellent judgment has been shown in the selection of the cast. Miss Emmy Louise in the important rôle of Sonia acts and sings with bewitching charm and coquetry, the "Widow's" fascination extending far beyond the footlights, and she receives quite an ovation at the conclusion of each act. Equally praiseworthy is the Prince Danilo of Mr. Leonard Mackay, who has played here times before, and who now has better scope as an actor, the while being in fine voice and looking the part splendidly. Mr. Haigh Jackson wins much success vocally as the Vicomte de Jolidon; and Mr. Tom Redmond plays with a keen sense of humour as Nisch. Mr. Lionel Victor is extremely interesting and a prime favourite as Baron Popoff, his unobtrusive methods of extracting mirth being always successful. Miss Octavia Barry's splendid vocalism in the rôle of Natalie wins unstinted applause; Miss Dora Langham sings and dances in captivating style as Frou-Frou; and the Maxim Girls have clever representatives in Miss Elsie Spencer, Miss D. Pennington, Miss Olive Cherry, Miss Phyllis Allen, and Miss Heather Featherstone. Mr. Somers Bellamy is exceedingly good as Marquis de Cascada; Mr. Norman Greene does well as M. de St. Brioche; Mr. Grafton Williams portrays General Novikovitch very appropriately; Mr. J. S. Durant is a commendable M. Khadja; Mr. Alfred H. Majilton is excellent as Franz Fall; and the waiter at Maxim's is safely entrusted to Mr. Bert Edwards. The orchestra is this week augmented, and under the bâton of Mr. Harrison Frewin; and Mr. Douglas Millar is the general-manager for the company.

PRESENTATION.—At the conclusion of the third act of Mother at the Opera House, Wakefield, on the 6th inst., Mr. H. Foxwell stepped before the curtain and thanked the large audience assembled for the cordial welcome they had accorded his play and his company throughout the week. He also wished to thank Messrs. Sherwood and company for all their efforts which had helped on wards the success of the production, and on behalf of himself and his wife he asked Mr. Sherwood to accept a beautiful gold match-box, inscribed with Mr. Sherwood's initials, as a memento of the production. Mr. Sherwood, in responding, said how much he appreciated the magnificent gift, and thanked Mr. Foxwell on behalf of the proprietors of the theatre for his excellent production.

At the fancy dress carnival held in the Olympia Roller Skating Rink, on Friday, Feb. 19, many ingenious and original ideas were shown in the designs of the habiliments worn by the skaters. Many of our most famous firms seized the occasion as an opportunity to advertise their wares, and pictures which have long stared at us from the hoardings were made more realistic by the aid of living representation. The rule for the evening was that every one of the skaters should indicate by the apparel he or she donned some well-known commodity of commerce.

Mr. Whelen is Careful.

MR. G. HERBERT THRING, the secretary of the Society of Authors, has been complaining that the plots of new plays are told in the Press before their production. Mr. Frederick Whelen, chairman of the Stage Society, and one of the managers of the Afternoon Theatre, fully concurs in the views expressed by Mr. Thring. "We are always most careful at the Stage Society," he says, "not to give away the plot of a play, as one is never certain whether the story will not be altered during the rehearsals. For many other reasons the disclosure of the plot is manifestly unfair, not only to the author, but to the manager, and even the public at large. Apart from the announcement that the play is either drama or comedy, and the publication of the cast, I think it inadvisable (unless, of course, the author himself is agreeable to it) that details of the action and of the scenery should appear in the newspapers before the performance actually takes place."

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

SYDNEY, JAN. 12.—HER MAJESTY'S.—The success of The Duchess of Dantzig is enormous, the booking being great, and the enthusiasm over Miss Florence Young's clever acting and splendid singing is unabated. Miss Betty Ohls, in her daintiness and piquant methods is a prime favourite; and a new aspirant to leading rôles, Mr. O'Connor, justifies the selection of the young baritone by Mr. J. C. Williamson to replace Mr. Higginson during his sprained ankle vacation. Mr. Reginald Roberts, Mr. Claude Bantock, and Mr. Gouriet are strong supporters of the prestige of the management in always securing a perfect cast.

THEATRE ROYAL.—The revival of The Sign of the Cross has enabled country Christmas visitors to see Miss Beatrice Day, a most artistic Mercia, and Mr. Julius Knight in the rôle of Marcus Superbus. On the 16th The Breed of the Treshams will be produced for the first time in Australia.

THE CRITERION.—Here Mr. William Anderson is still running The Gayest of the Gay, with his wife, Miss Eugenie Duggan, in the lead; but on the 16th William Bourne's drama, Man to Man, by arrangement with Mr. George Rignold (still hale and hearty), will be revived here.

THE PALACE.—Mr. Edwin Geach keeps his pantomime Robinson Crusoe, played by children, for afternoon audiences, and at night his company plays East Lynne with acceptance, owing to the capital acting of Misses Nellie Ferguson, Helen Fergus, Pearl Best, and Messrs. Kenneth Hunter, Jefferson Taite, and J. P. O'Neil. Little Vera Huggett, who was such a success in The Prince Chap, is an excellent Little Willie.

THE TIVOLI has just now, as Mr. Harry Rickards' chief draw, Tommy Burns, who lost caste by fighting with Johnson, who defeated him. However, Burns draws large audiences to see his boxing, skipping, and ball-punching. The rest of the evening is "filled in" by competent artists, such as McKinnon's Scottish Meisters, Amalia and Leonora, J. W. Rickaby, Amba Austa, Nellie Maunsell, the Mascottes, Charles Fanning, and a host more.

WEST'S Pictures fill the Glaciarium with a new set of films, showing the action of an entire play, and attractive turns by vaudeville artists and dancers—silent, but convincing.

THE NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE has as chief vocal attraction Mr. Walter Whyte, a capital tenor, who was with the Williamson Répertoire Company.

SPENCER'S Theatroscope at the Lyceum has a complete change of pictures every week, and all over the city there are picture shows—the Bijou, Victoria Hall, Queen's Hall, Oxford, and others.

MR. GEORGE LAURI, the comedian, who has held front rank here for twenty years, and committed suicide on the 5th inst., was buried at Waverley Cemetery, there being present Messrs. J. C. Williamson, G. Ramaciotti, and George Tallis ("the firm"), Reginald Roberts, Claude Bantock, Lewis Scott, W. S. Percy, A. E. Greenaway, Arthur Hunter, and many Press and private friends.

SYDNEY, JAN. 19.—The Breed of the Treshams at the Royal shows Mr. J. C. Williamson's dramatic company at its acting best. Since his arrival in Australia, many years ago, Mr. John Knight has done nothing nearly so good as his Lieutenant Reresby in the new play. Miss E. Guildford Quin makes a handsome, intelligent Margaret Hungerford, her transparent innocence being particularly charming. A dramatic débutante, Miss Ethel Phillips does genuine service as Helena Pierrepont, and gave promise of future value; and Miss Florence Gleeson creates a Batty worthy of the talented coterie with which she is associated. The Viscount Dorsington of Mr. Eardley Turner was a perfect impersonation. The unflinching disciplinarian and the agonised parent were both clearly limned. Sir Clement Hungerford, the traitor, has an efficient representative in Mr. R. Denniston, always in the picture; the bluff, outspoken soldier Sir Henry Curwen shows Mr. George Chalmers at his best; the youthful, impetuous Francis Tresham introduces Mr. A. J. Patrick to us in an important part, in which he justifies his selection; and Miss Katie Powers is Mrs. Bagshaw.

AT the Palace Mr. Edwin Geach has continued his run of personal ill-luck. He lost his manager, Mr. Adam Cowan, and then his partner, Mr. J. F. Sheridan, and, just as the curtain was to rise on The Broken Home, his leading actor, Mr. Jefferson Taite, was thrown out of a cab. Mr. W. J. Montgomery read the part, and next night Mr. Harry Diver appeared as the hero, Harry Denton, with much success. Miss Nellie Ferguson was Myrtle Denton and Mr. Hunter was Walter Denton, both well-acted characters; while Mr. T. E. Leonard made capital out of Sir Daniel Wilton's ambition to do detective work. Miss Ethel Buckey is Lady Jane Marie Walton and Mr. J. P. O'Neill a burly Jack Atkins, each at fullest popularity in their respective parts. Mr. Harry Norman's excellent French accent comes in of value in the part of De Grison, and he also stage-manages. A long list of artists appropriate the rest of the cast.

"THE DUCHESS OF DANTZIC" is in full swing on Her Majesty's stage and at the box-office. Miss Florence Young repeats her phenomenal success as Madame Sans Gêne. Miss Betty Ohls, and Messrs. O'Connor, Gouriet, Reginald Roberts, and Bantock, make the opera go for all a Williamsonian production is worth at its very best. No successor is even hinted at.

"MAN TO MAN" is Mr. William Anderson's latest bill at the Criterion, by arrangement with Mr. Geo. Rignold. Miss Eugenie Duggan is Ethel Maythorne, and she puts her best work into the part. Mr. George Cross makes James Gordon manly and natural to an enjoyable degree. Mr. J. H. Nunn (also stage-manager), Miss May Granville, Miss Lily Rochfort, and Miss Eva Hathaway, with Messrs. Percy Walshe, Laurence Dunbar, Temple Harrison, and George Carey (the evergreen), all assist to tell the story.

THE Tivoli welcomed Lawson and Namon in a very lively comedy sketch, and now that the pugilistic couple are no longer on the salary list—I mean white Tommy Burns and black Jack Johnson—Mr. Harry Rickards' company of first-class artists is sufficient to fill the house eight times a week.

THE Play Actors resume operations on Sunday, March 14. The opening programme will consist of a bill of four one-act plays, namely, Sawney, by Sybil Noble; The Apple, by Inez Bensusan; Darracott's Wife, by Affleck Scott and Alan Carmichael; and A Question of Identity, by Archie Matthew. All this season's performances will take place at the Court Theatre. Miss Winifred Mayo remains in the position of secretary.

THE twenty-first annual general meeting of the Folkestone Pleasure Gardens Company, Ltd., was held on Tuesday, the Earl of Radnor presiding. The accounts for 1908 showed gross receipts £14,527, and a profit £1,402, against £802 in 1907. The amount paid to theatrical companies was £7,729. Dividends of 7 per cent. on the Preference shares and 1 per cent. on 15,000 Deferred shares were paid, after writing off large amounts from various accounts.

LORD RADNOR compared the present prospects of the company with those of 1889, the first year of the company's trading, when the receipts were only £2,727, and the year's loss £664. He paid a high tribute to the managerial ability of Mr. H. W. Rowland, whose services the directors hoped to retain for many years to come. A formal vote of thanks to the manager was also proposed by one of the largest shareholders.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"ELEKTRA,"

Opera, in One Act, by Richard Strauss, produced at the Royal Opera, Feb. 15.

Klytemnestra	FRAU GOETZE
Elektra	FRAULEIN PLAISCHINGER
Chrysothemis	FRAULEIN ROSE
Aegisth	HERR GRUNING
Orest	HERR BISCHOFF
Pfleger	HERR MODLINGER
Vertraute	FRAULEIN LINDEMANN
Schleppetragerin	FRAULEIN PARBS
Diener	HERR SOMMER
Aufwarterin	FRAU SCHEELE-MULLER
First Maid	FRAULEIN ROTHAUSER
Second Maid	FRAULEIN EKEBLAD
Third Maid	FRAULEIN DIETRICH

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, Feb. 18.—The long-anticipated has happened. We have heard Elektra; heard, and, to use the popular expression, been electrified. Words are poor to express the effect produced by this stupendous work, which has been called the creation of a diseased mind. It is impossible to deny the magnificence of the music, which is worthy of a different plot. Query, will Strauss, with his trancendant genius, ever give us an opera which has not hideous sensuality for its theme? Comparisons are odious, but those who heard the original production at Dresden tell me there was a vast falling off in the Berlin performance, which was, nevertheless, remarkably fine. The name-part—which is at times scarcely audible for the tempest of instrumentation that accompanies it—was well rendered; but both that and the rôle of Klytemnestra came short of the grand interpretations of Frau Krull and Mme. Schumann-Heinck. Miss Frances Rose did most ably as the sister of Elektra, and those parts sustained by Herren Grüning, Bischoff, and Sommer were all satisfactory. The smaller rôles were admirably sustained. That the augmented orchestra, under Herr Blech's grand conductorship, excelled themselves is perhaps not necessary to state. Dr. Strauss received enthusiastic ovations, but truth compels the admission that a few hisses mingled themselves with the applause. It was a representative audience, the most famous literary and dramatic stars being present.

THE gala performance at the Royal Opera, in honour of the visit of the King and Queen, consisted of the second and third acts of Sardanapal, the Assyrian pantomime of which there has been so much talk. It was, of course, brilliantly staged, and was followed with visible interest by their Majesties. The house was beautifully decorated with natural flowers, and presented the effective appearance customary on these occasions; the stalls filled with officers in brilliant uniforms, the grand tier (exclusive of the Imperial box, which contained eighty persons) occupied by the diplomatic corps and their ladies, the second tier by ladies alone, the third, and even the fourth, filled by a fashionable audience. No tickets were sold, but each conveyed an invitation from the Kaiser, and bore the signature of the Head Court Chamberlain.

THE Ibsen cycle at the Lessing has now reached its conclusion. It has proved eminently satisfactory from every point of view. It would be difficult to say which play was the most appreciated, all being superbly acted. The Wild Duck made its customary deep impression, Herr Bassermann, Herr Sauer, Frau Lehmann, and Fräulein Orloff, as Hjalmar, Greger, Gina, and Hedwig respectively, forming a quartette not to be excelled on any stage. Herr Forest, too, as old Ekdal had his audience with him.

THE new burlesque farce at the Thalia rejoices in the title of Wo Wohnt sie denn? ("Where does she live?") To detail the plot would be not only a thankless, but well-nigh impossible task, for it is a conglomeration of the most confused nonsense, and but for the bright acting and the introduction of numerous topical couplets, would hardly have caught on at all. As it is, the reception was very cordial, artists and authors—the popular collaborators, MM. Kren and Okonowsky—being called before the curtain and heartily applauded.

AT the Bernhard Rose Theatre a volks-play entitled Das Warenhaus-Fräulein has been produced with considerable success. It is the story of the loves of two girls employed in one of Berlin's big shops; in the one case the liaison ends in the imprisonment of the shopwalker and his sweetheart for theft; in the other, in the marriage of the worthy pair, virtue and vice receiving their due reward, according to the traditions of the genuine volks-play. The shop scenes were admirably done and the acting capital.

"DIE BEIDEN BINDELBANDS," the merry farce-burlesque at the Gebrüder-Herrufeld Theatre, has passed its 100th performance, and is still drawing well.

"DAS MADCHEN AUF IRRWEGEN" ("The Girl who Wrecked His Home"), melodrama, by Walter Melville and Siegfried Lutz, is occupying the bill of the Luisen Theatre two and three times in the week. It is considered the most successful piece of the kind ever put on the boards of that theatre.

OUR genial Intendant General of the State Theatres, Herr von Hülsen, has been raised to the rank of Count by his friend and patron the Kaiser, and will take the title of his recently deceased brother, Count von Hülsen Häsler.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

JOHANNESBURG.—EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Empire Theatres, South Africa, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Syd Hyman.—A fine all-round programme is being presented to the patrons of this house. Amylla, with her classical dances, heads the bill, closely followed by that Protean actor, Mr. R. A. Roberts, in his original sketch, Dick Turpin, both artists meeting with vociferous applause for their turns. Another smart turn is Miss Muriel Harding. Others here are Bent and Gerda, the Sisters Wingrove, Marguerite Arnoldi, George Leonard, and the Bioscope.

THE site for the new Alhambra Music Hall has been decided on. It is to be erected in Ressick-street between the Post Office and Park Station. Messrs. Hoskings and Walford are the architects, and the renowned Mr. Bertie Crewe, the consulting architect.

PIETERMARITZBURG.—CARLTON MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. W. J. Isaacs; Manager, Mr. Ralph Brown.—The star turn here is Blanche Sadies, a captivating little singer and dancer. Gus Leighton, ventriloquist, takes well; a charming soubrette is found in Miss Madge Melville; Mr. Williams, the Welsh tenor, uses his fine voice effectively; a word of praise must be given to the smart turn of the Woodbines, duettists; Miss Rosallie's captivating manner evokes hearty applause; and others here are Alf. Peto, descriptive vocalist, and Chisholm, comedian.

DURBAN.—HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. Ferguson Brown.—The above popular house of amusement has been reopened again under the old management with a fine combination of artists. Mr. Harry Evans, an old favourite here, was in the best of voice; the Leopolds (male and female) are exceedingly funny in vocal and acrobatic endeavours; Mr. Jack Harper gained quite an ovation with his song, "Cigarette"; a quaint comedian is Will Lessing; and Miss Marie Louro won all hearts, and promises to be quite a favourite. Miss Cissie Frampton, Natal's most popular comedienne, is also here. Willie Walker, Scotch comedian, is also in the bill.

THE Secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund asks us to acknowledge with his grateful thanks the receipt of a further parcel of clothing from an anonymous giver.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Musical Play, entitled
"HAVANA."

With music composed by Mr. Leslie Stuart, this Gaiety musical play, written by Mr. George Grossmith, jun., and Mr. Graham Hill, there was every prospect of a pleasant evening's entertainment for the theatre patrons, and therefore the King's was well filled on Monday evening, when Mr. George Dance's company made their appearance in Havana. The piece met with a good reception, which augured well for a satisfactory week's visit. The plot is slight, but the music of Mr. Leslie Stuart amply compensates for all other deficiencies. The music is none the less pleasing because on occasion we are reminded of other work by the same composer. As the action of the play takes place in Havana, it can easily be imagined that much opportunity is given for display in scenery and costumes of which every advantage is taken, for the colouring is luxuriant. The company contains no well-known names, but all are excellent, and a rousing performance is the result. Mr. Cecil W. Parke sings and acts breezily as Jackson Villiers of the S.Y. "Wasp," and the Hon. Frank Charteris of Mr. Bay Russell is a very rollicking and cheerful impersonation. Mr. A. Gordon Begg is good as Bombito, and Mr. Herbert Bryan is a sufficiently fierce Diego. A clever rendering of Adolpho is given by Mr. George Story, whose methods are extremely humorous. Mr. Tom Seymour as Reginald Brown, the yacht's boy, is a comedian of much resource, and he keeps the audience hugely amused by his antics. As Nix the Bo'sun, Mr. Reginald Switz causes great laughter by his efforts to escape from the wife whom he married seven years before, and fears to meet again. The audience readily appreciated Mr. Switz's acting, and he was heartily applauded. Consuelo found an exceedingly capable singer and actress in Miss Hebe Bliss, whose efforts were attended with every success. Miss Helen Langton was a massive and forceful Isabelita, queen of the revolutionists. A distinctly favourable impression was made by Miss Gladys Guy, who sang and acted extremely well in the rôle of Anita. Miss Maud Seymour as Teresa and Miss Rosa Sullivan as Tita were vivacious. The chorus was an excellent one, and the orchestra, directed by Mr. Albert Vernon, played the melodious music with due effect.

MARLBOROUGH THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Comedy, in Three Acts, by Anne Crawford Flexner (based on the book of the same name, by Alice Hegan Rice), entitled
"MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH."

Mrs. Wiggs, that genial, good-hearted, self-sacrificing, peace-making woman, who, in her humble surroundings, glides from one place and from one person to another like a ubiquitous ministering angel, has not been less popular with the inhabitants of Holloway this week than she was in the neighbourhood of her cabbage patch in America, and than she has been in London and in the British provinces. It was Mrs. Madge Carr Cook who first gave to Mrs. Wiggs the physical charms and characteristics that have made the Good Samaritan who emerged from the fertile brain of Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice a figure so loved of the novel-reader and of the play-goer. The part, so far as the production under review is concerned, is now in the hands of Miss Gertrude Irving, who indicates in very able fashion all the charming womanliness and agreeable qualities associated with the doings and sayings of that matronly lady. Miss Margaret Shelley brings out with much feeling and tenderness the pathos of the rôle of Lovey Mary; and Miss Beatrice Bramah furnishes a most fascinating portraiture of the engaging Miss Lucy. Mr. Frederick Forrest cuts a ludicrous figure as Mr. Stubbins, and his drunken scene is particularly effective and natural. The lachrymose Miss Hazy is represented with appropriate yet comical despondency by Miss Rita Carlyle; and the gaunt, backbiting Mrs. Eichorn is a capital character-study in the hands of Miss Maude Townsend. Mr. Gordon Phillott is breezy and lively as Billy Wiggs, whose father has a good impersonator in Mr. Walter M. Cameron. Mr. Ernest Graham is seen in a pleasing enactment of Mr. Bob; and Miss Miena Connell furnishes a sweet little picture as Tommy; and Miss Amy Fanchette gives a suitable embodiment of the bully, Mrs. Schultz. All the minor characters are soundly undertaken, and the piece is presented, both as to staging and acting, with all the care as to detail that assisted towards the success of the production at Terry's Theatre nearly two years ago. The company, by the way, is that of Mr. Gaston Mayer. Mr. J. Murray Herriott, the manager of the Marlborough Theatre, attends to the convenience of visitors in his usual courteous fashion.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Play, entitled
"THE THIEF."

Mr. George Alexander's company scored a conspicuous success with this most interesting and up-to-date play, the evidence of careful selection and rehearsal being very apparent in the exceptional cast and the absolute suitability of each member of the company. Mr. Rupert Lister appears to have completely assimilated each phase and attribute of the part of Richard Chelford, the much-tried and still loving husband of Marise, and in the climax of intensity in the bedroom scene he attained great heights of power and feeling. Miss Marie Polini as the wife has to portray a wide range of emotions, from the vain and must-be-admired society woman to the guilty and unhappy wrong-doer, and not a false note was touched throughout. Mr. Owen Nares acquits himself well in the difficult part of Harry Leyton, the impulsive boy, who, for love of Marise, willingly assumes her guilt; his appearance was quite in keeping with the youthful rôle. Mr. Luke Forster gives to Protheroe, the emissary from Scotland Yard, just the shade of vulgarity necessary, and his scene in the first act is most convincing and satisfactory. Much praise is due to Miss Frances Leighton for the charm and naturalness imparted by her to the character of Isabel Leyton, and Mr. Cyril Harcourt as Reymond Leyton, her husband, contrives to give full expression to his great sorrow at the supposed defalcations of his son, without any loss of dignity or reserve. In addition to this pièce de résistance, there is a dainty hors d'œuvre in the shape of a one-act play, The Nursery Governess, in which Mr. Charles King appeared as a divorced husband who, awaiting the decree to be made absolute, becomes reconciled to his wife (Miss Eileen Kerin) by a trick played on a would-be suitor, well impersonated by Mr. Luke Forsier.

THE BROADWAY, NEW CROSS.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Play, entitled
"PETER'S MOTHER."

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's companies are always very welcome here, and this week delighted audiences are warmly applauding the excellent representation of Peter's Mother, which is well acted and perfectly staged. Mr. Drew Mackintosh submits a fine portrayal of John Crewys. Mr. Vivian Gilbert is a duly youthful and wilful Peter, and plays the part admirably. Mr. Townsend Whitling is a capital Sir Timothy Crewys, looking and acting the character to the life. Mr. Walter Russell as Canon Birch is worthy of high praise for a natural and clever performance. As the lovable Dr. Blundell Mr. Edward Jephson is all that can be desired, and makes one of the successes of the production. Lady Mary Crewys is a fine part, and one which carries with it the sympathies of the audience. Miss Violet Ley gives a charming rendering, and does it full justice, which is saying much. Miss Mary Griffiths is always conscientious and clever, and her Lady Belstone is remarkably well done. Miss Josephine Rae plays Miss Crewys with a perfect understanding of the author's intention. Miss Annie Stalman is distinctly good as Mrs. Hewitt. Sarah has a bright and pleasing representative in Miss Hilda Sims. Ash is well acted by Mr. P. Wright, and the Footman is invested with dignity and importance by Mr. S. Smith.

The popularity of Mr. Bertram Iles as manager continues to grow, and Mr. Clarke Richardson is a capable musical director.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 22,
"PETE."

Mr. Matheson Lang is at Kennington Theatre this week with Mr. Hall Caine's masterpiece Pete, just as it was produced at the Lyceum under the direction of Mr. Ernest Carpenter. The cast, the staging, and the accessories are the same as those which made such a success at the Lyceum, and this success has been repeated at Kennington, where overflowing houses have been attracted. From an artistic point of view Pete is, of course, a triumph, and Mr. Matheson Lang has nightly held the attention of the audience enthralled, as he has developed his study of the courageous, faithful, open-hearted lover, generous and forgiving to a fault, which he presents in the part of Pete. It is a rôle eminently suited to an actor of Mr. Lang's rare quality, and it is questionable if he has ever been seen to more advantage. He was ably supported on Monday by Miss Hutin Britton as Kate Cregeen, the confiding, but deserted, girl, whose love for the nobility of Pete's nature makes her endure agonies of shame rather than she should persist in imposing on his good faith. Miss Britton possesses great histrionic gifts, and the sketch she gave of the heroine won her the sympathy of all. Mr. Eric Mayne had a thankless and exceedingly difficult rôle to fill as Philip Christian, but he enacted it magnificently, and deserves the warmest praise. Mr. Pennington Gush was a cynical Ross Christian to the life; while Mr. Frederick Ross splendidly impersonated the part of the Pharisaical Cæsar Cregeen. Miss Rita Tompkins was quite the embodiment of a lively, good-natured servant as Nancy; and Miss Blanche Stanley made an excellent old woman as Grannie. Mr. Joseph O'Brien was well placed as the Constable; and Mr. H. K. Ayliff made a picturesque relic as Postman Kelly. The parts of Mary, Janet, Meg, and Anne were well taken by Misses Dora Clements, Alys Eden, Amy Venimore, and Agnes Thornton respectively; while Mr. E. J. Preston deserves mention for his treatment of the character of Black Tom. Mr. Henry Brooks was an amusing Mayor of Douglas; and Mr. W. Edmunds an imposing Lord Lieutenant. Others who should be noted were Mr. H. Armstrong (Clerk of the Court), Mr. Sydney Vautier (Dr. Mylechreest), and Mr. Sydney Young (William). The setting of the piece was of a high standard, and the Keep of Castle Rushen made a stage picture.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 22, Gounod's Opera,
"FAUST."

The third week of the visit of J. W. Turner's English Opera Company to the Dalston Theatre is proving as successful as those preceding, the house being crowded nightly with delighted audiences. Monday evening witnessed the presentation of Gounod's ever-welcome Faust, in which Mr. Robert Curtis appeared as a new exponent of the title-rôle. He came through the ordeal satisfactorily, and furnished some exceedingly sweet singing. His serenade was encored. The Mephistopheles of Mr. Tom Griffiths met with the cordial approval of the audience. His fine voice was heard to excellent advantage in some of the best songs of the opera, and his acting was equally excellent, being marked by some fine touches of humour, which occur in capital scenes with Miss Lizzie Stock, who played Martha. Mr. Frank Clarke was more than once encored for some effective songs, and the way in which he sustained the character generally was equally meritorious. Mr. George Ridding was also a decided success as Wagner. Miss Jessie Dennis represented Siebel, and her singing of the song in which she deplores the loss of the love of Marguerite quite touched the heart of her hearers, Miss Dennis having to respond to a most cordial encore. Miss Sarah Williams scored a decided success as Marguerite, and was heard at her best in the difficult "Jewel" song. The ever-popular "Soldiers' Chorus" was, as usual, vociferously redemanded. Other operas presented during the week include The Bohemian Girl, The Puritan's Daughter, Lily of Killarney, Il Trovatore, The Waterman, and Daughter of the Regiment.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled
"HER FATAL MARRIAGE."

This play, with its many telling incidents and rousing situations, has proved very acceptable to Mr. William Bailey's patrons, who dearly love a drama where the excitement runs high and the interest is sustained to the finish. Mr. Arthur Hinton enacted Zaco Malletto, alias the rascally Captain Vigo, with plenty of determined force and grim resolution; Mr. Norman Tracey proffered a carefully-thought-out study of Wilfred Grey; Mr. Percy Morton-Wright was alert and decisive as Detective Smart; and Mr. P. Laurence gave a capital representation of the self-assertive village constable, Sergeant Wiggins. As Paul, the half-witted country yokel, Mr. Gerald Byrne was intensely earnest and decidedly impressive; Mr. Frank Brunell caused much amusement with his quaintly droll impersonation of Peter Simple, in which he received the most ample assistance from Miss Laura Wright, who, as buxom Dolly Dimple, played with refreshing and pleasing vivacity. Miss Lydia Andre was full of girlish charm as the pretty ingenue Lily; whilst Miss Ruth Zillwood sustained the rôle of Myra Malletto in an irreproachable manner, her acting being full of fire and vigorous energy, and her stage presence most fascinating. The play was well mounted and staged, and its reception was most cordial and encouraging.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Drama entitled
"AS MIDNIGHT CHIMES."

This exciting drama by Mr. Edward Marris was performed here on Monday evening for the first time before the Brixton public, and gave satisfaction to an appreciative house. Mr. Tom H. Taylor, who is responsible for the company, has engaged a capable body of artists, and the many incidents in the play are well brought out. Capital scenic effects also add to the success of the production. Mr. Melville Bickford is to be highly complimented on his delineation of the dealer in smuggled goods, Luke Dezzard; Mr. Clifton Boyne is a robust representative of Dave Stannard; Mr. Walter Westwood is capital as Ezra Gamble; Mr. Tom E. Sinclair realises admirably the character of Tat Spavin; and Mr. Percy Maitland does justice to the coastguard officer, Nat Wilson. Mr. F. Vernon Travers is a lifelike Chief Constable; Mr. Harvey Welton good as Limpy Mudge; Mr. Joe Bardsley is a stalwart representative of the law; Mr. Alec Sandford is good as Warder Blunt; and Mr. James White deserves mention as Detective Pollard. Miss Josie Farrington's acting as Suzette, a French maid, won favourable recognition from the audience; Miss Lilian Earle is realistic as the Indian girl, Zamora; Miss Elsie Gray is very natural as the child, Little Davy; and Miss Marjorie Davenport displayed real power and pathos in the arduous rôle of Mary Stannard.

BENSON SEASON AT THE CORONET.

On Friday, Feb. 19, for the First Time in London, a Play, in One Act, Dramatised from Halliwell Sutcliffe's story by Mrs. F. R. Benson and H. O. Nicholson, and entitled
"A MIDNIGHT BRIDAL."

Maurice St. Quain	MR. MURRAY CARRINGTON
Bruce of Muirtown	MR. MOFFAT JOHNSTON
Mr. Kenneth	MR. JOHN HOWELL
Robin	MR. F. S. RICHARDSON
Lady Locherbie	MISS HELEN HAYE
Janet Locherbie	MISS OLIVE NOBLE
Nurse	MISS ELINOR AICKIN

A Midnight Bridal tells an artless story, based upon a melodramatic and somewhat improbable theme, but it was capitally acted, and at times quite carried away the audience into temporary forgetfulness of its wildly romantic nature. A curse is on the House of Locherbie, and every young maid of the name dies in her eighteenth year. The only chance to avert the evil eye is for her to wed before this period shall be reached. All preparations are made for such a union between Janet Locherbie, the fair and innocent daughter of the house, and her sweetheart, Bruce of Muirtown. Bruce has loved her since childhood, without his affection being reciprocated, however, as he is uncouth, fierce, and wild. At the eleventh hour news comes of his death in a duel. A belated traveller, one Maurice St. Quain, seeking shelter from the storm, is pressed into service to avert disaster, by means of a midnight bridal, run on strictly loveless lines. But he falls in love with Janet at first sight, and when Bruce turns up, having been only wounded, and rendered unconscious, St. Quain refuses to give her up. As Bruce insists, with many an insult, on fighting the "Southerner," he perforce gives combat, and disarms his opponent, who is weak from loss of blood. Admiration for St. Quain's magnanimity in not taking advantage of his helplessness to inflict even the slightest wound converts the rough, but brave, Scotchman into a friend, who pleads the cause of the soldier of King George with the somewhat bigoted advocate of the Stuart cause, Lady Locherbie, and enables him to carry off his willing bride. Lady Locherbie is so far convinced by Bruce's reasoning that she consents to a union of hearts, and trusts that the curse of the Locherbies may be lifted. All three authors made their appearance to great applause at the fall of the curtain. Mr. Murray Carrington as the romantic young officer, Maurice St. Quain, acted with fire and conviction, and was agreeable, earnest, and manly throughout. Mr. Moffat Johnston represented the fierce and determined Highlander with rugged force and power. Miss Helen Haye gave a performance of much distinction as the proud and aristocratic Lady Locherbie; and Miss Olive Noble was very sweet and gentle as Janet Locherbie, her daughter. Miss Elinor Aickin played with conviction as the old nurse; and Mr. John Howell and Mr. F. S. Richardson completed the cast.

On the same evening was revived Mrs. Hannah Cowley's three-act comedy, entitled
"THE BELLE'S STRATAGEM."

Sir George Touchwood	MR. GUY RATHBONE
Doricourt	MR. F. R. BENSON
Hardy	MR. E. A. WARBURTON
Flutter	MR. H. O. NICHOLSON
Saville	MR. F. G. WORLOCK
Villers	MR. G. HANNAM CLARK
Courtall	MR. MURRAY CARRINGTON
Mountebank	MR. MOFFAT JOHNSTON
Gibson	MR. HARRY CAINE
Frenchman	MR. J. P. WILSON
Porter	MR. JOHNSTON
Dick	MR. RIBTON HAINES
Fool	MR. HOWSON
Lady Francis Touchwood	MISS OLIVE NOBLE
Mrs. Rackett	MISS HELEN HAYE
Letitia Hardy	MRS. F. R. BENSON
Miss Ogle	MISS DALE
Kitty	MISS MARION FOREMAN
Maid	MISS BRETHERTON

It was in The Belle's Stratagem, in the early days, or, to be more exact, in 1866, that the late Sir Henry Irving made a name as Doricourt, under Miss Herbert's management at the St. James's. The famous actor revived the play at the Lyceum in 1876, with Miss Isabel Bateman as Letitia Hardy, and again in 1881, when Miss Ellen Terry was the Letitia. This is one of the very few old-fashioned plays which have, to some extent, survived the ordeal of time. The Belle's Stratagem is that of her endeavour to make her blasé lover woo her in a different guise, and by awakening his interest in her, even though it might be one of repulsion, to pave the way for the substitution of the tender passion. A multitude of side issues are interwoven in the main theme, such as the villainous intent of the unscrupulous gallant Courtall, the loyalty of Saville to his loved but lost adored one, the unreasoning jealousy and suspicion of Sir George Touchwood, with the usual small talk and scandalous gossip of the men and women of fashion. The music for the minuet in Act III., scene 5, had been specially composed by Mr. Edward Agassez, and the dance arranged by Mrs. F. R. Benson. This scene of the masquerade ball is quaintly designated merely a "Garden in London." It is the best scene of the piece, and though the attempted abduction of Letitia Hardy by Courtall, and her rescue by Saville, with the aid of careless Kitty, is rather "thin," the scene itself is very pretty and picturesque, and the dancing charming, a weird effect being given by the saturnalian revelry at its close, set to most grotesque music.

Mr. F. R. Benson acted the part of Doricourt in the spirit of pure farce, letting himself go thoroughly in the display of feigned madness in Act III. His polite comedy in Act II. is perhaps preferable, but he gave a sound, thorough-going performance throughout. Mrs. F. R. Benson as Letitia Hardy did not spare herself in her effort to make Doricourt dislike her if he will not love her. Mr. Guy Rathbone was excellent as the jealous, but doting, husband, Sir George Touchwood. Mr. H. O. Nicholson gave quite a gem of character-acting as the sprightly and good-natured old muddler and man of fashion, Flutter. Mr. E. A. Warburton made much of the character of the supposedly far-seeing old Hardy père; Mr. Murray Carrington was duly saturnine and intense as the rascally Courtall; and Mr. F. G. Worlock was good as the faithful friend Saville. Miss Helen Haye was a charming Mrs. Rackett; and Miss Olive Noble acted with girlish grace as Lady Francis Touchwood. The small part of Kitty was well done by Miss Marion Foreman; and a word of praise is due to the masqueraders for their elegant deportment and graceful dancing.

Mr. Benson and his company always show to advantage in The Taming of the Shrew, with which this week was begun. This breezy comedy and salutary lesson to scolding women was admirably presented by all concerned. Mrs. F. R. Benson's enactment of Kate the curst is a most amusing exhibition of impish ill-humour and ungovernable temper tamed by a similar unreasoning fury and blustering tyranny on the part of Petruchio, played with unctuous humour and admirable resource by Mr. F. R. Benson. The scene when Katherine, weary and spent, in a final outburst of rage attempts to stab Petruchio, but, overawed, lets the knife fall from her nerveless grasp and bursts into a paroxysm of tears was one of the best in the piece. Mr. Edward A. Warburton (whose performance as Brutus we inadvertently alluded to as Julius Cæsar last week) gave a sound embodiment of the perplexed Baptista; Mr. F. G. Worlock made a handsome Lucentio; and Miss Olive Noble was equally charming and comely as his loved one, Bianca. Mr. H. O. Nicholson excelled in the portrayal of the crafty old fox Gremio; and Mr. Nigel Playfair (in the regretted absence through illness of Mr. Geo. Weir) gained golden opinions as Grumio. Mr. Murray Carrington as Tranio, Mr. Guy R. Rathbone as Hortensio, and Mr. J. Moffat Johnston as Vincetio were all well in the picture. Mr. J. P. Wilson deserves special commendation as Biondello; and Miss Cissie Saumarez's sweet singing of "Should he upbraid" was a very pleasing feature of the entertainment. The week's programme further consisted of King Lear on Tuesday evening, Julius Cæsar on Wednesday, Macbeth at Thursday's matinée, Coriolanus in the evening, and The Merchant of Venice on Friday. Henry the Fifth is announced for to-day's matinée, and this evening The Merchant of Venice will be repeated.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Comedy, entitled
"MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH."

The attraction this week at the Shakespeare is the popular comedy, Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, written by Anne Crawford Flexner, and based on Alice Hegan Rice's book of the same name. Though the use of quaint forms of expression evoke considerable laughter, the wholesome lesson of the piece is always to the fore, and strikes a chord of sympathy in the hearts of the audience. An excellent company, under the direction of Mr. Gaston Mayer, does full justice to the comedy, and the spontaneous enthusiasm which greets the salient features of the play shows that unanimity of opinion which ensures success. The lovable nature of Mrs. Wiggs is portrayed by Miss Augusta Haviland in a manner that makes the character stand out prominently, without undue striving after effect. Miss Haviland has a thorough grip of the character, and throughout never fails to strike the right note of humour or pathos. A more quaintly comical impersonation of Miss Hazy than that given by Miss Armine Grace could not be conceived, and her vacant expression and high-pitched voice serve to keep the audience in roars of laughter. Miss Beatrice Bell contributes a clever study of Mrs. Eichorn; and Miss Violet Chamier does well as Mrs. Schultz. Miss Winifred Murray fully justifies her appearance as Lovey Mary, acting with delicacy and restraint. Miss Dorothy Clifton makes the most of her opportunities as Miss Lucy; and Miss Margaret Nybloc is a vivacious Asia. The droll character of Mr. Stubbins is played by Mr. Edward A. Coventry with an amount of comic force that ensures laughter and applause, of which he had a large share. Mr. Guy Addison is pleasing as Mr. Bob; and Mr. Harry G. Wright creditably sustains the rôle of the matrimonial agent, H. Hunkerdunkus Jones. Mr. Gerald Valentine is a manly Billy Wiggs; and Mr. Lawrence White supplies a contrast in the rôle of the cripple, Chris Hazy. Deacon Bagsby has a capable representative in Mr. Edwin Cushman; and Mr. Francis Chamier is interesting as the erring Mr. Wiggs. Minor parts are played by Miss Mimi Le Claire, Miss Marie Stella, Miss Kitty Rogers, Miss Nellie Brookes, and Masters Victor Ford and Francis Steel. Mr. Arthur Lyons is acting-manager and Mr. Harry G. Wright stage-manager for Mr. Gaston Mayer.

GREENWICH THEATRE.

Monday, Feb. 22, a Drama, in Four Acts, by Charles Rogers, entitled
"THE LADDER OF LIFE; OR, GORDONS TO THE FRONT."

Messrs. Charles Rogers and W. Wilson's company in the above play is the attraction this week, and on the night of our visit there was an excellent house, and the play was exceedingly well acted throughout. Mr. Charles Rogers plays David Gordon with energy and spirit; Mr. Roland Douglas is a capital General James Gordon, and his nephew Fergus has a clever representative in Mr. Claude H. Seaton; Ivan Karchikoff is well acted by Mr. Gerald Melville. Colonel Macgregor is well impersonated by Mr. M. E. Compton Mackenzie. Mr. Ernest Gifford is well suited to the part of Donald Macdougal. The Stebbings are very good indeed as Bill McJones, 'Arry McSmith and Joe McBrown. Mr. James Stirling is well suited to Breezy Bill (born tired). Piper Find later is also in the cast. Mr. Henry C. Vincent and Mr. Henry Beauford are both good. Little Ruby is pretty and natural as Little Gordon; Miss Connie Meadows is a smart and clever Mary Jane. Miss Eva St. Vincent is a dramatic Mother Flint. Meg Merriles is well played by Miss Gladys Ford. Howitt, and Miss Mary Ford is a delightful Olga Sobinsky.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Drama, entitled
"HER NAMELESS CHILD."

The drama for the current week is meeting with cordial support at this theatre, and Mr. Sam Duckworth's company is giving a good and interesting representation. Mr. J. W. Evelyn offers an excellent rendering of the character of Anthony Ford, the sorrow-stricken blacksmith, and his pathetic portrayal is imbued with considerable dramatic effect, which is received in a distinctly favourable manner. Arthur Ford finds a capable exponent in Mr. Sidney C. Cranston, who puts heart into his work. Mr. Arthur E. Pringle supplies a clever study of Lord Henry Woodville; possessing a good stage presence and commanding voice, he plays the unsympathetic part in robust fashion. Mr. Frank Thompson is responsible for the part of the unworthy catspaw, and is successful. Mr. Larry Clements as Tom Rivers supplies the comedy relief, and offers a humorous characterisation, and is ably assisted in the fun-making by Miss Renie Douglas as Bessie Brooks; Miss Pattie Hastings as Phillis Ford gives a good delineation of that much harassed woman, delivering her lines in an impressive manner; Miss Mona Grey shows to advantage in the part of Lady Sibil Woodville. The remaining characters in the cast are suitably represented.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Musical Drama, entitled
"WHAT A WOMAN DID."

Presented by Messrs. F. Marriott-Watson and Sanderson Moffatt's company, the drama What a Woman Did, although running on familiar lines, is, in the present case, made considerably lighter by the addition of musical numbers. Miss Florence E. Florence undertakes the part of Elise de L'Orme, who undergoes severe tribulations. Miss Phyllis Hamilton gives a good delineation of the character of La Papillon, the butterfly of Paris. Miss Norah Waylett essays the part of Nanette in a vivacious fashion. Miss Flo Norman makes a lovely Fanchon, and scores in several songs and dances. Mr. F. Marriott-Watson sustains the character of Raffaelle Duroc in a very able manner. Mr. Sanderson Moffat plays the rôle of Conrad de L'Orme in a powerful manner, and achieves distinction for a dramatic rendering of the part. Black Pitou has a capital representative in Mr. Reg. Kloof. Mr. C. Elton Morgan as Fritz von Hoeglheim submits a pleasing interpretation, and is happily suited in a laughing song. Mr. Owen Edwin is amusing as Perfect Peter Pippin, his eccentric dancing being diverting. Specialities are contributed by the Clancy Girls, who afford much pleasure both in song and dance.

MR. EDITOR.—Sir,—A slight error was made by your Fleetwood correspondent in to-day's notice of the Queen's Theatre. The part of Jack Hearne was not played by Mr. K. Arthur, but by—Yours faithfully, HERBERT HASTINGS. Queen's Theatre, Fleetwood, Feb. 18.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the council meeting, held at 353, Strand, on Tuesday, Feb. 23. Present:—Mr. Cecil Brooking (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), and Messrs. Clive Currie, J. Poole Kirkwood, Gilbert Esmond, J. Sebastian Smith, Langford Reede, and Cecil Raleigh, and Misses Rose Mathews and Agnes Imlay. In the absence of Mr. Blount, Mr. Robson Paige acted as secretary. A telegram was read from Miss Conti regretting her inability to attend. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Letters from Clarence Derwent, F. Llewellyn, R. A. Greene, C. F. Collings, J. Poole Kirkwood, and Lewis Casson, accepting their election to the council, were read.

The following were nominated for election:—Nancy Blackwood, proposed by Mildred Surrey, seconded by A. Russell Davis; Thomas C. Fairbairn, proposed by Charles Magrath, seconded by Agnes Imlay; and Frederick Hill, proposed by J. Poole Kirkwood, seconded by Robson Paige.

With a view to increasing the membership, the council instructed the secretary to make it known that the council had determined to make two awards of honour to the members who introduced the largest number of fully-paid annual members during the ensuing year. For the first award the number of such members must exceed twenty. The first award will be an honorary life membership of the Association, and the second award a fully paid-up subscription for one year.

Mr. Raleigh brought forward a resolution dealing with the Actors' Association form of contract, and arrangements were made for further discussion. Mr. Raleigh also gave notice that he would make an important proposal re the agency at the next council meeting. A sincere vote of sympathy with Mr. Richard A. Greene on the loss of his mother was passed.

The secretary was instructed to put up notices to the effect that smoking is prohibited in the front room, and that in future all agency work must be done through the secretary.

Miss Imlay submitted the Finance Committee's report, which was adopted.

Miss Mathews reported that the "Actresses' Franchise League" accepted the invitation of the A.A. for the use of the general room, fixing the time from 2 to 5, on Thursday, March 4, and that time. Madeleine Lucette Ryley would take the chair.

ACTORS' UNION.

The usual committee meeting of the Actors' Union took place on the 19th inst. at the offices, 19, Bedford-street, Strand. The following were present:—Messrs. Frank Gerald, Henry Bedford, F. W. Braithwaite, Robert M. Taylor, Walter L. Rignold, Langford Reed, Doré Lewin-Mannering, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary).

Communications were received from H. Tripp-Edgar, Jerrold Heather, A. Maitland Stapley, and George P. Lester.

A member was advanced the sum of 12s. 6d. from the A.U.B.F., and the secretary reported the repayment of 10s. 6d. from a member who had been advanced a loan from the fund. Those members who have money in hand from the sale of the A.U.B.F. stamps are requested to remit the amount as soon as possible to the secretary.

The rules requiring revision, Mr. Rignold proposed and Mr. Braithwaite seconded that Mr. Gerald and Mr. Blackmore revise the rules that require it, the rules then to be submitted to the committee in time to place the alterations on the agenda for the general meeting.

A resolution having been received from the meeting at Hummum's Hotel to the effect that the members' meeting there be only held once a fortnight, the committee decided that it was to the best interests of the Union to hold the meetings as heretofore.

A suggestion by the secretary that those members who have not purchased their stamp for the current month by the 7th inst. be written to as soon after that date as possible was adopted by the committee.

Another suggestion, with regard to a Union cricket club, was placed before the meeting, and those members of the Union who are in favour of the idea are asked to communicate with the secretary.

ACTORS' REFERENCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I cannot understand why managers are so often careless in neglecting to write for references of artists, agents, &c., whom they engage, and who are unknown to them. Some time ago I had a letter from a manager stating that a man he had engaged, and who had given me as a reference, had run away suddenly. Had he applied to me originally, I could have told him this would probably happen. I have also seen people whom I have been obliged to get rid of advertising in papers that they have "resigned" engagements with me. My own experience with people whom I have been obliged to engage in a hurry without applying to references has been most unfortunate.—Yours faithfully, NORMAN V. NORMAN.

Tyne Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Feb. 25.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Farcical Comedy, by Brandon Thomas, entitled,
"CHARLEY'S AUNT."

That this well-known comedy has, nothwithstanding its age, still a strong attraction for the play-going public was amply evidenced at the Royal County Theatre this week, where Mr. Thomas's own company is fulfilling a week's engagement. The interest was as keen and the laughter as loud as when the clever play first began to tickle the risibilities of the British public. Mr. Arthur Chesney, who has played the "aunt" many times, continues to give a most mirth-provoking picture of the part, and he receives valuable assistance from Mr. Hastings Lynn and Mr. Robert Burnett, who acquit themselves well as his college chums Jack Chesney and Charley Wykeham respectively. The fun is sensibly added to by the efforts of Mr. Roy Byford as Spettigue. Admirable performances are also given by Miss Estelle Wingood as Kitty Verdun; by Miss Ethel Fifield as Amy Spettigue; by Miss Sylvia Morris as Ela Delahay; and by Miss Vere Gerald as Donna Lucia; by Mr. Thos. McCausland as Col. Chesney; and by Mr. Sydney Compton as Brassett.

NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, Feb. 22, the Drama, entitled
"A BROKEN HEART."

The visitors here this week are Mr. Harry Foxwell's company in A Broken Heart. It is a well-written and powerful drama, and is meeting with considerable success. Mr. Gerald Kennedy, a most capable actor, fills the part of John Barnard, and has a flattering reception nightly. Mr. G. Moreton-Williams does well as the evil genius Stephen Raylton. A clever character study is given by Mr. Edward Rawlinson as Gash Gills. Mr. Vivian Charles does well as the Rev. Mr. Staunton. Mr. Newton Pearce is decidedly good as Tony Tibbetts. As Mary Barnard Miss Sheila Walsh gives an excellent and most sympathetic performance. In Miss Daisy Rocheford a sweet and clever child has been found, her Little Mary being a delightful piece of acting. Miss Emma Rainbow is good as Mrs. Barnard, mother of John, and as Miss Grace Fanshaw Miss Mabel Kelland does well. All the minor characters are well played, and the play is staged and dressed in an entirely satisfactory manner. The orchestra, under the Lyric's new musical director, Mr. Ashley Richards, dealt satisfactorily with the incidental music, and their tuneful selections during the intervals were much appreciated.

THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—As a result of The Era's kind help, I have had a large number of replies, but like Oliver, "I want more." The replies I have received include a retired captain of R.F.A., a Chinese magician, an offer of twelve acres of land for a camp, an application to be allowed to supply whatever horses I require, and amongst the volunteers are a comedian, a tragedian, juvenile men, heavy men, character men, musical turns, gymnasts, dancers, singers, boxing turns, and last, but not least, managers.

As soon as we have the numbers, I shall approach the leading managers of the music-hall and theatrical worlds, and get them interested in our scheme, and incidentally in our smoking concerts.

The scheme has been well received by my brother "pros.," but I want them to speedily fill up and return at once the forms I have sent them.
—Yours faithfully, CHAS. C. OMMANNEY.
41, West High-street, Salford, Manchester.
Feb. 23, 1909.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—May I draw your attention to the fact that something like ten years ago I obtained permission to form an Actors' Company of volunteers, and it was actually arranged that it was to be attached to the Artists' Rifle V. Corps.

The idea with regard to drill was exactly the same as the one now suggested by Mr. Ommanney. We obtained one hundred and twenty recruits, including such well-known men as Messrs. F. R Benson, Harry Nicholls, Frank Gillmore, &c. Unfortunately the movement was not supported by the highest theatrical leading lights in London.—Yours faithfully,

CHARLES CLIFFORD,
Late Lieutenant and Acting Captain,
4th East Surrey Regiment.
T. R., Tonypandy, Feb. 20, 1909.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Being an old volunteer, I was much interested in the article in last week's Era under the above heading. I don't wish to throw cold water on this new patriotic movement on behalf of the profession, but it seems to me that there are too many obstacles in the way to prevent the scheme ever becoming practicable for the touring actor. It is suggested that the actor should put in his drills with the local companies one afternoon in the week. Now, in the majority of provincial towns the local companies drill at night, and when once the actor has passed the "recruit" stage, drilling on his own will be wasted time, because he will need what is known as "company" drills. But the great object is to be able to shoot, and to be even a "passable" shot one must practise at the butts. This would mean that the actor would either have to shoot with a different rifle each time—and this is not calculated to improve his shooting—or tour his own rifle. Also, it has been suggested that it would be very pleasant for him to put in a fortnight's camp in June or July—the slack season. That is so, but a large number of the touring profession are, during those months, endeavouring to settle for the autumn. And what about men in the ranks? Wouldn't there be a lot of dissatisfaction because Mr. A. had been made a sergeant and Mr. B. not promoted at all? We all know the petty jealousies that arise in the profession, and I fear they would be carried on to the parade-ground. As the actor—and in this particular instance I refer to the legitimate—cannot, or will not, amalgamate with his brother actors in any suggested reform that is mooted for his welfare, I'm afraid his patriotism will not be strong enough to make him a successful Territorial. Anyhow, I fervently wish Mr. Ommanney and his co-workers the very best of luck in their patriotic movement, and hope they will surmount all the difficulties I mention, and their efforts be crowned with success.—Yours faithfully, NORMAN YATES.
Theatre Royal, Worcester.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I trust I shall not be accused of sounding a discordant note in the general tone of enthusiasm which has greeted Mr. Chas. C. Ommanney's Territorial scheme; but I cannot help thinking that there are one or two difficulties in the way of its realisation, difficulties which seem to me well-nigh insuperable.

In the first place, let me state, in fear of being misunderstood, that I am thoroughly in favour of the movement, if it can be realised, and if the difficulties I have alluded to are adjusted I would willingly give it my support. I may here mention that I have had some little experience in matters military, having served nearly two years in South Africa during the Boer War, and also a shorter period, some years ago, in the old Volunteers.

To return to my objections. Firstly, granted that our Theatrical Territorial (it really sounds rather well) has the entrée to a Drill Hall in every town he is likely to visit on tour, and supposing—not at all an unlikely supposition—that he is the only T. T. in the company. He is free all the day, and has time to put in as many drills as he cares to, but he is alone, his local comrades-in-arms can only attend in the evening.

Is he to be drilled in solitary state by a reluctant drill-sergeant deprived of his customary leisure, and will this do him much good? He can be taught a great deal certainly; the mechanism of the rifle, for instance, and how to handle the weapon, even his movements on parade, but one of the most important parts of his military education, the training to work with his comrades and obey orders as one man, it is extremely unlikely that he will ever get, or, if so, only at very rare intervals.

Secondly, the annual camp, the only time our "Terrier" would get any real idea of war conditions, and the absolutely essential part of his training, is, I understand, now compulsory. It is right that it should be so, but how does it affect our T.T.? Mr. Ommanney has said that the T.T. camp would be arranged in the slackest time of the theatrical year; but our actor-soldier is possibly in an engagement going right through the summer—a stock season, perhaps, in Scotland. Will his manager release him for a fortnight, fill his place at, in all probability, a considerable additional outlay, and have him back again when his training is over? I fear there are very few managers who would do so, and who shall blame them?

Then, from the actor's point of view, who is going to pay his fares from Scotland to Salisbury Plain, or wherever his battalion is to camp, and back to his engagement, to say nothing of the loss his pocket will suffer by the difference in his salary and the Army rate of pay which he will receive whilst under canvas? I am assuming that the actor in question is one who cannot afford to be "out" all the summer. His Territorial obligations would undoubtedly prejudice his chances in the "slack season," and summer managers, as they declined his services, would say, gently but firmly, "No Territorials."—Yours faithfully,

W. HENRY HARGREAVES,
The Bondman Company.
Theatre Royal, Edinburgh, Feb. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Now that the Territorial question is first and foremost, would you kindly grant me a little space in your paper for a few remarks and bare suggestions regarding actors and their country's defence. At present everybody outside acting seems to be imbued with patriotism arising from the play, An Englishman's Home, now being performed at Wyndham's Theatre, but we do not hear of any actor enthusiasts. Why, I wonder? Are actors exempt from their share of home defence? Surely out of a profession with something like 4,000 members in Great Britain, it is possible to obtain at least 200—two companies—to swell the ranks of the Terriers.

This would not be without its advantages to actors themselves. For instance, unless an actor is very fortunate, he will find himself out of work for at least two-and-a-half months in the summer, during which he is very apt to idle away his time in or near the Strand, going, from force of habit, from agent to agent in a fruitless search for work, and quickly getting rid of the few pounds he may have saved during his autumn and spring engagements. Why not form an actors' corps of Territorials, which should by a special arrangement be attached to the Regular Army for drill and camp training during these two-and-a-half months, for which time he would be receiving a small sum by way of salary, his keep, good health, fresh air, and learn how to be of some use to his country in the event of attack—infinitely more than it is possible to gain in the Strand? Some might say, What about our autumn? Well, it's not necessary to be out of touch with managers. These gentlemen, knowing where to find men serving in an Actors' Corps of Territorials, would naturally turn there for them, and, I venture to say, prefer them to others not members of such an institution. It might also lead to something of a union amongst professionals—a union which is sorely needed, and would undoubtedly raise the actors' status, which in many towns is not of a very high standard.

I have had a chat on the subject with an Army officer, and he is of the opinion that it would be a good thing for the actor, and that the Territorial Association would make special arrangements for such a corps. I shall be pleased to hear from any fellow actors interested.—Yours faithfully,

W. MAYNE LYNTON,

Mr. Ernest Mansell's idea to offer the Royal Palace Theatre, Ramsgate, to local officers of the Territorial forces for the purpose of holding a grand recruiting march round the town, to be followed by a programme of patriotic songs, speeches, and tableaux, was a magnificent one, and has been crowned with unbounded success. Among the officers who have fallen in with the idea and promised their active support are:—General Sir Charles Warren, K.C.M.G., &c., Major A. Lewis, Capt. S. H. Page, Capt. F. Mainwaring Dunstan, Lieut. R. M. Sebag Montifiore, Captain Inskip, Regimental Q.M.S. W. T. Smith, Captain Witts (Church Lads'), Miss Devonport (Nurses' Institute), and Captain F. W. Conconi (St. John's Ambulance). It is hoped that the Coastguard Service will also be represented. It is hoped to show three tableaux—(1) old soldiers who have served their country, (2) men who are now serving in all branches, and (3) the youngsters who are coming along. All men of twelve years' service wishing to take part (either army, navy, or ex-volunteers) are invited to send in to the theatre at once their names and the names of their regiments. Committee meetings will be held at the theatre at four o'clock on the 25th inst. and the 4th prox., when all interested in the movement are invited. Some idea of the interest taken in the event may be gathered from the fact that Sir Charles Warren has kindly offered to put on a special tableaux with the boy scouts. Lieutenant Montefiore says: "I shall be pleased to co-operate with you, and I shall be pleased to do what I can to help them (other officers) and to support their recruiting." Major Lewis refers to the offer as a most patriotic one, and adds: "Your proposal is not only one that will tend to make the Territorials proud of the fact that their services are recognised and appreciated, but it will also stir up the young men of our district to consider what is their duty to the empire to which they have the honour to belong." A large number of men are required for the "Buffs" and the Artillery, and Ramsgate is called upon to raise one of the eight companies of the Kent Cyclist Battalion, consisting of sixty men, so there is ample choice for young men. What is required of them will be simply and concisely explained by forceful speakers in short speeches. Among the special songs to be sung is "Lads of the Empire," which has been specially written and composed by Mr. R. Partridge, and will be sung by Mr. Chas. Sutton. Loans of flags or trophies of arms, &c., will be much appreciated, on loan, by Mr. Mansell, and will be carefully preserved and returned. The Mayor and Corporation have been invited to attend, and, after paying expenses the proceeds will be devoted to the General Hospital and other local charities.

THE patriotic spirit is being enthusiastically promoted at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, where a meeting was held on Saturday last, under the presidency of Mr. Charles Barnard, to discuss the possibility of forming an "army" of Territorial Cadets. Mr. Barnard explained that he intended that these cadets should be something between the ordinary Boy Scouts and the Territorial Army. He suggested that a district headquarters should be formed at various theatres, and that some arrangement might be made whereby a Territorial officer should drill the lads at stated times.

MR. BARNARD expressed himself willing to allow the Elephant and Castle Theatre to be used as one of the Southern District Headquarters, and he hoped other managers would follow his example, and so help to forward a good and necessary institution. He would be pleased to forward particulars to anybody interested in the movement, and uniforms could be obtained on application to him at the Elephant and Castle Theatre at a very nominal figure. A great many boys were in attendance, and three hearty cheers for the President (Mr. C. Barnard) and the King were given before they finally disbanded.

THERE will be a meeting at the Elephant and Castle on Tuesday next at one o'clock. Anyone interested in the subject of the Boy Scouts will be welcomed.

WITH his accustomed enterprise, Mr. Robert Arthur has booked An Englishman's Home for Kennington Theatre during the week commencing March 15, and the business-manager (Mr. H. Barrett Brandreth) has arranged to give this patriotic play a fitting send-off. Monday, the 15th prox., is to be a military night, and in recognition of Mr. Brandreth's efforts to assist recruiting for the Territorial Army during the pantomime the Mayor of Southwark, Col. Villiers, A.D.C. to the King, Col. Whitehead, commanding the 21st Battalion of the London Regiment, and two officers and non-commissioned officers are attending the performance. The officers will wear the uniform of their corps, and will be joined by members of other Territorial battalions. During the recent appeal at Kennington 115 recruits were enlisted in the 21st London from amongst the audience, while all the attendants at the theatre who were eligible have also donned the kharki.

AN International Music Congress will mark the celebration of the Haydn Centenary in Vienna. It will last from May 25 to May 29, and will be under the patronage of the Emperor Francis Joseph. Papers have been promised by some hundred of the leading European musicians, Great Britain being represented among others by Sir Hubert Parry, Bart., Dr. Cummings, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Dom Andre Mocquereau, and Sir Charles Stanford. Several evening receptions, and visits to the graves of the great composers in Vienna will be included in the proceedings.

THE TERRITORIAL BOY SCOUTS.

HOW A NOTABLE MOVEMENT CAME INTO BEING.

A CHAT WITH MR. CHARLES BARNARD.

In The Babes in the Wood pantomime at the Elephant and Castle Theatre Miss Kitty Clinton has been singing a military song apropos of the Territorial Army movement, and has had fifty lads dressed in uniform acting in a picturesque setting to the number. Mr. Charles Barnard was surprised to receive many applications from lads asking to be enrolled in the "corps." This suggested to Mr. Barnard the idea of forming a contingent which should act as a "feeder" to the adult army which is now being recruited. He at once set the business machinery of his various theatres to work, and recruiting has been proceeding like wildfire. It is Mr. Barnard's ambition in this way to get together an army of youthful soldiers, who shall be drilled under proper supervision, of at least 100,000 boys.

These are to be known as the "Territorial Boy Scouts," and the committee, composed of well-known theatrical business men, have been meeting at the Elephant and Castle Theatre during the past two weeks organising the movement.

Interviewed by an Era representative, Mr. Chas. Barnard confessed that the undertaking seemed, at first sight, a gigantic task. "But," he added, "I am sure it will be an equally gigantic success. You see, the main idea is to catch the Territorial young as far as we are concerned. These lads will be properly drilled by competent instructors, and can, when the age limit of sixteen is reached, be drafted into a Territorial regiment proper. In this way the junior corps formed at my theatres throughout the country will act as 'feeders' to the district Territorials. This will lessen the work of drilling in the senior corps, because after a three or four years' course in the Scouts a boy should be a smart soldier.

"It is quite true that at the first glance the idea has a strong theatrical flavour about it. But, in the present instance at least, the thing has been put into practice without any hope of anything but a lot of hard work and no hope of reward, except that feeling of satisfaction which every man must feel who has contributed his mite, however small, to repel a danger—real or imaginary—that threatens his beloved country. The gentlemen who are acting on my committee have spent a great deal of time and money too in helping me to get the idea into working order.

"Already at Woolwich, Chatham, Wolverhampton, and Tunbridge Wells the matter has been taken up by the enthusiastic theatre managers there, and by the time you have printed what I am saying we should not be less than 1,000 strong. The 1st Battalion, with its headquarters at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, already numbers over 400, and fresh recruits are coming up daily. The boys display the utmost enthusiasm, and many are the sons of well-to-do local people."

The following set of rules has been drafted and circulated:—

(1) That this body be called the "Territorial Boy Scouts." Each corps to be self-supporting, and each boy to provide his own equipment.

(2) Its object is to imbue a spirit of citizenship and love of country in each boy, and to keep him healthily employed in his leisure.

(3) Age limit to be from 11 to 16. All membership to cease at the age of 17, at which age those desirous can transfer to the Territorial Army.

(4) A general committee to be formed, with power to add to the number.

(5) An executive committee to be elected from the general committee.

(6) This body to be incorporated with the Territorial Army.

(7) All boys to be, on their honour, loyal to their King and country, to submit to those placed in authority over them, and always to conduct themselves in a manner conducive to the best interests of the corps. Any boy whose behaviour is contrary to the spirit of this rule, either in or out of the corps, to be dismissed.

(8) This head company, originating at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, to be called the 1st Battalion, and all others formed in the future to take their number in order of formation with the sanction of the head battalion.

(9) The full equipment to consist of the following:—Slouch hat, khaki putties and breeches, shirt with collar, mess-tin and cover, belt and pouch, staff and strap, and Union Jack scarves.

Permission was granted to Tunbridge Wells, Aston, Smethwick, and Birmingham to form corps to act in conjunction with the 1st Battalion. All bodies wishing to form a corps, in town or country, in connection with this movement to communicate with us at this office, or with Mr. Charles Barnard, founder, Elephant and Castle Theatre, S.E., when all information and assistance will be given.

Copy of letter from Capt. F. G. Hargon, Quartermaster of the 24th Battalion County of London Territorials ("The Queen's"):—

73, New-street, Kennington, S.E.
Feb. 25, 1909.

Dear Sir,—

I consider that this scheme for the formation of the Territorial Boy Scouts is an excellent one. It will tend to install into the minds of the youth of this country patriotism, discipline, cleanliness, and order. The boys would become systematic in their arrangements, and ultimately not only be a credit and of great use to the British Empire, but also a help and comfort to their parents. This organisation, if founded on the sound fundamental principle of being a part of the King's Forces, i.e., of the Territorial Force, would after a lapse of a few years, be the means of keeping the Territorial Force at its most efficient strength, by filling up gaps caused by resignation and casualties.

Wishing you every success,

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) F. G. HARGON,
Capt. and Qrmter. 24th Battn. County of London ("The Queens").

THE British Empire Shakespeare Society's much-appreciated reading of King Lear at the Victoria Hall, Bayswater, on the 2nd inst., will be repeated to-morrow (Sunday) evening, at the Passmore Edwards Settlement, Tavistock-place, W.C. A certain number of free seats will be available for the use of the public. The cast will be practically the same as on the previous occasion, and will include Messrs. Lyn Harding, Acton Bond, Bassett Roe, Fewlass Llewellyn, A. Harding Steerman, J. Henry Twyford, George Silver, Shakespeare Stewart, Howard Rose, Cecil Du Gue, and George Owen; and Misses Adeline Bourne, Evelyn Weeden, Violet Hunter, and Dorothy Thomas.

IT has been decided to hold a meeting at 217, Piccadilly, W., on Wednesday next, at 3.30 p.m., to discuss the desirability of forming a society for the protection of unacted authors. The objects are as follows:—(1) To arrange with a competent reader to read and criticise members' plays; (2) to approach certain managers for the use of their theatres for the production of approved plays by members; (3) to have the said plays produced by a well-known producer, and acted chiefly by competent provincial artists, so as to enable managers to see the work of both authors and artists. Seats for every performance of the society would be reserved for all managers who cared to be present.

"LADY EXMORE'S EMBARRASSMENT."

A New Comedy, in Three Acts, by Herbert G. Phillips, Adapted from a Story by Alice and Charles Askew, by Special Permission, Produced by Amateurs for the first time on any stage at the Royal Concert Hall, St. Leonards-on-Sea, on Saturday, Feb. 20.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

In Lady Exmore's Embarrassment Mr. Phillips is responsible for a play of some interest. The curtain discloses the drawing-room at Lady Exmore's house in town. It is the afternoon of Derby Day. She has remained at home from choice; the Earl and party of friends have gone to the races. Her brother Charles, a brieflless barrister, calls on her and tells her that he is dreadfully cornered, having given a bill for £1,000 for losses at bridge, which he must meet at once. She offers him £150—all the cash she has at command. He urges her to lend him her jewels temporarily. This she refuses, as they are family heirlooms. A post-horn announces the return of the party, and she gives him the key of her jewel safe that he may get the notes and go away without seeing the others. He is enamoured of Mrs. Lushington, who is the cause of his reckless play. She enters with the rest of the party, and he sees her alone on leaving. He entreats her to marry him and he would then take up an appointment in Canada. She refuses, because re-marriage would lose her her large fortune under her late husband's will. He hands the key to the butler, and leaves in despair, but makes an appointment to see her again that evening. The Countess takes occasion to urge Mrs. Lushington to discourage her brother's attentions to her, not only because she is so much his senior, but because he is being ruined. This speech earns the widow's enmity. The Earl tells his wife of Richard Digby, an expert judge of jewels, who is to be at the dinner party that night, and asks her to be cordial with him, as his knowledge would be useful.

At the dinner party in Act II. the Earl asks his wife to show Digby her tiara, and is called away to the telephone. She does so, and Digby at once tells her that they are paste. She is terribly agitated. He asks her to tell him the reason; she, thinking her brother in his distress has changed the jewels, begs him not to question her. He agrees not to do so for a kiss. He is prompted to this by his resentment of my lady's sarcasm previously expressed. To save her brother she permits him to kiss her lips, and the action is seen by Mrs. Lushington who enters at the moment. The widow excuses her absence, and a letter is given the Countess. It is from her brother, saying that he should at once leave England. She is terribly perturbed. The Earl returns and asks Digby's opinion of the diamonds. With a glance at the Countess Digby replies "They are remarkably fine," and the Earl tells them Charles has just telephoned him that he is leaving for Canada. This news disconcerts the widow, who leaves, and Digby expresses his regret to the Countess at what had happened. She begs him to keep the secret of the false gems. Some amusing comedy is introduced in the third act. The young lovers—Alister and Millicent—at a Suffragist meeting, had assaulted the police, which had led to another tiff between them. Lady Exmore's good services were asked by Alister, who displays a card, "Votes for women." Digby informs Lady Exmore that something must be done promptly to stop Mrs. Lushington's malicious tongue, which betrays far and wide the imprudence of the Countess. He presses her to allow him to assist her, thinking she had been led to pawn the jewels for some private debt. In her confusion she betrays her secret fears as to her brother's action and explains the whole story of his infatuation for the widow and his losses at bridge. Mrs. Lushington is announced, and being left with Digby explanations ensue. She is now full of remorse for her malicious action, and tells Digby his fears are erroneous, for she had herself advanced Charles the money, and his disgrace was simply his wounded pride at taking her money. She expresses her admiration of the Countess whom she had traduced, and promises to set things right. The Earl tells the Countess that Charles has written him good news, and sets her secret fears at rest by saying he had himself had the false tiara made, and intended telling her when she better knew the value of diamonds. The piece was adequately played by the amateur cast mentioned above.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. J. E. B. BEAUMONT.

After the final performance of Goody Two Shoes at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, on Saturday, a presentation was made to Mr. Beaumont, general-manager of Mr. John Hart's Sheffield theatres, of a beautifully illuminated address, designed by Miss Pilley, and a purse of £100, subscribed for by over 500 patrons of the Lyceum and Royal Theatres. The presentation was made by Alderman George Senior in a characteristic speech, in which he referred to Mr. Beaumont's high qualifications for the responsible position he occupied in regard to local theatrical affairs, and to his virtues as a man and a citizen. Mr. Beaumont, who was very cordially received, spoke of his happy six years' association with Sheffield. He had an excellent and indulgent public, and a considerate board of directors, and a free hand was allowed him in most matters. He spoke highly of the staffs of the two theatres, and he hoped that he would long remain with them, and that the Sheffield public would never regret the confidence they had expressed in the policy he had adhered to. The following is the text of the address:—

"To J. E. B. Beaumont, Esq., manager of the Lyceum Theatre, Sheffield, and the Sheffield Theatre Royal.

"The conclusion of the third successful pantomime provided at the Theatre Royal, and at a time when you have completed six years' association with the Lyceum Theatre, a considerable company of Sheffield playgoers desire to offer you this token of their esteem, together with a purse of gold.

"It is felt that during the years you have held the position of manager of the Lyceum, you have done everything in your power to ensure the comfort and entertainment of thousands of Sheffield lovers of play. The two theatres were certainly never better controlled than they are to-day, and patrons are always confident of receiving courtesy, kindness, and the most efficient attention at your hands.

"When Mr. John Hart, having taken over the Theatre Royal, decided to give you a dual charge, he only confirmed an impression already held of your exceptional capabilities as a theatrical manager.

"We trust that your connection with Sheffield will long be maintained, and that you and Mrs. Beaumont will enjoy succeeding decades of health and prosperity."

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES visited the St. James's Theatre on Monday and witnessed the performance of The Prisoner of Zenda.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

"L'ANE DE BURIDAN,"

Comedy, in Three Acts, by MM. de Flers and de Caillavet, Produced at the Gymnase on Feb. 19.

Micheline ..... MLLE. MARTHE REGNIER
Vivette ..... MLLE. MISTINGUETT
Fernande Chantal ..... MLLE. FONTENEY
Odette ..... MLLE. FREVALLES
Baronne de Stecke ..... MME. BLANCHE BARAT
Louise ..... MLLE. MONTAVON
Lucien ..... M. DUMENY
George Boullains ..... M. GASTON DUBOSC
Morange ..... M. ARVEL
Adolphe ..... M. JEAN DAX

PARIS, THURSDAY, FEB. 25.—MM. de Flers and de Caillavet have given us a pleasing play, but with hardly any plot. It may be argued that bright dialogue is the essence of modern comedy, yet the authors should beware of monotony in a three-act play wherein there is so little material as in L'Ane de Buridan. We are reminded at the outset of Mademoiselle Josette and Triplepatte; of the former in the character of a charming tomboy that Mlle. Marthe Regnier has made a speciality; of the latter in the foolish clubman, George Boullains, who makes love to all the women, and is constantly getting in and out of bed in blue silk pyjamas. All this is very droll for a little while, but in the long run of three acts it is apt to become somewhat tedious. As the title implies, the donkey in question is the animal who hesitates between the pail of water and the sack of oats, ultimately dying from hunger because he cannot make up his mind whether he is more hungry than thirsty. In the same manner George Boullains is undecided as to which of the two charming women he should lay siege to: one the wife, the other the mistress, of his friend Lucien, whom he met at the house of some friends in St. Lunaire. He finally chooses the little tomboy, Micheline, Lucien's ward, who frankly asks him to marry her. The dialogue is sparkling throughout, and the final scene, wherein Micheline falls asleep in Boullains's rooms, makes an original and charming curtain. Much of the success of the work is due to the exponents, who acted splendidly; in fact, the management of the Gymnase may pride itself on having one of the best companies in Paris.

"GUERRE."

Play, in Three Acts, by M. Robert Reinert, Adapted from the German by MM. A. Germain and R. Trébor, Produced at Antoine's on Feb. 19.

Madeleine Axen ..... MLLE. LUCIE BRILLE
Gertrude Volney ..... MLLE. JEANNE EVEN
Mme. Axen ..... MME. MASSART
Elise ..... MLLE. CORBE
Le Curé ..... M. GEMIER
Rodolphe ..... M. MAXENCE
Un Soldat ..... M. FLATEAU
Le Commissaire ..... M. COLAS
Le Maire ..... M. HOURY

The Théâtre Antoine has produced three novelties, of which La Guerre, the pièce de résistance, is the least satisfactory. The work is of German manufacture, and was performed—so we are told—two or three times for the benefit of the members of the Peace Conference in Munich. Others assert that it had a long and successful run in the Fatherland, a statement I doubt very much, because a hymn of Peace would hardly prove acceptable to our warlike neighbours, who prefer the sound of the clashing of swords. It certainly was a praiseworthy attempt on the author's part to depict the folly of war; but these theories can only be expressed in book form. As a play it proved a failure. At curtain-rise a handful of wounded soldiers are vainly waiting for the ambulance men. The noise of the battle is heard in the distance, and the men while away the time by indulging in painfully long dissertations on war and other matters. In the second act, at the house of the relatives of one of the before-mentioned wounded soldiers, more distant noises are heard, the cheering of a drunken crowd celebrating a victory wherein fifty thousand of the enemy's troops are slain. There is also an invisible dog howling in the distance—a stage howl that took the audience somewhat by surprise. In the final act the same wounded men are still seen waiting for the ambulances, and more tirades follow. Expressed at a conference or in the form of a pamphlet, the author's generous theories might have been telling. As a play they missed their mark.

"LE DONATAIRE,"

Play, in Two Acts, by M. Léon Madart, Produced at Antoine's on Feb. 19.

Louise ..... MLLE. LAVIGNE
Jérôme Madré ..... M. HENRY-HOURY
Ernest Madré ..... M. GERARD GARNIER
Maître Corbe ..... M. MARCHAL
Grosjean ..... M. GEORGES DALLEU
Duveau ..... M. DUVEAU
Depré ..... M. PIERRE LAURENT

This is a clever, amusing play, which, however, will give rise to litigation, inasmuch as M. Léon Madart is accused of plagiarism; and the matter will be fought out before the Authors' Society. Jérôme Madré is an old peasant. He has not a single relative, and the thought that his fortune will after his death go to the State preys so much on his mind that he sends for his lawyer, and gives all his property to Ernest, a youth who also bears the name of Madré, on the condition that Ernest will have to keep the old man in comfort and treat him with respect. When, however, Ernest comes into this unexpected fortune he shows himself cruel, and discards Louise, a girl he seduced and who soon expects to become a mother. His behaviour to Jérôme is altogether so outrageous that the old peasant implores the lawyer to cancel the deed wherein he disposed of his property. Unfortunately, the document is binding. But the lawyer has a happy inspiration. According to law, the deed becomes null if the donor marries and his wife presents him with a child. Jérôme jumps at the idea, although his joy cools down when he remembers that he is close upon eighty and that his chances of having an heir are somewhat remote. The lawyer then has a second inspiration. He remembers Louise, and sends for her, for he knows that, through Ernest's fault, she is in an interesting condition. The girl, starving and homeless, at once accepts this aged fiancé, and the wicked Ernest has the mortification of knowing that he is being disinherited by his own child. The amusing two acts, which raised much laughter, were excellently acted.

THE evening's entertainment at Antoine's wound up with Lorsque l'enfant paraît, two brightly written acts, by M. Ch. Esquier. His heroine is Léonide, a scheming, grasping, clever little cocotte, who has two elderly admirers—Gaston de Moultaire, a rich aristocrat, and Arsène Lechalguilliers, a wealthy ex-professor. Gaston thinks he is the father of Léonide's baby; so does Arsène. Both are in ecstasies before the child appears, and provide handsomely for its present and future wants. In an unfortunate hour they meet. The truth leaks out that they have been fooled by the wily Léonide, and they call her ugly names. The damsel, however, is equal to the occasion, and appeals to their feelings. She admits that either Gaston or Arsène is her baby's father—she cannot say who—but the moment there is a doubt it is evident the child must have the benefit of it. The two men eye each other in silence; and as each thinks he can lay claim to the paternity, they take the heroic resolve of continuing to befriend both mother and child. And they go away arm-in-arm in blissful ignorance of the fact that the infant was begotten by a certain Léon, a youth, the "amant de cœur" of the treacherous Léonide. The farce was spiritedly played by Mlles. Lyses and Lavigne, MM. Colas, Clasis, and Henry-Houry.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree paid a flying visit to Paris on Sunday in order to meet Mr. Hall Caine and Mr. Louis N. Parker, whose dramatisation of Mr. Caine's novel, "The White Prophet," is destined for the autumn production at His Majesty's. Progress in the preparation of the play was reported, and Mr. Tree expressed the liveliest satisfaction with the portion of the work which was read to him.

The Haymarket is shortly to harbour two revivals of classical comedy, Mr. Tree having determined to follow The Dancing Girl at His Majesty's with a reproduction of The School for Scandal. Sheridan's famous play will be presented with a star cast. The distinguished actor, who has before appeared as Sir Benjamin Backbite and Joseph, will afford his admirers an opportunity of seeing him as Sir Peter Teazle, and for the rôle of Lady Teazle he has secured the services of Miss Irene Vanbrugh, whose appearance in the part of the tantalising young wife will be awaited with eager interest. Other engagements of equal importance are pending.

Next month's production of the Afternoon Theatre will consist of a new three act play by Seymour Obermer, entitled The House of Bondage, the first performance being fixed for Friday, March 12. The chief character is that of a woman who has married unhappily, and falls in love with the doctor upon whose skill the life of her husband depends. The part will be played by Miss Eva Moore, and included in the cast will be Mr. Aubrey Smith, Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, Mr. Compton Coutts, Miss Beryl Faber, and Miss Sarah Brooke.

Miss Lena Ashwell will take The Truants to Brighton on Thursday, March 11, in order to give a flying matinée at the Theatre Royal. The highly successful run at the Kingsway Theatre of this bright and unconventional play will not, of course, be interrupted.

The late Charles Warner was buried in Woodlawn Cemetery, a short distance from New York, on the 13th inst., the funeral service being held at the Church of the Transfiguration ("The Little Church Around the Corner") in East Twenty-ninth-street, the Rev. George C. Houghton officiating. Mr. B. F. White, of the Lambs Club, had charge of the arrangements at the church, and a delegation from the club was in attendance. There were many flowers covering the coffin, sent by prominent players. Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Warner were the only relatives present, but many well-known artists attended to pay a last tribute to the deceased actor, these including Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence D'Orsay, Mr. Eben Plympton, Mr. Wilton Lackaye, Mr. Lloyd Bingham, Mr. Brandon Hurst, Mr. J. R. Crauford, Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, of the Actors' Church Alliance, Mr. Walter Price, Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Mr. Max Strakosch, Mr. Frank Gilmore, Mr. F. H. Westerton, Mr. Thomas Patten, Mr. Hassard Short, Mr. Frederick Perry, Mr. Marcus R. Mayer, Mr. Melville Stewart, and Mr. A. R. Lipman. The pall-bearers were Mr. W. L. Abingdon, Signor G. Perugini, Mr. Walter Price, Mr. Ernest E. Malcolm, Mr. J. R. Crauford, and Mr. F. H. Westerton.

The members of the New Frances Club for Ladies, 425, Strand, gave a most successful fancy dress ball at the Elysée Galleries on the 23rd inst. The dresses were very original and well executed. On the stroke of midnight the whole company formed into couples and marched past the judges (Miss Lena Ashwell and Miss Edith Craig). The prizes, presented by Miss Ashwell, were awarded to Miss Hodgson for her realisation of "A Welsh Girl" and to Mr. James Warren for his portrayal of "The Scarlet Pimpernel." Consolation prizes were given to Miss Fairweather, "A Japanese Girl," and to Mr. Isidor Newmark, a "Golliwog."

Mr. H. B. Irving concludes an extended season of unquestionable success at the Shaftesbury Theatre to-day with two performances, Louis XI. being given this afternoon and The Lyons Mail in the evening. In taking up the rôles in which his illustrious father shone so conspicuously, Mr. Irving has challenged comparison of the most exacting kind, but that he emerged in triumph there can be no possible doubt. The audience at the Shaftesbury on Monday spent itself in enthusiasm over his performance of Louis XI., and no dissentient voice has been heard in the chorus of approval which has been raised. It is agreed on all hands that no part in the dramatic calendar can be considered too difficult for the accomplished young actor to attempt.

Mr. Irving starts his spring tour at Harrogate on April 8. During the tour, which will last about twelve weeks, Hanley, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Burton-on-Trent, Cambridge, and Oxford will be visited in the order named. A new comedy based upon the late Oscar Wilde's story "Lord Arthur Savile's Crime," by Gilbert Crannan and Howard Peacey, will be produced in the course of the tour. Mr. Irving has also acquired for eventual production Mr. Stephen Phillips' poetical play The Sin of David.

The Follies' new programme will be produced at the Apollo on Monday, when two "potted" plays, The King of Cadonia and What Every Woman Knows, will be presented. In the same programme Everybody's Benefit will be revived with new "turns," notably a parody of Miss Margaret Cooper's performance, and Miss Gwennie Mars's popular skit on Harry Lauder.

"An Englishman's Home" was also to have been subjected to the potting process, but the Lord Chamberlain has intimated to Mr. Pelissier that he will not licence the "skit" on that play. The burlesque, however, was in no way a travesty of the patriotism of the piece, and dealt solely with the alien question, from a very droll point of view. The scene was the interior of a villa, wherein a family of foreigners is discovered at dinner. The house is bombarded, fragments of the walls falling in one by one until there is little left. As the commander of the troops enters he is recognised by the host as a long-lost nephew. "Uncle!" exclaims the officer in astonishment. "What are you doing here, nephew?" asks the owner of the house. "We have come to take England," is the reply. "You are too late," responds the householder, "we have taken England years ago!"

Mr. Martin Harvey, who concludes a successful week at Bradford Theatre Royal this evening, has now been some seven weeks on tour, and it is satisfactory to learn that his experience of business in the provinces does not coincide with the gloomy statements which find acceptance in some quarters. Talking to an interviewer, the popular actor said that his experiences this year were fully up to expectation, and had been remarkably good.

At Rochdale on Monday Mr. Harvey, Miss de Silva, and their company make their first appearance at the Theatre Royal, and the engagement is the fulfilment of a promise to visit the town made between five and six years ago. The visit is limited to three nights. To signalise his first appearance, Mr. Harvey will present a souvenir volume on the opening night. The remainder of the week will be spent at the Theatre Royal, Halifax, and on Friday the performance will be under the patronage of the local branch of the Dickens' Fellowship.

Miss Rita Everard, the second "boy" in the pantomime of Boy Blue at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Birmingham, was on Monday married to Mr. Hubert Ignatius Blount, secretary of the Actors' Association and member of a well-known Catholic family. The ceremony took place at the Catholic Church of St. Simon and St. Jude, Tulse Hill, London, and the officiating clergy were Father Charles Blount, S.J., the uncle of the bridegroom, assisted by Father Hurden and Father Fletcher and the Revs. Francis and Stanislaus Jones, brothers of the bride.

The bride's full name appeared in the register as Mary Margaret Amelia Jones. She was attired in a pretty dress of Empire lace, over white satin, with a Directoire panel of accordion-pleated chiffon, long sleeves of net, and a transparent yoke. She wore orange blossoms (which had adorned her mother at her wedding), and a pearl and diamond pendant, the present of the bridegroom, while the latter wore a diamond ring and pin, the gifts of his bride.

The wedding party arrived at the church in motor-cars. A reception was subsequently held at the residence of the bride's mother, in Hailsham-avenue, Mrs. Blount afterwards returning to take her usual place in the pantomime at the Prince of Wales's, Birmingham, in the evening. Among the presents received was a silver sugar-sifter, per Mr. J. F. Graham, the manager of the Prince's Theatre, and a silver inkstand from his sons and daughter, Keith and Leslie. Mr. Southworth, musical-director, sent a silver-backed comb, while members of the company, including Miss Hetty King, offered acceptable gifts.

Although Miss Everard has only reached the age of twenty-one, she has been on the stage twelve years. She started her professional career at Brighton in Ye Queen of Hearts, and since then has played leading parts with Mr. George Edwardes, Mr. Ben Greet, Mr. Fred Mouillot, Mr. George Dance, and many other prominent managers. The happy couple contemplate a trip abroad at the conclusion of the pantomime, after which Miss Everard will resume her professional engagements.

We regret to announce the death of Miss Mary Smith, a well-known actress and sister-in-law to Mr. William Mallalieu. The deceased lady was the descendant of generations of theatrical notabilities, her father (Mr. George Smith) and her grandfather (James Smith) being for many years managers of the Norwich circuit. Her uncle (J. F. Smith) was the author of the popular novels, "The Will and the Way," "Woman and Her Master," "Minnigrey," &c., which appeared in the London Journal. Miss Smith was 75 years of age, and had been ailing for some time. She died peacefully at a private nursing-home at 10, Ziz-Zag-road, Liscard, Cheshire.

The Malacca cane presented by the late John Hollingshead to Sir Henry Irving, who used it when impersonating Dr. Primrose and Robespierre at the Lyceum, was included in the sale at Sotheby's on Tuesday, and fetched £30, as compared with £42 at the Irving sale in 1905. The stick was at one time the property of Thomas King, the comedian, who used it in the characters of Sir Peter Teazle and Puff.

Mr. Robert Smythe Hichens, the author of The Real Woman, which was produced with so much success at the Criterion on Thursday, was born at Speldhurst, Kent, on Nov. 14, 1864. He is the eldest son of the Rev. Canon Hichens, Rector of St. Stephen's, near Canterbury. After leaving Clifton College he resolved to be a musician, studied at Bristol and in London for some years, meanwhile wrote and published many lyrics for music, some recitations, and short stories, and finally resolved to abandon music for literature. He studied for a year at the London School of Journalism, and since then has written much for various newspapers. His publications are "The Coastguard's Secret" (written at the age of seventeen); "The Green Carnation," 1894; "An Imaginative Man," 1895; "The Folly of Eustace," 1896; "Flames," 1897; "The Londoners," 1897; "Byeways," 1897; "The Slave," a Romance; "Tongues of Conscience," 1900; "The Prophet of Berkeley Square," 1901; "Felix," 1902; "The Woman with the Fan," 1904; "The Garden of Allah," 1905; "The Black Spaniel," 1905; "The Call of the Blood," 1906; also "The Daughters of Babylon," in collaboration with Mr. Wilson Barrett. He collaborated in The Medicine Man, produced by Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum Theatre; and Becky Sharp, produced at the Prince of Wales's Theatre.

Mr. Forbes Robertson and Miss Gertrude Elliott will open their tour at the King's Theatre, Hammersmith, on Monday, with The Passing of the Third Floor Back, which has had such a prosperous career at the St. James's and Terry's Theatres. The chief piece will be preceded by A Play in Little by Mr. Ian Robertson. In addition to the principals the company includes Messrs. Ian Robertson, Edward Sass, Ernest Hendrie, Wilfred Forster, David Powell, S. T. Pearce, and Alexander Cassy; Misses Agnes Thomas, Haidée Wright, Amy Brandon Thomas, Kate Carlyon, Keith Lytton, and Cicely Barcham.

A souvenir containing artistic reproductions of characters and scenes, with appreciations of the play by Sir Edward Russell and Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., will be presented to those booking seats for Monday, to inaugurate the approaching 200th performance, which will be reached at Kennington the following week. It may be added that Sir John Hare has released Mr. Percy Burton in order to enable him to join Mr. Forbes Robertson as one of his general managers.

The many friends of Mrs. F. M. Paget, who is, with her husband, residing at Eversleigh, Frances-road, Windsor, will be glad to hear she has made partial recovery from her recent very serious attack of illness. She is left, however, a permanent invalid, with a palsied right hand and general weakness. Her memory fails her as to the months of the year and days of the week, but is brilliantly lucid and clear on most subjects connected with her strenuous and eventful life.

The next meeting of the Actresses' Franchise League will be held on Friday next at 3 p.m., at the Dover-street Studios, Dover-street, W. Not only members of the League and their friends, but all members of the profession are cordially invited to attend. Miss Alice Crawford will receive for the League, and Miss Abadam, of the National Union, and Sir John Cockburn have promised to speak.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton have re-engaged Mr. Ernest Ch. Gittins as business-manager for their spring tour, in the course of which they will present The Taming of the Shrew, Othello, and Count Hannibal, adapted from Stanley J. Weyman's novel of that name.

The principals of the Prince's Theatre pantomime at Bradford paid a visit to the Royal Infirmary on the afternoon of the 19th inst., accompanied by the secretary and the Hospital Fund staff. Miss Florrie Forde, Mr. Bert Byrne, and the rest of the artists made a round of the wards, and spoke many words of encouragement and hope to the inmates. It was a considerate thought on the part of the artists, who on more than one occasion have given their services for the Hospital Fund.

The receipts of Mr. Percy Hutchison and company with Brewster's Millions at Hull last week were higher than they have ever been before with this attraction. Over three thousand people nightly paid for admission, and on some evenings it was unnecessary to open the ordinary doors of Mr. Morton's popular theatre. Great interest was aroused among local theatre-goers by the first professional appearance in Hull of one of their own townspeople, viz., Miss Sybil Walsh, in an important part. On Saturday night, in response to persistent cries of speech, Mr. Percy Hutchison announced that at Whitsuntide he should have very great pleasure in again introducing Miss Sybil Walsh to a Hull audience in another of his companies.

Mr. Charles Frohman journeyed from New York in the Lusitania, and arrived in London on Tuesday. His plans for the future are full of interest, and his new productions in the coming London season will include plays by English, French, and American authors. Included in those ready for presentation is a new comedy by Hubert Henry Davies, as yet unnamed. Among later productions will figure the Paris success, Arsène Lupin, The Honour of the Family, The Great Divide, The Servant in the House and a new play by MM. Caillavet and De Flers.

It is good to learn that complete success has been achieved in America by the different English plays and players taken there by Mr. Frohman. Before leaving New York, the enterprising manager arranged for the production in America of Major Guy du Maurier's patriotic piece, An Englishman's Home.

The coming performance of Le Pré aux Clercs, by the students of the Guildhall School of Music, has aroused great interest in musical circles. Le Pré aux Clercs, one of the tuneful works of Herold, the composer of Zampa, was first played in Paris at the Opéra Comique, on Dec. 15, 1832, only two months before the death of its talented composer, at the early age of forty-one. It was sung in French at the Princess's Theatre, on May 2, 1849, and was heard in Italian at Covent Garden on June 26, 1880. The scene is laid in Mediæval France, the period being that of Henry of Navarre, with whose presentment Mr. Fred Terry is now achieving popularity The opera will be performed on Thursday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon next.

Mr. Stanley Rogers, lessee and manager of the Theatre Royal, North Shields, has been successful in obtaining the licence to sell intoxicating liquor at that establishment. Although the Temperance Party were strongly represented in opposition, Mr. Rogers came off with flying colours, the voting being eighteen for and ten against.

Mr. Harold Wagner is severing his engagement with Mr. Walter Melville, with whom he has served as acting-manager for two years. Mr. Wagner will be seen in the variety theatres in March.

Mr. A. S. Homewood, who recently returned to England after a busy year at the Antipodes as Mr. Herbert Flemming's leading man, is apparently very much in request. He appeared in both pieces produced by the Stage Society at the Kingsway this week, and, in addition, will be in the cast of John Galsworthy's new play Strife, to be presented at a series of matinées at the Duke of York's. He is also producing a play for the Play-Actors. Mr. Homewood has had many interesting experiences in New Zealand, Australia, South Africa, Canada, and the States; but, "in spite of all temptations to belong to other nations," he steadfastly remains an Englishman, and hopes to be able to find "an Englishman's home."

Mr. George Lestocq starts a long tour of The Sportsman at Brighton on Monday. At Eastbourne the following week Mr. Lestocq will produce a new and original one-act musical play, The Garden of the Gods. Mr. Lestocq will also send Jane on tour in the North, commencing March 29.

Mr. Frank Varna, the clever young son of Mr. H. W. Varna, has been winning golden opinions in The Likes o' Me, at the Kingsway Theatre, and Miss Muriel Varna, his daughter, has been engaged by Mr. Robert Courtneidge for a part in the new piece which he is shortly producing.

The curtain fell for the last time on Saturday, 20th inst., on the Edinburgh Theatre Royal pantomime, Dick Whittington, amid a scene of great enthusiasm. During the evening, the principal ladies of the company were the recipients of many beautiful bouquets, and, in the final scene, the stage resembled a lovely bower of flowers. The singing of "Auld lang syne" was heartily joined in by the audience, the occupants of the stalls clasping hands with the actors in the final verse. Much applause succeeded, and Mr. Phil Ray then stepped before the curtain and thanked the Edinburgh public for the warm reception accorded the pantomime; but the audience was not satisfied until the actors, one by one, had spoken a few words.

"The Yeomen of the Guard" will be revived for a run of four weeks on Monday, Mrs. D'Oyly Carte's management of the Savoy ending on March 27. The theatre will then be entirely redecorated. The cast of The Yeomen of the Guard will include Mr. Workman as Jack Point, the part created by Mr. George Grossmith, and Mr. Richard Temple in his original character of Sergeant Meryll. Mr. Rutland Barrington will be seen for the first time as Wilfred Shadbolt, which was first played by Mr. W. H. Denny. Miss Jessie Rose and Miss Louie Rene will resume their former rôles, and Miss Elsie Spain will play Elsie Maynard.

Messrs. Smith and Carpenter have secured the services of Miss Amy Grace, South Africa's popular comedienne, for the part of Nancy in Pete, starting on tour on March 8. Miss Grace's last engagement was in the spring of last year, when she starred as Dorcas Gentle in The Prodigal Daughter.

"The Head of the Firm," the play adapted from the Danish of Hjalmar Bergstrom by Mr. Leslie Faber, will be presented on Thursday next at the Vaudeville. The author himself will play the part of the manager of an ironworks, and the cast will also comprise Mr. James Hearn, Mr. Harcourt Williams, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm, Mr. Ernest Cosham, Miss Henrietta Watson, Miss Ethelwyn Jones, and Miss Sydney Fairbrother. The piece was originally produced at the Opera House, Buxton, last June.

"The Cingalee" has made a great hit in Swindon, every seat in the house being booked. On Friday the Earl of Suffolk and party occupied a private box.

"Strife," the new three-act comedy by Mr. John Galsworthy, will be presented by Mr. Charles Frohman for a series of six matinées at the Duke of York's on Tuesday, March 9. The play, which will be produced by Mr. Granville Barker, will have a strong cast, the principals of which will consist of Messrs. Norman McKinnel, C. M. Hallard, Dennis Eadie, Luigi Lablache, Charles V. France, O. P. Heggie, A. N. Homewood, George Ingleton, J. Fisher White, R. Leisk, P. L. Julian, H. R. Hignett, Owen Roughwood, and Edmund Gwenn, Master Simon Nagle, and Misses Ellen O'Malley, Mary Barton, Lillah McCarthy, Rose Cazalet, Sidney Paxton, Blanche Stanley, and Gladys Storey.

A play by Mrs. Percy Dearmer, the novelist, entitled Nan Pilgrim, will serve for the fourth essay of the Dramatic Productions Club, and will be presented at the Court on Sunday, March 7, and repeated the following afternoon. Miss Lilian Braithwaite will sustain the title-rôle, and in the fourth act will sing a ballad composed by Dr. R. Vaughan Williams Among those engaged are Miss Agnes Thomas, Miss Elsie Chester, Messrs. Wm. Haviland, Edward Sass, and A. Holmes-Gore, who is producing the play.

Mrs. Dearmer is the wife of the Rev. Percy Dearmer, the Vicar of St. Mary the Virgin, Primrose-hill, and the authoress of several successful books, on one of which "The Difficult Way," the play is founded. We should add that the Rev. Percy Dearmer has written many religious works, and is also the author of a Fabian tract on "Christianity and Socialism."

The curtain was rung down on Jack and Jill, Mr. John Hart's successful pantomime, at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, on Saturday, and, as usual on last-night performances, the theatre was packed by a good-humoured audience. Showers of bouquets greeted the principal ladies, and money was thrown to the bright little children, who, during the run of the pantomime, had afforded so much pleasure to the patrons.

In response to repeated calls, Mr. Hart made his appearance, and referred to the efforts of his company, and those of the artists of the other theatres in Bradford, in the sacred cause of charity, £100 having been raised for the Cinderella Club by a matinée at the Royal, and £200 being the net proceeds of a pantomime football carnival on the 17th, in aid of the Hospital Fund. During the performance, Mr. Albert Le Fre, on behalf of the orchestra, presented to Mr. C. W. Chambers, the conductor, a handsome barometer. After a speech from Mr. T. F. Doyle, the general-manager and author of the pantomime, the evening concluded amidst great enthusiasm.

Miss Sophie Lingwood, who concludes to-night nine weeks as Janet McCleod in The Gay Gordons, has been kindly released by Mr. Seymour Hicks to enable her to rejoin Mr. Edward Terry.

Miss Dorothy Firmin underwent an operation for throat throuble on the 13th inst., and is, we are glad to hear, making satisfactory progress towards recovery. She intends going to Brighton shortly to recruit her health.

A matinée will be given on March 18 at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the benefit of the widow and children of the late treasurer of the theatre, Mr. W. N. Ramsdale. All the leading artists engaged in the city have promised to appear, and arrangements are in the hands of a committee, comprised of Mr. F. Teale Lingham, Mr. F. C. Sutcliffe, Mr. W. P. Wells, and Mr. W. H. Boardman.

Mr. Henry Lytton makes his last London appearance for some considerable time at the Savoy this evening. During the twelve years since his joined the old Savoy company, in February, 1897, Mr. Lytton has been continuously before the London public. He will now, under a twelve months' engagement with Mrs. D'Oyly Carte, play the principal comedian's parts in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas on tour.

Mr. Clarence Derwent has returned to Miss Horniman's Theatre in Manchester, where he had already been for nearly a year.

During the performance of the pantomime Dick Whittington at the Grand Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne on Saturday night, the principals of the piece went round the theatre with boxes and collected £11 11s. 9d. for the West Stanley Pit Disaster Relief Fund.

Mr. H. Cecil Beryl, we regret to learn, is suffering from a severe chill, which has compelled him to keep to his bed for the past week. He hopes to be about again in a few days.

"Lady Frederick," controlled by the successful and popular Hutchison management, with Miss Eleanor Delaporte and Mr. Robert Minster and a strong cast visited for the first time the very pretty new Pavilion Theatre, Weymouth, and opened on Monday to a vast audience, conspicuous in the stalls being many well-known officers from the Channel Fleet at Portland, who participated in extending a cordial reception to Mr. Somerset Maugham's brilliant play magnificently mounted and produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Percy Hutchison this spring. Numerous calls after each act and much enthusiasm at the termination of the play proved how much appreciated the society productions for which the Hutchison management are celebrated are in Weymouth.

At the Liverpool Shakespeare Theatre, on Tuesday, a matinée of the pantomime Jack and the Beanstalk was given in aid of the funds of the annual Theatrical Football Gala, the proceeds of which are devoted to local theatrical charities.

Mr. Arthur Law Raynor is relinquishing his engagement as business manager for Mr. J. A. Campbell's The Little Breadwinner. He concludes eight months' tour with the piece on Saturday next.

Mr. W. Wilson Blake, who is business manager for Messrs. Henry Chattell and Jack Denton's company, Through the Divorce Court, which opened its tour at the Grand Theatre, Brighton, on Monday night, is to be congratulated on a remarkable achievement. Owing to the sudden illness of Mr. Cyprian A. Matthews Mr. Blake undertook at three minutes' notice the heavy lead, Señor Guzman di Mendoza, with complete success. At the termination of the performance Mr. Blake was complimented by Mr. Henry Chattell and Mr. Jack Denton, and by Mr. Ben Court, the resident-manager.

Mr. Martin Adeson is putting on shortly a new duologue entitled Lady Maude's First Patient, written by Herbert Darnley. Mr. Adeson will be supported in the novelty by Miss Clara Bernard.

"The World, the Flesh, and the Devil," the drama by Lesser Columbus recently produced at the Pavilion, Mile End, was not intended to be toured before August, but the requests from the provinces have been so numerous that an additional company is being formed, and is booked to open at Easter. Everything will be done in first-class style, and the printing will be "sensational." The American rights are being negotiated; and in addition the play is being translated into Yiddish.

Mr. James Welch, supported by his entire Wyndham's Theatre company, including Miss Audrey Ford, will commence a tour with When Knights were Bold on Monday at the Borough Theatre, Stratford.

One-act pieces are evidently to be the special care of "The Curtain-Raisers," the latest addition to the number of play-producing societies. Under the auspices of this institution will be produced at the Rehearsal Theatre on the evenings of Wednesday and Thursday, March 10 and 11, My Lady's Glove, a comedietta by Neilson Morris; Bertha Brent, a play by Lester Thomas; The Jewel, a "phantasy in blank verse," by Florence Eaton; and The Catastrophe, a play by Hubert C. Ferraby.

The Lyceum pantomime ended its triumphal career on Saturday, when a house packed in every part cheered throughout the performance of Little Red Riding Hood. Gifts of bouquets were numerous, so that at the end when the principals formed up on the stage they were half hidden by a bank of flowers. Mr. Ernest Carpenter made a short speech, thanking the public for its support and the actors for their zeal. He announced that Hamlet would be revived on March 9, and that Cinderella would be next year's pantomime.

Mr. Julian Rose then came forward and stated that he had been asked on behalf of the principals to make some presentations. He handed to Mr. Major Jones, the stage manager, and to several others, some handsome gifts. Subsequently, little Miss Marjory Carpenter, as representing the chorus and dancers, presented Mr. Espinosa, the ballet master, with a large clock. Finally, after the National Anthem had been played, artists and audience joined in the singing of "Auld lang syne."

The Revival Society announces for Sunday the production at the Rehearsal Theatre in Maiden-lane, W.C., of four new pieces—Love and Be Silent, by Mrs. Sim; Fifi and The Friends, both adapted from the German by Miss Ella Erskine, and seen for the first time in this country; and Fortune's Fool, by Rathmell Wilson, author of "The Book of the Sirens." Miss Erskine, the adapter, will play the title rôle in Fifi, and will be assisted by Mr. Leveson Lane. The piece will be produced by Mr. Walter Pearce. In The Friends, Miss Victoria Addison, daughter of Miss Carlotta Addison, will appear.

Mr. Esme Percy, lately with Miss Horniman's company, will act in both of Mr. Rathmell Wilson's plays—Fortune's Fool at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, to-morrow (Sunday), and in The House of the Traitor at the Court Theatre on March 21.

The Kennington pantomime of Red Riding Hood came to an end on Saturday last, amid the enthusiasm of the biggest house that has ever said farewell to the Christmas annual in that theatre. The leading ladies were overwhelmed with bouquets, the Bros. Poluski were repeatedly brought before the curtain, and at the end the audience insisted on a speech from Mr. Brandreth, to whose astute management much of the popularity which the pantomime enjoyed was due.

Miss Florence Smithers has signed an engagement, through Mr. Blackmore, for one of the principal comedy parts in pantomime 1909-10 at the Lyceum.

Mr. Norman V. Norman has made a great success at the Tyne Theatre, Newcastle, this week, the audiences being most enthusiastic. He has engaged Mr. Robert Hilton, who played Herod in Salome, to play for a few special performances.

In the performance of The Sign of the Cross at the Pleasure Gardens Theatre, Folkestone, the part of the boy, Stephanus, has been played for the whole of this week by Miss Alys Hall, in place of Miss Edith Drayson, who is indisposed. Miss Hall essayed the part at extremely short notice, and has been highly complimented upon her excellent and sympathetic rendering of the character.

Owing to the serious illness of Miss Amy B. Ellis, the part of Gati in Her Luck in London, at the Gaiety, Burnley, this week was successfully taken by Miss Florrie Groves.

Mrs. Brown Potter has put an end to the disquieting reports regarding a breakdown in health by cabling to the Central News that she is perfectly well. She adds that she has signed a contract for a concert tour in England commencing on April 12.

Among the numerous letters of condolence received by Miss Julia Listelle (Silas), the daughter of Mr. Edouard Silas, the Dutch composer, whose death we recorded in a recent issue, were messages from Sir Charles Santley, Mr. W. F. Ganz, and Mr. Hermann Vezin.

"The Marriage of Kitty" will be played by Mr. Frank Weathersby's company for six nights and two matinées at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on Monday, March 8.

Miss Maxine Elliott, in a recent interview in New York, was accused of being a suffragette. "Of course I am," she retorted. "Isn't every woman who earns her living? This is a woman's age. Who founded the Bon Marché, the largest department store in the world? A woman. Who manages one of the finest hotels in the world, the Savoy, in London? A woman. Who," laughed Miss Elliott, "has the finest theatre in New York?"

"The Novice," a one-act play from the pen of the Marchioness Townshend, was produced on Monday at the Maidenhead Town Hall, in aid of a local institution. The piece is founded on a picture called "The Foundling," which was exhibited at the Academy.

The rising colliery town of Pencoed, near Bridgend, Glam., has just been provided with a hall to seat 1,200 people. While local concerts, meetings, and eisteddfodau are expected to supply the chief income for the company which has erected the building, it is hoped that a good many theatrical companies may be induced to attend. The hall was opened on Tuesday evening, Feb. 23, by a concert, in which some well-known South Wales artists appeared, and speeches were made by local dignitaries.

The annual "pantomime charity carnival" was held at Bradford on the 17th inst., on the ground of the Bradford City Association Football Club, and the artists of the Theatre Royal, Prince's Theatre, Empire Theatre, and Palace Theatre, combined heartily in fun and football, the net result for the Hospital Fund being £200. A procession, consisting of tableaux designed by the managers of the respective theatres, trades associations, members of the profession, military bands, and mounted police, marched to the ground, where an eleven of the Karno's Troupe tackled an eleven of the reserves of the City Club team in serious football. The result was City Club, 3 goals; Karno's Troupe, 1 goal. There were races for pantomime children, hat trimming competition, a ladies' football match, and a tug-of-war (which was won by the Prince's Theatre team). Then the fun became fast and furious. Messrs. A. Le Fre and Bert Byrne were much in evidence with a flying machine competition. The machines were wonderfully and fearfully made to "raise the wind," so were the "side shows" on the improvised "fairground."

Miss Florrie Forde and Miss Isabel Dillon kicked off for the football match, and the former lady "took the cake" at the tea stall for the largest sum of money collected. She shared honours, however, with Mr. Bert Byrne, who, as "Carrie," astonished the "Nation" with the business he did at the "pubs" en route to the ground. There was a Marathon Race of 1,000 yards, which is still undecided, the winner not having arrived yet. The chorus ladies did a roaring trade in cigarettes, programmes, sweets, and flowers, and the Lord Mayor and Mayoress entered heartily into the fun.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

An Impressionist Playwright.

"I have been called a 'neo-romantic' by some, a 'neo-naturalist' by others," says M. Bernstein in the Mail. "I am neither. I am an impressionist. In other words, I have attempted in my plays to do what Claude Monet and Whistler have done in painting. The English, no doubt, will understand my meaning. Ruskin once accused the great Whistler of having thrown a pot of paint at the head of the British public. I have been accused of a similar offence by all those who, in France, represent the Pre-Raphaelite spirit—or its equivalent. But it has not prevented me from pursuing my aim and holding firmly to my own conception of the drama.

"To me, impressionism means two things. First, it consists in seizing the culminating moment of one human life—or several—a moment which is created by conflicts, perhaps somewhat extreme, but always essentially human. This, to me, has the advantage of bringing the characters into strong relief, for in those conflicts characters must forcibly reveal themselves. Secondly, instead of a painting, minute and laborious, of beings, things, and facts—a reproduction which, by the way, can never be really a faithful copy of Nature—I, as Whistler did on canvas, do not try to reproduce what my eyes perceive according to certain classical and artificial rules, but to give a visual impression, vivid and definite. My aim is to produce not an accurate copy, but an interpretation of truth. A line, a contour, can suggest more, have a greater and deeper meaning, than the most elaborate and careful accumulation of useless details."

A Long Embrace.

According to Mr. Robert Evett's statement to the Manchester Umpire, the effect upon audiences in that city of the "Waltz Dream" kiss is remarkable. "On Wednesday night at the Prince's," says Mr. Evett, "a voice from the gallery was heard during the moment of silence that succeeds the kiss. It remarked in heartfelt accents, 'That's fine!' In Glasgow one night a very stout lady in the stalls gazed upon the operation most intently. When it was over she turned to a neighbour and ejaculated audibly, 'Oh, my Lord!' in much the same tone as might have been used if she had just got over an amputation."

A Curious Coincidence.

After finishing our season at the Theatre Royal, Gravesend—says Mr. Butler Stanhope—we opened at Wakefield with The Babes in the Wood, written, produced, and played in by myself. After its successful run we had a few weeks of the legitimate and classical drama. Our manager was W. C. Dillon, the son of that great actor Charles Dillon, of Belphegor fame, who was then touring the provinces with his répertoire company. He paid a visit to the Town Hall, Wakefield. We were at the Theatre Royal, and judge of our surprise to see the programme. The companies were playing the same plays each night (Friday excepted), and this without the slightest knowledge on either side. I give you the list of plays:—

Charles Dillon.	W. C. Dillon.
Mon., Othello	Othello
Tues., Hamlet	Hamlet
Wed., Macbeth	Macbeth
Thurs., Merchant of Venice	Merchant of Venice
Fri., Richelieu	William Tell
Sat., Richard the Third	Richard the Third

This was a pure coincidence, without any arrangement or collusion whatever—father and son playing the same programme each night in the same town. The townspeople were raised to a high pitch of curiosity and excitement. We had a very pleasant week, and had a supper at which both father and son were present.

Miss Anderson's Opinions.

Miss Mary Anderson (Mme. Antonio de Navarro) has recently been paying a visit to New York, and has described the joy of living in England. "I don't prefer it, I love it!" she exclaimed, almost exultingly. "We have such a beautiful place in the country there, an old house of the Tudor period. And everything about us is so tranquil, with the stretches of lawn and the old, old trees, and the glimpse down in the valley where the ancient Tudor village lies. Then I have a little study at one side of the house, built in the time of the Jacobites, and all summer long the roses bloom about the windows. And in the twilight through the roses I watch the evening sky, all pink and tender grey behind the great trees; and I feel so peaceful and so contented that I could fairly cry."

Only for Stars.

With regard to young girls going on the stage, Miss Anderson said: "I want to repeat, as a message to all girls, what I am constantly writing to them, for they deluge me with letters from all parts of the world asking my advice on that very point. Some mornings my desk is piled with a perfect Matterhorn of such letters. I want to repeat 'Punch's' advice to those about to"—she smiled—"to go on the stage. Don't! There is but one qualification to that advice, and it is: Don't go on the stage unless the feeling that you can rise to the top within a very few years is so strong within you that it amounts to a moral certainty. To the girl who wants to show how pretty she is, or who has an idea that she can work up gradually, as she would in a business house, I say: Keep out of it. It is a hard life, and its unpleasant features are so peculiar to it that no girl but a positive genius should think of it for a moment as a means of livelihood. With all the other professions that are now open to women it isn't worth while."

Union of the Unacted.

"Might I," writes Mr. N. Thorpe Mayne in the Mail, "suggest a scheme which, perhaps, might bear good fruit—the formation of a society of 'unacted authors'? These might meet in the first instance, and endeavour to form some plan whereby someone competent should be engaged to read their plays, advise thereon, and then introduce suitable ones to likely managers. They might, further, make arrangements with certain managers to lend their theatres for occasional productions of the society's members' plays, open to the public at reduced fees, a small royalty on the gross takings being paid the authors, and the balance going to the proprietor of the theatre used. I would suggest a small subscription from each author who joined, to defray office expenses, postage, &c."

A Conjurer's Joke.

An American—reputedly a smart man—once agreed to act as confederate to Mr. Horace Goldin. He loaded up the Yankee with six eggs in each side pocket, planted a lively rabbit in his coat tail, a guinea-pig in his waistcoat, and one or two other farmyard items in sundry hiding places. Then he placed him in the centre of a seat where he had to keep getting up as people passed along. The show began and the confederate waited patiently to be called upon to do his part. The eggs were getting jammed into an omelette, the guinea-pig was scratching at his chest—but he bore himself bravely and waited. Trick after trick was reeled off by Goldin, but still the confederate's call came not. At last the curtain came down, the show was over, and—the smart man realised that he had been done. What he said when he unloaded his live stock need not be referred to.

It is strange that there should have been any doubt in the minds of Goldsmith's contemporaries as to the success of She Stoops to Conquer. How strongly prejudice sometimes works against the introduction of a novel style into drama was shown by the difficulties attending the production of the piece. The public, however, immediately contradicted the gloomy anticipations of the experts, and the success of the play was instant and immense. The evidence on this point is clear. At the first production all eyes were turned upon Dr. Johnson, sitting in the front row of a box, "and when he laughed everybody thought himself entitled to roar." Enjoyment and good humour were contagious. Tony Lumpkin's antics and Marlow's mistakes set the house in excellent humour. Goldsmith, hoping little and fearing much, wandered moodily in St. James's Park, where he was met by a friend, who, remonstrating with him on his absence from the playhouse, and representing "how useful his presence might be in making some sudden alterations which might be found necessary in the piece," prevailed on him to visit the theatre. Accordingly he bent his steps towards Covent Garden, and timorously crossed the threshold of the stage door. As he reached the wings, a solitary hiss fell upon his ear. This was evoked by the supposed improbability of Mrs. Hardcastle believing herself forty miles distant from her home, though standing in her own gardens, a deception actually practised by Sheridan on Mme. de Genlis. Hearing this ominous sound Goldsmith started in terror. "What's that?" he said to Colman, who stood beside him. "Psha," replied the manager, wrathful that his prophecies of failure had been falsified, "don't be fearful of squibs when we have been sitting these two hours on a barrel of gunpowder." The heartless cruelty and injustice of this speech were never forgotten by the author, who, hearing the immoderate laughter and loud applause which quickly followed, was speedily assured of his success.

Between the night of its first performance and the close of the season, in consequence of holidays, and benefits, when actors selected their own pieces, but twelve nights remained at the manager's disposal. On these, She Stoops to Conquer was played to crowded houses and with increasing popularity. "The applause given to a new piece on the first evening of its representation," says one of the papers of the day, "is sometimes supposed to be the tribute of partial friendship, but the approbation shown on the second exhibition of Dr. Goldsmith's new comedy exceeded that with which its first appearance was attended. Uninterrupted laughter and clamorous plaudits accompanied his muse to the last line of the play; and when it was given out for the author's benefit, the theatre was filled with the loudest acclamations that ever rung within its walls." Its success was assured by its being witnessed on the tenth night of its production by George III.; and receiving a most favourable verdict from Johnson. "I know of no comedy for many years," said he, "that has so much exhilarated an audience—that has answered so much the great end of comedy—making an audience merry." This opinion was heartily endorsed by the audience which assembled at the Haymarket on Saturday and applauded "Goldie's" comedy and Mr. Frederick Harrison's capital company with enthusiasm. The text has been relieved of certain "gags" and excrescences, and the elisions are always improvements. The acting of the company was both enjoyable and interesting, the amount of freshness and originality which was introduced into the readings of the principal parts being very acceptable. Miss Ethel Irving's Kate Hardcastle was, like everything she does, permeated with a piquant personal flavour, which was very pleasant indeed. A great charm of her performance was the delicate distinctness of her delivery, which gave exactly the right value to each word and phrase, and her judicious and intelligent use of inflexion and emphasis. The smiling demureness and arch humour of the character were done full justice to, and its comedy has not of late had as capable an exponent as Miss Irving, who certainly achieved a marked success. She had a very agreeable and amusing young Marlow in Mr. Loraine, who surprised everybody by the clever manner in which he played the part. While retaining, in submission to tradition, some of the farcical business which has been imported into the play, Mr. Loraine kept Young Marlow in the category of courteous gentlemen. Though shy, he was never actually awkward; and though comical, he never became ridiculous. He justified, indeed, entirely Miss Hardcastle's favourable estimate of the youth after their first interview. The performance was one of striking merit, and has greatly added to Mr. Loraine's reputation. Mr. George Giddens is famous for his fine reading of Tony Lumpkin, which has rather improved than otherwise by frequent repetition; and this sterling artist renders it in a manner which delights his audiences immensely. He never allows the drollery of Tony to degenerate into mere buffoonery, and keeps his reading always on the lines of genuine comedy. Miss Beatrice Farrar infuses a vast amount of playful vivacity into her impersonation of Miss Neville, which is already favourably known to playgoers. She is a most exhilarating artist, and her popularity, which was plainly shown on her entrance on Saturday, is thoroughly well deserved. Mr. Louis Goodrich played Hastings in a sound, neat, careful, and satisfactory style; and Mr. Edward Rigby rendered the rôle of Diggory in the effectively farcical way with which custom has made us content. Mr. Holman Clark gave a very amusing and original rendering of Mr. Hardcastle, full of good points, and quaint and dry to a very diverting degree. Mrs. A. B. Tapping did full justice to the absurdities and eccentricities of Mrs. Hardcastle, and created a great deal of laughter by her vivid caricature of a country lady with urban aspirations. The remaining rôles had excellent exponents. Mr. Herbert Bunston was a quite competent representative of Sir Charles Marlow; Mr. Gilbert Porteous gave a droll character-sketch as Stingo; and Mr. John Castle and Mr. H. Gerrish were efficient as the two under-servants, Mr. J. Cassels Cobb making a good Gregory. The motley crew at the ale-house were cleverly embodied by Messrs. Reginald Eyre, Harry Norton, Charles Fancourt, and George Wallace; and Miss Winifred Beech was satisfactory as the Maid. Mr. Walter Hann's scenery was quite worthy of that gifted scenic artist's repute; and the costumes, from designs by Karl, were an important feature of the production, reminding one of the portraits of the day in their delicate daintiness and sweet simplicity. The revival was enthusiastically received, and we may thank Mr. Harrison for giving the rising generation another opportunity of seeing Goldsmith's charming comedy.

"LOUIS XI."

The Drama, in Four Acts, by Casimir Delavigne, Adapted and Arranged by Dion Boucicault, Revived at the Shaftesbury Theatre on Monday, Feb. 22.

King's Attendant	Mr. H. C. Hewitt
Martha	Miss May Holland
Marie de Comines	Miss Dorothea Baird

The history of the play of Louis XI. is a curious one. Casimir Delavigne founded his drama upon Scott's novel of "Quentin Durward." Delavigne's Louis XI. was given for the first time at the Théâtre Français on Feb. 11, 1832, with the eminent French actor Ligier in the title-part. Dion Boucicault prepared an English version of Delavigne's play which was given at the Princess's Theatre on Jan. 13, 1855, Kean modelling his reading on that of Ligier. Henry Irving appeared in this version at the Lyceum in the March of 1878, with Mr. F. Tyars as the Duke de Nemours, Mr. Fernandez as Jacques Coitier, and Miss Virginia Francis as Marie de Comines. The character of Louis was one of the most effective in the late Henry Irving's repertory; and Mr. H. B. Irving, who inherits so many of his father's personal gifts, makes a success in it which is equally striking. The personage is riveted in the memories of playgoers by Sir Henry Irving's performance; and its salient points are so well known that we need only say that Mr. H. B. Irving brings them all out with admirable skill and power. Personality is the secret of his success, as it was of that of his father, whom Mr. Irving resembles so much in feature, voice, and temperament. The part absolutely demands an actor of distinction and intensity; but in the hands of a first-rate artist there are few which are so certain of creating a powerful impression. The words which Dutton Cook wrote of the late Sir Henry Irving's acting in the leading rôle are exactly true as applied to that of his son: The performance is throughout very masterly, even and consistent, subtle and finished. There is no neglect of the small, delicate touches which give completeness to a picture, while the stronger portions of the design are executed with supreme breadth and boldness. Mr. Irving boasts the great actor's art or gift of at once riveting the attention of his audience; presently his influence extends more and more, until each word and glance and action of this strange king he represents—so grotesque of aspect, so cat-like of movement, so ape-like of gesture, so venomous in his spite, so demoniac in his rage, and meanwhile so vile and paltry and cringing a poltroon—are watched and followed with a nervous absorption that has something about it of fascination or even of terror. The performance reaches its climax perhaps in the King's paroxysm of fear after Nemours' assault upon him; the actor's passionate rendering of this scene, his panic-stricken cries and moans, prayers, and threats, and the spectacle of physical prostration that ensues, affecting the audience very powerfully. The death of the King is elaborately treated, but with no undue straining after the horrible. Here the slipping of the sceptre through the flaccid, nerveless fingers of Louis, the moment after he has announced himself 'strong and capable,' may be noted as an original and ingenious artifice on the part of the actor.

Some fault was found with the support at the Lyceum in 1878; but the cast at the Shaftesbury gives little cause for complaint. We could scarcely ask for a more dazzlingly beautiful and exquisitely feminine representative of the rôle of Marie de Comines than Miss Dorothea Baird, who wins the heart of the audience by a touchingly sympathetic and charmingly picturesque performance of the part. Miss Eily Malyon is a dashing Dauphin—impulsive, animated, and full of boyish energy and entrain. Mr. Eric Maxon plays the Duc de Nemours in just the bold, free, and flamboyant style required, his delivery of the passionate speeches of the part being full of vigour, assisted by excellent elocution. Mr. B. A. Pittar is entirely satisfying as Philip de Comines; and Mr. Tom Reynolds supplies a shrewdly conceived and cleverly executed character sketch of Jacques Coitier. Mr. Frank Tyars' Tristan L'Ermite is the same strong, deep, dark, and imposing portraiture that it was in 1878; he is a fine example of the class of actor which was created in the grand school of the Lyceum. Mr. Arthur Curtis plays Olivier le Dain very intelligently; Mr. Frank Cochrane is decidedly good as Francois de Paule; Mr. H. P. Cooke renders justice to the rôle of Cardinal D'Alby; Mr. Stanley Howlett is entirley satisfactory as the Count de Dreux; Mr. P. Walder does well as Monseigneur de Lude; Mr. W. Hemstock is excellent as the Count de Dunois; Mr. Norman Macowan is a gallant Montjoie; Mr. S. Beaumont is dignified and stately as Toison D'Or; and Mr. Charles Dodsworth's originality and skill are convincingly employed as Marcel. Mr. J. Patric Curwen plays Richard with appreciation and ability; Mr. W. Graham bears himself well as the officer of the Royal Guard; Mr. H. C. Hewitt is competent and careful as the King's attendant; and Miss May Holland is very effective in Mrs. Chippendale's part of Martha. The scenery is adequate, and the revival has had a most enthusiastic reception. It is, indeed, one of the most successful of Mr. H. B. Irving's reproductions at the Shaftesbury.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

A violin recital was given at the College on Wednesday afternoon by Mr. Harold Ketèlbey, professor, who used on this occasion a New Cremona violin of powerful and brilliant tone, which only needs the mellowing effect of time to be a splendid instrument. Mr. Ketèlbey was first heard in "Le Trille du Diable" (Tartini), for which he has written a clever cadenza, quite in keeping with the subject. Beethoven's beautiful Romance in F was admirably played by Mr. Ketèlbey, whose all too short programme concluded with Wieniawski's "Russian Airs." Miss Stella Emery, who was the vocalist, sang Schubert's "Peace," and was particularly happy in her rendering of Bishop's air "Should he upbraid." The accompanist was Mr. Leonard Gordon.

Miss Fannie Ward's Freaks.

Although America is her native country, Miss Ward has, says our New York correspondent, found it necessary to deny that she is English, and has even been asked for her "impressions of America." She told an interviewer that there was once a famous actress who announced that she would appear in a cage with a number of ferocious animals, and when the curtain went up she was the centre of a group of dramatic critics. Speaking of herself, the critics had been kind to her, but had "mixed things up a little." Miss Ward declared that as an actress she was not of "mushroom growth."

The King and Queen were present at the performance of Samson at the Garrick Theatre on Wednesday.

"THE REAL WOMAN."

Play, in Three Acts, by Robert Hichens, Produced at the Criterion Theatre, on Thursday, Feb. 25.

Mark Vernon	Mr. Allan Aynesworth
Horace Carruthers	Mr. Herbert Waring
Hugh Graham	Mr. Henry Ainley
Sir George Venables	Mr. C. Leveson-Lane
Mr. Bew	Mr. Lytton Grey
Doctor Byrd	Mr. Heath Haviland
Butler at Lady Arden's	Mr. Horton Cooper
Butler at Vernon's	Mr. Frank H. Dansy
Footmen at Lady Arden's	Mr. D. H. Keith, Mr. Geoffrey Douglas
The Duchess of Dorchester	Miss Annie Hughes
Diana Woodham	Miss Kate Cutler
Mrs. Gage	Mrs. Harry Cane
Lady Arden	Miss Evelyn Millard

Mr. Hichens has rather the reputation of being cynical, morbid, and ultra-refined; but in The Real Woman he has given us a touching, sincere, and pathetic play, which interests from first to last, though the preparation is somewhat prolonged. The action, when it commences, is, however, all the more convincing from this artistic deliberation, and from the leisurely way in which an atmosphere has been created of luxury, ease, and idle enjoyment. In the first act, we are at the house, in Grosvenor-street, of Lady Arden, a fascinating widow, whose fashionable friends, Horace Carruthers, Sir George Venables, Mr. Bew, and the Duchess of Dorchester, are supping with her after a Wagner night at Covent Garden. Mark Vernon, a rich, shrewd, and amiable newspaper proprietor, is wooing Lady Arden in an easy-going way, but she is not in love with him, though they are very good friends. At the supper-table there is much discussion of a certain Hugh Graham, a man of good family, who has gone out into the East End to work among the poor. He is a friend of Vernon, who defends him against the attacks of the cynical Carruthers, who hates Graham because the latter has discovered his seduction of a servant girl, Diana Woodham. Her child, a crippled boy, has been run over, and is now lying seriously injured in a house at Poplar. Carruthers scoffs at Graham's saintliness and indifference to women, and bets Vernon £500 that if Lady Arden employs her powers of fascination on the philanthropist he will become her slave. Graham arrives, and, to try the proposed experiment, Lady Arden volunteers to go with him and Vernon to the bedside of the dying boy.

In the next act, at Poplar, we witness the result. Graham at first snubs Lady Arden, and exposes her ignorance of the simplest domestic duties. But the hopeless sorrow of Diana Woodham at the death of her boy touches the heart of her ladyship, and she takes the work-girl into her arms. This changes Graham's opinion of Lady Arden's character, and he is on the brink of falling in love with her. Vernon, moved both by justice and jealousy, threatens to open Graham's eyes, and tell him about the bet. So ends this excellent and interesting act.

The situation thus created is handled very judiciously in the concluding division of the play. The leopardess cannot change her spots, and nothing but a miracle can make Lady Arden a suitable wife for Graham. It is evident, indeed, that Vernon is her proper mate, and that he must be made to defeat the other suitor, Carruthers, for whom Lady Arden has rather a preference. This is cleverly brought about by the author's skill. Though Lady Arden's nature has not been altered, it has been modified by her experience, and Vernon is more in love with her than ever. It is through Carruthers that Graham learns of the wager, and is disillusioned. He goes back to his work at Poplar. All this is handled both firmly, ingeniously, and delicately; and the result is that out of a rather slight scenario is evolved a very agreeable evening's amusement.

The Real Woman was admirably acted, dressed, and mounted. Miss Evelyn Millard was seen at her best in the character of Lady Arden, the charm and grace of the character being given with excellent effect, the note struck in the emotional passages being true, deep, and sincere. An important factor of Miss Millard's success was her exquisite appearance in some very artistic and becoming dresses. Mr. Allan Aynesworth's Mark Vernon was, of course, irreproachable in attire and tenue, and he showed what a firm and strong actor he is by the power which he displayed throughout his performance. No better exponent of the rôle of Hugh Graham could have been chosen than Mr. Henry Ainley, whose picturesqueness has no defect of effeminacy, the sharp decision and curt authority of his tone in the scenes with Lady Arden in the second act being thoroughly effective, and his whole reading being distinguished by manly self-respect. Miss Annie Hughes was exceedingly amusing as a lackadaisical Duchess dieting herself by "doctor's orders"; and Miss Kate Cutler made a deep impression by her fine emotional acting and clever characterisation as Diana Woodham. The remaining rôles were neatly and sharply played. Mr. Herbert Waring's hard, cynical, and sarcastic Horace Carruthers was a striking and impressive piece of acting; and Mr. C. Leveson-Lane as Sir George Venables and Mr. Lytton Grey as Mr. Bew contributed highly-finished miniatures of great merit, Mr. Heath Haviland being firm and efficient as the East End doctor, and Mrs. Harry Cane a satisfactory exponent of the little rôle of Mrs. Gage. The Real Woman had an enthusiastic reception, and should draw Miss Millard's admirers in crowds to the Criterion.

Ophelia with a Twang.

"American players are admirable in the smaller parts, but in the higher walks the same relative excellence is not observed. Every nation has its own social observances, its own peculiarities of accent, its own types of character; and for the reproduction of these certain education or experience is necessary. So that if reproduction of national type, or manner, or accent is required, the best results can be had from those artists who are familiar with them. It used to be supposed that a fully-equipped player should be able to assume at will accents and such like accessories of character; but a too rigid adherence to this belief is throwing away natural advantages. Surely a 'Down-east,' or an 'Out-west' type can be better assumed by one who knows the special world represented. On the other hand, the personal peculiarities—whether they be due to race or nationality—which enable actors to represent, almost without study, certain strongly marked characters, are out of place in the representation of classical characters, who on the stage represent average or natural types of emotion or passion. The perfect Hamlet, for instance, or perfect Ophelia should not have a brogue, or a twang, or a lisp, or even that Attic broadness which can win fame and fortune on the variety stage. A Romeo and Juliet who chewed, the one tobacco and the other gum, would be out of place even in a canvas Verona. On the other hand, it would be fatal for Hamlet or Macbeth, Juliet or Beatrice, to be self-conscious in the midst of a scene of sweeping passion. Self-consciousness and strenuousness are most excellent qualities—when in their proper places. And their proper place is in the educational stage of advance—in the preparation for supreme effort, not during the effort itself."

Mr. Editor,—Sir,—In your report of the Theatre Royal, Stratford, in this week's issue, Sapho is mentioned as being revised and adapted by Mr. Stuart Lomath. I beg to say that I adapted and wrote Mrs. Frank Bateman's version of Sapho.—Yours faithfully, Hal Collier, 50, Bromford-road, Oldbury, near Birmingham.—Feb. 22.

"THE RIGHTS OF THE SOUL."

A Play, in One Act, by Giuseppe Giacosa, Translated by Miss F. M. Rankin, Produced by the Incorporated Stage Society at the Kingsway Theatre on Monday, Feb. 22.

Paolo	Mr. E. Harcourt Williams
Maddalena	Miss Margaret Bussé
Mario	Mr. A. S. Homewood
Anna	Miss Margaret Halstan

Another recreative afternoon for the members of the Incorporated Stage Society and their friends was given at the Kingsway on Monday, when a large invited audience did not become too effusive in their reception of two plays, both of them translations. On such occasions the drama that "draws," and incidentally pays the salaries of our actors and actresses, fades into insignificance. The convention of the theatre is tabooed as much as familiar types of stage character, which are roundly condemned by the Incorporated sociétaires. As one of them remarked on Monday: "I do like plays with blood and humanity in them." As a type of humanity, Paolo—the chief character of the first piece, The Rights of the Soul, a play in one act, translated by Miss F. M. Rankin from the Italian of Giuseppe Giacosa—does not strike us as normal. He is the supremely jealous husband of the beautiful Anna. At the opening of the play he is in a state of feverish agitation, reading the letters found in the pocket of Lucio, his cousin, who has committed suicide. They are from Anna, whose wifely honour is amply vindicated by the few sentences read by Paolo. But a settled gloom is on Anna, who does not believe in her husband's promise that he will never refer to the painful incident again, and tortured by her husband's ravings, and finally stung to the quick by his hectoring, she confesses her love for the dead Lucio, whose passion she rejected, and she leaves Paolo. The piece was chiefly remarkable for a study of hysterical jealousy given by Mr. Harcourt Williams, who represented Paolo as a bundle of nerves, and suggested in his neurotic ravings not only the self-torture of the husband but his southern origin. As the calmer Anna Miss Margaret Halstan's quiet force and intensity realised the tragedy of a life without love, and her outburst at the end of the play was admirably restrained and powerful. Mr. A. S. Homewood was quite breezy in his impersonation of Mario, and Miss Margaret Bussé did well as Maddalena.

The chief attraction of the afternoon was the play, in two acts, by Turgenev, translated by J. Nightingale Duddington, and entitled—

"THE BREAD OF OTHERS."

Nartsis Constantinich Trembinsky	Mr. Leon M. Lion
Piotr	Mr. A. S. Homewood
Anpadist	Mr. F. Grove
Yegor Kartaschov	Mr. Henry Kitts
Masha	Miss Edith Cuthbert
Vassili Semionich Koozovkin	Mr. J. Fisher White
Ivan Koozmich Ivanov	Mr. Ernest Cosham
Vaska	Mr. Frederick Kings
Praskovya Ivanovna	Miss Helen Boucher
Olga Petrovna Yéletsky	Miss Jean Bloomfield
Pavel Nicolaevich Yéletsky	Mr. A. Holmes-Gore
Flégont Alexandrich Tropachov	Mr. Leon Quartermaine
Karpachov	Mr. Stanley Lathbury

Turgenev is invariably interesting, and his study of the conditions of Russian society in 1840, pictured in this play, is intensely human. The opening scene in The Bread of Others is taken up with the preparations by the butler and a staff of servants for the homecoming of the newly-married couple, Olga Petrovna and Pavel Yéletski, to the former's estate. Olga, as the chatelaine, had cherished as an honoured dependant Vassili Semionich Koozovkin, who has eaten the "bread of others" for many years. As a piece of harmless pleasantry a frivolous neighbour of the Yéletskys—by name Flégont Alexandrich Tropachov—proposes to make poor old Vassili drunk at luncheon, and succeeds only too well. This joke is carried too far—a tedious length we should add—by putting a fool's cap on the old man's head. The degradation cuts the old dependant to the heart, and in his inebriated indignation he makes a boast that the bride, Olga Petrovna, is his own daughter. In the second act Olga learns the whole truth about her mother from Vassili, who is eventually persuaded to take a sum of money and retire to a spot far distant from his daughter, who sees the wisdom of the arrangement which is made by her autocratic husband, a typical Russian of the period.

Mr. Fisher White, always an interesting actor, submitted a fine study of dignified senility as Vassili; Mr. Holmes Gore was really excellent as Paul Nicolaevich Yéletsky; Mr. Leon Quartermaine was responsible for a capital realisation of the light-hearted and thoughtless Flégont Alexandrich Tropachov; and Miss Jean Bloomfield, who took up the part at short notice, was decidedly amateurish but promising as Olga Petrovna. Mr. Leon M. Lion was amusing as a fussy butler; and Mr. Ernest Cosham was particularly good as the lugubrious Ivan, Mr. F. Grove being responsible for a whimsical sketch of a bucolic and deaf old tailor. Mr. Stanley Lathbury in the sketchy part of Karpachov was effective. Mr. A. S. Homewood, Mr. Henry Kitts (an effective Yegor), Mr. Frederick Kings, Miss Helen Boucher, and Miss Edith Cuthbert played other parts without much chance of distinction.

GUILDHALL SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

The first item in the programme of Wednesday evening's concert was an organ solo, Fugue from Sonata in G major (Pastoral) (Rheinberger), cleverly played by Mr. J. B. Molyneux. Miss Nellie Evans sang "Ye that by night" (Tinney); and Miss Helen Squire had a most hearty reception after her pianoforte solos, "Nocturne" (Raff) and Schubert-Liszt's "Serenade." Although taking some liberties with the tune, Mr. Laurence Tyler proved himself an able executant, and well deserved the applause which greeted his performance of the Polonaise in A, No. 2, for violin (Wieniawski); while Mr. Arthur Morse, who sang "Onaway! awake, beloved!" from Coleridge-Taylor's "Hiawatha," would have done greater justice to his pleasing voice if the severe weather had not so badly affected his upper notes. In Miss Eleanor D. Wort's organ solos, the beautiful and delicate tones of this fine instrument were admirably displayed in Hollins's pretty "Spring Song." Miss Wort, who is a pupil of Dr. W. Jordan, and a Mitchell scholar, was also successful in her performance of Bach's Fugue in D minor. Miss Marion Watkins sang "Betwixt the Lights"; and Miss Clementine de Vere did justice to a pleasing song of Signor Zardo's entitled "To the Angels." A young pianoforte student, Miss Connie Cowderoy, gave an effective rendering of Chaminade's "Columbine"; and Miss Jessie Lewis received a recall for her singing of "My dearest heart" (Sullivan); while Nelson's stirring song "The Windmill" was ably sung by Mr. Henry Goodall. An interesting feature of the concert of Wednesday was the mandoline orchestra of Madame Waldahoff's pupils, who gave a most animated performance of "Canto Populari" (Ciociani), "Fréda Gavotte" (Pietrapertosa), and "The Passing of the Regiment" (Eilenberg), which was accompanied by drum and violoncello, Miss Amy Parsons presiding at the pianoforte. The accompanist was Miss Jenny Hyman.

Can any of our readers inform a correspondent (X Y Z) whether the late Mr. Wilson Barrett and Miss Heath ever played East Lynne at the old Wooden Theatre in Middlesbrough under the management of Mr. J. C. Hunter?

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE ALHAMBRA.

On the Square, Mr. Alfred Moul's latest production at the Alhambra, was applauded with considerable enthusiasm on Monday evening, and so bright and exhilarating is it that we may expect it to run into the days of summer. It is of considerable importance, too, as the first divertissement at the older Leicester-square house in which Miss Elise Clerc—a consummately clever dancer and a repository of the finest choreographic traditions—has had a hand. Fun and prettiness are the principal recommendations of the new entertainment, and from the moment Mr. Geo. Byng moves his bâton to conduct the lively American music until the curtain finally descends on a bustling and animated scene the spirit of the whole thing is infectious. We find ourselves unconsciously humming the "airs" that floated across the Atlantic during the last century, and we have a feeling of gratification that there is a reflection in the scheme of On the Square of the entente that always should have a special significance for the well-wishers of both countries.

The scene opens in Herald-square, with New York skyscrapers in the background. Flower-girls, bootblacks, loungers, and newsboys realise the life of the Empire City. The arrival of an airship from John Bull's Island brings Mr. and Miss Brown, who start having a very good time. "Blinky Bill" from the Bowery comes in the person of Mr. Frank Lawton, who whistles with the same sweetness that first attracted Londoners to the Shaftesbury Theatre when Edna May took gilded youth captive as Violet Gray in The Belle of New York. Another belle—John Brown's daughter—a lady of historic prestige—presents herself, and the house immediately recognises that Miss Britta is just about as sweet a dancer as one could really desire. A smart American youth, cleverly played by Miss Julia Seale—as perfect a mime as one could possibly wish—speedily falls in love with the London miss, and a pas de deux of the greatest charm fills us with admiration. The buck-dancing of Topsy, a lively little negress dressed in flaming red—is a strenuous exercise that brings down the house; but the artistic triumph of the whole production is the doll dance of Britta. This is a phase of the Danish prima donna's art that is new to Londoners; but it should speedily become the talk of the town. The assumption of a vacant expression and of complete inertness is quite perfect. Miss Carlotta Mossetto, a clever recruit from the corps de ballet, shares the success of the doll dance, but is somewhat too anxious to pirouette.

Among the concerted numbers we may mention the Directoire dance by élégantes of considerable charm; the dance of equestriennes, in jockey caps and skirts; and the dance of Roughriders and a number of ladies representing Fluffy Ruffles, all beautifully gowned. Miss Elise Clerc has a comic dance on her own, and is encored. She then burlesques Carrie Nation, smashing a temporary bar with a harmless-looking hatchet. Later, she introduces, with Frank Lawton, a burlesque of the Apache dance at the Empire. This will undoubtedly be worked up into a greater success. Signor G. Rosi and Messrs. Tom Coventry and Percy Clifton are seen in impersonations into which they put much significance. Mr. E. H. Ryan's artistic brushwork is again in evidence, and the rich and tasteful costumes (designed by Comelli) are once more manufactured by Alias.

The beautiful Leonora is the cynosure of all eyes in the most interesting episode La Petite Bohémienne; and the first scene of Paquita opens the excellent bill, to which Bobker's Moorish Arabs contribute a unique acrobatic turn.

LONDON PAVILION.

The chief comedians of Mr. Frank Glenister's fine bill at this luxurious home of variety are Tom Dunville and Little Tich, both enormous favourites. Excellently contrasted in their methods, both entertainers give the greatest enjoyment. Mr. Dunville takes the subject of Hamlet, and travesties the tragedy in his own amusing way, which catches on. We get a comic account of the plot and a farrago of nonsense as a summary of the incidents; but it is all very droll. Little Tich as a fiery untamed king of savages dissembles with a rare fund of grotesquerie. Such a resolute monarch is only found in pantomime, and unlimited mirth marks his short reign. The policeman's lot, according to the comic singers of the variety stage, is quite a happy one, and the "copper" represented by the diminutive comedian has a series of adventurous happenings that are eloquent of his fascinating and canoodling way. Quite a gourmet in his way is this "Robert," and a great and experienced critic of rabbit pie—always the plat de résistance of the "force." Tich winds up his versatile turn by a revival of the evolutions of "Miss Turpentine" in voluminous skirts. The big-boot dance is a thing of the past, but the ballerina burlesque is distinctly precious.

We have something quite serious and dramatic when Miss Dorothy Grahame, assisted by a French artist, dances the Apache dance. The Paris hooligans, it appears, have their times of gaiety; and the main points about the dance are its alternate decorum and wildness, and the ferocity, both of expression and conduct, in both of the performers. These characteristics are well realised by Miss Grahame, who is encored and recalled.

Mr. A. de Bessell has an entirely sympathetic audience while he models in clay a Sicilian peasant. He is a clever artist, and is deservedly applauded. It will be remembered that he was one of the few survivors of the Messina calamity, escaping with his life, which he is recommencing, as it were, as he lost everything in the earthquake. Mr. Charles Reckie, as his name implies, is a Scotch comedian with a pawky style; Thorpe and Coe present their burglar sketch with success; Arthur Melrose whistles extremely well; and Mr. Tom Costello's song concerning a termagant wife (No. 2) is comically illustrated by her appearance on the stage. Mr. Percy Honri plays the overture to The Bohemian Girl extremely well on the concertina; and Marcel and Boris present a versatile turn, in which trick fiddle playing and acrobatics are mixed. Osborn and Brooks are responsible for a bright entertainment, in which a burlesque comedian, assisted by a pretty and sweet-voiced lady, submits an amusing travesty of the Spanish señorita given to cachucas and other Iberian importations. The Three Cunards have made simultaneous dancing a very exact study, and their "stepping" is very perfect. Mr. Tom Clare at the piano is one of the successes of the night, especially when he sings "I can't keep my eyeglass in my eye." His playing of "We won't go home till morning" in the various styles of Chopin, Mendelssohn, and Wagner is very artistic. Other turns in the bill are furnished by Harry Zetter, the Columbias, Vandinoff, the Hiatts, and Miss José Collins, who has been deputising for Miss Radie Furman.

PUTNEY HIPPODROME.

As this palace of amusement is connected with the Barrasford and Gibbons Syndicate halls one can always rely upon a good bill, embracing a number of well-known artists, and consequently it is not uncommon to find the house well filled. At the second house on Monday evening last the majority of the stalls had apparently been booked in advance. The star turn of the evening was the mysterious Charcot, with his automatic Man. Charcot is a striking personality, tall and broad-shouldered, with a strong face and a good voice. After a brief introductory speech, he draws back the heavy curtains, behind which the audience discovers the "assistant" comfortably seated in an armchair. Quickly the latter is rendered motionless by the administration of an anæsthetic, and is declared to be absolutely subject to the will of Charcot, and at his suggestion he mimics the performance of a conjurer in numerous card-tricks and manipulations. Then a realistic scene from The Silver King is dramatically portrayed, and similarly the overture to Cavalleria Rusticana is played on the piano. This is followed by accurate descriptions of numerous articles in the possession of the audience, the turn concluding by the "automaton" conducting the orchestra a là Sousa. On Thursday, at mid-day, Charcot's subject was to make a drive through Putney's busiest thoroughfares whilst blindfolded, the ride starting from the Hippodrome.

Miss Bertha Winder, the champion lady clog dancer, gives a remarkable display of steps. Miss Maud Esmond, an acceptable comedienne, sings in delightful style the songs "Charlie Brown" and "I don't care if there's a girl there," in the chorus of which the audience joins very heartily. Stanley Walker's turn is quite a novelty, consisting of buck-dancing on roller skates, a clever performance requiring exceptional skill. Leo Tell provides much amusement by his faithful imitations of musical instruments, &c. His French horn and piccolo solos are excellent, but the 'cello solo, Chirgwin's "Blind Boy," proves the greatest favourite.

King's College Boys render solos and concerted pieces with great spirit, retiring amidst well-earned applause. Eadie and Ramsden's turn is very clever, the lady singing and dancing attractively, whilst her partner's exhibition of leg-twisting and general contortions is very much appreciated. They conclude with a finished dance. Tom Leamore is also entertaining with his inimitable comedy. New and amusing pictures are screened by the Imperial Bioscope.

CAMBERWELL EMPIRE.

Mr. Jesse Sparrow offers a capital list of attractions this week at the Camberwell Empire. Among them is a new musical absurdity, entitled

"THE BELLE OF OSTEND,"

Written by Albert Layton, Music and Lyrics Written and Composed by Frank Bradsell.

Lieut. Gerald Graham ..... Mr. Edwin Oxlee
Timothy Flicker ..... Mr. Albert Layton
James Fatsow ..... Mr. T. E. Turner
Count Dejune ..... Mr. Leslie Sears
Inspector Johnson ..... Mr. F. Day
Phyllis ..... Miss Gracie Rosaire

As in most musical comediettas, there is very little story or plot. It is almost sufficient to say that Lieut. Gerald Graham is in love with Phyllis, the belle of Ostend. But Phyllis has other admirers, including a retired pork butcher and a French count—both of them ridiculous, yet entertaining, characters. Then there is Graham's manservant, Timothy Flicker, who makes love to two girls at once, and spins yarns concerning purely imaginary wealth and an imaginary motor-car. Of course, everything ends happily, Phyllis accepting the lieutenant. Mr. Edwin Oxlee acts nicely, and displays considerable musical talent in the part of Lieut. Graham, his song, "True heart," being particularly well rendered. Miss Gracie Rosaire is quite pretty and effective as Phyllis, the belle of Ostend, and her enchanting vocalism is listened to with delight, especially in the number, "O, come, my heart." Mr. Albert Layton is quaintly humorous in the rôle of Timothy Flicker; and others who assist in the fun-making are Messrs. T. E. Turner as a retired pork butcher, Mr. Leslie Sears as an eccentric French count, and Mr. F. Day as a police inspector. There is an able chorus, the members of which are heard to great advantage in the bathing scene, in the song, "You can always rely upon me." The sketch is picturesquely staged, the scene showing a panoramic coast and sea view from Ostend during the summer.

An interesting and attractive act is furnished by the Tennessee Guards, who appear in a military song-scena, their wonderful lightning drill and wall scaling, and their exceedingly melodious plantation harmonies, providing an entertainment which is most enjoyable. Zaleski, the "golden spider," performs some remarkable feats of contortion amid ropes fitted up in the form of a spider's web; and Miss Babs Lloyd, the juvenile comedienne, distinguishes herself in her special songs and dances. Damerell and Rutland, with their company, present the amusing sporting skit, Clever Mr. Fugg, in which the comical capers of the principal characters create huge merriment, all the five members of the cast working with hearty goodwill to bring out the best points of a petite comedy, which has found much favour wherever it has been played. Miss Edith Courtney, the lady singing conductor, treats the house to delightful renderings of old-fashioned ballads, including "The Maid of the Mill" and "In the gloaming"; and the Bros. Durant, the society acrobats, are seen and admired in an extremely smart display. The Wakeman Quintette have a capital musical comedy sketch, in which their singing and patter, are much appreciated; and the Wartana Trio of modern lady jugglers submit an amazingly clever demonstration of their art with the aid of plates, bottles, discs, and other articles, their manipulation of which is characterised by neatness and precision. Leton and Lane offer a pleasant little "comedy concoction," in which we are told the story of a gentleman who has found a garter and a lady who has lost one—in addition to a husband in divorce—and of the happy culmination of the meeting between the two. Mr. Harry Tomps, the musical comedian, plays in delightful fashion on the concertina various popular selections, including "Sing me to sleep"; and Jeapes's Animated Graphic is responsible for several agreeable film-subjects.

THE PARAGON.

A most interesting programme here includes many popular favourites. Chirgwin, the genial white-eyed one, is, as usual, heartily received, his little snatches of song on topical events being greatly appreciated. Mr. T. E. Dunville gives his quaint policeman song, "Dinky Doo," with several new gags, and also "The Postman," the latter obtaining great laughter when the various postcards are scrutinised by the comedian, who afterwards explains the portion worth commenting upon. Miss Madge Beresford, a charming comedienne, beautifully gowned, has a couple of well-written songs in "Love" and "There you are—that's a girl," which she sings and acts perfectly. Burley and Burley, acrobatic comedians, are decidedly clever, and at times truly humorous, with many neat feats. An exceptionally good dancer is a young lady calling herself Estrella, who executes several polyglot dances, the principal being an American sand dance with bare feet. For an encore the lady gives a sailor's hornpipe, also minus the usual coverings, retiring with a hearty reception.

Mr. Fred Earle's songs are enjoyed by the majority. They include "There's another little one a-coming out" and "My little wigger-wagger in my hand," the latter relating to a cane which he constantly carries. Miss Ella Lorraine, a pretty and attractive artist, has a pleasing voice, which is heard to advantage in "Where the Shannon river flows" and "Will you love me in December?" Mr. Sam Mayo, whose immobility of features and body is quite well known, has two good songs in "I played my concertina" and another dealing with troubles, which suits the comedian's style admirably.

An exceptionally well acted dramatic sketch is given by Mr. Kenneth Macleod and company, the title being A Test of Friendship, written by Percy Ford. The playlet has only two principal characters, both "soldiers." When the scene opens, one of them, badly wounded, is being attended to by his comrade. An interesting story is unfolded, the acting of both gentlemen being delightful. A good dénouement is reached by the arrival of a tribe of blacks. Unfortunately we are unable to name the principals, no guide being given on the programme.

George Formby has established himself a firm favourite by his songs, "One of the boys" and "John Willie, come on." Jester and Joker, the "rowly powly boys," are true to their name, for they do some clever tumbling and acrobatic feats, both their entrance and exit being distinctly new. Lozelle, in a speciality trapeze act, has an effective fit-up, the gentleman performing various difficult hand and feet balances in the easiest manner possible. Miss Dolly Harmer amuses with "Petticoat" and "His Mother." Ruffell's Bioscope displays many interesting films.

Mr. Fred Karno's company in The Dandy Thieves, keep the house in a continual ripple of merriment, which at times bursts forth into roars of laughter, particularly in the Emporium Drapery scene, where Sergeant Lightning, disguised as an assistant, is attending to the lady customers. Mr. George Nestor as the Sergeant is most funny, being greatly assisted by Miss Kitty Brunton as a New Woman. Special praise is also due to Miss Aggie Morris as Lady Maud Easum, her rendering of the character stamping her as a first-class actress. The knockabout business, as usual, is of the best, the little "Burglar" song being catchy and well staged. Mr. E. Freshwater was good as Lord Easum. The courteous Mr. Chas. Marte and his able sub are extremely busy in looking after the general comfort of well-filled houses.

ROTHERHITHE HIPPODROME.

Mr. Vernal must be congratulated on always presenting to his patrons at this popular house an interesting and entertaining show, and though there is no outstanding feature in this week's programme, all the numbers are really good, and several are of exceptional merit. Marie Empress is a dainty comedienne; she is versatile and quick, and Rotherhithe evidently likes her. Mr. L. B. Athol is the owner of a good voice, a pleasing manner, and excellent delivery. Moreover, his songs are clever and catchy, and every word he speaks can be heard distinctly in the most remote parts of the house. It is a pity that many of his confrères do not emulate him in this respect. Messrs. Kent and Keith are a really clever and comical couple, and keep the house in a ripple of laughter the entire time they occupy the stage. The Sisters Marion are attractive young ladies of considerable ability; their performance is a very pleasing one, and called forth hearty and deserved applause. Mr. Fred Earle, past-master in the art of comic patter, rendered a couple of songs in his own inimitable style.

Fielding and Hull are an American couple whose acquaintance one would gladly prolong; not only is their scena pretty and effective, but the performers are genuine artists. The Carina Sisters are experts in the use of the piano, the piccolo, and the violin. Their turn is a musical treat: there is only one fault to be found with it, and that is its brevity. Conway and Garland convulsed the house with their farcical nonsense; their make-up is excellent, their by-play superb—in fact, it must be a long time since the denizens of the river side laughed so heartily. The Bioscope, always good, is exceptionally pretty and interesting this week. Harry Champion, the rapid and amusing comedian, pleased his hearers thoroughly. The orchestra, under the able guidance of Mr. Martin, helps to make the evening thoroughly enjoyable; whilst the manager is ably seconded by the courteous Mr. Murray in looking after the comfort of his patrons.

Notes from the Principality.

Messrs. Dooner and Son still continue to attract good houses on the fair field at Neath. Kent and Earle, comedians, are well received; also Nellie Anderson, comedienne and dancer, deserves praise. The pictures are well chosen, and include The Messina Earthquake and the Tottenham Tragedy, also several amusing subjects, under the guidance of Mr. Gus Sylvester, who is popular with Neath audiences.

Llansamlet flannel and pleasure fair was not so well attended as usual, which may have been due to the cold snap in the weather. Among the amusements was Messrs. Hy. Studt and Sons' gondolas, J. Danter's switchback swings, shooters, &c., T. Hill's hobby-horses, J. North's houp-la, shooters, cokers, &c.

Crecraft's animated picture theatre has opened at Pentre this week on the fairground, and has attracted large and appreciative audiences. A special feature of the show was the athletic performance of Foster Sanchez, who pitted himself against local talent in a series of wrestling bouts. Booth's varieties, including aerial swings, shooting saloons, &c., also commanded large business.

A great attraction at the People's Hall, Barry Dock, is Harold Pyott ("Tom Thumb"), 23in. high, age 24, weight 24lb.

Good business has induced Messrs. Wadbrook to prolong their stay at Maesteg. This week they are showing several of the latest pictures. The most attractive being that of the King's Visit to Berlin. Variety turns are given by Mr. George Battle, vocalist actor. In a scena, entitled "I'm an old man now," he displays clever dramatic power. A good juggling performance is given by Mr. Jean Kram; recitations (illustrated by the aid of the lantern) are powerfully rendered by Mr. Jeffries; and as guide Mr. Glover still maintains his popularity.

Amateur Vandwellers.

At a general meeting of the Caravan Club held last week the following were elected for the new council: Lady Edwards, Mrs. Skerrett-Rogers, Messrs. E. Bennett, P. J. Crimp, H. King, H. Keep, E. H. Hancock, J. Oscar Parker, Rev. A. H. Clarke, and Mr. Geoffrey W. A. Norton, of the Showmen's Guild. Mr. J. Harris Stone has again become Hon. General Secretary, to the satisfaction of the members.

A veterinary book, free of charge, may be had from the proprietors of Condy's Fluid, of 65, Goswell road, London, E.C. It is a most useful little booklet, entitled "Ailments of Animals and How to Cure Them," and contains instructions by a large number of eminent veterinary surgeons for the treatment and cure of ailments affecting horses, dogs, cattle, poultry, rabbits, cats, cage birds, &c. All our readers who are interested in animals are recommended to apply for this little veterinary book, which is sent gratis and post free.

Maud Allan's Ideal.

"For the uses of every-day existence," said Miss Maud Allan in her lecture to the O.P. Club on Sunday, "spontaneity is no longer good form. In the amusement marts of the twentieth century the artist finds it better to invite the public, not to witness the genuine and spontaneous expression of his own spiritual state, but to view with coldly critical eyes a talented and precise exhibition, upon which, for the sake of theatrical effect, unnatural difficulties have been laboriously engrafted. Like Adam and Eve we have painfully acquired the knowledge of good and evil; and, in the market of souls, to be naked is to be ashamed. The moment has come, I humbly believe, to sacrifice the Niebelung gold of convention, and redeem and regain the apples of youth and beauty. Thus, and thus only, shall we reach our attainable ideal, and dancing shall be, as it should be, the spontaneous expression of a spiritual state. Am I asking too much of a tired and utilitarian age? Am I asking my fellow wayfarers, soiled and weary, to make too great an effort to reach the Bourne beyond the Gates of Ivorie? This should be our ideal, and it is not an unattainable ideal; and so far as my poor powers have been given to me I will try to brave the quest."

INVENTIONS.

[The particulars furnished below of recent applications for patents are taken from the official records. Correspondence is invited with our readers on all matters relating to new ideas and inventions, with a view to affording them advice and assistance. Letters should be addressed to the Manager, Inventions Department, "The Era," 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, London.]

Inventors and others who have no business representative are invited to communicate with the Manager of the Inventions Dept. as above.

7,620.—Lewis's moving picture apparatus.

8,892.—Bresztovszky. Automatic falling targets.

11,526.—Parker and Goldston. Apparatus for performing conjuring tricks.

ABRIDGEMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

20,863.—Kinematographs. Fauconnet, R. A., of Paris.

Kinematograph pictures in a sinuous series are taken in and projected from the same apparatus. The plates (80) are carried in the upper part of a carriage (46), which is traversed along the rails (50) by means of a pinion (54) and rack (47), the pinion being actuated from the driving-handle (10) through suitable gearing. A projection on the carriage comes into contact with a stop at either end of the motion and throws the clutch (38) over, so that the motion is reversed. A stop (76) by contacting with one end (70) of the lever system shown, tilts the levers and causes ratchet-wheels (65, 90) to be moved round one step. At the top and bottom of the upper part of the carriage (46) are shafts carrying endless screws embracing the plates (80). The lower shafts also carry pinions taking into vertical racks controlled by the plates. Consequently at the end of one movement the untouched plates are fed slightly forward, and the plate on which the pictures are being taken is fed downward, so that a fresh series can be taken as the carriage moves back. The lens (84) is the objective, and with the lens (85) also serves for projection. Obturators (82) are fitted behind the lens (84). The finished plates drop on to a transporter (77), and are kept till required in a bellows extension (81).

20,836.—Kinematographs. Mare, F. de, of Brussels.

Metallic strips with a polished white metal surface have printed on them enlarged positives corresponding to the ordinary negatives, the positives being viewed by reflection. The strips are printed in black or colours, and the surface may be flat or in relief.

To Stage Machinists and Electricians. — The Manager will be pleased to receive particulars of any new stage appliances or ideas for same for illustration in this column.

Mr. Auguste Van Biene tells a good story of how he entertained a stranger, in the belief that he was Mr. Frank Curzon, for three weeks at Worthing some years ago. "I was running my own company at the time, and happened to be standing near the box-office one evening when I thought I saw Mr. Frank Curzon walk up and pay for a seat. I immediately rushed forward with extended hand, saying, 'My dear Frank, I cannot allow it; how are you, old boy?' I insisted, despite his protests, in returning his money to him, and then escorted him to a box. Further, during the evening, I pressed him to become my guest, and he good-humouredly accepted.

"To shorten my story, he lived with me, boated and played golf with me, talked 'shop' with me, and lord only knows what he did not do with me for the next three weeks. Then one day I had occasion—strangely enough, for the first time—to introduce him as Mr. Frank Curzon, the celebrated, &c. 'Pardon me,' he said, 'that is not my name.' 'What is the joke?' I queried. 'No joke at all,' he replied. 'You are not Frank Curzon?' 'No,' he said, easily. 'Then who the devil are you?' I shouted in a rage. 'Frank Robson.' 'You are a scoundrel, sir,' I said, 'never to have informed me so before.' 'I tried to do so at the box-office that night,' he replied, 'but you enthused so, and would not listen to a word from me, and also on a dozen later occasions. So, as you were determined to make things so pleasant, I let you do so, merely resolving to tell you the truth on the very first occasion. I have done so.' Then it dawned on me that he was right. I had called him Frank, his correct name, every day for three weeks."

10.30 Down Express.—Mansfield.

Dowager Lady Poltimore, whose death has just been announced from Hyères, in the South of France, was a great-granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the famous dramatist.

The annual dinner of the composing staff of the London and County Printing Works (printers of The Era) was held at Stone's Restaurant, Ludgate, on a recent Saturday. Mr. S. D. Ray presided, and was supported by Mr. Bernard Gill (son of the principal of the firm, Mr. Upcott Gill), Mr. E. Mynott (works manager), Messrs. H. P. Hodges, W. A. Perkins, T. C. Bell, C. Pattle, Geo. Wray, S. Nash, W. Boxall, T. Brightwell, G. Fellowes, &c. After dinner a short list of toasts and a long musical programme were gone through, the whole proceedings showing the good feeling existing between the employés, the heads of departments, and the firm.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We cannot undertake to answer the inquiries of correspondents by post. In all letters names and addresses must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the replies if so desired.]

BATCHELOR.—We do not know the age of the artist to whom you refer. If you asked him the question, which is prompted by idle curiosity, he would very properly ignore your letter. The date of Mr. Fitzsimmons's marriage would be better answered by a sporting paper. As to your last question, you do not mention the composer or the date of the publication of the song; but try Messrs. Francis and Day, publishers, 142, Charing Cross-road, W.C.

CATESBY (Peckham).—Put your question to Mr. G. B. Bigwood, tobacconist, Southend-on-Sea, who was stage-manager for so many years at the Britannia, and must have known the veteran actor and his wife intimately. You do not give us the lady's professional name.

T. B. VAUGHAN.—Tom, Dick, and Harry, farcical comedy, in three acts, was originally produced in America as Incog. It was first presented in England at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, Aug. 24, 1893, and first produced in London at the Trafalgar-square Theatre (now Duke of York's), on Nov. 2, 1893. The authoress was Mrs. R. Pacheco.

SYDNEY SHAW (Cork).—Mr. William Terriss was assassinated on Dec. 16, 1897. See note above.

GILBERT.—Try your songs at a music-hall where they give new turns a trial. A good Anglo-French song on the difficulties of our language should go down well.

F. CHEESMAN.—Both the copyright and the performing rights should be registered at Stationers' Hall, London, E.C., to which you should write for the necessary forms. You should also send a typewritten copy of the play to the Lord Chamberlain, Buckingham Palace, S.W., for his licence.

C. H. LESTER.—A child of twelve can play until 9 p.m. without a licence.

RIDING HOOD.—The Sign of the Cross was revived at the Lyceum Theatre, London, with the late Wilson Barrett in the cast, on Oct. 19, 1899.

W. B.—The date of the first appearance of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show at Earl's Court is May 9, 1887. It concluded in October. It afterwards went to Paris.

DUNCAN G. MAC.—(1) The Empire started as a variety theatre on Dec. 22, 1887, under the joint direction of George Edwardes and the late Sir Augustus Harris. The building was opened as a legitimate theatre on Thursday, April 17, 1884. (2) Terry's Theatre was opened on Oct. 17, 1887. (3) At the Canterbury and Oxford for certain; but why not write to him on tour. (4) The comedian has been too long dead for us to be able to ascertain. You must ask some greybeard frequenter of the early free-and-easies.

C. J. K. (York).—We have not yet been able to trace the first production of the opera in English. The Italian libretto was by Piave—not Piavo—who was also responsible for several other libretti of operas by Verdi. We will make further inquiries.

GEORGE TRAILL.—Miss Julia Mathews played at the Alhambra in the extravaganza entitled Whittington, in which she was the Alice. Miss Kate Santley was in the cast, and also Miss Lennox Grey. The date was Dec. 26, 1874.

JOSIE ZEIDLA.—You will find the list you want in the Era Annual for 1909, price 1s., to be obtained at this office. Write to Publisher, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, enclosing postal order for the amount.

THE Midland Automobile Club's "smoking concert" took place last Saturday in the Grosvenor Room at the Grand Hotel, Birmingham, the programme being supplied by Moss's Empires, under the direction of Mr. Hatton Wharton and Mr. Litchfield Meek, hon. secretary to the club. It was "ladies' night," the élite of Birmingham and Midland society being present, and the fair guests, who were delighted with the proceedings, presented, with their rich dresses and costly jewels, quite a brilliant scene.

THE entertainment was given on a pretty fit-up stage, and Mr. Waller Jeffs gave a show of automobile pictures which naturally interested. As many of the artists as could conveniently stay were entertained to supper by the committee after the concert, when Mr. Litchfield Meek (in the chair) presented Mr. Hatton Wharton on behalf of the club with a handsome silver tobacco box, also presenting Mr. Edward Foster, of the Grand, with a beautiful silver cigarette-case, richly chased and enamelled with green fleurs-de-lys, this being in recognition of the latter's quiet but extremely helpful co-operation. Mrs. Foster was present at the supper, which was full of happy phases and phrases, and the proceedings terminated at an "early hour."

BEFORE Mr. Wallace, K.C., at the London Sessions, on Tuesday, Alfred William May, 25, labourer, pleaded guilty to having stolen two overcoats and a pair of boots from dressing-rooms behind the stage at the Coliseum. The prisoner had also committed robberies at the Polytechnic, Regent-street, and the Lyceum. He was sentenced to fifteen months' hard labour.

MR. MARK MELFORD has written to the Morning Advertiser expressing amusement regarding the descriptions given by newspaper correspondents of his having been seen "in various places in grotesque disguises." He concludes: "I seek absolute privacy and repose. My medical adviser confirms my keen desire for perfect seclusion. I made no firework display at my final exit from public life. I never looked for a farewell benefit, although my theatrical career has been studded by almost weekly contributions in services and cash to my fellow-artists. I simply ask to be left alone by those who have neither business nor interested motives to serve by seeking to hunt me down."

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth, a Marriage, or a Death, or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

LEICESTER has now added another to its many attractions in the opening on Monday evening last of the Empress Rolling Skating Rink, at the corner of Aylestone- and Welford-roads, on a large piece of ground belonging to the Corporation, which has been taken on a five years' lease. The proprietors are Rinking, Limited, of Earl's Court, the managing-director being Mr. P. W. Willard. It is intended that everything shall be carried out on first-class lines, and, judging from the assembly at the Tuesday afternoon session, the establishment should become the rendezvous of Leicester's smart set. The floor, of maple, is pronounced by expert skaters to be a beautiful one.

ON the opening night, the champion skater, Bobby Aginton, gave a remarkably smart exhibition. The acting-manager is Mr. H. Cormack. There are six instructors, in gold-braided and smart uniforms, and also lady instructors. Guidi's Military Orchestra supply the music. It is thirty years ago since the first rink was opened in Leicester, at the side of Victoria Park. The last was erected in the Floral Hall, in Belgrave-gate, and was under the management of Mr. John H. Clarke, who later became the manager of the Theatre Royal for Colonel Winstanley.

EVENTUALLY the place was acquired by Mr. Oswald Stoll, who erected thereon Leicester's premier place of entertainment, the Leicester Palace Theatre. Since then the town has been without a rink, and there is no doubt that with the opening of the new rink the old enthusiasm for roller-skating will be revived.

PROBABLY one of the best-liked sports which are from time to time to be seen at the Empress Roller Skating Rink, Earl's Court, is that of pushball on skates. Last Wednesday afternoon a young ladies' team of twenty skaters competed against one made up of a dozen boys not over seventeen. The ladies were led by Miss Amelie Van Biene, a niece of the famous 'cellist of the same name, and who is a very pretty and charming girl of sixteen. They played so vigorously that they succeeded in scoring three goals to nil, the dismal record of the opposing young gentlemen. Ladies and gentlemen wishing to take part in a pushball battle on skates are invited to send in their names to Mr. P. W. Willard, the managing-director, who will arrange the time and meeting of the opposing teams.

SHAFTESBURY. MR. H. B. IRVING.

LAST NIGHT OF THE SEASON.

MATINEE TO-DAY, at 2.30.

LOUIS XI.
MISS DOROTHEA BAIRD.
MR. H. B. IRVING as LOUIS XI.

TO-NIGHT, at 8.45,
THE LYONS MAIL.
At 8, "KING RENE'S DAUGHTER."

UNANIMOUS VERDICT OF PRESS & PUBLIC.

The TIMES:
But the new performance is no mere outward reproduction of the old; it has—and that is why we call it remarkable—the spirit and fire and gusto of the old. That is to say, the ogre gives you real thrills, and dominates the stage so that you cannot take your eyes off him. . . . The house was highly delighted, and called Mr. Irving before the curtain again and again.

The MORNING POST:
The picture he draws of the wily, ferocious, cowardly old hypocrite is very effective, the touches of grim humour being admirably rendered, and last night's large audience watched the performance with attention, and applauded it most enthusiastically as often as occasion offered. It is certainly a performance which should not be missed.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH:
There is so much that is thoughtful, histrionically effective, and instructive in Mr. Irving's rendering that popularity is assured.

The STANDARD:
A most scholarly piece of work. In make-up it is brilliant; as a study of senility it is well-nigh perfection. . . . Of its grimness there can be no question, of its intensity there cannot be too much praise, of its power to grip, the enthusiastic audience bore witness. The audience was really remarkably enthusiastic.

The DAILY MAIL:
It is one of the best things he has done. At the beginning, in the scene in the bedroom, and at the end he gave a performance of real power and fascination. He succeeds admirably, and the house thoroughly appreciated it.

The DAILY EXPRESS:
There can no longer be any hesitation in declaring that the mantle of the greatest actor of modern times has descended upon the shoulders of his son.

The DAILY CHRONICLE:
Yet another night of enthusiasm and of triumph.

The DAILY GRAPHIC.
As a portrayal of age the performance is quite masterly, especially in the death-scene. . . . His performance is in every way a thing to be seen.

The MORNING ADVERTISER:
Each of these scenes demands much of the actor, and it was highly gratifying to see how successfully Mr. Irving grappled with their many difficulties. . . . We have nothing but praise for a performance which had evidently been well considered, and which showed Mr. Irving in a new and very welcome light.

The MORNING LEADER:
Frequent curtain calls, loud applause, a little speech spoken under stress of emotion at the finish marked the revival, and made one think of the enthusiasm evoked in the old days when Mr. Irving's distinguished father played this part. Mr. Irving has done nothing better than this.

The SPORTSMAN:
Mr. Irving has made a striking personal success.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE:
Mr. Irving obtained a more notable personal success than in any other of his revivals this season, not excluding "The Lyons Mail." Last night Mr. Irving held his audience far more surely than he has done before at the Shaftesbury. The silence during the performance spoke more spontaneously than the applause in the darkened theatre at the end of each act, and the little bursts of laughter at the old Satyr's occasional jests and the little gasps at the more diabolical displays of his disposition were also eloquent evidence that the impersonation was "getting home," as they say. Someone has observed that a new generation of playgoers succeeds every three years. If that is so, the majority of those who will crowd to see this vivid piece of acting will be untroubled by memories of Sir Henry Irving's wonderful display, and will admire and enjoy the son's work, as last night's audience enjoyed and admired it.

The EVENING STANDARD:
The audience last night evidenced a deep appreciation of the significance of Mr. Irving's achievement, for everyone in the house, from stalls to gallery, united to make the occasion memorable. Exactly how many times the accomplished young actor was called before the curtain it would be difficult to say. Six or seven times after every act and at least a dozen at the end would be a reasonable computation. One recognised the ring of genuine, unforced admiration in the round upon round of cheering which greeted the conclusion of the wonderful death scene. In sheer histrionic intensity the Louis of Mr. Irving leaves far behind his Hamlet, his Lesurques, his Dubosc, and his Charles the First. Fine as these assumptions are, his Louis is finer still. It is the crowning triumph of a series of successes which have astonished the most ardent believers in Mr. Irving's uncommon abilities. After this there is no defining the limits of his capacity. We can "see him" in an endless procession of famous rôles, all of the highest character. There is nothing of first importance that he may not attempt and conquer.

The WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.
In some respects Louis XI. is Mr. Irving's best performance. He seems to play it as if he loves it. . . . There remains, then, Mr. Irving for serious consideration, and I think very high praise is due. In the first place, he succeeded in suggesting vividly old age and weakness, with strength of will, and without the commonplace stage doddering. His make-up was very striking, and he was skilful enough to cause his hands to seem old. In the main he gave a very strong picture of the ineffably wicked old man and very useful king. He seemed the embodiment of cunning, yet capable of suggesting simplicity, and though I think that in the Angelus business, like his father, he overstepped the bounds a little, as a whole his performance was marked by a nice avoidance of the needlessly theatrical. His death, or, rather, his dying, was horrible enough for anybody's taste; and his laborious uprising when all deem him dead was quite terrible. Consequently one may say that the Louis XI. is a really successful piece of acting.

The GLOBE:
It may at once be said that his performance is admirable.

The EVENING NEWS:
An altogether astonishing study. Mr. Irving's make-up is itself wonderful, yet it is the least surprising things about this grim and relentless picture. Mr. Irving's rendering of the character is remarkable as a brilliantly realistic study of the least attractive aspect of old age. It is small wonder that the actor's almost harrowing art thrilled the house, and drew from it a striking tribute of enthusiasm. . . . But the play is Louis and Louis is the play, and this particular Louis is unforgettable.

The STAR:
Mr. Irving must be congratulated on a brilliant success. As Louis he achieves a very real conquest, and offers an impersonation which is quite masterly. The performance is one which, even though it but carries on a tradition and is in no sense creative, establishes Mr. Irving's right to be regarded as one of the most powerful and intelligent actors of the younger generation, an actor of strong individuality and artistic authority.

ACTORS AND TERRITORIALS.

It was only to be expected that the sensation created by the production of An Englishman's Home should be followed by an effort on the part of the profession to practise what it had so powerfully preached; but we confess we were not prepared to have such a complete and practical scheme presented to us as that which has been originated by Mr. CHARLES C. OMMANNEY, Mr. E. S. BALE, and Messrs. GEORGE CARNEY and FRANK ARMSTRONG for the formation of a purely theatrical and variety battalion of Territorials. Mr. OMMANNEY has the advantage of having seen active service in South Africa, our latest training-ground for soldiers; and he has his heart in the work that he has put before him.

The theatrical profession is one of the greatest tests possible of the sobriety and common-sense of youth. It has always been a problem how to occupy the actor, both in London and on tour, in the earlier part of the day. The exceptional artist is, of course, easily accounted for. He may be an amateur painter, a collector, or he may have some other excellent and improving hobby. But after the first novelty of touring is over, the problem of how to get through the day presses hardly on many actors in the provinces. Things, indeed, are much better now than they used to be. Cricket has engaged the attention of many of our actors, golf has been found a valuable resource to even more; but there still remains the want of a healthy pursuit suited to those who do not care for these two games. Military training offers advantages to this unoccupied majority which are not generally appreciated. Volunteering has been so consistently ridiculed and depreciated by the Press, both in articles and illustrations, that it needs a certain amount of moral courage to walk along the street wearing the Territorial uniform. But the recompenses are many and real. One of them, which should much appeal to actors, is the great improvement in bearing which results from drill. The "manual," which teaches the smart and neat handling of the rifle, is a fine exercise for the chest and arms, and squad drill, with its constant formation of fours, its various steps and turnings, sets a man securely on his feet, and creates in him a striking improvement in ease and grace of movement. The attention paid to erect and becoming attitude leaves behind it, even when off duty, a certain "well-set-up" appearance which all must notice in trained men. We should be sorry to see introduced into England any of the physical pedantry of the Continent, where a man at a party knocks his heels together before asking a lady to dance, but it must be owned that the carriage of many of our young men, both on and off the stage, leaves something yet to be desired.

It is not generally known that to purely military training is added, in all the larger centres at least, a physical drill which is an education in athletics. On alternate evenings the drill sergeant becomes an athletic instructor, and, under his command, exercises with the Indian clubs, the horse, &c., are performed by the whole battalion. Boxing and fencing are taught gratis to those who desire the teaching; and there is a swimming club to each big battalion. Nor are the more delicate senses neglected. Men with especially fine eyesight and mental judgment can employ these gifts in rifle-shooting, which is a severe test of nervous endurance and coolness. In the hot weather nothing can be more interesting than to lie on a mat in the pure air of Bisley or some provincial range and see the welcome signal that announces a bullseye rise above the bank before the targets.

There are some egoists who cannot combine with others in any sport or action. They must always be playing for their own hands, and looking out for number one, with a complete indifference to all the other numerals. To these mean and selfish persons, sharing in the fatigues and the fun of a company, either in the prosaic perseverance of the drill-yard or the more interesting adventures of camp and manœuvres, is mere unpleasant drudgery. These are better out of the Territorials than within their ranks, lest they should infect their wholesome brothers with their own complaint. But such characters are rare in the theatrical and variety professions, which have always been noted for their generosity and good fellowship. The idea that obedience to reasonable authority is manly and wise has been infused into them at rehearsals; they have learned to co-operate, to be loyal to a chief, and to obey instantly and smartly. Many of them are sportsmen, and to these the mounted section of the Territorials should appeal with power. It should not be concealed from them, however, that mounted infantry work is really hard, and that only those of considerable powers of endurance should attempt it. The envied mounted infantryman has to pay for his equestrian pride by very onerous stable duties being added to the ordinary drill. It is no joke, when you arrive at camp at evening after a hard day on the Fox Hills or elsewhere, to have to groom your horse and bed him down for the night, besides cleaning bits and saddlery for the morrow. Therefore, the average actor should weigh well the pros and cons and estimate his own ability before choosing this attractive but exacting branch of the Service.

In joining the Territorials it is only the first step that is really uncomfortable. That taken, the recruit's interest in his work soon becomes excited; he finds out what he can do best, and tries to excel in it; and he acquires a taste for the work which is never quite lost. Everyone who has been through the Volunteer service speaks in enthusiastic terms of the benefit derived from his experience, and is full of affection for his old battalion and of pleasant memories of the past. We do not wish to paint too rosy a picture of military service, amateur or professional. But, on the other hand, we want our soldiers to be cheerful volunteers, not sullen conscripts. If we can only induce the cream of the profession to learn to defend their country, we may feel certain that, should the necessity ever arise, our actors and variety artists will face the inevitable hardships and dangers with all the steadiness and seriousness required to repel the foe.

"BLUFFING ONE'S WAY."

A Comedy, in Three Acts, Adapted and Modernised from the play, Le Puff au Mensonge et Verite, by Eugene Scribe, Produced at the Royalty Theatre, on Monday, Feb. 22.

Jacob File ..... MR. T. P. HAYNES
Sir Sacripant Brazen, M.P. ..... MR. WATTY BRUNTON
Ernest Reinhold ..... MR. HENRY AINSWORTH
Jobbing Highflyer ..... MR. A. DAVIDSON
Subtle Pamphlet ..... MR. HENRY TEMPLETON
Emily File ..... MISS UNA BRUCKSHAW
Alma Highflyer ..... MISS MABEL FUNSTAN

The author of Bluffing One's Way, whom we judge to be Mr. W. H. C. Nation, has probably utilised more of his own ideas than those of the well-known French author who is named, for one cannot but very readily recognise in this piece many of the characteristics which distinguished other plays which have recently been produced at the Royalty Theatre, and in which the author has postulated his theories as to political and social questions. Old Jacob File, the wealthy miser, has a daughter and a ward. With the former, Emily File, Sir Sacripant Brazen has at one time pretended to be in love, though when he discovered that there was less possibility of getting possession of her father's wealth than he had at first fancied, he discards her, and simulates affection for Alma Highflyer. That young lady's brother has been gambling rather heavily upon the Stock Exchange, with the result that Alma loses a considerable portion of her fortune. When Sir Sacripant is told this, he believes that a game of bluff is being played upon him, and in order to make the family and others think that he is an unselfish, high-minded gentleman, he still says that he will marry Alma. When, however, he learns that what has been related to him of Alma's misfortunes is only too true, he writes a letter breaking off the engagement. He is just about to send the letter to Alma—who, by the way, is in love with someone else, and detests the notoriety-seeking member of Parliament—but when the news comes that Alma's brother has had an extraordinary stroke of luck and is a rich man, Sir Sacripant changes his mind and decides that he loves the girl after all. Alma's real fiancé is Ernest Reinhold, who threatens to expose Sir Sacripant for having stolen some of his notes for a book on India, the authorship of which is attributed to Sir Sacripant, although that worthy was not the writer, this, however, being part of the game of bluff engaged in by the enterprising, if not altogether honourable, politician. The end of the case is that Sir Sacripant relinquishes all claims to Alma, and Ernest, after all, gets the woman he wants.

Mr. T. P. Haynes as Jacob File, Mr Henry Templeton as Subtle Pamphlet, a publisher whom Sir Sacripant makes use of to advertise himself, and Mr. Henry Ainsworth as Ernest Reinhold furnish satisfactory portraitures, and the other parts are given all the representation that is necessary under the circumstances.

A TERRIBLE end has been met by a young Parisian actress named Irene Muza, who was burnt to death on Tuesday night while her hair was being dressed. The hairdresser, who was also severely burnt, and is not expected to recover, was washing Mlle. Muza's hair in the kitchen, when some of the wash fell on the kitchen range, flamed up, and set fire to Mlle. Muza's hair and dressing-gown. She rushed shrieking about her flat, until two visitors, one of whom was Mlle. Muza's sister, eventually succeeded in putting out the fire. The actress, however, was so badly burnt that she died in the course of the night.

A COQUELIN MEMORIAL.

The following correspondence has taken place between Sir John Hare and Monsieur Jules Clarétie, l'Administrateur Général de la Comédie Française, and M. Jean Coquelin, the son of the eminent actor, lately deceased:—

"DEAR MONSIEUR CLARETIE,—A strong desire is felt by leading members of the English stage to give expression to their sorrow at the loss of the great actor whose talents were not only a glory to the stage of his own country, but shed lustre on the dramatic art of the entire world.

"M. Coquelin was known, revered, and loved in England, and especially by his confrères, who admired him equally as an artist and respected him as a man.

"It has, therefore, been felt that we, his English brothers, should like to pay some tribute of honour and affection to the memory of the great actor who was for so many years not only one of the chief ornaments of the French stage, but for thirty years a shining light in the house of Molière, the theatre which you, Sir, have so long directed with such distinction, taste, and skill.

"It has been suggested and agreed that the most fitting form our modest tribute should take would be that of a silver wreath or similar artistic design, and I am deputed to ask you if, in the event of the design being executed to your and our satisfaction, we might offer it as a tribute to the memory of Constant Coquelin from his English brothers, and, if they will do us the honour to accept it, as a memorial gift to the Théâtre Français.

"As it was as sociétaire of the Comédie Française that M. Coquelin first appeared before and won the admiration of the English public, it has occurred to us that the most fitting destination for our little offering should be the historic theatre so closely associated with his name and fame.

"The committee who are organising this memorial tribute comprise leading representatives of the English stage, a completed list of whose names will be sent to you in due course.—I have the honour to remain, &c., (Signed) "JOHN HARE.

"75, Upper Berkeley-street,
"Portman-square, London, Feb. 2."

The following is a translation of M. Clarétie's answer:—

"DEAR SIR JOHN HARE,—The Comédie Française can only be touched by the thought which you express to me in the name of the English dramatic artists. It is one more link which binds the house of Molière to the country of Shakespeare.

"Since you kindly mention that it is to Constant Coquelin to whom you address your glorious and generous tribute—to Constant Coquelin, 'sociétaire of the Comédie Française'—the Comédie will be happy to accept a gift which will record that from such-and-such a date to such-and-such a date the brilliant interpreter of Molière was the honoured sociétaire of the Théâtre Français. These two dates I will send you.

"Accept, I beg you, dear Sir John Hare, and kindly convey to the representative artists of the English theatre, the thanks of the Comédie Française, and add to them the personal expression of the devotion and gratitude of its director.—Yours very sincerely,

"JULES CLARETIE."

Sir John Hare wrote to M. Jean Coquelin:

"DEAR M. COQUELIN,—A great desire has been expressed by leading members of the English stage to pay some tribute to the memory of your dear father, who had won from us not merely admiration for his genius, but affection and respect for him as a man.

"A committee of leading actors have met to consider the best form this tribute should take, and it has been decided that a silver wreath or similar artistic design should be offered for the acceptance of the Théâtre Français, to be placed, we hope, in the foyer of your national theatre.

"As honorary secretary of the committee, I have been requested to communicate with M. Clarétie to ascertain his views on the subject, but, before definitely deciding on our course of action, we should first like to ascertain your wishes on the subject, and whether the steps we are taking in this matter are agreeable to you.

"In offering this gift to the Théâtre Français, we have been influenced by the fact that it was as sociétaire of that theatre that in 1871 your illustrious father first appeared before and won the admiration of the English public, since cemented by intimate association into reverence and affectionate regard.—I am, dear M. Coquelin, yours very sincerely,

"John Hare, Hon. Secretary to the Committee.
"75, Upper Berkeley-street, London, Feb. 2."

A telegram was received, of which the following is a translation:—

"Am much touched by your generous offer and tender thought. Approve of your exchanging views on this subject with Comédie Française, and shall be much obliged by your letting me know the result of negotiations."

The committee which has been formed for the purposes of the memorial is composed of Sir Squire Bancroft, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. W. H. Kendal, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Forbes-Robertson, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Arthur W. Pinero, and Sir John Hare (honorary secretary).

A NEW charge of obtaining money by fraud and false pretences was preferred on Monday against Frederick John Morgan, alias "Norman Craig," a young man described as an actor, of Kemble-street, Drury-lane. John Featherstone, a young man giving an address at Shoreditch, and described as a clerk, deposed that early in March last he called on the prisoner, at an office at 95, Great Eastern-street. The prisoner, who gave the name of "Norman Craig," said his theatrical company was going on tour with two plays, East Lynne and Lady Dedlock's Secret. In the former witness was offered the part of Otway Bethel, at a salary of £1 a week. Morgan said he should require a premium of two guineas and a deposit of at least 10s. The prisoner signed a type-written contract, and said the rehearsals would be at the Bay Malton, Great Portland-street. Witness parted with sums amounting to 22s. 6d. to prisoner, believing his representations as to salaried employment on the stage. The rehearsals took place in a sort of cellar, but when the time was approaching for public performances Morgan said he could not carry out his arrangements. Finally he deserted the "company." A detective-inspector said he put forward the last witness to show that defendant's system had been going on for twelve months. He had got up three companies at least, and there was one attempt at a performance at Harrow. Morgan was committed for trial, Mr. Francis offering to accept bail.

THE action brought by Mr. Fred Storey against Miss Iné de la Garde Cameron (Mrs. Wilkie) for damages for breach of agreement was settled in the King's Bench Division on the 19th inst. The contract was in writing, and was made on Jan. 31, 1908. Under it the defendant engaged plaintiff to act leading parts in old English comedy and Shakespearean plays, and to provide certain costumes and scenery. The plaintiff said he adhered to the agreement up to Feb. 29 of last year, when the defendant wrongfully terminated it. The defence was that the agreement was terminated by mutual consent. His lordship said Mr. Storey had a contract which had never been put an end to. After deducting £15 for the week at Blackpool and £10 for the repayment of the money lent, there would be judgment for the plaintiff for £198 10s.

THE COPYRIGHT QUESTION.

The report presented by Sir H. Bergne, Mr. Askwith, and Count de Salis, the British delegates at the International Conference of the Union for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works, held at Berlin on Oct. 14, 1908, is too long for us to reproduce in toto, but we have extracted some paragraphs which may be of interest to our readers:—

"PUBLIC PERFORMANCE OF MUSICAL WORKS.—The stipulations of the present Convention shall apply to the public representation of dramatic or dramatico-musical works and to the public performance of musical works, whether such works be published or not. Authors of dramatic or dramatico-musical works shall be protected during the existence of their right over the original work against the unauthorised public representation of translations of their works. In order to enjoy the protection of the present Article, authors shall not be bound in publishing their works to forbid the public representation or performance thereof."

The Berne Convention (Article 9) provides that, in the case of published musical works, authors must expressly declare on the title-page or at the head of the work that public performance is forbidden if they desire to retain the performing right. This requirement has, in practice, given rise to confusion, and it was proposed to abolish it.

Owing to the conditions of our law this proposal involved certain difficulties; but, after reference to you on the subject, we made the following Declaration:—

"The Government of His Britannic Majesty recognises the value—especially from the point of view of simplicity—of the amendment of the German delegation with the view to protect the performing right of a work without making special prohibition obligatory. According to English law, special mention of prohibition is obligatory, and a sudden modification of that provision would lead to some confusion, and for some time be a source of danger to the public until it had become accustomed to the change. On the one hand, therefore, we shall have to give complete protection to persons who have innocently infringed exclusive performing rights, and, on the other hand, to guarantee to authors the means of preventing the violation of those rights. We are glad to believe that these considerations are not in disaccord with the German amendment, which we are happy to be able to accept."

After this declaration was made, Switzerland, the only other objecting country, withdrew her opposition, and the Article was adopted unanimously.

"INDIRECT APPROPRIATIONS.—Art. 12: The following shall be specially included among the unlawful reproductions to which the present Convention applies: Unauthorised indirect appropriations of a literary or artistic work, such as adaptations, musical arrangements, transformations of a novel, tale, or piece of poetry into a dramatic piece and vice-versâ, &c., when they are only the reproduction of that work, in the same form or in another form, without essential alterations, additions, or abridgments, and do not present the character of a new original work."

This corresponds to Article 10 of the Berne Convention, with the addition of "transformations of a novel, tale, or piece of poetry into a dramatic piece and vice versâ" to the list of reproductions which are illegal without authority.

Complete protection is not as yet given in England in the case of these additions, but we were instructed to offer no objection to the proposal, which was accepted without discussion.

"MECHANICAL MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.—Art. 13: The authors of musical works shall have the exclusive right of authorising: (1) The adaptation of those works to instruments which can reproduce them mechanically; (2) the public performance of the said works by means of these instruments. Reservations and conditions relating to the application of this Article may be determined by the domestic legislation of each country in so far as it is concerned; but the effect of any such reservations and conditions will be strictly limited to the country which has put them in force. The provisions of paragraph 1 shall not be retroactive, and consequently shall not be applicable in any country of the Union to works which have been lawfully adapted in that country to mechanical instruments before the coming into force of the present Convention. Adaptations made in virtue of paragraphs 2 and 3 of the present Article, and imported without the authority of the interested parties into a country where they would not be lawful, shall be liable to seizure in that country."

THE Royal Ear Hospital matinée at the Queen's Theatre on the 18th inst. drew a brilliant audience, which included the King and Queen. Over £500 was secured for seats alone and about £120 collected by the charming young actresses, who sold programmes, flowers, cigarettes, and sweetmeats. Miss Dorrien Keppel headed the list with £20. The hospital is also benefiting by the beautiful souvenir, which is sold for half a guinea, and entitles the purchaser to a free sitting at the Urbanora Studios, Wardour-street, and a guinea's worth of photographs free. In addition to the photo coupon, the souvenir contains a signed photogravure of the Queen, and many interesting items.

THE obituary announcements of the week include that of Mlle. Victoria de Bunsen, the well-known singer. Miss de Bunsen was born in Sweden, of German parents, and made her first appearance in opera at Stockholm. After studying with Lamperti, Masset, and Fontana she was engaged by Mr. Mapleson and took part in his performances at Her Majesty's Theatre. While touring as a member of Mr. Mapleson's Italian opera company in Great Britain the artist caught a chill, which necessitated an abandonment of the stage. She appeared frequently on the concert platform and was very well known as a teacher.

THE third sacred concert under the auspices of the Amalgamated Musicians' Union in aid of their benevolent fund was given in the Theatre Royal, Plymouth, on Sunday, when a well-selected programme was rendered. Miss Gladys Jeffery sang with expression Liddle's well-known hymn, "Abide with me," and gave an artistic rendering of Handel's "Return, O God of Hosts." Mr. J. Pardew played the pianoforte accompaniments. Other items on the programme were the overture "Trumpet" of Mendelssohn, Raff's "Cavatina," Wagner's overture to "The Meistersingers," the "Stabat Mater" of Rossini (cornet solo, Mr. S. Mitchell), and a suite of "Three Rural Scenes." Mr. Stephen Blythe was the conductor, and Mr. J. W. Wingate was the leader of the orchestra.

A MEETING was held in the Grosvenor Restaurant, Glasgow, on the 19th inst., with a view to the establishment, in that city, of a repértoire theatre, and for the purpose of encouraging the writing and production of Scottish national drama. Mr. Alfred Wareing, the organiser and manager, explained the scheme, stating that one element of the idea was to issue subscription tickets for different parts of the house. The capital demanded only amounted to £2,000, and the expenses he had calculated at £240 per week. It was their intention to secure twelve or fifteen London actors of proved ability for the theatre, which was to be a citizens' theatre, supported and financed by citizens. The movement could be set on foot in April in the Royalty Theatre, Glasgow.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

A WELCOME-HOME dinner to Mr. Harry Lauder will be given at the Café Monico on Sunday, March 14. Sir Thomas Dewar, a countryman of Lauder's, ye ken, has consented to take the chair.

As showing the popularity of the Coliseum programme, it is interesting to note that the following visited the theatre during the past week:—The Dowager Lady Inverclyde, Mrs. Ruthven Guest, the Countess of Southesk, Lady Strathcden, the Hon. Mildred Campbell, Lord Sanderson, the Dowager Lady Kensington, Lady Inverclyde, the Hon. Miss Vivian and the Hon. Miss Lascelles (Maids of Honour to the Queen), Sir Walter and Lady Grove, and Lord Charles Thynne.

THE members and friends of the fraternity of Water Rats will be footing it merrily on Thursday next at the Trocadero, at the annual ball of the "Grand Order," under the limited monarchy of King Rat, Fred Ginnett. Mr. Bond Sayers, musical director of the London Pavilion, will again conduct a special orchestra. Supper will be served at 1.30.

WE are pleased to state that Mr. John L. Shine's injured arm is progressing as well as possible under skilled attention. Mr. Shine is negotiating for the immediate production of his latest playlet, in three scenes, Invasion; or, Wake up England!

MRS. HERBERT CAMPBELL, the widow of Herbert Campbell, comedian, died on Sunday, after a short illness from pneumonia, at the Sun Tavern, Long Acre, of which she was the proprietress. The deceased lady was interred on Thursday in her husband's grave at Abney Park Cemetery.

MISS VESTA VICTORIA has returned to this country once more with a remarkable record of American successes. "Poor John," "Sally in the ballet," and "Now I have to call him father" have been sung and chortled by the most sedate of audiences in the principal vaudeville theatres in New York, Boston, and other cities. The Yankee critics admit that British song-writers have the monopoly of numbers that are comically descriptive of domestic trials and "home life," and, incidentally, they tell us that it is only artists like Vesta Victoria who can extract the real fun of such ditties.

"MISS VICTORIA makes people forget themselves, and that is precisely what people want to do. Stupid songs never achieve this result. All of Vesta Victoria's songs are good and funny." This is the verdict of one of New York's leading critics. The gaiety of life is said to be absent from New York vaudeville audiences; and funereal gloom is not lifted by gloomy sketches, lengths of monologue, or worn-out ragtime music. Vesta Victoria's songs, however, have spread the contagion of mirth everywhere, and through her teaching New York has learnt to appreciate the preciousness of domestic comedy.

"MISS VICTORIA'S principal mission," says a critic, "is to sing songs that are contagious, and that will induce the audience to sing with her." Once start an audience singing "on its own" and the victory is won. For just as most people like to hear themselves talk, they like to hear themselves sing. They revel in the songs that they can sing themselves. The successful vaudeville artist routs an audience from its apathy, and makes it sing.

THE latest sensational spectacle at the London Hippodrome is entitled The Motor Chase, and all Mr. Frank Parker's ingenuity has been taxed to realise the startling incidents of the piece, of which Mr. Sidney Blow is the author. The Motor Chase is down for production on Monday.

"PIERRETTE'S BIRTHDAY," episode by Colin Neil Rose, with music by Clement Locknane, is to be seen for the first time on the variety stage on Monday next at the Coliseum, with Mr. Robert Cunningham, who has been playing Canio in Pagliacci at the fine house in St. Martin's-lane during the week, in his original part. Mme. De Noce, a Parisian prima donna, is also to make her first appearance on the variety stage, and Evie Greene returns.

MR. HARRY LAUDER, who will be at the Argyle, Birkenhead, next Monday, has been telling the story of his experiences during a visit to Ward's Island Asylum, where he taught the inmates to sing the chorus of "I love a lassie." A woman inmate took him on one side and whispered in his ear, "For Heaven's sake, Mr. Lauder, don't pull funny faces here, or do anything that will make them think you are 'a bit off the top,' or they will surely keep you in." "And that wasn't after I had sung 'The saftest of the family,'" he added, with a twinkle in his eye.

MLLE. LIANE D'EVE, the celebrated French artist, who is appearing at the London Tivoli, has entered into a contract with Colonel Mapleson, whereby she is under his sole and exclusive management for the entire world for a period of three years. Liane is not only an accomplished actress, singer, and dancer, but a young and beautiful woman, and her success has been equally great in Russia, Germany, Austria, Italy, Spain, France, and the United States.

THE following names of light and leading in the world of variety form the committee of the Maurice de Frece testimonial:—Sir Edward Moss, Miss Vesta Tilley, Messrs. Arthur Collins, Joseph Lyons, Oswald Stoll, J. L. Graydon, Henri Gros, Joseph Davis, Henry Sutton, Alfred Butt, T. G. Hales, Fredk. Abrahams, Eugen Sandow, Sidney Smith, F. H. Pedgrift, Walter de Frece, Michael Garcia, Chas. Fisher, E. J. Leamy, Chas. Simons, Lauri Cohen, Henry Neville, Harry Barnett, Natt Behrens, Sydney M. Hyman, Jack Lotto, Johnny Jacobs, Geo. Foster, Jack de Frece, Thos. Holmes, H. W. Wieland, and Will Oliver.

THE fidelity and strength of Mr. and Mrs. Lucas's impersonations of characters from the novels of Charles Dickens immediately impressed a large and critical audience at the American Theatre, New York, on their début there.

Two scenes from "Martin Chuzzlewit" and from "The Old Curiosity Shop" had a pronounced Dickens atmosphere. Mr. Lucas in the first scene was both old Martin Chuzzlewit and Jonas Chuzzlewit, while Mrs. Lucas was Mercy Pecksniff. If such an achievement is possible, Mr. Lucas made Jonas Chuzzlewit a more contemptible creature than in his original creation by Dickens himself, and the simple comedy of Dick Swiveller and the Marchioness was in striking contrast.

MR. ALFRED BUTT is presenting another celebrated player on Monday—none other than Mr. Louis Calvert, who will play the title-rôle in the production of an episode in one act, Ezra Solomon. The cast is exceptionally strong, containing as it does the names of Miss Lucie Caine, Mr. George Silver, and Mr. Sebastian Smith. This is the first time that Mr. Calvert or Miss Caine has appeared on the variety stage. The playlet is both serious and humorous, and, whilst being thoroughly "human" in theme, deals with the position of Jews in Russia. On Monday also will be seen the unique picture entertainment on the Urbanora Bioscope which is entitled Kinemacolor, to which we have referred in detail.

WE call the attention of our readers to an important announcement in our advertisement columns from Mr. Oswald Stoll concerning the Coventry Empire.

WE are officially informed that the statement in a Liverpool paper that Messrs. Broadhead and Son intend to erect a variety house on the site of the old Prince of Wales's Theatre in the Mersey city is without any foundation.

THERE will be a revival on Monday for a few weeks of varieties at the Royal County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames.

MISS CORA DUNCAN and Albert Brasque have scored a big success at every hall where they have played their new and original Lancashire comedy sketch entitled My Lancashire Wife.

ON her return to town in a fortnight Miss Winifred Hare will sing her pantomime success, "Keep a-whistling." Miss Hare in this number will have the assistance of Miss Dorothy Rayner, who, as our Yankee cousins would say, "chips in."

A SYNDICATE has been formed for the purpose of erecting a new theatre of varieties in Northampton. A site in the centre of the town has been secured. The plans were passed last week, and the building will shortly be commenced. It will hold 2,500 and the gallery alone will have four exits, and in all other respects the theatre will be thoroughly up to date.

MR. ALBERT BUSHELL'S eighth annual managerial benefit at the Birmingham Gaiety took place on Tuesday, when he was supported by the public and his friends to an unprecedented extent, the house being a record one. Presents galore poured in on the beneficiaire, and the programme was also a record one, extending till nearly twelve o'clock, and would easily have lasted until three in the morning.

MR. WILLIAM HOLLAND, who will be remembered as general-manager of the Tower, New Brighton, and the Winter Gardens, Morecambe, has been appointed general-manager of the Edinburgh Marine Gardens Co., Ltd., who are laying out an amusement park of 27 acres at Portobello, the Blackpool of Scotland. Buildings to accommodate 15,000 people are being erected facing the sea, and the management is advertising for side-shows and novelties of every description.

MR. E. H. BOSTOCK, of the Glasgow Hippodrome, is steadily adding to the list of places of amusement under his management. A short time ago he purchased the Victoria Hall, Hamilton, and on Monday last opened the Wishaw Pavilion at Wishaw. Pictures and variety are the attractions at the new house for the present, to be followed by a dramatic season. Mr. René Clayton, the courteous resident-manager of the Hippodrome, Hamilton, has been appointed Mr. Bostock's general-manager for all three places, Mr. Jack Bostock being appointed as Mr. Clayton's successor at Hamilton.

THE members and friends of the Birmingham Rocket Club, to the number of three hundred, paid their annual visit to the Prince of Wales's Theatre on Friday week. The occasion was, as usual, one of present giving, thirty-three gifts being made to the artists. Miss Rita Everard, who was married on Monday (22nd), received a toy piano, suite of furniture, and scrubbing brush, in addition to a floral tribute; and Mr. Horace Mills had the "Old cracked basin" presented to him with a rug. Mr. Graham, the senior vice-president of the club, made a happy speech, and Mr. E. B. Holmes (the president) replied from a stage-box. Extra turns were supplied by Mr. Clay Thomas and Mr. Fred Pardoe.

READING is the latest town to have a roller skating rink. A company has been formed, of which Mr. Milton Bode (probably one of our most enterprising managers) is chairman. Messrs. Galt Millar, the Reading architect, Charles Byng Hall, and T. B. Percy, of the Ealing Skating Rink, and a number of the most prominent business men in Reading are also interested. Building will commence almost at once, and it is hoped, and confidently expected, to be open in time for the Easter holidays. The Rink will have a skating surface of over 15,000 super feet.

DURING these last few years Ellesmere Port, the Cheshire Merseyside town, has developed from a small village to a place of considerable commercial importance, and the New Hippodrome, capable of seating about eight hundred people, well furnished and appointed, was opened on Monday to supply the inhabitants with a place of entertainment, for which the promoters felt there was a need.

MR. CORELLI, the chief promoter of the new enterprise, in a neat little speech, on Monday declared the building open, and assured his audience that it was his earnest desire to make the Hippodrome a place of ideal family entertainment, and by providing week by week, twice each night, a programme of an up-to-date variety character to enlist their sympathy and support.

THE following excellent programme delighted two packed houses:—Ethel Dancy, contralto; Long Amos, character comedian; Arthur Corelli (resident manager) in A Lesson in Magic; Victoria Dagmar and Clown, experts on the horizontal bar, and some excellent animated pictures. All the turns were well applauded, and the residents of Ellesmere Port have reason to rejoince that they now have some place of entertainment in which to pass their leisure hours.

THE Liverpool Pavilion celebrated the first anniversary of its opening on Wednesday night, when the manager, Mr. Henry Hearn, thanked the patrons for the cordial support they had extended to the new venture. The manner in which the public of Liverpool had patronised the Pavilion during the twelve months of its existence proved that Messrs. Broadhead had succeeded in giving them value for their money, and he assured all that his firm would continue to provide a healthy and acceptable form of amusement. During an interval Mr. Lewis Peake, chairman of the Theatrical Football Gala, which was held last week, presented, on behalf of Messrs. Campbell and Lumley, the donors, a new magnificent challenge shield to the tug-of-war team connected with the Pavilion, who won it on that occasion. The trophy is to be carried off three times in succession, or four times in all, to be absolutely claimed.

MR. G. RHODES PARRY, the general-manager of the Palace Theatre, Grimsby, has been the victim of a burglary at his residence, Bankfield House, Dudley-street. On Tuesday evening, Feb. 16, between the hours of seven and nine, the residence was left unoccupied, Mrs. Parry going to see some friends. When she returned shortly after nine o'clock she was surprised to find the door open, and examination showed that it had evidently been forced by a jemmy. A thorough search of the rooms showed that the whole place had been ransacked, and only the most valuable goods taken. The jewellery seems to have claimed the most attention, and valuable rings, pendants, and ornaments were taken, the total value being over £230. The visitors appropriated about £20 in money. Much damage was done to the furniture. There is at present no clue.

MR. HENRY J. CORNER is the pioneer of the Dandies, an artistic combination that secured the approval of the King and Queen at a command performance at Sandringham. He is by way of presenting this clever company in an entirely novel scena.

MR. WILLIE BENN has entered into partnership with Mr. Fred Neiman, variety agent. Henceforth the business will be conducted as Neiman and Benn's Agency, at 108, Strand, London, W.C.

MISS BESSIE BUTT, fresh from pantomime at Kingston-on-Thames, goes to the London Pavilion next Monday. Miss Butt, consequent on her success in pantomime, has been booked by Mr. Robert Arthur for the next three seasons at his theatres.

WE regret to announce the death of Mrs. Alma Waller (of Keen and Waller), which sad event took place at 82, Church-street, Camberwell, after a very short illness, of pneumonia, at the early age of twenty-seven years. The remains were interred in the Forest Hill Cemetery.

SANDY MCNAB will open at the Bedford on Monday in a new version of his Egyptian Mummy sketch with £70 worth of new scenery and effects. This will be the first time this sketch has been seen in London. Sandy has just finished twelve months' successful run in the provinces.

IT has been arranged to hold the meetings of the Executive Committee of the V.A.B.F. on Wednesdays, immediately following that of the Music-Hall Artists' Railway Association, which will, in future, sit at 12 noon. This will be a great convenience to artists, and a decided economy in time.

AT the 596th meeting of the Executive Committee of the M.H.A.R.A., held on Wednesday afternoon, Lieut. F. Albini presiding, the following gentlemen were added to the list of the Association's medical officers:—Dr. H. M. Walker, 93, Camberwell-road, S.E.; Dr. Wallis, Church-street, Barnsley; and Drs. Reed and Reed, Rawlinson-street, Barrow-in-Furness.

MR. WILL OLIVER desires us to thank through our columns all (over 150) who sent telegrams, cards, &c., on his fifty-seventh birthday; also those who sent him some very useful and costly presents. Will is getting over his bronchitis fairly well, and hopes to be on the road in a few days.

MR. CHARLES CAREY'S production, The Top of the Bill, which recently made such a success at the Standard, Pimlico, and since that at the Palace, Camberwell, is scoring heavily in the country. New scenery has been provided, and the act goes with a tremendous swing. When next seen in London it will be newly dressed, and will be played by a company of over twenty.

NEIL KENYON has in The Station-master o' Dunrobin a worthy succeseor to the Postie. The new cameo of the Railyard series was put on with a lavish hand at the Manchester Hippodrome on Monday. The scene of the station-master's labours is an out-of-the-way station, on a single track line. The old station house stands in the distance, and the rails curve out from the foreground to be lost behind a heather-covered prominence.

WHEN the curtain rises a porter is discovered asleep on a truck. The station-master slangs him for his neglect of duty. Porter replies by quoting Shakespeare, who, of course, "has nothing to do with the case." Porter is promptly sent about his business. The station-master then gives an amusing version of the trials at a busy station.

A MOST artistic exit, in which lighting effects play an important part, has been devised by Mr. Kenyon, who has been invited to appear at the new hall in Dundee early in March, when the Duchess of Sutherland, who is the owner of Dunrobin, will be present. We hope to see the new production shortly at the West End.

MRS. FRED GINNETT desires, through the medium of our columns, to thank the ladies of the committee of the Music-hall Ladies' Guild for again electing her president. Mrs. Ginnett, in her letter, writes: "I can only say that I will use my best endeavours to fill the position." Mrs. Ginnett has elected Mrs. Eugene Stratton and Miss Maude Mortimer as vice-presidents and Miss Belle Elmore as treasurer.

MR. WHIT CUNLIFFE, who is playing Dandini at the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, has scored such a success that the pantomime bids fair to be even a greater hit than it was last year at Liverpool. Mr. Cunliffe has been offered the same part for next Christmas, but has not quite decided yet owing to several important music-hall dates that stand in the way.

THAT famous musical combination the Stavordale Quintette, has passed into the hands of Miss Denton, who has hitherto been Mr. Stavordale's right hand and partner. Mr. Stavordale will in future devote most of his time and attention to another business in which he has lately invested, but arrangements have been entered into whereby he will still be seen in the celebrated Quintette when required.

MISS MABELLE MORGAN, a versatile lady, who has become celebrated in the Southern hemisphere, will shortly open in London with an original sketch A Musical Tragedy. Miss Morgan has just finished a successful five years' engagement with Mr. J. C. Williamson in musical comedy and pantomime. The novelty has been specially written and invented by Bert Gilbert, the music being by George Hall.

DAINTY DAISY DORMER has proved an enormous success in Sinbad at the Grand Theatre, Leeds, which terminates to-night. The little lady will open at the Empire, Leeds, on Monday, after which she will be seen in town almost to the eve of her next pantomime at the Prince of Wales's, Birmingham, for which she has already been engaged by Mr. Fred Wyndham. She will play the title-rôle Goody Two Shoes. Daisy is fully booked for the halls until 1917.

ONE of the most celebrated dancers of the forties passed away in Paris on Thursday, Feb. 18, in the person of the Comtesse de Chabrillan. As Céleste Yémard she made her début on the boards of an obscure Montmartre music hall, where she soon became popular. During the time of the Moroccan War she was nicknamed Celeste Mogador, in commemoration of the bombardment of Mogador by the French troops in 1844. Ten years later she went to Australia as the wife of the Comte de Chabrillan, who had been appointed French Consul there.

"THE MIDNIGHT LONDON EXPRESS," now playing at the Bedford to crowded houses, has had a somewhat chequered career, many managers having returned the MS. to Brien McCullough, the author, and it is only fair to say that Mr. Roy Cochrane, the manager of the Surrey Theatre, and to whom the production is in a large measure due, was the first to see in it the possibilities of a great sketch, which it undoubtedly is, and has proved itself to be. It is quite safe to say that no sensational episode has been produced in the London variety theatres that has caused more excitement or played to fuller houses than the above, and Frederic Baugh, Francis H. Bull (who is responsible for the magnificent scenery), and Brien are all to be warmly congratulated.

THE annual dinner and ball of the Terriers' Association will be held on Sunday, March 21, at the Horns Hotel, Kennington, at 9 p.m. Tickets (for Terriers and their friends only) may be obtained from Arthur Were, secretary.

TERRIERS are requested to forward their permanent or next week's address to the secretary.

THE second edition of the new handbook of the Terriers' Association is now ready, and variety artists are invited to apply for a copy, which will be forwarded free of charge on application to the secretary. This book gives full particulars of the advantages and benefits open to members.

THE greatest excitement prevailed in the usually quiet suburb of Putney last Thursday, when Charcot gave his sensational blindfold drive. Thousands lined the streets, and in the neighbourhood of the Hippodrome the people stood twelve deep, and traffic became so congested that it was with the utmost difficulty the police cleared a way for Charcot to start.

CHARCOT was accompanied on his drive by mounted police, behind and in front of his carriage. To compel the attention of Scotland Yard in such a manner speaks volumes for Charcot's foresight, and at once stamps him as a showman of the very first order.

ARTISTS should note that Mr. W. Ainsworth has taken over the Stag Hotel, Stockton-on-Tees. He intends to make his professional house of call the most comfortable in the kingdom.

MRS. ARTHUR REEVE writes:—"In a recent issue of The Era it is stated that Mr. Ginnett is about to marry the third daughter of Lord George Sanger. This should be the daughter of Mr. John Sanger. I am the only surviving daughter of Mr. George Sanger."

THE Palace Theatre of Varieties, Stoke Newington, will, it is understood, be reopened during the first week in March as a high-class theatre, thus returning to its original condition when erected some thirteen years ago, and known as the Alexandra Theatre.

MASTER CLIFF DIAMOND returns to the Canterbury on Monday. At his initial performance here his success led to his agent, Will Oliver, securing all the syndicate halls, and his provincial success during the present week at the Empire, Portsmouth, has led to further engagements at increased terms.

MR. FRED GINNETT'S great spectacle The Johnstown Flood, which, it will be remembered, made such a tremendous success at the late Franco-British Exhibition, is to be at the Canterbury. Another sketch previously produced at this house by the late Charles Lauri, entitled The Sioux, is to be played by Fred Kitchen's company.

MISS TRULY SHATTUCK was out of the bill at Drury Lane last week, and Miss Joan Burton sprang into the breach at a moment's notice, and came through with flying colours. This young lady, who has a figure of which she may be justly proud, is sure to be heard of again. She is now playing her own part of the Chamberlain.

A PLEASING little ceremony was enacted upon the stage of the Theatre Royal, West Bromwich, on Friday, Feb. 19, when Mr. J. P. Moore's Whittington pantomime company assembled to mark their esteem for Mr. Percy Victor by presenting him with a handsome watch, gold chain, and pendant, suitably inscribed. Mrs. Warwick Gray, wife of the manager, made the presentation, and Mr. Victor briefly returned thanks.

AT the Coliseum an invasion scene such as occurs in the famous play, An Englishman's Home, has greatly impressed audiences that have witnessed it on the bioscope. The cleverly rehearsed incidents were acted for the camera on the Sussex Downs by a local amateur organisation and a squadron of the 4th Dragoon Guards. Mr. Leo Stormont gives the stirring patriotic song "Fall in!" the words of which are by Mr. C. E. Burton.

PRINCESS TRIXIE, the educated horse, was burnt in a railway collision in Delaware on Monday. Her unhappy fate will be regretted by thousands of persons who witnessed her performances at the Palace Theatre and elsewhere. The beautiful white Arab mare came of a good stock. Gipsy Queen, a famous performing horse, was her dam, and Bonaveta, the Arab stallion, one of the stars of Barnum's show, her sire.

MR. EDWARD H. LUCAS writes from New York:—"It would be well to advise artists coming out to America of the difficulty they have in bringing scenery and other stage properties into the country. The duty is 60 per cent., and they have to obtain a bond for double the amount of duty and have to place the cash as security, which is not refunded till a landing certificate is obtained on their return to England. This means you do not get your money returned till you arrive back in England.

"They will not examine your goods at the docks on arrival, but you have them sent to the public stores and bonded warehouse, and it takes at least four or five days to get them through. It is also advisable to have a list of everything with the price fixed against same.

"With only a small amount of properties and costumes it is best not to travel as artists, but to take them through as personal baggage. You cannot get through the Custom House without a broker, which costs you about £4."

THE secretary of the Music Hall Home (Mr. Ben Woodger) desires to thank on behalf of the committee Mr. F. H. Pedgrift (The Era) for illustrated volume for the inmates of the home. The next committee meeting will be on Thursday, March 4, at the Empire, Camberwell, at 12 noon. Will any manager who has not got one kindly take a pence-collecting box to help the Music-Hall Home Fund along, and will any artist who has not a collecting-card for the Home please apply for one? Send a postcard to the secretary, 31, Wilson-road, London, S.E.

THE sum of £67 was realised by a performance, under the auspices of the National Sunday League, at the Tottenham Palace on Sunday week, in aid of the sufferers by the Tottenham outrage. The Police Band gave their services, and a number of artists did yeoman service, under the direction of Mr. T. S. Mayne, the popular resident-manager. Captain Cutler (Harry Vaux) has given his salary to the same good cause, and the amount realised by this self-sacrifice and the copies of his policeman's song sold in the house, have realised £25 for same good cause.

ON behalf of the Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (secretary) begs most gratefully to acknowledge the following gifts:—Sir William Treloar, £2; Mrs. Elinor Rogers, 5s.; Mrs. Lewis Levey, 4s.; Mr. Dives, 2s. (for little Willie Valesco, Sir W. Treloar sending a hamper to the same crippled boy); Mr. Fred Baugh, 2s. 6d. (through Miss Emma Don); Miss E. Don, 5s. (collected); Mrs. Hole, parcel of clothing; Mrs. George Smythson, parcel of clothing; Miss Mabel Osborne "Barnes," parcel of clothing; Miss Lottie Albert, clothing; Mr. J. Kohn, clothing.

MR. HARRY LISTON writes:—"I notice in your remarks anent Mr. Maurice de Frece's testimonial in your last issue you say: 'Harry Liston is still in the land of the living, and giving his mimetic entertainment on tour with his wife, Miss Lumley.' Will you please make it publicly known that Miss Lumley is not my wife."

THE name of Vasco, "mad musician," is well "postered" in Brighton, where his success has been so great at the Hippodrome that Mr. Barrasford has got out special bills. Vasco opens in Paris on Monday at Barrasford's Alhambra.

TENDERS are invited by the Borough of Plymouth for the use, during the summer season, 1909, of the bandstand on the Hoe, when not required by the Corporation Bands. Tenders to be delivered by noon on March 16 to Mr. J. H. Ellis, Town Clerk, Municipal-buildings, Plymouth.

MISS MAUDE MAY MURRAY for her last performance at the Opera House, Middlesbrough, on Saturday last, produced a new electrical dance with most wonderful effects. Her success has been so great that Mr. Constant, after the fall of the curtain, made Miss Murray the offer to return to Middlesbrough next Christmas.

MISS ANNIE BRADDAN, the Manx girl, will be heard at the Canterbury next week in a new song which will appeal to every sportsman in the theatre. It puts the pertinent query: "Why can't we back our opinion?" and, sung in the way Miss Braddan has tanght us to expect, should at once be a most successful number

MR. GRAHAME HERINGTON is shortly introducing a novel entertainment to the music hall stage in the form of a burlesque of a Beach Pierrot show, written and composed by Lawrence Hanray. It will be produced at a matinée given on Tuesday next at the Rehearsal Theatre. Miss Dorothy Payn heads the list of artists engaged.

MISS DECIMA MOORE will recite on Monday at the Tivoli an original poem by Miss Ethel M. de Fonblanque, entitled "A Call to Arms." This is an appeal to the women of England and to their influence over the men to secure the necessary defenders of their native land. It may be remembered that the same gifted authoress composed a poem, entitled "The Women of England," which was recited during the late war by Mrs. Patrick Campbell and Mrs. Langtry with great success.

THE ordinary meeting of the Empire Palace, Ltd., was held at the Empire Theatre, Leicester-square, W.C., on the 19th inst. Mr. Frederick Hurdle presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, stated that the item of advertising was higher, but that expenditure had been fully justified. Their receipts for the year were £6,000 higher than those for the previous period, and this in itself was evidence that the entertainment they provided was popular.

THE directors proposed to pay a dividend for the year of 3s. on each 15s. paid share and of 2s. on each 10s. paid share respectively, this being at the rate of 20 per cent. per annum. The Debenture debt had been reduced by £1,000, and this would continue to be an annual charge.

THE dividends had been progressing satisfactorily for the last four years. In 1905 the dividend declared was 5 per cent., in 1906 it was 13 per cent., in 1907 16 per cent., and in 1908 20 per cent. He hoped that this state of progress would continue; at any rate, they were certainly not going back.

THE following are the latest prices of music-hall shares:—Alhambra, 1⅜; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅜; Empire (10s. paid), 1½; London Pavilion Ord., 3⅜; London Pavilion Pref., 5; Metropolitan, ⅝; Moss' Empires, 5⅜; Moss' Empires 5 per cent. Pref., 4⅛; Oxford, 6½; Palace, 1; Tivoli, 5⅞; United Varieties, 1; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 9-16.

MR. RICHARD THORNTON, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, a director of Moss' Empires, Ltd., and managing-director of the South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd., and the Sunderland Empire Palace, Ltd., has been negotiating for some time past for the purchase of a site to build a first-class variety theatre in West Hartlepool. Recently he was able to secure options over a number of properties with a frontage in Lynn-street, which is the principal street in West Hartlepool, and within easy distance of the railway station. Here he intends building a new amusement house on the most up-to-date lines, the plan adopted being much the same as the Empires at South Shields and Sunderland.

THE principal entrance from Lynn-street will have two flights of steps into the inner hall, from which the audience will proceed over a bridge leading over the back street into the grand saloon, instead of having to wait in the street.

NEARLY 2,000 people will be accommodated. The entrance to the pit will be by the side street, where a waiting hall is also to be provided. The site is 270ft. in depth, with a stage 40ft. deep and 32ft. opening. The building will be constructed of fireproof materials, and on the cantilever principle.

THE plans, which have been prepared by Mr. W. T. R. Milburn, of Sunderland, were unanimously approved of in committee on Monday night, the 22nd, but have yet to be passed by a general council meeting of the Corporation. Mr. Harry Barker, of the North Eastern Hotel, is appointed clerk of the works. The theatre will be run in conjunction with the Empires at Sunderland and South Shields.

MR. LUSH, K.C., on Thursday, asked for judgment on the verdict of the jury given on the previous day in the action of the United County Theatres, Ltd., against certain trades union officials who were sued for libel. The jury had awarded plaintiffs £500 damages. Mr. Lush also asked for a continuation of the injunction previously granted. Mr. Roskill, K.C., for the defendants, said that after what Mr. Justice Lawrance had stated, defendants must take the case further, and he asked for a stay of execution. His lordship complied with Mr. Lush's application, and granted a stay of execution.

ON Saturday night last, during the interval in the pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Byker, Newcastle-on-Tyne, all the principals of Dottridge and Longden's Dick Whittington pantomime company went in front of the house, and collected, in aid of the West Durham Colliery Disaster Fund. The total amount received was £11 15s. 7d., for which the following ladies and gentlemen are responsible:—Miss Florrie Gallimore, Miss Rose Tilley, and Miss Josie Delaine, Messrs. H. O. Wells, J. Mackenzie, and A. Clegg, and the Herald Comedy Four.

"WRINKLES ON THE RINK," a skating skit, by Roy Redgrave and Harry Roxbury, music by Dudley Powell, was produced (for copyright) at the Hippodrome, Paisley, on Saturday, Feb. 20. The cast included:—General D. Zaster (of the American Army), Mr. Fred Acton; Ethel Hoo Zaster (his daughter), Miss Maud Prenton; Charles Y. Derwake (an American inventor), Mr. George Castrey; Professor Hyam Itt (a professional skater), Mr. J. W. Gallagher; Manager of the Hotel, Mr. Fred Guinness; and Willie Wrinkles, Mr. Harry Roxbury.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS

MR. REUBEN MORE'S latest composition, "I loved you then, I love you yet," has been accepted for immediate production by Mr. Dave Carter, who is sanguine of its proving another "Love me and the world is mine."

MISS OUIDA MACDERMOTT has been recently singing the new patriotic song, "Bravo, Territorials! (Gallant Teddy Boys)," by Charles Wilmott and Hermann E. Darewski, who have just been honoured by His Majesty King Edward accepting a copy of the number. Miss Macdermott sings the song excellently, and the local Press admiringly stated that "the mantle of her father has descended upon a clever daughter." Messrs. Francis and Day are the publishers.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY'S fine "Songe d'Automne" waltz, by Archibald Joyce, continues to grow in popularity by leaps and bounds, and the publishers were informed that a few nights since, at a county ball at Chipping Sodbury, Bandmaster Sidney Jones, of the 6th Battalion Gloucestershire Regiment, had included it in the programme, and so instantaneous was its success that it had to be repeated no fewer than four times during the evening, and at the conclusion of the dancing some ladies borrowed the piano part, and played it for the company to dance to again! Mr. Leonard Bellamy, of Messrs. Francis and Day's orchestral department, reports a great demand for band parts of the work.

THE Arpeggio Football Club (Messrs. Francis and Day) this (Saturday) afternoon play their first match on their own ground at Golder's Green, captained by Mr. William Francis. Their opponents are West Central United.

MISS KITTY RAYBURN, who has been out of the Bedford bill a couple of nights owing to a severe cold, and who thinks of resting for a fortnight, has just secured a new song by Bennett Scott, and one by T. F. Robson and Donovan Meher. On Monday and Thursday evenings, the enormous houses joined in Miss Rayburn's songs, "It seems to make the sun shine brighter" and "Won't you come to me in Canada?" with the utmost zest, and much disappointment was evinced on the nights she was unable to appear.

MESSRS. FRANCIS AND DAY have in the Press a new two-step, entitled "Mickey's birthday." It is by Archibald Joyce, and is said to be of so rollicking and joyous a nature that even the musicians have an almost irresistible desire to get up and dance.

MISS MAIDIE SCOTT has thought out some clever, original "business" for her forthcoming song, "The great invasion play," which will be produced almost immediately. The engravers have the song in hand, and it will be shortly issued by Messrs. Francis and Day.

MESSRS. B. FELDMAN AND CO. are the publishers of two new Devonshire songs. One, entitled "You're the apple of my eye," is from the pen of Fred Godfrey and John Neat, and the other, "Nancy," is by Ballard Macdonald and Jas. W. Tate. Much will be heard of both these excellent choruses in the near future.

"SMILE, SMILE, SMILE," by Fred Murray and Chas. Collins, is a song in Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.'s catalogue that promises to be a pronounced stage success. The moral is one that the public love, and the chorus will shortly be heard whistled all over the town.

MISS DAISY DORMER will shortly produce two new songs, "Mary, my factory fairy," by Murphy and Liptin, and "My boy's a sailor-man," by Mills and Scott. This dainty artist has also secured the sole singing rights (from Francis, Day, and Hunter) of the latest American craze, "Are you sincere?" which she will produce at the Empire, Leeds.

ALF. ELLERTON and Alf. Ellerton, jun., are responsible for five of the most successful numbers in this week's London Pavilion programme, viz., T. E. Dunville's "Hamlet," "The Difference"; Little Tich's "King KI," "The Policeman"; and also "Keep a-whistling," sung by Arthur Melrose, by kind permission of Miss Queenie Leighton.

MESSRS. SHEARD AND CO. inform us that they will shortly publish a new patriotic song from the pen of Mr. Clifton Bingham, entitled "Stand to your guns!" It is a most inspiriting song, not for the moment only, but for all time. The music, by Edward St. Quentin, is in march time, with a bold and decisive melody that impresses itself on the mind. The refrain runs:—

Stand to your guns!
Though not as yet,
When comes the warning,
Lest you forget,
John Bull, you should be ready.
Say to your sons,
"Great Britain needs you;
Stand to your guns!"

MAJOR DU MAURIER'S highly successful patriotic play, An Englishman's Home, has inspired more than one song-writer with a theme. Mr. Frank Stanley Smith's "The Home of an Englishman" is the production of a Briton, and breathes the true patriotic sentiment both in music and words. This is also published by Charles Sheard and Co.

CHARLES SHEARD AND CO. have secured Leo Mansfield's song, "Why can't we back our opinion?" a song written in defence of our national freedom in matters of sport. It is published, under the auspices of the Amalgamated Sports Committee and of the leading sporting newspapers, in the hope that it may help to rouse the enthusiasm of all good sportsmen against the meddling of Parliamentary faddists.

MISS TRULY SHATTUCK has introduced the latest American ballad success, entitled "To the end of the world with you," to the Drury-lane pantomime. When we say that the song is the joint work of the author and composer of "Love me and the world is mine," and up to the present has even been more successful than that popular song, it is proof positive of its merit.

M. WITMARK AND SONS have just published a tuneful Irish chorus, written by Mr. Harry Staunton, and composed by Mr. Maurice Scott. It is now being sung in the provincial music halls by Mr. Pat Rafferty, and will shortly be heard in London.

Two charming duets, published by M. Witmark and Sons, are now being sung in Robert Courtneidge's Adelphi pantomime Cinderella. Miss Phyllis Dare and Mr. Stephen Adeson introduce "I could learn to love you when you smile, smile, smile," and the sprightly and vivacious Miss Mabel Russell and Mr. Fred Leslie extract laughter and applause for their quaint rendition of "The doggie in the yard." Both of these numbers should be in great demand by summer entertainers.

MR. JULIAN RUTT has been appointed musical director of the Palace, Brighton, and commences his duties there on March 22.

LA FLORIDOS, the Spanish dancers who are appearing at the Palace Theatre, danced before the Prince and Princess of Wales at the dinner party given by Lord and Lady Iveagh on Tuesday night.

"OUR HOME DEFENDERS."

Military Episode, by Cayley Calvert, Produced at the Palace, East Ham, on Monday, Feb. 22.

John Bell .....MR. ARTHUR ESTCOURT
Jimmy Bell .....MR. ALFRED BENNETT
Arthur Preston .....MR. HORACE HUNTER
Lieut. Altkoff .....MR. CECIL DE GUE
Emily .....MISS OLIVE PALMER
Bella .....MISS DENNIS DUNCAN

The great success of An Englishman's Home at Wyndham's Theatre was sure to create a demand for playlets dealing with a similar subject at the variety theatres, and the fertile pen of Mr. Cayley Calvert has been employed in the writing of an interesting and exciting sketch, which met with a very cordial reception on its first performance at the East Ham Palace on Monday. The first scene of Our Home Defenders takes place in the sitting-room of Radnorth, the home of John Bell, a prosperous British manufacturer. He is expected home to tea every minute by his daughter Emily, and soon comes on the scene accompanied by his supposed friend, Lieut. Altkoff, who has previously expressed his admiration for Emily, who is not at all enamoured of her father's acquaintance. He asks for some road maps Bell has in his possession, and these are handed him, and when her father is absent he renews his protestations of affection to Emily. When he has gone a much more welcome visitor arrives—Arthur Preston, an employee of Bell's, and evidently a suitor for the hand of his daughter. He is an enthusiastic Territorial, and when Bell's son Jimmy, a "tennis and golf Johnnie," comes on the scene, he paints in glowing colours the many advantages to be gained by joining the "home defenders." Jimmy, however, whose chief recreation appears to be watching football matches and reading sporting papers, only mocks him. The elder Bell does not much favour the idea, especially when Preston asks for three weeks' leave in the summer to do his training. While the khaki-clad hero is still endeavouring to gain another recruit in Jimmy, newspaper boys are heard outside, and the alarming news is soon spreading that England has been invaded by a foreign Power, whose troops are at that very moment marching through Essex. Arthur hastily departs to join his regiment, and in the next scene we see a party of the enemy, headed by Altkoff, who is, of course, a traitor, and has found the road maps very handy. Arthur and his comrades also put in a brief appearance. The final scene is again the home of John Bell, where the now thoroughly alarmed household are making amateurish attempts to defend the place against the invaders. Shots are heard outside, the walls are blown in, and Altkoff and his men effect an entrance. Bell and his son are made captive, and Altkoff expresses his determination of spending a little more time in Emily's company; but, of course, the gallant Territorials arrive in time to avert any bloodshed, and Preston makes Altkoff his prisoner. The sketch was excellently enacted throughout, Mr. Horace Hunter making a manly and convincing Arthur Preston, and delivering his many telling lines with much earnestness and power. Mr. Arthur Estcourt as the easy-going John Bell contributed an admirable portrayal throughout; Mr. Alfred Bennet contrived to be amusing as the football enthusiast, Jimmy; Mr. Cecil du Gue left no doubt as to the sinister nature of Lieut. Altkoff; Miss Olive Palmer was a refined and natural representative of Emily; and Miss Dennis Duncan was efficient as Bella. The sketch was excellently mounted, the scene where the house is wrecked being cleverly managed.

Another novelty in Mr. Henri Gros's entertaining programme is an original sketch, The Silent Sentinel, an impressive, if somewhat gloomy, trifle, for which Mr. Charles Worland's company is responsible. When the curtain rises we learn that a doctor has been having a consultation with a patient, a sculptor, and has declared that he has but a month or so to live. The verdict very naturally distresses the sculptor, who has had a hard struggle since he was a boy, and now that fame and fortune are within his grasp, he is to be taken off in the prime of life. His wife, who has been his devoted and loving helpmate in all his struggles, must now know the terrible truth, and he goes out to tell her. When he has left the doctor makes it evident that he is slowly killing his patient, apparently because he loves his—the sculptor's—wife. He puts poison in his medicine, and when the wife comes in the room, declares his passion for her. His protestations of affection are, of course, indignantly spurned by the sorrowful wife, but he announces his intention of coming back for his final answer at midnight. The sculptor overhears the latter part of the conversation, and determines that he, too, will be on the scene. He also discovers the poisoned physic, and thus learns for the first time why his days are numbered. He has all but completed a statue—his masterpiece—a figure he calls "the silent sentinel." If he should die before his wife he has declared that his soul will enter the statue and watch over her. It is behind the curtains that conceal this figure that he decides to hide, and when midnight arrives, the wife comes in, and the doctor also stealthily enters. Her answer is that she will never marry him, no matter what may befall her husband, and when he endeavours to force his attentions upon her, she points a loaded pistol at him, and threatens to shoot him if he attempts to touch her. By a subterfuge he soon gains possession of the firearm, and proposes if he cannot have her love to kill her; but just as he is about to shoot the curtains are drawn aside, and a voice proceeds from the statue. The doctor, imagining that the sculptor is dead, and that his soul has entered the figure, drops lifeless to the ground from the shock, and husband and wife are reunited. The names of the characters and their interpreters are not given on the programme, but the trio responsible for its representation all enact their parts satisfactorily.

THE MIDNIGHT LONDON EXPRESS."

A Drama, in Three Scenes, Produced at the Bedford Music Hall, on Monday, Feb. 22.

Captain Jack Harlan ....MR. ERNEST OWTTRIM
Krimes .....MR. GEORGE HARVARD
Signalman .....MR. BRIEN MCCULLOUGH
Betty Martin .....MISS DENISE ZALESKI
Laura Deene .....MISS EDITH LEWIS

This thrilling sketch which Mr. Brien McCullough and company presented at the Bedford on Monday is certain to make a big success, for it is full of the most exciting incidents, and the final scene of the express train is a veritable triumph for the producer and scenic artist.

The story circles round Laura Deene, who is engaged to Captain Harlan, and we learn that Laura is only the adopted daughter of her so-called parents, they having adopted her as a waif, as she resembled a child of their own who was kidnapped. Krimes, a gentleman whose name well describes his calling, originally kidnapped the Deenes' child, and Laura is, unknown to them, their own child. Krimes again tries to kidnap Laura, and once again succeeds, but by the aid of Betty Martin, a little maid-of-all-work, succeeds in escaping from Krimes' clutches. Laura reaches the railway, and the signalman gives her shelter in his box for the night. Harlan is searching for Laura, and Krimes finds him, and, overpowering him, ties him to the rails, over which the midnight express is just due to pass. Laura looks from the signal-box and discovers this villainous plot just in time, places the signals at danger, and, breaking her way out from the signal-box, strikes Krimes down and releases Harlan just as the engine of the express emerges from the tunnel. It is an exciting moment, and elicited terrific applause.

Mr. Ernest Owttrim gave a capital portrait of Harlan, which he played in a very manly fashion, and Miss Edith Lewis presented a charming portrayal of Laura. The Krimes of Mr. George Harvard was a clever piece of work, and full of much grim humour. Mr. Brien McCullough contents himself with the small part of the signalman, but he acts the rôle in a very finished manner, and materially adds to the success of the piece. Miss Denise Zaleski was admirable as Betty Martin.

MR. SYD HERMAN is producing shortly a Hebrew domestic chorus song scena, by Mr. Eric Graham.

MR. THEODORE NEWMAN, the original "American Kandy Boy," and Connie, "The English Mascot," have been presenting this week a singing and dancing act which shows considerable originality in its inception. It has met with considerable success at the Palace, Watford. Mr. Newman, we should add, is Mr. Reed Pinaud, jun., and therefore comes from the right stock.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

COVENTRY EMPIRE, COVENTRY.

NOTICE TO ARTISTS booked through Moss' Empires, Ltd., and associated properties, who hold engagements subsequent to and including May 3rd, 1909.

"In pursuance of Clause 14 of contracts to appear at this Theatre, notice is hereby given that as the establishment is no longer associated with the Company, your services for the dates you hold will not be required, and that the contracts are absolutely determined."

OSWALD STOLL.

BENEFIT TO SISTERS PRIMROSE.

A matinée on behalf of the Sisters Primrose Fund, of which Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, of The Era, is hon. treasurer (this sad case has been fully placed before our readers in these columns), took place on Thursday afternoon at the Surrey Theatre, and was extremely well attended. Mr. Joe Elvin was the prime mover in arranging matters in connection with the performance, and Mr. Frank Macnaghten and his syndicate, who had already given £100 to the fund started by Mr. Elvin, had kindly granted the free use of his theatre for the afternoon. Amongst the prominent people connected with the variety profession who were present were Mr. Frederic Baugh, the London Manager for the Macnaghten Circuit, who, with Mr. Roy Cochrane, the manager of the Surrey, looked after the front of the house; Mr. Jack Somers (Somers and Warner), Mr. Harry Bawn, Miss Melinda May (secretary Music Hall Ladies' Guild), Mr. Ben Woodger (secretary Music Hall Home) Messrs. T. C. Callaghan and C. Douglas Stuart (representing the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund), Mr. Fred Durham and Mrs. Durham, Mr. J. Johnson, Mr. Joe Lavender, Miss Attie Lauta, Miss Lil Elfreda, and "Papa" Brown, who undertook the onerous duties of stage-manager.

The entertainment provided was as varied as it was interesting. Mr. Joe Elvin amused the house in the sketch Any More Orders? and Mr. Eugene Stratton enchanted his hearers with the song "The Idler." Mr. Harry Anderson won loud applause for his ditty 'Cock of the roost," and Mr. Morny Cash told in his quaint style the story of the countryman who had just arrived in London. Miss Fanny Robina delighted the audience and won their entire sympathy by a very pleasing rendering of the song "Baby is the king of the castle," the chorus of which Miss Florrie Cooper sang from a position in the gallery. Miss Cooper also appeared before the footlights and gave a most tuneful rendering of her own special number. Others who contributed to the programme were My Fancy, Don Juan à Calcedo, Cruikshank, the Boy Scouts, Percy Dalton, Tom E. Conover, Gladys Goodwin, Will Gordon, the Maples, Fred Richard's company, Nellie Dalwood, Camilla Feo, Dolly Joyce, the Emson Girls, the Lombards, McKie and McKay, Stevens and Gilland, Gracie Hunt, Bell and Dance, Bowman and Morton, the Four Lovebirds, and Miss Florence Worth.

We are informed that the amount realised, including certain donations from sundry agents, will total about £60, the balance of £40 being made up by the Surrey Vaudeville Syndicate, Ltd., and Mr. Frank Macnaghten. It should be recorded that while Mr. Joe Elvin spoke on behalf of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, yet he was the organiser of the entire benefit and managed all the arrangements at no little expense and trouble; and he deserves most cordial thanks from the profession for this added proof of his charitableness and generosity.

During the afternoon Mr. Joe Elvin came before the curtain and made an admirable little speech, sympathetic and right to the point. He first, on behalf of the committee of the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, thanked the audience for their attendance, the artists who appeared for their kindness—several, he mentioned, including T. E. Dunville, were unable to appear owing to illness and the severe weather—and the different music-hall societies for their assistance. Mr. Elvin then told his hearers the sad story of the Primroses, otherwise known as the Sisters Worth, recalling the lamentable fact that Edith had on that very stage, by the fall of the curtain upon her, sustained severe injuries, and with a fractured spine would never be able to appear again before the footlights. He had appealed to the profession, who had liberally responded, and the directors of the Surrey and Mr. Macnaghten had, with great generosity, given £100 and the house for this benefit, guaranteeing that the proceeds should not be less than £100. "Our Joe" then said that Miss Edith Worth would like to thank the audience as well as she could, and he would introduce her to them. Thereupon the act-drop was raised, and lying on an invalid couch was the unfortunate young girl, who kissed her hands to her friends in front, and with a hopeful cheery word Mr. Elvin shook hands with her. It was a pitiful scene, and touched the hearts of all present, as was evidenced by the amount of the collection obtained afterwards—£4 10s. 8½d.

HORACE WHEATLEY AT BOLTON.

The Chronicle, Feb. 23.

THE HIPPODROME, BOLTON.

There were good attendances at this hall of amusement on Monday, when a capital programme was presented. Horace Wheatley, the genial Irish comedian, of "Harrigan" fame, is "top turn," and he had the audience roaring at his patter, which, along with his Irish songs, won golden opinions, and received well-merited applause.

Evening News.

The programme submitted at the Hippodrome, which includes several good turns, should attract large audiences during the week. At the head of the bill is the Irish comedian, Horace Wheatley, who patters and sings his songs in quaint style. His song "Harrigan" has lost none of its popularity, and he received the favours of the audience at the close of his turn.

A NOVEL exhibition is to be held shortly in the Jardin d'Acclimatation in the Bois de Boulogne, where 300 dwarfs from all parts of the world are to be brought together in April. The pigmies are to be housed in tiny huts on the lawns, and they will drive about in twenty-seven gala carriages.

MISS MAUD ALLAN ON DANCING.

At the Criterion last Sunday Miss Maud Allan lectured to the members of the O.P. Club on "Classical Dancing." The chair was occupied by Mr. T. M'Donald Rendle.

Miss Allan, who was warmly received, in speaking of the attainable ideal in dancing, observed that by dancing she meant natural dancing, not the torturing and tortured contortions of the schools, but the movements evoked by, and which sought to give expression to, the imperious commands of one's own nature—movements which interpreted the force, and even the philosophy, of our own individual emotions. In such movements the body flew to meet the thoughts of the soul, and sought to give them interpretation in the insistent eloquence of unconsidered gesture. What was the corollary? Why, just this. If the emotions were impure, the dance would be impure; if they were artificial, the dance would be artificial; and if they were noble and sweet, the dance would be noble and sweet beyond all powers of description.

Dancing was a spontaneous art; revealing, perhaps more than any other, the temperament of the dancer. Without that undefinable quality, which was called temperament, the dance was meaningless. They must not think that she was decrying, or making little of, practice and technique. They were, of course, essential, but they must be subordinated. They knew the story of Dr. Johnson and the eminent violinist, during whose performance he tried to converse with Mrs. Thrale. "You must not talk," said she, "this is exceedingly difficult." "Difficult, madame!" replied the great lexicographer, "I wish it were impossible!" The modern ballet had swamped and destroyed natural dancing.

Greek dancers danced, but not to an audience. The moment that even Greek dances were transferred to the confining limits and polluted atmosphere of the theatre they became deformed, profaned, unrecognisable. Ballet at its highest stamped with its pathetic wickedness the decadence of nations. The human body was the most beautiful of all instruments. It responded perfectly and instantaneously to the impulses of the soul, and by its very readiness to respond, was the more easily strained and put out of tune. But when one spoke of the art of dancing he found himself checked, circumscribed as it were, by the phrase itself, for the word art seemed to be inseparable from artificiality.

The moment a dancer was conscious of the audience, he had fallen away from his text. The dance ceased to be the spontaneous expression of the spiritual state. No one would hesitate in agreeing that the natural dance expressed the highest and most perfect ideals. Now those conditions threw a tremendous, a terrifying responsibility upon the dancer. Natural dancing should be primarily capable of expressing only what was healthful and beautiful, not in the application of gymnastics to theatrical effect. Everything pointed to-day to the fact, and she was reverently proud to find herself in a position to say, that they were returning to the religious ideal; they were returning, she hoped and believed, to the ideal of the Greeks. Let them foster that ambition, let them once more cultivate the beauty of movement and dedicate the results to the service of beauty and of truth, which were one. This ideal was, in her opinion, not unattainable.

In the course of a discussion, Mr. M. Pigott congratulated Miss Allan on a charming paper, and a most delightfully-delivered address. It was the most convincing argument in favour of the Suffragette movement they had ever heard.

Mr. A. Robbins, after complimenting Miss Allan, reminded the audience that our kings, including Bluff King Hal and the melancholy Charles I., were exponents of the dance, and he commended the paper and Miss Allan's admonition to the young men of modern times.

Mr. Arthur Diosy, speaking from his experience in the farthest East, agreed with the ideal drawn by Miss Allan of dancing. Dancing in this country had come to be practised in couples. The roasting-jack conception, comprised in the waltz, was the sum of the modern conception of the art. But in the East dancing was performed singly and in consonance with the ideal picture which had been drawn for them by their fair lecturer.

Mr. Sidney Dark congratulated Miss Allan on having given a reason for the spirit that was within her. The supreme artist rose above technique, and this was the case with Miss Maud Allan. She had widened the possibilities of the dancing art, and in that sense had done a great service to her sex.

MASONS AT WORK.

An extra emergency meeting of the members of the Chelsea Lodge, No. 3,098, was held on the 19th inst. at the usual meeting place, the Town Hall, King's-road, Chelsea. In the absence of the reigning Master, Mr. Harry Coutts, who was engaged professionally at Gloucester, the chair was occupied by Mr. Herbert Chenery, who initiated Messrs. Ernest Dillon, John Jackson, and James Jackson into the mysteries and privileges of Ancient Freemasonry, and advanced Messrs. Herbert La Martine, W. T. Ellwanger, W. Ward, and Ed. E. Ford. Mr. Chenery then retired from the chair in favour of Mr. James W. Mathews, the first Master of the lodge, who had been prevented from attending earlier, and that gentleman completed the ceremonies necessary for the enjoyment by Messrs. Ernie Warsaw, Chas. R. Whittle, and Bertie Ralland of the full privileges of the Order. This being the first meeting of the lodge since the death of Mr. Edward Swanborough, the first Past Master, the lodge was in full Masonic mourning, and during the afternoon a memorial service was held, at which Mr. James W. Mathews president, assisted by Mr. Angelo Asher, the Organist of the lodge, at the organ. The tender and affectionate words used by the President, combined with the beautiful rendering of the "Dead March" by the Organist, created a most profound impression upon all assembled. The various offices were filled by Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon (treasurer) as acting I.P.M., Mr. W. H. Atlas, acting S.W., Harry Bawn, J.W., C. J. Doughty (secretary), W., F. K. Walton, S.D., G. H. Dyball, J.D., Douglas White, I.G., Angelo Asher, Organist, E. T. R. Lester and A. E. Nickin, Stewards, and J. H. MacNaghton, Tyler; and the following members attended:—Messrs. Fred Neiman, Leo Tell, Harry Gala, J. Grant, J. W. Ellison, J. B. Helm, Victor Kelly, Geo. Gilbey, W. Permane, W. T. Ellwanger, R. E. Wilding, Harry Kato, Will Stone, Clive Watts, Herbert Austin, Willie Benn, Harry Mason, Andie Cane, Albert Christian, B. J. Whiteley, &c.; and as visitors Messrs. G. H. Smythson (Asaph Lodge), Bernard Cohen (Skelmersdale), D. M. Trytal (Prince Frederick William), D. Swabbe (Borough of Hackney), and J. J. Knowles (Tynewald). At the conclusion of the business the members of the lodge and the visitors adjourned to the Six Bells Hotel, where dinner was served, and as it is a rule of this lodge that speeches should be limited and as brief as possible, a pleasant hour was spent in mirth and song, many of the members proving themselves no mean raconteurs.

Mr. Johnson Clark, a remarkably clever ventriloquist who is doing excellently wherever he appears in the country, will shortly display his abilities in town. His business arrangements are in the hands of Messrs. George and Fred Peel.

Patrons of Olympia will learn with regret that Messrs. Crawford and Wilkins have been unable to arrange for an extension of the lease of Olympia beyond March 6. Consequently the rink will definitely close at the end of next week.

"THE PRICE OF A GIRL."

Rev. James Palmer .....Mr. J. H. Clyndes
Lettie Palmer .....Miss G. Le Sage
Lady Castle .....Miss Hilda Wright
Frank Hailston .....Mr. Arthur Craighe
Hugh Wigman .....Mr. Van Courtland
Polly Clay .....Miss Polly Emery

It is, perhaps, fortunate for them that the names of the gentlemen concerned in this dramatic concoction are not revealed on the programme. Certainly there are points throughout the play that appeal strongly to the pit and gallery, but these moments hardly compensate for the prevailing dullness of the whole thing. Apart from the lack of an interesting story, there is no real grip or "grit" in the dialogue, and what situations exist are worked up to in a crude manner. We do not mean for a moment to hint that there is any flagrant lack of dramatic feeling, but the impression conveyed is that the piece has been written with the best intentions of carrying out a good idea in too great a hurry. Haste, amounting almost to slovenliness, is to be observed both in construction and dialogue. The germ—the idea—is distinctly good, and with infinite pains might have been worked up into an effective four- or five-act drama; but in his effort to compress the same notion into four scenes the anonymous author has overreached the mark and lamentably fallen on the other side.

The tale, as it is told, concerns the tribulations of Lettie Palmer, a pretty and innocent girl, who is besieged by the iniquitous proposals of a couple of scoundrels—at least they look like scoundrels, although one is supposed to be virtuous—who want to pay a price for her honour so as to relieve her of a debt of £125, incurred in some mysterious manner. How the machinations of the villain are defeated by the astuteness of the staunch friend in the person of Polly Clay, a workgirl, capitally played by Miss Polly Emery, hardly need to be described to those initiated in the ways and byways of melodrama. And as all's well that ends well, it is almost supererogatory to remark that in the end the girl is not required to make any sacrifice.

The play is, for the most part, capitally acted. Mr. J. H. Clyndes is impressive as the Rev. James Palmer, although his perpetual appeals to the Deity might be toned down to the advantage of decorum. The two young men are well acted by Mr. Arthur Craighe and Mr. Van Courtland; Miss Hilda Wright is a stately Lady Castle, delivering her lines with great emphasis. Miss G. Le Sage is a perfect bundle of pretty nerves as the girl on whom a price is placed, acting with an amount of tension that exactly suits the character. But highest honours must be accorded to Miss Polly Emery for her rendering of the workgirl, Polly Clay. This is a character-sketch of rare merit, and thoroughly deserves the plaudits that greeted her every appearance. There is a large crowd of workpeople, villagers, and so forth, who have been well drilled. The sketch is well put on the stage, scenery, accessories, and costumes being all excellent of their kind. When The Price of a Girl has been pulled together a bit, and the performers settle down to their parts, there is no reason why it should not develop into a big success.

MUSICIANS AND TRADE UNIONS.

In the King's Bench Division, on Wednesday, before Mr. Justice Lawrance and a special jury, was concluded the action brought by the United County Theatres (Limited), for libel by certain trade union officials. The defendants were Mr. William Durrant, secretary of the Amalgamated Musicians' Union at Bristol; Mr. J. B. Williams, the general secretary of that union; Mr. A. A. Sennington and Mr. John Curle, members of the Bristol Trades Council; and Mr. Frank Jenkins, printer.

The libel was contained in two circulars, which urged trade unionists to boycott the plaintiffs' music-hall at Bristol. Untrue statements were said to have been made in those circulars respecting music-halls belonging to plaintiffs at both Bristol and Plymouth. The printed matter complained of was issued after plaintiffs had declined to allow the defendants to dictate as to the rate of wages that should be paid to the members of the orchestra at Bristol. When the dispute was settled without the union being consulted, that body expelled all but two of the musicians from membership.

The defendants denied that the statements complained of were defamatory. They said they were true in substance and in fact; that the occasion was privileged; and, further, they pleaded the Trades Disputes Act, 1906.

His Lordship said, by sending the circulars to other than trade unions the defendants had given up any right they might have had to the claim of privilege.

The jury found for the plaintiffs with £500 damages.

Niagara and Falls arrived in Manchester on Feb. 7, and made their first appearance at the Empire, Ashton, on Feb. 15.

Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton contemplate erecting in Chester a thoroughly well-equipped and up-to-date roller skating rink.

Dunning and Kahn and Kahn, after a tour of five weeks, return to town to work the Gibbons' circuit, on which they will feature Miss Lily Kahn's thought transmission and magic.

Bella and Bijou's latest production, a duet entitled "The Skating Carnival," by Fred Murray and Charles Collins, is right up to date, and a big success.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring Gardens, Mr. R. A. Robinson (chairman) presiding.

SURREY THEATRE.

The Theatres and Music-halls Committee reported that they had considered drawings submitted by Mr. B. Crewe, showing alterations proposed to be made to the stage skylight at the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre, in order to comply with the Council's requirements. The committee recommended the approval of the arrangements shown in the two drawings submitted.

Agreed to.

HOXTON VARIETY THEATRE.

The committee reported they had considered a drawing submitted by Mr. B. Crewe, showing certain additional sanitary accommodation to be provided at the pit, balcony, and gallery levels, and in the stage basement at the Variety Theatre, Pitfield-street, Hoxton; and they recommended approval of the arrangements shown in the drawing, provided that certain specified requirements be complied with Adopted.

MR. REYNOLDS AND CINEMATOGRAPH FIRES.

The General Purposes Committee submitted a report with reference to the medical treatment of children attending the elementary schools, and they recommended that application be made for a Government grant for the cost incurred.

The Rev. Stewart Headlam moved that the recommendation be referred back to the committee, and this was seconded by Mr. Bray.

Mr. Walter Reynolds said he thought they were all agreed as to the necessity and desirability of the children's eyes, teeth, and ears being properly seen to, but he thought it was the duty of the Government to deal with the matter. He welcomed the debate, because it might induce the Government to move in the desired direction.

The Chairman said he could now allow Mr. Reynolds to discuss cinematograph accidents.

The amendment was, on a division, defeated, and the original motion carried.

The Miltons, skating comedians, this week finish a highly successful twelve weeks' pantomime with Mr. Harry Roxbury, who has re-engaged them for next year. Next week they are to be seen at the Surrey and Empire, Camberwell.

The pantomime company of Bliss and Bliss played a charity football match at Jarrow, in which Miss Ray Ford, principal girl, kicked off the first half, and Miss Ethel Dunford, principal boy, the second half. Bliss and Bliss received a letter from the Mayor of the town thanking them for the great help they had afforded to his fund.

"THE TERRITORIALS;
or, THE BOYS OF THE NEW BRIGADE."

Military Episode, by Fred Maxwell, Produced at the Empress, Brixton, on Monday, Feb. 22.

Lieutenant Fred Waring ..Mr. Fred Maxwell
Captain Fortescue .....Mr. Murray Yorke
Colonel Hamilton .....Mr. P. Barry Lewers
Charley Manley .....Mr. Fred Bailey
Billie .....Mr. Fred Darnton
Jess Hamilton .....Miss Lois Du Cane

Mr. Fred Maxwell, the prolific writer and producer of tabloid drama, in his "Territorial" sketch has written a playlet full of exciting situations and stirring lines, and the many expressions of approval it called forth from the large audience on the evening of its production augur well for its future success. England is supposed to be at war with Germany, and is apparently in a tight corner when the curtain rises. Colonel Hamilton, the officer in command, inquires for a certain Lieutenant Fred Waring, and learns that he has been placed under arrest by order of Captain Fortescue, who accuses him of treachery. The Colonel orders his release, and it transpires that it is really Fortescue who is the traitor. Waring had absented himself from camp, and cannot honourably explain his reason for doing so; but it is imperative that someone shall go to the aid of a Captain Jessop, who has been surrounded by the enemy, and Waring and a handful of "Terriers" are entrusted with the task. When Colonel Hamilton has departed the scoundrelly Fortescue purloins some papers from his tent, but is forced to give them up by the Colonel's daughter, Jess, a Red Cross nurse, with whom both Waring and Fortescue are in love. In the next scene, the old ruins by moonlight, we see a wounded British soldier refused a drink of water by one of the enemy, but he is eventually succoured by the timely arrival of Waring, who gives the callous scoundrel a severe hiding, magnanimously sparing his life, only to have his own attempted by the cowardly wretch a few minutes later. Charley Manley, a British soldier, and the bearer of an important despatch, next comes on the scene. He is mortally wounded, and Waring swears to deliver the despatch for him, although it looks like certain death, the enemy being strongly entrenched. Colonel Hamilton has been taken a prisoner, and the enemy threaten to take his life if Waring will not give up the papers. Hamilton signs to him not to do this, and is led out to be shot, and Jess and Waring are also in danger of being killed, when help arrives. One of the foreign officers, when relieved of his disguise, turns out to be Captain Fortescue. Eventually, of course, Waring accomplishes his dangerous mission, and the "Terriers" completely rout the enemy. Mr. Fred Maxwell makes a robust and convincing representative of Lieutenant Fred Waring, looking every inch a gallant Territorial, and delivering his many patriotic speeches very effectively. The scoundrelly Captain Fortescue is easily and efficiently undertaken by Mr. Murray Yorke; Mr. P. Barry Lewers contributes an excellent portraiture in every way of the brave Colonel Hamilton; and an impressive enactment of the mortally-wounded Charley Manley is submitted by Mr. Fred Bailey. That experienced and always interesting actress Miss Lois Du Cane has a part well within her powers in the plucky little nurse, Jess, and quickly became a favourite with the audience, her enactment throughout being very meritorious. The sketch was realistically and smartly staged, the encounter between the "Terriers" and their foes being adroitly managed.

THE DAYLIGHT SAVING BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—On Friday next the above will receive the attention of the House of Commons, and judging by the recommendations of the Special Commission and from the support accorded it by all conditions of industrial enterprises, it has every chance of appearing upon the Statute Book.

This measure will seriously affect all classes of the entertainment world—theatres of varieties as well as the drama houses, music-hall artists as well as actors—for this reason: the performance in music halls invariably commences at 6.50 (in some cases at 6.30), and owing to the attraction of fresh air and prolonged daylight, the first houses from May to August suffer heavily as money-making concerns. Now it is proposed to add another hour's daylight to the second house, with a consequent disadvantage to the places of indoor amusement.

Music-hall proprietors and shareholders will have to consider which will be the cheaper, to keep open throughout the summer, hoping to pull through successfully, or to reduce their loss to an absolute and certified minimum by closing down for "alterations and repairs."

The question requires the fullest and immediate attention of all who live by the entertainment world. The millions of money invested in our theatres and music halls have their living representatives, who surely have missed this Bill and its consequences. The workers also have all to lose by not being prepared with their objections. They have to pay their taxes, whether they work or not; why muddle along without an effort? You cannot all be pierrots.

This is a point on which proprietors and artists should be unanimous and oppose to the bitter end. I trust this letter will, by its publicity, be the means of having the desired effect in the right quarter.—Yours faithfully,

MONTE BAYLY.

Varieties, Leeds, Feb. 26.

MLLE. SAHARA.

In the King's Bench Division, on Wednesday, before Mr. Justice Hamilton, the action brought by Miss Violet Cadbury, music-hall dancer, against Mr. John P. Beardmore and Miss Violet Hope was concluded. The plaintiff asked for an injunction to restrain the defendants from the use of the name "Mlle. Sahara"; also for the return of dresses, scenery, properties, and music-score, or their value, and damages for the detention and conversion of the goods. She further claimed £8 10s. and £2 10s., as sums due to her from Beardmore, and an additional sum of £2, which he was alleged to have received to settle a debt due to a variety artists' agent. Mr. Vaughan Williams (instructed by Messrs. Smith, Rundell, and Dods) appeared for plaintiff, and Mr. Beardmore appeared in person.

In giving judgment, his lordship held that there was no partnership between the parties. He awarded plaintiff £30 damages for her dresses, £18 for the scenery, £3 for the snake, and £5 for the wigs. With regard to the music, she had had the score returned, and could have no damages for that. There was a further sum owing to plaintiff for £13, making a total of £69. In respect to the use of the name Sahara, and to cover the loss sustained by plaintiff through being prevented from getting engagements, he awarded £50 damages, making in all £119. The injunction against Beardmore would be perpetual. Miss Hope had delivered a defence, and had never withdrawn it, in which she claimed that plaintiff was not entitled to use the name Sahara, and defended her own use of it. He quite accepted Miss Hope's story that in this matter she had been little more than the puppet of Beardmore, who had told her that he would see her safe as to costs, and, rather to her annoyance, had dragged her into this action. There would be a perpetual injunction against Miss Hope, with costs, and judgment against Mr. Beardmore for £119, with costs, and a perpetual injunction.

SHILLING COLLECTION FOR THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

2,339 SHILLINGS.

In again directing the attention of our readers to The Era's Shilling Fund on behalf of the Music Hall Home we are in the happy position of being able to associate with the appeal thus being made the name of the foremost music hall comedienne—Miss Marie Lloyd. It seems scarcely necessary to remind our readers of the deep interest Miss Lloyd has ever taken in matters affecting the welfare of her brothers and sisters of the variety profession. It is her desire that her "year" will be marked by a considerable increase in the subscriptions of previous years, and she therefore, through The Era, commends the Music Hall Home to the charitably-minded. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the President of the Fund, is again this year exerting himself in its behalf, and this fact is sufficient indication that he is satisfied as to the way in which the institution is being conducted, and that he considers it worthy of support.

Mr. Ben Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, tells us that in 1907 the inmates averaged ten, but that in 1908 there have been as many as twelve. The address of the Home is 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, and there the matron (Mrs. Fruin) busies herself for the comfort and convenience of her "family." At present there are eleven of these, and the desire is to increase the number, which can only be done when sufficient funds for the purpose are collected. During the past twelve months three or four of the inmates have recovered their health and strength sufficiently to enable them to look for engagements. These secured, they left the Home, and the vacancies thereby created were immediately filled up. Now, this Home requires keeping up, and it cannot be kept up on air. There is no need for us to refer to all the good work which has been performed by the institution in the past, as that must for the most part be within the recollection of our readers. The ages of the inmates range from fifty to seventy-six. In all probability these men will be maintained in the Home until the day of their death, and their funeral expenses paid for out of the funds of the Home.

The Era's Shilling Fund is the main source of income to the Home, and this means of sustenance is added to by the donations of artists, either given directly, or through the collecting boxes through which many managers of variety theatres collect pennies from "dead-heads" and from artists who desire free admission.

Anyone can be supplied with a collecting-card by sending a postcard to Mr. Woodger.

Briefly, we may once more repeat that the objects of the Music Hall Home Fund are to provide shelter for deserving members of the variety profession who have been stricken with poverty or illness in their declining years, or who have in other ways fallen on evil times. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, will be pleased to receive filled-up collecting cards addressed to him at The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., and to acknowledge them in these columns.

Lynn Mart Pleasure Fair.

A second visit to the fair at the height of its glory on Saturday night at nine o'clock was a revelation to us of the constantly increasing attraction of our modern fairs, feasts, and wakes. The great market-square was the "Mecca" for the pleasure-seeking pilgrims of Lynn and Norfolk towns for miles around, the streets leading to the fair were thronged with people, the market-square and its immediate thoroughfares were packed with a typical British crowd, all on pleasure bent it is true, but so orderly, yet withal brimming over with good humour and comradeship.

No; the superficial observer who vainly imagine that pemanent shows are going to supplant portable ones, or that our fairs are decadent, cannot have seen such fairs as King's Lynn, or any one of the fairs that really count. It was a glorious kaleidoscopic scene of ever-varying colour and light, the triumph of the dynamo, the artistry, and the mechanics of showland. Here were showmen of whom England does well to be proud. Nothing second-rate, all of the very best, and the people, from the highest to the lowest, entered into and fully enjoyed the fun of the fair.

The Guild Chaplain at Work.

On Mart Sunday the Rev. T. Horne took part in the interesting ceremony of the dedication at the Parish Church of a beautiful memorial screen and chancel gates. The dedication office was taken by Bishop Harrison, Assistant Bishop of Ely, acting for the Bishop of Norwich.

In the afternoon the Guild service in Tuby and Sons' superb coliseum was a most gratifying success. The show was crowded; the showpeople attended in a body; the church choir, with cross bearer, the organist (who accompanied the hymns), the vicar, and assistant clergy, were present, and took part in the service.

The Guild Chaplain conducted the service and preached. In the evening the Guild Chaplain was the special preacher at the Parish Church. The rapidly-growing appreciation of this side of the Guild work is a matter of extreme importance and of the utmost gratification to the Chaplain.

Trial and Acquittal of the Cook Family.

We have placed before our readers from time to time the developments of the Coedpoeth riot, in which the Cooks (father and two sons were involved). We have held all along that the way in which the Press, with one or two notable exceptions (the Manchester and the Wrexham papers to wit), reported the riot was nothing less than a scandal, and highly prejudicial of the true purposes of justice. First of all, utterly misleading accounts of the extremely grave and serious occurrence were sent broadcast through the land. It was reported as "Gipsies fire upon the people." Then we had imaginary details "that the attack upon the gipsies was provoked because someone had climbed a greasy pole and had won a prize, and no prize was forthcoming." After a few days came another version, "Not gipsies, but showmen"—no a gipsy encampment but a pleasure fair or carnival on private land. In the meantime, the Cook family (and, in fact, all the unfortunate show people, were placed under arrest or police surveillance). Mr. P. Collins went down to Wrexham and, in conjunction with Mr. B. Mitchell, bailed out the accused, and now we have the trial at the Denbigh Assizes and the truth of the matter.

Innocent People Condemned Without Trial.

We drew attention at the time to the utterly misleading comments on the regrettable incident in leading articles in some few (we noted with relief) newspapers. One paper went so far as to cry aloud for special legislation against such dangerous classes as show people, and ranked them with aliens and as possible Anarchists. This sort of thing was absurd but when men are waiting trial on the serious charge of firing upon a crowd with intent to do grievous bodily harm it is manifestly unfair for newspapers, however obscure and insignificant they may be, to make such damaging statements.

The Rally of Showland to the Rescue.

The energetic action of the president of the Showmen's Guild and Mr. Mitchell in bailing out the Cooks was followed by collections at all the fairs and winter quarters (at Christmas) of showmen, and ample means were speedily available for all the purposes of a proper defence.

It must be said to the credit of the authorities and the police that every assistance and kindly consideration were given to the accused showmen; that at the magisterial investigation at Wrexham the Clerk to Magistrates expressed his opinion that the showmen had been provoked beyond human endurance, and that the police at Coedpoeth were not strong enough to protect the attacked showmen from the riotous mob. Although James Cook and his two sons, James and John, were committed to take their trial at Denbigh Assizes for unlawful wounding, it was manifest that, serious as the charge was, that mitigating circumstances were already admitted by the police.

Summary of the Evidence.

Mr. Ellis Griffith, M.P., was for the prosecution and Mr. Harrison for the defence. Plans and pictures were put in. Then James Edwards, milkman, Coedpoeth, said he let part of the field to the elder prisoner. Witness was on the showground when the four young men came on the scene. The show had then been shut for half an hour. Oliver Edwards climbed to the top of the gallery pole, and one of the prisoners told him to come down. Edwards persisted in a defiant attitude, and James Cook knocked him down. Edwards and his friends then went away, and threatened to bring a crowd. On witness's advice the prisoners put a lock on the gate. Witness went away at once, and did not hear any shooting.

There were stones and bricks lying about the field next morning, and there were signs of something having been burned there. Cook did not touch one of the young men until he had been angered. He heard one of the Cooks say "Fetch the guns."

Edward Oliver Edwards, collier, said that when he climbed the pole, James Cook ordered him to come down. When he reached the ground Cook struck him in the face, causing his nose and mouth to bleed. He left the ground with his friends, and on the way home he was met by a number of people, who asked him what was the matter? He was induced by the crowd which collected to go back with them. He went as far as the gate and then turned back, as his nose was bleeding. When about 40yds. away he heard firing, and was shot in the leg.

Cross-examined: When he first reached the showground the prisoners were friendly. He had had a number of drinks that day, but knew what he was doing. He admitted that he used a filthy expression to Cook, but Cook had first used it to him. Everyone in Coedpoeth was a friend of his, but he made no attempt to induce the crowd to give the Cooks a thrashing.

Other witnesses for the prosecution corroborated, but added no material facts.

The Cooks on their Own Defence.

James Cook, sen., said that on the night of the row the farmer who had let the land said to him, "They have got one of your men and they are killing him." The crowd was then at the gate, and had Hewitt, one of his assistants. Cook said, "Have a bit of sense. We have never done any hurt. Shake hands, and if there is anything wrong I will make it right in the morning by daylight." One of the crowd shouted, "Lynch him! Set him on fire!" They said something in Welsh, sang a kind of song, and then smashed the gate. He ran back to the van and shouted, "It is no use, we will have to do something. Give me one of the guns and run for the police." The crowd ran after him on to the field, the van being about 30yds. from the gate. His daughter-in-law, Betsy Cook, handed him a rifle, and he shot some shots up in the air quickly and on the ground to frighten them, and they ran back to the gate. At the gate they began throwing stones again. A man shouted out, "They are only blank shots. Let's go and lynch him and set him on fire." They were coming again, and he said, "The first who touches that gate I will shoot him in the leg. I will let you know whether they will hurt or not." There were seven children in the camp, one baby in arms being very ill. When the police came, a constable turned to the crowd and said something to them in Welsh. They replied in the same tongue, and the constable said, "They say if you will give me the gun and shoot all the cartridges out of it they will go home and come again in the morning." The rifle was then handed to the officer, who accompanied the prisoner into the van. Then the crowd flocked on to the field, pulled down the cocoanut-stall and the doll-stall, emptied the paraffin can upon them, and set them on fire. Altogether damage to the amount of £100 was done. A number of articles were stolen.

In cross-examination the prisoner said that he fired into the air or into the ground. He did not know that anybody was hit till afterwards. He was afraid of the crowd, and he only wished to keep them back. His two sons were looking round for the police.

The younger Cooks corroborated.

The Judge's Summing-up.

His lordship advised the jury that there was not sufficient evidence to justify their finding that John Cook did any shooting.

The jury then found that John Cook was not guilty, and he was discharged.

Mr. Harrison addressed the jury for the defence. He claimed sympathy for the Cooks, who had lost property valued at £100, their goods had been stolen, they had been imprisoned, had been put to the expense of a long Assize trial, and stood in danger of going to prison—all for doing what he ventured to think any of the jury would have done under the circumstances.

Mr. Ellis Griffith having addressed the jury for the prosecution,

The Judge, in summing up, said the main thing in Cook's mind was to keep the people out and to defend himself. The jury would be wise if they assumed that to be his intention, and then considered whether he was justified, or whether he was guilty of unlawful wounding. There was no suggestion of any ill-will between either prisoner or any of the showmen and any of the persons who were shot. There was evidence that Hewitt was maltreated, and if the crowd had got into the field what would they have done to the Cooks? If the crowd wanted to maul the Cooks, the latter were justified in defending themselves in some way. Did they do more than they ought to have done? Of course, the weapons they used were dangerous, but they were not so dangerous as military rifles or shot guns would have been.

The jury found the two prisoners not guilty.

Harringay Park Carnival Ground.

North London is well supplied by shows, &c., at the Green Lanes, N., fairground, also run by the enterprising London caterers, Messrs. S. and H. Forrest. Here are Wm. Wilson's grand aggregation from the World's Fair, the motor car set, and the big wheel; Walter Payne's superb palace of light and picture theatre, fine art gallery by Warwick, Shippobottom's No. 2 bicycle circus, and Carter's galloping horses. The throwing games, houp-la circles, and variety frames are those of Messrs. H. Pickard, T. and G. Bolesworth, J. Somerville, and Forrest's; Mrs. Andrews, with shooters; Mr. Manning, Mrs. Rawlins, and a fine range of swings by the lessees (Forrest Brothers).

Purchase's menagerie brings its Wood Green season to an end this week.

Preference to Guild Members.

The movement is growing to recognise members of the Showmen's Guild and to give them preference in setting out ground to tenants by the principal lessees. Amongst those who decided to give preference are Messrs. P. Collins, John Collins, George Green, T. Hurst, John Studt, H. Thurston and Sons, Jacob Studt, Charles Thurston, H. R. Hibbert, John Murphy, Wm. Murphy, Ben Howden. We ask for other names to add to this list.

Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union.

We call our readers' attention to the next gathering of the members of this society advertised for March 3 at Bury Fair.

SHOWMEN OF TO-DAY.

In a former article, dealing with the return of Mr. E. H. Bostock to the Glasgow City Council, we referred to the part showmen were taking in municipal and civic life. To Councillor Tuby, of Doncaster, belongs the peculiar honour and marked distinction of being the first showman of note counted worthy by his fellow-townsmen to represent them on the Borough Council. To Doncaster, the town Mr. Tuby has made the head centre of his show enterprises, belongs the singular honour (and, be it remembered, Doncaster is "no mean city") to recognise that a showman might be an excellent man of business, and also that the experience with "men and things" gained in the show business was qualification enough to justify his call to the honour and dignity of civic life, and, of course, the inevitable sacrifice of ability, time, and means in the service of the community. For sixteen years past Councillor Tuby has been a member of the Doncaster Board of Guardians. As a friend of the aged poor of his adopted town, Mr. Tuby is deservedly esteemed. We take the following appreciation of his kindliness of heart from a biographical sketch of his career that appeared in the showmen's quarterly, the Caravan, two years ago:—

"On three different occasions Mr. Tuby took the inmates of the workhouse to the seaside, and a note which he received from one of the inmates said: 'I am sure you deserve the warmest thanks of those who have received your favours, and the gratitude of all who are interested in the comfort and welfare of the poor, the sick, the infirm, and the children.'

"Mr. Tuby has had a gold medal presented to him as a memento of his handsome gifts to the hospitals.

"On Jan. 30 Councillor Tuby entertained over 180 aged poor to a knife-and-fork tea in the Guild Hall, all of whom were resident in St. George's Ward—the ward represented by Councillor Tuby—and they were all over the age of sixty. The preparations had been made with thoroughness, and the proceedings passed off successfully. A large number of ladies and gentlemen took part in the proceedings, the excellent programme which followed consisting of pianoforte solos, songs, humorous sketches, violin solos, and a humorous reading. During the evening the Bishop of Sheffield proposed a vote of thanks to Councillor Tuby for the kind way in which he had entertained the company: 'Last Sunday was Infirmary Sunday, and in looking through the report of the Infirmary he saw that Mr. Tuby had set apart a certain day, the proceeds of which were to go to the Infirmary. Everything that he earned by his horses on that day went to the Infirmary, and he saw a very large sum put down to their account because of the kindness that he had shown. He believed that those who tried to give pleasure would get a great deal themselves, and he hoped others would follow Mr. Tuby's example.' Votes of thanks were proposed by Councillors Birkenshaw and Mainwaring to all who had in any way contributed to the enjoyment of the evening."

COUNCILLOR G. T. TUBY.

Contributions to Charities.

Councillor Tuby is a life governor of many charitable institutions and is a Mason, and holds a number of votes for the Sailors' Orphanage at Hull. During the past nineteen years Councillor Tuby has collected on his riding-machines or at charity performances in his new show £3,500. Surely, this shall be counted to him for righteousness.

An important part of the circuit he travels is in "the industrial danger zone of the Barnsley coal district." Whenever disaster has overtaken the workers in the mine Mr. Tuby has given benefit performances for the sufferers, the widows, and orphans, with the consequence that "Tom Tuby, showman," is an honoured name in the circuit he travels. There are "kings of the road in showland," and Councillor Tuby is admittedly "king" in his own county—"a province of showland" that embraces a goodly portion of Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Norfolk, and Cambridgeshire.

His Civic Career.

He has been returned to the Borough Council of Doncaster five times—three times he had to contest the election, and twice without a fight. He was triumphantly returned last November without opposition, and his friends confidently anticipate that the good old town of Doncaster will select him as mayor next November. It is, therefore, eminently true of the subject of this biography that business ability, sterling integrity of character, large-hearted charity, and native wit will qualify a man (even though he be a showman) for the highest and most honourable offices of civic service and social distinction.

His Show Enterprises.

A thorough up-to-date showman, nothing but the best is good enough for him. His machines are models of perfection—always kept attractive—neither time, labour, nor expense being spared to maintain their hold upon public esteem and consequent patronage. His superb cinematograph theatre is an example of the latest and best in grand organ-fronted shows. This concern is under the personal supervision and management of Mr. E. T. Tuby, jun. Mr. Tuby (père) believes in co-operation, so he takes his sons into partnership as they attain manhood. No notice of Councillor Tuby would be complete without a word—and a big one too—of appreciation of Mrs. Tuby, his partner and fellow-genius and worker in all his enterprises. Mrs. Tuby is beloved by her wide circle of friends, both on the road with the show and at home at Doncaster.

The family life of the travelling showman is the "very Ark of the Covenant" of his ultimate success. When that fails, it is disaster. Councillor and Mrs. Tuby, "at home" on the fairground in a beautifully-ordered Pullman car living-van, is a picture that reveals the inner secret of their successful career. It is the ark of their domestic happiness. "May God and good angels," as dear old George Sanger phrases it, "ever bless and keep them and theirs in it!"

Some Biographical Details.

Born fifty-one years ago at Newlands, near Selby, his father a showman before him, he served as a lad his full apprenticeship, and learned the technique of his trade travelling the fairs. His first enterprise "on his own" was as a photographer. Following the fairs with photo booth, he soon saw the possibilities of Doncaster as a centre for his work. He next enterprised a set of swings; followed that (in the days of their rapid rise) with a set of steam horses. Then followed a second set of horses (four abreast), sets of gondolas and motor-cars, and the superb coliseum of varieties and living pictures. Both Mr. and Mrs. Tuby take a keen interest in the work of the Showmen's Guild, and are generous subscribers to its funds. They lend their show many times in the course of each season for the services and meetings of the Guild, and for services conducted at various fairs by the local clergy. Councillor Tuby is a Vice-President of the Guild, and his eldest son, G. T. Tuby, jun., is on the Executive Committee. We not only congratulate Councillor and Mrs. Tuby on their honoured position in their own town, but on the even greater honour that is theirs in the great world of shows. We hope to be present at his first Mayoral banquet.

NEW BRITISH-MADE ROLLER SKATE.

The New Brampton skate is made by a firm of cycle-fitting manufacturers, whose reputation for quality and material, workmanship and accuracy, is second to none. In this skate particular attention is given to the bearings, which are by far the most important part of a roller skate. The balls used are of genuine Hoffmann manufacture, and the axles are of case-hardened steel.

Either steel, boxwood, or aluminium wheels are fitted to the Brampton. The steel wheels have a patented feature in the specially-hardened cups recessed in the wheel. These skates are easily adjustable, and while exceptionally strong are not at all heavy. The prices compare favourably with foreign-made ball-bearing skates, and can be obtained on application to the sole selling agents, Messrs. Brown Brothers, Ltd., Great Eastern-street, E.C.

LICHFIELD SHROVETIDE FAIR.

The Shrovetide Fair at Lichfield is particularly interesting to showmen in all branches, inasmuch as an ancient custom is observed by a picturesque ceremony before the fair is allowed to commence. The Deputy Mayor performed the opening ceremony on Tuesday, Feb. 23, amid much excitement. The custom should be more properly called the Court of Pie Powdre, the occasion in the olden times being one of mirth and levity. The Pie Powdre used to sit all day at the Guildhall to hear any complaints made by the citizens.

Punctually at noon the Deputy Mayor (Councillor Coleridge-Roberts), in the absence of the Mayor (Alderman Morgan), the Sheriff (Councillor Wood), the Town Clerk (Mr. H. Russell), members of the Corporation, mace-bearers, and the town crier, headed by the police, marched round the fair to the market square, where the crier announced to the citizens that the fair was open. The declaration commenced with the usual "Oyes, Oyes, Oyes," and the officials in their uniforms, and the mace-bearers and crier in their old-fashioned clothes, made a picturesque scene, surrounded as they were by roundabouts and general fair paraphernalia. The procession afterwards marched back to the Guildhall, where the company were served with cake and wine. Toasts were drunk out of the massive silver Ashmolean cup to the "Church and King, weal and worship," "The Mayor," "The Sheriff," and "The Deputy Mayor."

Lichfield Shrovetide Fair.

The attractions of the fair were P. Collins, jun.'s, wonderland theatre of animated pictures, with latest films. Amongst these were pictures of the Tottenham Tragedy, the Messina Disaster, and the West Stanley Colliery explosion, and P. Collins's royal racing motors (manager, John Whyatt). The shooting galleries were by Messrs. G. Ford, T. Dobson, and J. Humphreys; the skill and throwing-games were provided by S. Collett, T. Dobson, A. Harris, J. Brown, G. Osborne, and B. Chaplain. There was also the usual big array of fairground novelties.

Some London Show Pitches.

On Forrest's Mile End-road fairground there is a good collection of shows and fairground novelties, including the lessees' (Messrs. S. and H. Forrest's) new cinematograph theatre, big wheel and park swings, J. Manders's galloping horses, Shippobottom's bicycle railway track, Lewis's snake jungle, Bedford's freak show, and variety frames and throwing games by Bolesworth, Harvey, Irving Brothers, Turner, and others.

CINEMATOGRAPH TRADE PROTECTION SOCIETY.

At a mass meeting of exhibitors, hirers, showmen, and non-associated manufacturers, held at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, on Wednesday afternoon, it was resolved that in view of the serious condition of the trade, induced by the proposed action of the associated manufacturers, that a trade society be formed as above to resist such proposed encroachments and for mutual protection and guidance of the trade generally, the following officers and committee were elected:—Chairman, F. R. Griffiths, New Bioscope Trading Co.; vice-chairman, W. F. Jury, Jury's Imperial Bioscope, Ltd.; Secretary, C. W. Lovesy, Ruffell's, Ltd.; treasurer, M. Raymond, Raymond's Bio-tableaux; committee, Messrs. Lewers, Haddow, Jamieson, Hagar, A. T. Wright, Ruffell, and Rosenthal.

It was resolved that the society have power to increase the committee to fifteen members, and that the officers and committee hold their appointment for three months, and are then subject to re-election. A long discussion took place, in which the situation of the trade was thoroughly reviewed by speakers representing all sections of the business in every part of the United Kingdom, the opinion being unanimous that the proposed action of the associated manufacturers is calculated to have serious effects on the continuation of the cinematograph industry in Great Britain, and the committee were empowered to take such steps as they considered necessary to enable the society to be self-supporting in all branches of the trade.

At the close of the meeting it was decided that all present should attend the private meeting called by Mr. Ivatts, of Messrs. Fathé Frères, and the meeting then adjourned.

At 5.30 o'clock the same evening, at the invitation of Mr. Ivatts, a meeting was held at the Crown Hotel, Charing Cross-road. On behalf of Pathé Frères, Mr. Ivatts laid before the meeting certain proposals, and suggested that those present should agree to the submitted terms, which were, however, entirely at variance with those of the English manufacturers.

The other speakers, representing all sections of the society, were strongly antagonistic to Messrs. Pathé's proposals, and were of the opinion that they were impracticable.

No agreement was come to by the meeting.

Mr. Ivatts stated that he would place the opinions expressed before Messrs. Pathé in Paris.

A further meeting of the society was called, and held at the Salisbury Hotel the same evening, when the speeches of the members at Messrs. Pathé's meeting were approved, and it was decided to call another meeting at the same place on the next day, and invite representatives of the manufacturers to attend.

At a meeting of the society held at the Salisbury Hotel on Thursday afternoon, the following resolution was unanimously carried:—

"That we, the undersigned members of the Trade Protection Society, are of the firm opinion that when we purchase a film it becomes our property to do as we think fit with, and we hereby promise to stand by each other to the utmost to effect this purpose."

The representatives of the manufacturers, which included Messrs. Hepworth, Paul, Williamson, Vitagraph, and Gaumont, were then invited into the room, and a heated discussion took place.

Mr. Grant, representing Messrs. Lumière, stated that his firm intended continuing their business precisely as hitherto, and they had no intention of joining any combine by which the sale of their film "base" would be restricted.

No agreement was come to, and the above resolution was read to the manufacturers by the chairman, Mr. Griffiths, and the meeting closed.

The committee desire it to be known that all members of the society are free to purchase and deal in films exactly as heretofore, without any restriction whatever.

Proposed Abolition of Bedford Fair.

At a meeting of the Bedford Town Council on Wednesday the Public Works Committee reported "That they are of opinion that it would be to the convenience and advantage of the public if the statute fairs held in the town were abolished, and they recommend that the Town Clerk be instructed to take the necessary steps with a view to obtaining an order from the Home Secretary abolishing such fairs." The Town Clerk said a letter had been received from the Chaplain and Organiser of the Showmen's Guild (the Rev. T. Horne), who stated that his attention had been called to certain statements made by the Medical Officer of the Borough which were dangerous to showmen. The society was prepared to take steps at all costs to investigate the charges of the Medical Officer. The showpeople did not come from all over the country, and they were honest and industrious citizens of the world. He challenged the Medical Officer to prove his statements. Dr. Willmer Phillips, the Medical Officer, said he made no libel on the showmen, but he maintained that in a town like Bedford the twice yearly visit of those shows constituted a danger. He did not say anything about the showmen, but against the "hangers-on."—The report was adopted.

The Reply of the Corporation to the Protest Letter of the Guild.

"Town Hall, Bedford, Feb. 25, 1909.

"Dear Sir,—Your letter of the 9th instant was read to the Council at their meeting held yesterday. The Council have decided to make an application to the Home Secretary with a view to obtaining an order from him abolishing the local Statute Fairs.—Yours truly "Hedley Baxter.

"The Rev. T. Horne, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C."

Fourteen persons were crushed to death and thirty injured in a panic which occurred on Sunday at a cinematograph entertainment in Tula (Russia) owing to the ignition of the apparatus.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

HISTORICAL VISIT TO VERSAILLES.—This is a gracious evocation of the pleasures of the French Court in the reign of Louis XIV. The King, Mme. de Maintenon, and their suite of powdered marquises and marchionesses fill the alleys of the park so carefully laid out by Lenôtre. They linger in the Trianons, dance slow minuets, or glide in boats on the waters of the Latone fountains. The scenes are beautifully arranged, and not less beautifully photographed.

GOOD OFTEN COMES FROM EVIL.—Trap is a charming little dog, beloved by his young mistress, who takes him out for a walk every day. One fine morning a scoundrel shows Trap a lump of sugar, which the dog cannot resist, for he does not know anything about illicit dog trade. Trap is sold for a mere song to a gentleman, who soon loves him. One day, however, meeting his former mistress, he goes to her, showing her by all sorts of caressing ways that he has not forgotten her. She takes him in her arms, and refuses to restore him to his present owner. In order to settle the quarrel, they go to the police station, where the police officer decides in favour of the gentleman. The lady cries, and the gentleman is so moved that he looks at her with great interest. Then he finds out that she is pretty, and in order to make everybody happy he proposes to her. She agrees to marry him in order not to part with her darling dog!

WE DESIRE A BUTLER.—Mr. and Mrs. Upstart wish to have a butler in order to show off the more, as they are well off. The new servant is well groomed, and he knows more of etiquette than his master and mistress put together. He looks so much like a gentleman that Mr. and Mrs. Upstart feel quite abashed and timid in his presence. Mr. Upstart, swollen with pride, sends his "butler" to all his acquaintances, asking them to dinner the same day. The friends come. They look at the new servant with wonder. Murmurs of approval are heard in the room, but the servant, who is really a professional acrobat, juggles with the plates, glasses, bottles, and dishes. Then he performs a high jump over the heads of the terrified guests, who, thinking that their hosts are trying to mystify them, take French-leave.

THE BOHEMIAN GIRL.—In this we get some dramatic scenes. The handsome vagrant known as the Bohemian Girl is so beautiful that a rich gentleman falls in love with her. She is now a happy woman, for she possesses riches and the love of her husband, but early memories sometimes trouble her. She longs for freedom and liberty. One day the sound of an accordion thrills her so much that she rushes to the window, and recognises in the street below her old father and mother tramping the world in search of her. As her husband tries to keep her back when she runs to them the Bohemian Girl, yielding to her savage instincts, grasps a knife, wherewith she slays him for standing in her way.

AN EXCITING ELOPEMENT.—In this we get some clever trick scenes. Two young people realise that their parents will never consent to their marriage, and in order to force them to do so they elope in a motor-car. They are chased by the girl's father and mother, and as the young man sees that he is going to be overtaken with the girl, he throws her up in the air, where she vanishes. Upon the wrathful father demanding to be given back his daughter, he is shown her whirling in mid-air like an aerolite. A few seconds later the girl lands at their feet, and the father, seeing that the fiancés are so much in earnest, gives in, and allows them to get married. This sort of elopement is likely to be fashionable in the near future, when aeroplanes are steerable.

MA-IN-LAW HAS A HARD LIFE.—Ma-in-law is just recovering from a severe illness, and she looks better every day, to the great sorrow of her son-in-law, Reggy. Ma-in-law worships him, but he does not return her love. As he cannot bear the sight of her any longer, he pushes her out of the railway carriage, but she overtakes him at the next station, beaming all over with happiness at the pleasant meeting. On board ship he throws her overboard. She swims to the shore, and then falls into the arms of the distracted man. He tries to crush her under a heavy stone thrown at her, and she looks for the mosquito which has stung her. He throws her into a sewer, but she reappears shortly afterwards. He is now so desperate that he pushes her under a motor-car, and triumphantly brings home a few scattered bones. An hour later however, his mother-in-law arrives in her cripple's carriage, and greets him with a smile.

THE LAST ILLUSION.—Mr. Gerville is about fifty years old, and the father of a grown-up son. In spite of this, he is courting a lady many years his junior, whom he believes to be disinterested, but although she does not discard him altogether, she is in love with his very son. An unlucky rival acquaints Mr. Gerville with this fact, and it is at the seaside, when he is comfortably enjoying his afternoon nap in his rocking-chair that the dreadful news is conveyed to him in the shape of an anonymous letter. The poor man hurriedly seizes his revolver, and runs to the place where he knows he will find the lovers. He is so dumfounded, however, on finding that the man he had resolved to kill is his only son that in his incapacity to hate him or kill him he turns the weapon against himself, and dies a victim to his last illusion.

ORIGIN OF BEETHOVEN'S MOONLIGHT SONATA.—Music lovers will enjoy seeing this beautiful picture showing the great master "in his habit as he lived," and following his footsteps on the night when, moved by pity, he was inspired to compose, for a poor blind girl, his immortal "Moonlight Sonata." Wandering one evening alone through the streets, his attention was attracted by the notes of one of his own compositions rendered in a masterly manner, and, upon inquiry, he found that the player was a poor blind girl. Entering the humble home, he found the beautiful musician the devoted sister of a loving brother; he a mender of shoes, she a pianist—both well bred, refined, and of lofty ideals. Without revealing himself, Beethoven, learning from the fair musician's lips that she was an ardent admirer of his music—moved by the environment and charm of the evening—sat down at the piano and improvised. The beauty of the night, the moonlight, the breathless attention of his hearers, his sympathy, all combined to inspire a masterpiece which thousands have enjoyed since that fateful evening when an accidental turn brought to life the "Moonlight Sonata."

THE ADVENTURES OF AN OLD FLIRT.—Mr. Jack, although past middle age and married, is only as old as he feels; and, as he feels like a "boy of twenty," it is not to be wondered at that he still looks for a good time whenever the opportunity affords. Another "old boy" and crony of Jack's, also ever ready for a lark, lets Jack in on the Perfect Peach Masquerade Ball, and sends him a ticket, which delights Mr. Jack. "The best-laid schemes of mice and men gang aft a-gley"; Jack's do, for instead of burning the letter he very carelessly leaves it in the pocket of his smoking jacket, and—wifey finds it. Although not o'er youthful herself, Mrs. Jack still possesses ginger and snap, and instantly prepares for action. When she leaves the costumier's on the night of the masquerade it is as a captivating soubrette. Jack and his bosom-friend are there bright and early, admiring the "peaches," and making numerous "mashes" and having "one good time," but do not get into action in earnest until the dashing soubrette arrives. The old fellows are at once rivals for the fair one's attention and admiration, and try to outdo one another in gallantry, in the dance, in wit and humour, and in all the arts they possess, to enliven the beauty's pleasure. She seems thoroughly impartial regarding both, but with a leaning toward the friend; which causes Mr. Jack to try a spurt, and he wins and takes the "lady" to supper. Mr. Jack pours out his soul in confidence to the fair listener; gently urged to "make a clean breast of it," and nobly responds. He declares that he is unmarried, dotes on blond soubrettes, &c., and, when he reaches the height of his eloquence, he is doubly unmasked, and Mrs. Jack gets a new sealskin.

Gaumont Company.

THE BURNS-JOHNSON FIGHT.—This subject is now ready for delivery, and can be hired for one week or longer periods for various territories. The entire length is 3,700 feet, but it is no advantage to obtain shorter lengths as far as price is concerned, although the firm are willing to supply what length showmen desire. The price per week is regulated by the town or province. Two towns can be booked up by one showman unless any other applicant has asked for its hire. We advise showmen who are anxious to have a splendid booming subject to correspond at once with Messrs. Gaumont. Showmen featuring the film might find it pay to advertise some of the following facts. The Stadium in which the fight took place measured 480ft. by 360ft., covering approximately 4½ acres of ground. The cost of erection was about £2,600, and the work, with day and night shifts, took six weeks. 20,400 people paid for admission, and there were 40,000 more outside the Stadium. The gates were opened at 6 a.m., 10,000 people were seated by 7.30, and at 8.30 only a few £3 seats were left. This tremendous crowd was handled in six hours without the slightest mishap. The financial side of the fight is no less remarkable. The total gate receipts amounted to £26,200, the advanced bookings coming to £10,200, and the receipts from training exhibitions to £2,000; 244 employees were engaged, and there were also present 250 policemen, 150 mounted police, and some 250 pressmen. The figures regarding the money taken by pictures of the fight are, as had been expected, equally extraordinary, the total up to date being well over £20,000, and the estimated value, based on offers received, £75,000. In Melbourne in one week close upon £1,000 was taken, eighteen performances in Sydney realised £3,158, seven in Brisbane, £1,761; ten in Adelaide, £1,627, and nine in New Zealand, £1,111.

WEARY WILLIE AT THE CARNIVAL.—Weary Willie is resting on a bench when a gentleman passing drops an invitation to a fancy dress carnival. Willie decides to go in his usual dress, and arriving is taken for the wealthy gentleman, and is congratulated on his disguise. Everything goes on well until the gentleman himself appears, when the deception is explained, and Willie is sent off, with several banknotes which he has won at cards.

TRAGEDY OF THE SNOW.—In this picture a poor peasant is starving, and Satan appears and induces him to rob a passer by. The snow scenes are beautifully tinted, and at the end Satan returns to claim his due, but an old beggar whom the peasant befriended happens to be an angel in disguise, and repulses him, finally taking the peasant's soul to the clouds.

THREATENED REVOLUTION IN THE CINEMATOGRAPH WORLD.

There have been most alarming rumours current in the cinematograph world of a revolution so far-reaching that it is impossible, without more definite information, to forecast its effects. Rumour says that a strong combination of the film-producing firms of Europe has been effected; that after the end of March film makers will not sell films right out, but will supply only on hire and return conditions films both to film traders and exhibitors.

Our information is that this is true, despite certain diplomatic disclaimers by the local supply agents of the firms implicated in the agreement. These disclaimers are made to allay the storm that would inevitably arise when the film users got wind of the trade being cornered.

We have interviewed one of the most important showman exhibitors. We have also heard the expert opinions of traders and exhibitors in the film-showing business. Certain documents have been seen and read that make it evident that the combination of film producers in Europe is strong enough to practically dictate its own terms.

Meetings Private and Meetings Open.

Showmen and exhibitors met in London on Wednesday last to consider the situation.

Protests Loud and Deep.

At both the private and the open meetings the proposals, in their entirety and in detail, were condemned. Speaker after speaker clearly demonstrated the ill-considered and destructive nature of the film manufacturers' proposals. Already film-users have countered the combination of the makers with a strong union of the showmen and exhibitors, together with the other trades and industries that have grown up with the rapid development of the cinematograph for exhibition purposes.

Our Position in the Matter.

As the premier journal in the showman world, we reserve our opinion until we have the whole evidence before us. We can only express a strong hope that an industry like the vast enterprise of the cinematograph, both as an educational factor and as a perpetually fresh source of amusement, may not suffer a reaction from schemes that have been hastily outlined and that may not bear the most exhaustive examination and the utmost discussion. The interests involved are too vast for immature and mischievous adventure. Cinematography has become too precious a national asset to be either engineered, cornered, or combined by any one section of the industry.

Notes from the West.

BOSTOCK AND WOMBWELL'S menagerie is at the Rovers' ground, Bristol, for the week. The collection is a fine one, and interesting performances are given in some of the cages. There is a good band, and the attendance appears to be satisfactory.

W. C. AND S. HANCOCK still continue their season at Mutton Cove, Devonport.

MESSRS. ANDERTON AND ROWLAND are at Chippenham with their Empire varieties and picture theatre.

J. BREWER is at the Winter Gardens, Plymouth.

THE local amusements at Bath this week have had added interest by a visit of Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie, which stayed for a couple of days, and drew large numbers to view the fine collection of animals. On Wednesday a local publican was announced to enter the lions' cage for a wager.

THE BERLIN CONFERENCE.

The following is one of the clauses of the report of the British delegates at the International Conference at Berlin last October:—

"Authors of literary, scientific, or artistic works shall have the exclusive right of authorising the reproduction and public representation of their works by cinematography.

"Cinematograph productions shall be protected as literary or artistic works if, by the arrangement of the acting form or the combinations of the incidents represented, the author has given the work a personal and original character.

"Without prejudice to the rights of the author of the original work the reproduction by cinematography of a literary, scientific, or artistic work shall be protected as an original work.

"The above provisions apply to reproduction or production effected by any other process analogous to cinematography.

"This Article secures to the authors of literary, scientific, or artistic works the exclusive right to authorise the reproduction and the public representation of their works by the cinematograph or analogous processes. Original cinematograph productions in certain cases and reproductions of a literary, scientific, or artistic work receive copyright protection. These provisions deal with a specific case of the indirect appropriations contemplated by Article 12, but in view of the importance of these productions it was deemed advisable to have a separate Article on the subject."

The James Chittock Fund.

WE gladly publish the enclosed letter from Mr. James Chittock, one of the oldest and most esteemed of London showmen. Although for many years past Mr. Chittock has been the proprietor of Chittock's Royal Metropolitan Cinematograph Exhibiton, he is world famous as the originator of Chittock's Dog and Monkey Circus:—

"DEAR SIRS,—Allow us, through the columns of your paper, to express our heartfelt thanks to the travellers and showmen for the generous way in which they have contributed towards our defence fund in meeting two law suits. When the cases are settled the names will be published in this paper. Great praise and credit are due to Mrs. Panton, of 34, Torrington-square, London, for the energetic way she has travelled and worked to save a showman's home. All donations will be thankfully received and published by this lady until the 10th day of March. The names of all those who have already subscribed will be published in next week's issue.—With heartfelt thanks to all from my wife and self, "JAMES AND SOPHIA CHITTOCK.

"Acton Green, Chiswick."

"All other papers please copy."

MESSRS. BOSTOCK AND FITT, proprietors of the Norwich Hippodrome, on Friday evening, the 19th inst., gave the entire proceeds of the first performance for the benefit of the Mayor's Unemployed Fund. There was a capital attendance in the best parts of the house, including the Mayor (Mr. Walter Rye) and his personal friends, and a large number of aldermen, councillors, and guardians of the city.

MR. COUNCILLOR F. W. FITT appeared during the evening at the footlights, and said that last year when Mr. Bostock and he were approached on the subject of the unemployed they handed to the fund a cheque for 10 guineas, but this year they suggested that the entire proceeds of one performance should be given to the fund. The receipts for that performance were £22 3s. 6d., and if the Mayor would accept it he would hand his Worship a cheque for £30.

WANTED, Wanted, Known, Sir,—
I inserted an advertisement, asking for Music Hall Artists in the last week's issue of "The Era." May I say that I am absolutely astounded at the number of replies I received to my small advertisement, no less than 270 Artists favouring me with applications. May I by this means thank the many artists who sent in their terms, as it is impossible for me to reply to each individual. I thank all for their very kind promptitude in responding to my advertisement.
I remain, yours faithfully,
ALFRED BALL.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow :—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR ALL THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.

"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, 1909. 1s. 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C. This well-known almanac and annual contains, as usual, much information, including lists and particulars of new plays of interest to members of the dramatic profession. The symposium of stories by well-known people includes some interesting experiences and anecdotes by some of the best known actors and actresses of the day.—The Financial Times, Jan. 18, 1909.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.

I have received a copy of "The Era" year book, which probably contains more "meaty" guidance to the square ounce than any other publication of its kind. Data of all theatrical and music hall subjects are to be found within its covers, as well as a collection of interesting yarns by prominent entertainers. It is cheap at a shilling.—Sunday Chronicle, Manchester, Jan. 24, 1909.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

THE CHILD OF THE REGIMENT.

Code Word, "GARGOUILLE."

The pest has broken out after the war, and the contagion is more dreadful than the most cruel battle, for its victims are chosen amongst women and children, as well as men, and the dead bodies are lying pell mell about the streets. A family is fleeing from the contaminated place, but the father and mother are struck on the way, leaving an orphan two years old, who wanders alone in the country, unconscious of his loss and of danger. Soldiers, finding the little man on the road, have him adopted by the regiment.

COLLEGE CHUMS; or the Affaire of the Lourcine St. After Mr. Labiche's Comedy

Code Word, "GESTE."

A very amusing scene, based on the perusal of a back number of the paper by two people the morning following an unusual spree.

725ft. The Subject, £12 1s. 8d. Toning, 16s.

JIMMY AS STOVE-FITTER.

Code Word, "GARGOTE."

Jimmy is making mortar on the roof; the smoke issuing from a chimney gives him a wicked idea. He covers it over with a sack, and the smoke fills the kitchen. Cook looks up, but Jimmy's hod being upset in the flue, she receives the plaster full on her face, and runs away screaming with pain. Meanwhile Jimmy helps himself to a roast fowl, which he hooks out of the kitchen range. The maid's squeals mingle with those of cook, and while the two are explaining matters to Mr. Porter, the mischievous boy comes and shakes into their faces the soot out of the stove pipe he carries.

248ft. The Subject, £4 2s. 8d.

MA-IN-LAW HAS A HARD LIFE.

Code Word, "GARCON."

Ma-in-law worships her son-in-law, who does not return her love. In order to get rid of her, he pushes her out of the railway carriage, but she overtakes him at the next station, beaming all over with happiness at the pleasant meeting. On board ship he throws her overboard. She swims to the shore, and falls into his arms when he lands. He tries vainly to crush her under a heavy stone. After a time, he is so desperate that he pushes her under a motor-car, and triumphantly brings home a few scattered bones. An hour later, however, ma-in-law arrives in her cripple's carriage, and greets him with a laugh.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s. Cd.

AN ARABIAN PILGRIMAGE.

Code Word, "GAUFRE."

The muezzin is seen blessing the richly-embroidered flags which spread and play in the light of the burning sun, and the ceremony ends with public rejoicings.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s. 0d. Toning, 18s. 0d.

THE HAUNTED GROTTO.

Code Word, "EXPLOSION."

362ft. The Subject, £6 0s. 8d. Toning, £1 5s. 0d.

MOTHER MITCHELL'S CAT.

Code Word, "GARAGE."

Mother Mitchell runs from house to house in search of her lost cat. As she comes to a pot shaking in an odd manner, she screams, and her neighbours gather round her, gaping at the queer thing. The game-keeper cautiously approaches the pot, but on hearing something like a whine escape the pot, he sits down in surprise. The Mayor is called in, followed by a long string of people. Suddenly a pitiful mewing reaches Mother Mitchell's ear; she lifts the lid, and her darling cat, which had been placed in the pot by an urchin, is brought to light again to delight its fond mistress.

280ft. The Subject, £4 13s. 4d. Toning, 16s.

WE DESIRE A BUTLER.

Code Word, "GARANCE."

Mr. and Mrs. Upstart wish to have a butler in order to show off the more that they are well off. The new servant is well groomed. He looks so much like a gentleman, in fact, that his masters look at him with awe. The Upstart family invite their friends to dinner, but the servant, who in reality is a professional acrobat, juggles with the plates, glasses, bottles, and dishes; then he performs a high jump over the heads of the terrified guests, who, thinking that their hosts are trying to mystify them, take French leave.

297ft. The Subject, £4 19s. 0d.

AN EXCITING ELOPEMENT.

Code Word, "GAIETE."

Two young people realise that their parents will never consent to their marriage, and in order to force them to do so they elope in a motor-car. They are chased by the girl's father and mother, and as the young man sees that he is going to be overtaken he throws the girl up in the air, where she vanishes. Upon the indignant father demanding to be given back his daughter, he is shown her whirling in mid-air. A few seconds later she lands at their feet, and the father, seeing that the fiancés are so much in earnest, gives in, and allows them to marry.

379ft. The Subject, £6 6s. 4d.

HISTORICAL VISIT TO VERSAILLES

Code Word, "FORCAT."

This is a gracious evocation of the pleasures of the French Court in the reign of Louis XIV. The King, Mme. de Maintenon, and their suite of powdered marquises and marchionesses fill the alleys of the park so carefully laid out by Lenôtre. They linger in the Trianons, dance slow minuets, or glide in boats on the waters of the Latone fountains.

EXTRAORDINARY RESULT
FROM AN ADVERTISEMENT.

Dear Sir,

I inserted an advertisement in "The Era" advertising Messrs. Barney and Berry's celebrated Phantom Skates. You may guess my satisfaction at the successful result of my speculating in your advertisement columns when I tell you that I have sold no less than 2,700 pairs of these Skates, the sale of which I directly trace to the advertisement in "The Era."

Yours faithfully,
Managing Director,
Messrs. BARNEY and BERRY.

APPLICATIONS FOR POSITIONS on the FRONT PAGE of "The Era" should be addressed to the PUBLISHER.

NOW READY.
FORTY-SECOND YEAR OF PUBLICATION.
1909—THE ERA ANNUAL—1909
The Most Complete Theatrical Dictionary of Dates ever Published.
It will also be found to be the most interesting Annual of the Year, containing as it does Many Stories told by Members of the Dramatic and Musical Professions, Illustrated by Photographs and Autographs.
Price 1s., post free.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, just published ("The Era" Offices, 1s.), is a capital production, full of all sorts of theatrical information, and also containing a number of readable little articles by well-known actors and actresses. All the important theatrical events of the year are given in handy form, and the book is really the theatrical "Who's Who." The casts are given of all the new plays and revivals produced during the year, as well as the principal sketches and Continental plays. The book is well printed and illustrated.—Vanity Fair, Feb. 3, 1909.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual (5, Tavistock Street, Strand, 1s.) contains valuable dramatic reviews of the year, lists of new plays, lists of theatres, and other matter of interest to the player and playgoer alike. There is also the usual budget of stories told by well-known stage people, but these do not form the most valuable feature of the work.—Newcastle Chronicle, Feb. 3, 1909.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.
"The Era" Dramatic and Musical Annual, 1909 (1s.), opens with stories by such well-known people as George Alexander, Martin Harvey, and H. B. Irving. There are many portraits, and the other well-known features are as attractive as heretofore.—Madame, Jan. 27, 1909.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.
"The Era" Annual for 1909 is worthy of its high prestige and equally indispensable to every person connected with the stage, and interesting to the general reader. It contains an almanac, with each day marked by some theatrical or operatic event; over one hundred and sixty biographies of professionals; lists and casts of the plays produced last year in London, Paris, and Berlin and in the British provinces, and tales and reminiscences by such well-known actors as H. B. Irving, Martin Harvey, and Albert Chevalier, with portraits and autographs. The advertisements are as attractive in their way as the reading matter. British business men have learned that it pays best to advertise in papers that deal with theatrical affairs, because the theatregoers are customers who can afford to buy what they like. — Stephen Fiske (Sports of the Times, New York), Feb. 5.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE CO., LTD.
Chief Office: HOLBORN BARS, LONDON.

Summary of the Report Presented at the Sixtieth Annual Meeting, held on 4th March, 1909.

ORDINARY BRANCH.—The number of Policies issued during the year was 80,379, assuring the sum of £7,614,898, and producing a New Annual Premium Income of £440,376. The Premiums received during the year were £4,616,337, being an increase of £135,960 over the year 1907. The Claims of the year amounted to £2,812,962. The number of Deaths was 8,389, and 15,322 Endowment Assurances matured.

The number of Policies in force at the end of the year was 866,797.

INDUSTRIAL BRANCH.—The Premiums received during the year were £6,925,755, being an increase of £264,124. The Claims of the year amounted to £2,670,345, including £72,696 the proportion of bonus paid since the date of the last Annual Meeting. The number of Claims and Surrenders, including 4,355 Endowment Assurances matured, was 310,722. The number of Free Policies granted during the year to those Policyholders of five years' standing and upwards who desired to discontinue their payments was 145,261, the number in force being 1,395,929. The number of Free Policies which became Claims during the year was 40,094.

The total number of Policies in force at the end of the year was 17,963,127; their average duration exceeds eleven and a quarter years.

The Assets of the Company, in both branches, as shown in the Balance-Sheet, are £71,958,859, being an increase of £3,952,575 over those of 1907.

In the Ordinary Branch a reversionary bonus at the rate of £1 12s. per cent. on the original sums assured has again been added to all classes of participating policies issued since the year 1876.

The Directors are pleased to announce an increase in the Industrial Branch bonus. All policies of over 5 years' duration, which become claims either by death or maturity of endowment from the 5th of March, 1909, to the 3rd of March, 1910, both dates inclusive, will participate. This bonus will be paid by way of addition to the sums assured of:—

£5 per cent. on all policies becoming claims upon which at least five but less than ten years premiums have been paid;

£10 per cent on all policies becoming claims upon which at least ten but less than twenty years' premiums have been paid, and

£12 10s. per cent. on all policies becoming claims upon which at least twenty years' premiums have been paid.

GENERAL BALANCE-SHEET of the PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED, being the Summary of both Branches, on Dec. 31, 1908.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERAMAN.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. Jackson Withers; Resident-Manager, Mr. Archie Ainsleigh.—Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company is here this week in Miss Hook of Holland. Miss Ethel James is charming in the title-rôle; Mr. Charles B. Maclagan is a humorous Mr. Hook; Mr. J. B. Fox gives a striking performance of Captain Paap; Mr. Sam Lockridge is a capital Bandmaster; Mr. Frank Altred a successful Schnapps; and Mr. Fred Dark is seen to advantage as Simon Slinks. Miss Muff Carew fully realises the rôle of Mina. The scenery and staging are good.

ABERDARE.—NEW THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Aberdare Public Hall, Theatre, and Billposting Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—Mr. George Edwardes's company in The Merry Widow is playing to packed houses here. Miss Daphne Glenne makes a fascinating widow, her dancing in the Waltz scene being wonderfully artistic. Mr. Alec Worcester is an excellent Prince Danilo; Miss Violet Hobson a capital Natalie; Mr. H. Sinclair Cotter a richly humorous Baron Popoff; and Mr. Harry Emerie a satisfactory Nisch. Mr. Arthur Geary's voice is heard to advantage in the rôle of Jolidon; Mr. Cecil Warwick cleverly represents the old General; Mme. Novakovitch is well portrayed by Miss Eileen Clanford; and Mr. John H. David is a capable Cascada.

ABERDEEN.—H. M. THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—Married to the Wrong Man is one of those sensational pieces of deep interest which always attract crowds to the more popular parts of the house. Miss Gertrude Boswell gives a sympathetic interpretation of Ruth; and Mr. Oswald Cray plays with conspicuous skill as Captain Gladwin; Mr. Charles Vivian and Mr. H. Lane Bayliff are superior villains; Mr. Paige Lawrence is successful in a dual rôle; Mr. Syd Clayton contributes admirable sketches of a potboy, soldier, and amateur doctor; and Miss Dorothy Haigh makes a charming Rose.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The performance of Park's Eton Boys and Girton Girls was much appreciated, as last week; the Colonial Septette give a delightful musical act, in which Mr. Charles Edwards, the eminent cornet soloist, appears; Doody and Wright and Spry and Austin are as genuinely amusing as ever; Mr. Harry J. Crane and company play with success a pathetic musical sketch, Truth in Absence; Shrillo is highly appreciated as an operatic whistler; Miss Edith Chanfler is a very pleasing juvenile soprano; Mr. Henry Hilton shows much dexterity as a conjurer; and Mr. Tony Black is a versatile Scottish comedian. The Palascope views are novel and effective.

ALHAMBRA AND EMPIRE MUSIC HALLS.—Managers, Messrs. R. Calder and J. Montague.—Newman and Howard appear in a clever sketch, The Slop and the Slavey, which is much appreciated; Miss E. Duncan excels as a step-dancer and club-swinging expert; and the other members of the company, including Misses Marie Rose, May Calder, and Marguerite Lowe, and Messrs. Jack Merson and Archie Murray are as popular as ever.

ABERTILLERY.—THEATRE METROPOLE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. J. Seaborn.—At Duty's Call is successfully presented here this week by Mr. John Gerant's talented company. Harold, the Anglo-Egyptian, is realistically portrayed by Mr. John Gerant, who receives the full appreciation of the house. Mr. Ernest St. John gives a dramatic delineation of the difficult part of General Gordon; and Captain Alison finds a clever and capable exponent in Mr. Charles C. Calvert. Mr. Royston Denman is a successful Jack Spencer; and Mr. Harry Ives excellently fills the comedy part of Terry O'Halloran. Miss Beatrice Western gives a very effective rendition of Dora; and Salema is cleverly reproduced by Miss Ada Roscoe. The mounting is exceedingly good.

THE PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—David Poole is a skilful ventriloquist; Ernesto, a clever juggler, performs several difficult feats; Edward Cranston and company produce the popular Irish racing sketch, Terry; or, True to His Trust, with great success. Wat Tyler delights the audience with the dramatic scena, The Poachers; Dacey and Lewis are a pair of pleasing comedy entertainers; Flo Cecil is highly successful in song and dance; and the Cosmans give a very pleasant comedy act. Pictures are also shown.

ACCRINGTON.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is presenting the new version of Hall Caine's The Christian here this week to crowded houses. Miss Margery Fane is a charming and lively exponent of the complex character of Glory Quayle, and enters thoroughly into the spirit of the part; Mr. P. Gedge Twyman as John Storm acts with much latent strength, and is a decided success; Mr. Edward Ouston ably impersonates the impetuous and self-willed Horatio Drake; Mr. G. Montague Lane is duly sinister and sarcastic as the polished profligate, Lord Robert Ure; and Mr. John Hastings Batson acts with fervour and is singularly eloquent as Father Lamplugh. Miss Alice Maude is excellent as the kind-hearted Mrs. Callender; Miss Gladys Vernon contributes a pretty and touching impersonation of Polly Love; Miss Grace Baring is very well cast as Black Meg; and Miss Sissie Murdock is successful as Mother Kent. The piece is mounted with care, and is received with much favour.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—The great draw here this week is undoubtedly Tom Rose, described as the world's champion light-weight wrestler, and great excitement is created by contests with local aspirants. The Four Musical Victorias give some fine selections of high-class music; and Richard Fineburg presents impersonations of popular characters in famous plays. Mike Cray, comedy juggler, keeps the house in roars of laughter; and Helen and Cozens appear with success in a skit. The Werd Brothers, comedy acrobats, are accorded a hearty reception; and John Grun Marx astonishes the audience with his feats of strength. The Custances, comedy duo, prove popular; and the Burnley v. Tottenham Hotspurs Football Match is shown by the Bioscope.

ALDERSHOT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—The Face at the Window is being presented here on a return visit. Mr. Hoggan-Armadale impersonates Le Loup with cleverness and reserve; whilst as Goufet Mr. Scott-Leighton is quite natural. Mr. Arthur Beverley is good as the Clerk; and Miss Elsie Marriott-Watson is successful as Marie.

ASHINGTON.—MINERS' THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Gould.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Draycott's répertoire company entered upon their second week on Monday, when The Heart of a Hero was presented. As Jem Resdale Mr. Draycott gave a finished performance, being ably supported by Mrs. Draycott, a sympathetic Nell. The Dave Pritchard of Mr. George Steel was well studied; Mr. George Arthur played forcibly the part of Wilfred Marl, the villain; the comedy part of Timothy Heighno was ably undertaken by Mr. Will White; Mr. Wilfred J. Short was a manly Jack Collinson, and Mr. H. Scatchard's reading of the miser, George Winton, was satisfactory. Miss Eva Norman was neat and pleasing as Susie Slack; and Miss Marie Ellis as May Ryder and Miss Louise Millward as Mrs. Ryder were both good in their respective parts.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Messrs. Hallatt and Howard's company is here in Walter Howard's romantic play Her Love Against the World. The character of Eric, Earl of Strathmere, is played by Mr. Fred Emery with force, dignity, and impressiveness. Miss Grace Heywood gives a good representation of a true-hearted woman as Iris, Princess of Idalia; Miss Rossie St. John as Lionel, the boy brother of the Earl Strathmere, is fully equal to the demands made by the character; Mr. Lewis Gilbert invests the part of Ulric, Prince of Ravensburg, with thorough vindictiveness; Mr. W. H. Hallatt sustains the part of Prince Othmar with rare skill and keen perception. Minor rôles are capably interpreted.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leach; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jessie Burslem.—Another pantomime is here for the week, Mr. Harry Burns' combination being responsible for its interpretation. Mlle. Du Roche in the character of Robinson Crusoe is a sprightly boy, and sings in charming manner; Miss Marie Bell is a pert and chic Polly Perkins; Miss Kitty Trewhitt is equally attractive and smart as Tommy Bowline; Misses Ruby Aiston, Nina May, and Violet Ramsay score as Bessie Bar, Fairy Pearl, and Princess Koko. Mr. Henry Curwen exerts all his comic powers to create fun as Dame Crusoe; and Mr. Arthur Aiston is the usual swashbuckler as Will Atkins. Captain Cuttle and Captain's Mate are ably sustained by Messrs. Edwin and Harry Ramsay as contributors of comicality. Commendation is well bestowed in the case of Mr. Will Sterne, who enacts the part of Billy Crusoe; Mr. Billy Hubbard does the black-skinned man Friday in the orthodox manner; and Mr. Couth Griffiths merits praise as King Hannibal. Mr. Jack Montrose is a capital Demon Davy Jones; and the Pirates, Messrs. Hastings and Harkaway, are nimble as well as funny. The evolutions of the Yankee Doodle Girls are exhilarating.

THE NEW PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. C. F. Wilson.—The animated picture shows continue to attract amusement-seekers to this hall. The show of films is choice this week, the best and most up-to-date of Pathé Frères, Gaumont, and others. The most striking film is The Murder with a Butcher's Knife. The vaudeville artists for the week are Barney Ives, a clever conjurer and illusionist; and the Sarony Sisters, in a Continental novelty act.

THE PICTUREDROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros.; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Marks.—The picture shows for the week are excellent. The chief film is the great boxing match between Burns and Johnson, and is drawing crowds. Interludes are supplied by the Albion Quartette.

ATTERCLIFFE.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent.—The outstanding feature of this week's programme here is the engagement of Vonetta, described as the "Queen of Illusionists," who gives a clever and artistic exhibition of conjuring and illusions, in combination with remarkably quick changes of costume and graceful poses. Altogether, her act is unique, and calls forth well-deserved applause. The Paul Kramer troupe give a smart display on the trapeze; Miss Ethel Stephenson, contralto vocalist, has a rich voice which she knows well how to use, and her songs are rendered in admirable taste; Brady and Johnson present a laughable sketch, entitled Blunders; and other attractive items are given by Miss Winnie Wentworth (vocalist), Indiana (girl contortionist), Mr. Keane Harker (comedian), and the "Attergraph" pictures, The Auto-Heroine.

AYR.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—This week Mr. Chas. W. Poole's Myriorama and vaudeville company occupies this theatre. The pictures are a great feature, but interspersed are several turns by clever artists. Amongst these are Amasis, the Egyptian man of mystery; the Four Craigs, in their gymnastic turn; the Ettenas, performers on the rolling sphere; Robert Tebbitt, whistler, and Ray, Miles, and Ray, comedy jugglers.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—J. A. Campbell's company, in The Little Breadwinner, is here. Mr. J. Monkhouse gives a capital impersonation of Lord William Dorrington; and Mr. Reginald Brown does well as Richard Lawrence. Mr. Sydney Lynn is a humorous Charles Prior; and Mr. Alfred Maurice a Uriah Heap-like Joseph Prior. Miss Josephine Richards is a winsome Margaret Daventry; and Little Irene is very winning and clever in the title-rôle.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. E. Oswald Brooks' company, in The New Housemaid, is here. Mr. Howard L. Tracy is a clever and humorous Hon. Bertie Rashleigh; and Miss Babs Stuart is an effective and vivacious Dulcie. Miss Kate Newton draws a good portrait of Aunt Caroline; and Mr. Brember Wills is a good Peter Pinkerton. Mr. Herbert Colley is a capital butler, Roseberry; and Mr. P. Ramsay Forman a cute detective, Marmsbury Bloom. The Rev. Stephen Stingles is amusingly done by Mr. Archie Selwyn; and Miss Ruby Wyndham, Miss Josephine Middleton, Miss Renee de L'Estrange, and Mr. Reginald Hargreaves also deserve mention.

TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—Bella and Bijou, who are paying a welcome return visit, are the top of the bill here this week, and their performance brings down the house; Chimes is very clever and amusing in a musical fantasia; Fred Elton is, as usual, exceedingly good in his act; Arthur Stacey has some very catchy patter; Maude Vera is a smart and pleasing comedienne and dancer; Vernon's Bioscope contributes very considerably to the evening's entertainment.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—Some capital pictures of the King's and Queen's visit to Berlin are being shown.

BARRY DOCK.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn pays a return visit here this week, and on Monday drew a well-filled house with The Power of a Wicked Woman. Mr. Beaudyn gave an effective rendering of Philip Carey; and as Horace Winter Mr. C. D. Pitt did exceedingly well. Mr. Arthur Cresswell (Guy), Mr. Rupert Talbot (Lord Dumbey), Mr. Arthur Tomlin (Bransby), all capably filled their respective parts. Miss Irene Monro (Helen Terraire) gave a finished portrayal of a very heavy rôle; and Miss Winifred Rutland acted Denise in a most sympathetic manner. Miss Cecilia Crawford as Nellie Montague was very diverting; and the French character of Marie was ably acted by Miss Phyllis Rae.

BATH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch is here this week to sway local playgoers by her loving and kindly disposition. Mr. Gaston Mayer has been fortunate enough to secure the services of Miss Augusta Haviland to portray the title-rôle, and this charming actress gets every ounce out of the part; Mr. Stubbins and Miss Hazy are impersonated cleverly by Mr. Edward A. Coventry and Miss Armine Grace; Miss Beatrix Bell is highly amusing as Mrs. Eichorn; as is Miss Violet Chamier as Mrs. Schultz. Lovey Mary is portrayed with tenderness by Miss Winifred Murray; the young lovers, Miss Lucy and Mr. Bob, find capable exponents in Miss Dorothy Clifton and Mr. Guy Addison; the three children Asia, Europena, and Australia are commendably undertaken by Miss Margaret Nybloc, Miss Mimi Le Claire, and Miss Marie Stella. Mr. Wiggs is played by Mr. Francis Chamier with conviction.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth.—The leading item in this week's bill is supplied by the Singing Jockeys, boy vocalists and dancers, presented by G. Barclay, jun., and W. Netta. Bert Weston is again at hand to roll off funny stories and topical songs; Brull and Hemsley return to amuse with their scena Fun in a Music Shop; the contortions of Sim Moree, the Indian coil, baffle description; Rosie Reval scores in her Dutch and coon specialities. Alec B. Thorne, Scotch comedian, and Rose Pink, a young comedienne and dancer, also appear. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux continue to cause interest and pleasure.

BEDFORD.—ROYAL COUNTY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—Women and Wine is being presented this week by Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmond's company. The handsome stage presence and artistic acting of Miss C. St. Elmo as Marcel Ragadout, and the sympathetic rendering of Mary Andrews by Miss Violet Sims were much admired. Miss Octavia De Noel's clever impersonation of La Colombe was praiseworthy; and Miss Ethel Vinroy's performance as Janet Marlow added to the success of the piece. Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds as Dick Seymour had a difficult part, but he played with force and feeling; Mr. J. Milne Taylor was a dignified Hugh Seymour; and Professor Sauter was splendidly impersonated by Mr. W. Manning; while Mr. Harry Harrop was exceedingly funny as the Professor's son. In act three, Le Bal Masque, some clever dancing was performed by the Lottie Stone Troupe of whirlwind dancers. The scenery was excellent.

BELFAST. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—Miss Winifred Chalmers' company opened on Monday in The Master Criminal. In the title-rôle (Telford Lestage) Mr. Henry L. Osmond achieved a pronounced success by his powerful impersonation, and Miss Lilian Burns also deserves high praise for her clever interpretation of Cecile, alias Lady Trevennes; Mr. J. C. Carlyle was the detective, Ben Blandy, to the life, and Mr. Cuthbert Taylor ably presented the rôle of Philip Manners; Miss Dorothy Oswald furnished a charming interpretation of Mabel Manners, and Mr. Charles Tolcher, in the exacting rôle of Gentleman Jim, was decidedly effective; Mr. Harry Cook created much laughter with his inimitable impersonation of Tommy Dale, and Mr Russell Yorke as Dawnay furnished a convincing study; Miss Mabel Tremere was exceedingly vivacious as Peggy Perks; and other parts were sustained by Miss F. Carlyle and Messrs. B. C. Hacking, H. Mason, &c. Last night (Friday) the play Oliver Twist was announced for presentation.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. W. W. Kelly's company opened here on Monday in the popular historical play A Royal Divorce. As Josephine the charming actress, Miss Edith Cole, achieved her customary success with her remarkably clever impersonation, and honours were also achieved by Mr. Keith Fraser as Napoleon, his acting being thoroughly convincing. As the crafty Tallyrand it would be difficult to equal Mr. Percy H. Vernon, and Mr Stanley Harrison was admirable as the Marquis De Beaumont. In the difficult rôle of Marie Louise Miss Winnie Tempest deserves a special line for the excellence of her acting, and a delightful interpretation of Stephanie De Beauharnais was furnished by Miss Maud Lacy; Mr. Ernest Plumpton made the most of his opportunities as General Augereau. Some humour was invested in the rôle of the innkeeper, Grimaud, by Mr. George Hudson, and congratulations are due to Miss Ethel Love on her clever impersonation of the little King of Rome. As Lord Keith Mr. C. Jackson acquitted himself with distinction, and Mr. Harcourt S. Standing was good as Marshall Murat. Other rôles were adequately presented by Miss Helen Meadows, Miss Marie Johns, Miss Loyale Frere, Miss Nellie Lucas, and Messrs. W. Robbins, E. Lingford, Lawton Orme, &c.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmott and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The star here this week is Mr. Neil Kenyon, the droll Scotch comedian, who has been most successful in his creations, "The Scottish Postman" and "The Stationmaster o' Dunrobin." Another great favourite here is Miss May Moore Duprez, the original "Jolly Dutch Girl," who on Monday was warmly welcomed, encores being frequent. Messrs J. C. Piddock and company appear to great advantage in their original musical fantasy, The Capture of Venus, which is very entertaining; Mr. Hugh Cedar and Mr. Edward Elgar produce with much effect their novel comedy act Ye Days of Old; and Mr. Julian Mack, "the chatterbox," gains universal favour. Also appearing are Les Currys, in their musical speciality; the Kontaidos, with their feathered tribe; Ben Bradshaw, eccentric acrobats; and the Hipposcope.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—Mr. George Lashwood—fresh from pantomime triumphs in Belfast and Dublin—opened here on Monday, and achieved a great success; the Brasques present with much eclât a new and original playlet, entitled A Society Butterfly, which found much favour; and Miss Edith Fink is a smart comedienne with capital songs. The clever musical act of the Sisters Aindow is accorded a good reception; and Mr. Walter Barrett's vocalism is quite a treat. Also here are Tee and Tee, musical eccentrics; Sisters Herbert, described as the youngest sister team in vaudeville; and the Bioscope, under the direction of Mr McGibney.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—Under the direction of Mr. Gerald Tweedie, the following films have been exhibited:—A Drama in Seville, Vaccination Against Injuries, Life of an American Fireman, Wild Man from Borneo, White-gloved Man, &c. In addition, Lindsay and Harte, in their smart comedy act, and Mr. Alf Deane, the tall man, appear.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—Some beautiful films are exhibited here this week, including The Auto Heroine, Rival Sisters, Dauber's Whims, Hong Kong, For the Peace of the Family, &c. Smith and Ashcroft, capital comedians, and Miss Florrie French, a charming comedienne and dancer, appear with much success.

CLIFTONVILLE HALL.—General-Manager, Mr. O. E. Laumann.—Roller-skating continues to be a great attraction here, and the new manager (who is so courteous to everyone) announces more novelties. On Monday next the great Monahan will furnish exhibitions of graceful and fancy skating each afternoon and evening.

BILSTON. — NEW THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. John M. Dawson.—The World's Verdict, played by Mr. George Cremen's company, is on a return visit. The piece, which is admirably staged and mounted, meets with capital support. Miss Kitty McPherson is successful as the heroine, Nellie Ashford, and Miss Molly St. George does well in the heavier part of Cora Cassilli Willenhall.

PICTURE HALL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Will Hunter.—A really fine set of films is shown here this week.

BIRKENHEAD. — NEW THEATRE ROYAL. — Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—Mr. Herbert Ralland's company in Pinero's comedy His House in Order is again doing excellent business here. On the present occasion Hilary Jesson is finely played by Mr. J. Herbert Beaumont; Miss Elsie Roberts secures the sympathies of the audience by a clever performance of Nina; and Mr. J. Parish Robertson gives a careful rendering of the difficult rôle of Filmer Jesson, M.P. The Ridgeleys are admirably played by Mr. Langford Browne, Mr. Dudley Stuart, Miss Avis Grahame, and Miss Victoria Wray, and remaining characters are, without exception, capably represented.

ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Harry Lauder, the popular Scotch comedian, is making his first appearance in England after his recent American success. In addition to this undoubted attraction, the week's company also includes the Four Royal Scots, a quartette of young lady vocalists, dancers, and instrumentalists—a most attractive turn; Miss Millie Payne, comedienne; Kiltie's Camp, a clever representation of Scottish military camp life; Fyne and Hurley, comedians; the Rose Trio of comedy acrobats; Miss Lillie Lassah, comedienne and dancer; Mr. John Robbs, tenor vocalist; Pat Lynch, dancer; W. G. Wesley, comedian; and Brown's Royal Bioscope. The week's matinées have been devoted to a cinematograph exhibition of the fights of Johnson and Burns and Summers and Britt, and have been extensively attended.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball.—A leading feature is "Payen," an auto pierrot gymnast and illusionist, presented by Miss Lucia with excellent results; Johnson and De Vere, trick cyclists, execute some marvellous tricks; and a strong company also comprises Reppo and Ella, equilibrists; Miss Rosie White, comedienne; the Brooklands, song and dance artists; Bert Bowden, comedian; Carl Rosan, a talented vocalist; Brent Hayes, an expert banjoist; Stanley Foster, in his magical entertainment, and the Hippo. pictures.

BIRMINGHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—Dick Whittington concludes to-night, to make way for An Englishman's Home, specially secured for Monday next. The pantomime has been a big success, and the management are to be congratulated in having been able to draw on their own resources so well at the "first time of asking." Last night Mr. Tom Foy held his benefit at this house.

PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—Boy Blue continues to attract as well as ever, albeit the last few weeks are announced. On Tuesday next Miss Hettie King, the popular and bonnie Boy Blue, takes her benefit, when her popularity, without the special and extra attractions offered, should be sufficient to ensure a full house.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—Little Red Riding Hood is still the people's popular pantomime, the fun of the comedians, the charm of the comediennes, and the beauty of the scenery having abated their attractions in no wise. Signs of Mr. Collingwood's anniversary are in the air, while on Tuesday Mr. Bert Wilson's society, pleasantly denominated "the Tincans," will take the stalls. The Rocket Club visited the pantomime last night (Friday), the number of clubs which remain loyal to the Alexandra pantomime being great.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor.—The Eve of Her Wedding is fulfilling an attractive engagement here, with Mr. Wilson Benge and company. Mr. Benge makes an engrossing character as George Tremain, some time known as Nemo; while the acting of Miss Sadie Smith in the rôle of Mavis Leverton attracts irresistibly; Mr. Fred Lloyd makes excitement rife with his telling portrayal of the villain, Dean Clifton; Miss Florence Zillwood keeps things at a high tension by her vivid flashes in the character of the adventuress, Renie de Telle; Mr. Henry Danson gives a true touch of life to the rôle of Dick Leverton; Mr. Arthur Keand does very well as Squire Leverton; Mr. Gilbert Elvin imbues the rôles of Paul Cairshaw and Hyram P. Younger with much distinction; the comicalities of Mr. N Carter Slaughter as Rudolph Earle are of a very clever order; and Miss Mary Mall as the vivacious Kinkie scores indubitably.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Human Nature is having a big slice of success here with Mr. R. A. Beaton's company. Mr. S. Herbert Humber gives a stirring representation of the rôle of Captain Temple; Miss Ada Oakley plays the wife's rôle, Nelly, with fine feeling; Miss Beatrice Burdett scores as the friend, Cora Grey; Miss Nelly Peters fills the part of the maid, Lucy, with much success; Mr. C. W. Maxwell duly emphasises the baser nature of Stephen Mardyke; Mr. J. P. Dryden plays the solicitor's rôle, Matthew Hawker, in a clever style; Mr. E. Harvey White gives a comic representation of Horatio Spofkins which keeps the audience in the best of humours; and there is some very good acting on the part of the others.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Robertson.—Man and Wife, with Messrs. Van Biene and Traynor's company, is making a welcome visit here. Mr. Edward Van Biene figures largely as Colonel Lateur, his acting being very well studied, obviously; Mr. John F. Traynor's portrayal of the fisherman, Paul Revere, is one well calculated to please, being imbued with the aspirations of the rôle; Miss Kate Hallam as the fisher girl, Marcelle, shows great charm as well as dramatic ability; and the humours of the twins, Bimbo and Bambo, could not be in better keeping than that of Messrs. E. Hall-Eldon and George Vining. Miss Millie Dorris scores as the amorous Rosette; Mr. Edward H. Hamilton is very fine as Captain d'Esparre; and Mr. Geo. Overs is good as Jean.

PALACE THEATRE, BORDESLEY.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—The Silver King never seems to grow old, its success here with Messrs. Polini and Melford's company being as great as ever. Mr. Fred D. Daviss makes a capital Silver King, the recklessness and subsequent remorse of the character being depicted with much fidelity; Miss Madge Morley enacts the faithful but sorely-tried wife Nelly in manner poignant and very sympathetic; Mr. E. Stanton-Sharp gives a polished study of "the Spider"; while that unctuous rogue Coombe is impersonated to the life by Mr. Arthur Wright; the faithful Jaikes sees that tried and true impersonator of the rôle Mr. Edward J. George again to advantage; and Miss Lila Barclay, Mr. Leslie Ellis, Mr. Arthur H. Rooke, and the rest of the company are very good.

GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Ed. Foster. Crowded houses are being attracted here by George Robey, who is loudly encored for his funny songs and patter. Another big item is the Stockham Grecian Band of fifteen performers, whose selections are well applauded; the Poluski Brothers in their latest success are most amusing; Haley's Garden of Girls do an attractive turn; and Phillips and Merritt, the St. Johns, Baby Boden, Arthur Aldridge, Walter King and Arthur Kenny complete the bill.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—Victoria Monks is the bright particular star here and she wins loud applause for her latest successes. Jack Pleasant is amusing and droll; Boyd and Gilfain are a refined turn; An Outside Chance is a bright racing sketch in which Master Edward Garratt has a prominent part; and other good turns are done by the Lyric Mummers; Marstro and Oretta, Arthur Gill, La Danseuse, Boyd and Gilfain, and Barrington.

HIPPODROME. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Lyons.—Captain Fred Woodward's sea lions are always interesting; Maude Hall and Carleton Macy appear in a bright comedy-drama, which is thoroughly well played; the Krates do an amusing act, The Conductor; S. and G. Auer are exceedingly funny; the Cecilias have an amusing juggling act; and Bliss and Bliss, Mayne Cannon, and Terry and Bentley are excellent.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—Nat Clifford is attracting large houses here. The Adras do some difficult feats; and the excellent bill also includes Frank Harwood, Duncan and Godfrey, Nora Moore, Jessie Buckle, Jesse Hackett and Nash and Noel.

ASTON HIPPODROME.—Resident-Manager, Mr. T. Middleton.—On Monday the condensed opera Queen of the Adriatic was presented here. It is an artistic production, and deserves praise. Howard and Collinson do a novel and clever turn; Baldwin and Emerson are smart in their comic juggling act; Mollie Seymour is encored for her songs; and Horace Wheatley, Gladys and Alber, Harry Mantle, F. W. Warner, and the Orchids complete an entertaining company.

KING'S HALL.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy.—The programme at this place of amusement is again of an excellent character. The pictures include Face to Face, The Troublesome Creditor, The Count of Monte Cristo, &c. The variety turns are also very good, and include Mr. A. C. Ugo, conjurer and illusionist, whose feats are cleverly executed. Mlle. Vera Blanchard is also an attraction. The roller-skating rink is very popular, and is well attended.

CURZON HALL.—Lessee, Mr. Waller Jeffs.—Mr. Waller Jeffs has again made a change in the programme here, which includes a new Cinephone picture reproducing the original "Dance des Apaches." Variety is represented by The Players, who enter upon the last week of their engagement; and Miss Ducie Saunderson sings several illustrated songs with success.

QUEEN'S HALL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy.—The pictures at the Queen's Hall this week are of a very high standard, and include an interesting series, showing Burns and Johnson training for the fight which decided the championship of the world. Paddy turns Cabman after Eating Horseflesh is a very humorous selection, while there are numerous other pictures. The principal vaudeville item is provided by Miss Elsie Lewis, who shows much talent and is well received. Mr. Will Beauland proved a female impersonator of more than average ability, and the competition for local artists still attracts.

BISHOP AUCKLAND.—EDEN THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. Walter Melville's company occupies the boards here in The Girl Who Took the Wrong Turning. Mr. Frank Denis is a capital Richard Fenton; and Mr. Frank R. Robertson a good Jack Fenton; Mr. F. Ronald Adair plays the part of Willie Mason in fine style; and Mr. Raymond Wood (Jas. Harcourt), Mr. Sidney Sarl (Bill Slater), and Mr. F. Irgram (Johnny Walker) are satisfactory. Miss Jessie Belmore is a distinguished Sophie Coventry; as Lucy Coventry Miss Zoe Davis is excellent; and Miss Marie Kildare (Poppy Slater) and Miss Nannie Meade (Vesta Le Clerc) ably present those parts.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. Percy Williams' company is playing The Fatal Wedding here this week. Mr. Cecil A. Melton submits a faithful representation of Howard Wilson, and Mr. W. H. Garbois displays undoubted ability as Robert Curtis; considerable humour is supplied by Miss Ethel Sarjint as Bridget whilst Miss Lulu Wohlmann, who plays the part of Jessie, "the little mother," is a juvenile actress of very great promise. The play is excellently staged.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr. T. Sergenson.—Venus, a lady model of the late Lord Leighton, tops the bill here, and appears with success in a dancing act of the Salome order. She is a delightful dancer and very beautiful and graceful. Other turns are given by Hall and Wilson, expert trick cyclists; Coombes and Webb, banjoists; Arthur Hickman, a very good tenor vocalist; W. H. Blackman, an actor-mimic of no mean order; Æolia, a daring trapeze artist; and Leoville, a marvellous lady wire walker.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Geo. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—A programme of a very high standard is provided here this week. The place of honour is worthily filled by Paul Barnes, a popular humorist, who is droll to a degree; the Gaudsmidts are funny acrobats; Rich and Rich make merry in duologue and dance; the Cavallottis are expert musicians; the Gilberts are well received in a tight-wire act; whilst Kathleen Gray and Aggie Nolan are both pleasing and clever comediennes.

BLYTH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur C. Moody.—Continuing a successful pantomime season, Mr. Moody has provided an excellent attraction by the engagement of Mr. and Mrs. Levy's and Mr. J. B. Cardwell's popular juvenile company, who appear in The Babes in the Wood. In the title-rôles Little Peggie McDonnell and Cissie Wyse give a charming performance and are the recipients of the unstinted applause of the large audience present. The support rendered by the numerous members of the clever juvenile company is of a highly meritorious description; J. G. Aitkin, Harry Leandor, Jennie Watson, and the Marguerite Troupe introduce specialities of a pleasing character.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. J. Fraser.—The Edison pictures continue popular.

BOLTON.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Moncur.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is here this week with the new version of Hall Caine's play The Christian. The company is a good one, and all the characters are well sustained. Mr. Henry Renouf gives a fine rendering of the Hon. John Storm, and Miss Doris Gilham gives a realistic portrayal of Glory Quayle.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—One of the most powerful companies ever appearing here is engaged this week, and comprises George Formby, a Lancashire comedian, who has fairly stormed the house nightly; Ruhart, assisted by La Belle Rosalind, is also going strong with his novel burlesque on vaudeville; the Carpos Brothers give a smart acrobatic and head-to-head balancing turn; Bennett and Martell (old favourites here) appear in a new act entitled Shipwrecked Mariners; John Warren presents by his company a musical military mystery entitled The Magic Carpet. Other items are given by the Varleys, duettists; Phern and Phern, in their inimitable 'phone act; Lily Eyton, vocal comedienne; Les Zelovas, acrobatic equilibrists; Fields and Lewis, vaudeville stars of burlesque; and the Olympian Team of comedy cyclists.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, the Hippodrome, Bolton, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece.—A good company has again followed a good company, the principal turn here being the inimitable Zona Vevey in My Lady's Bower, introducing her latest dainty songs with catchy choruses, assisted by Herr Max Erard (pianist), accompanist. Other turns are Miss Alexandra Royal, burlesque actress and character vocalist; Blanco J. White, comedian and buck dancer; Leo and Roland, novelty equilibrists; the Langfords, in a refined singing and tricky dancing act; Charles Coll, comedian; Vowles and Bryan, in their refined scena, Song and Story in a Garden; George Reeves, eccentric comedian; Wyllie, comedy tramp musician; Abel and Welch, in their eccentric comedy act, and the Hippodrome Bio.

BOOTLE.—MUNCASTER THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pennington; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Young.—The Zerbinis Troupe, with their musical novelty, The Enchanted Glen, are proving a strong feature here this week; Sam Shipley is well received with his songs and patter; Morimura, the Japanese conjurer, mystifies his audience with good tricks; Bessie Willows is a charming and pleasing comedienne; the Dorian Troupe show strength and agility in their gymnastic performance; Little Vi Norman, child vocalist; Nick and Nack, comedians; and Dolly Brough, comedienne, completes.

BOSTON.—PALACE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Fountain and Holloway.—On Monday a company, with Dolly Reforming Herself, paid a flying visit, under the direction of Messrs. T. Grant Allen and Geoffrey Besant. The whole of the compnay travelled by motor cars. A very large audience had the pleasure of witnessing this fine production. Mr. Clayton Greene made an excellent Harry Telfer; and Miss Aimee de Burgh was capital as his wife, Dolly, to whom the success of the evening was due. Mr. P. Besant was a very manly Mathew Barrow; Miss G. Bibby played Mrs. Sturgess in good style; Mr. E. Sterling as Professor Sturgess was at his best. The scenery was very pretty and the dresses excellent.

BOURNEMOUTH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. David Allen and Sons; Sole Lessee, Mr. Mouillot; Manager, Mr. Hubert Dunbar. Mr. Gaston Mayer's company in a return visit of Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch opened here on Monday. In place of Mrs. Madge Carr Cook the name-part is being played by Miss Gertrude Irving, who in depicting the vicissitudes of a loving personality showed herself an actress of no mean versatility. She received strong support from Mr. Frederick Forrest, a capital Mr. Stubbins, Miss Rita Carlyle with a carefully finished study of Miss Hazy, Miss Maud Townsend as the "timid" Mrs. Richorn, Miss Amy Fenchette, well cast as Mrs. Schultz, and Miss Margaret Shelly as Lovey Mary.

BRADFORD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. T. F. Doyle; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Richardson.—On last Monday night Messrs. George Edwardes and Charles Frohman presented to a large and highly-appreciative audience here the latest musical success A Waltz Dream, which is gorgeously staged. Full justice was done to the tuneful numbers the piece contains, and in the hands of the clever company engaged on the representation the humorous situations were made the most of, laughter and applause greeting the performance throughout. In a bright and exceedingly clever rendering of the part of Franzi Steingruber Miss May de Sousa scored a genuine success, her vocalism being a feature of the impersonation; and Miss Ethel Cadman, who shared in the honours, was altogether charming as Princess Helene. Miss May Marion played the buxom Fi-Fi prettily; Mr. Eric Thorne was delightfully quaint as Joachim XIII., eliciting roars of laughter; and Mr. Leslie Holland's bearing and humour as Count Lothar tickled his audience immensely. In the part of Lieut. Niki, the Austrian prince, Mr. Wilson Pembroke made a most favourable first appearance, and he sang with expression and power. The scenic effects are magnificent. The Ladies' Orchestra is a feature of the production, and the dresses are very beautiful.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Councillor Francis Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—The run of Red Riding Hood continues with unabated success here. On Tuesday last Miss Florrie Forde (the principal boy) had her benefit, when the theatre was crowded both at the matinée and at the evening performance. There were many extra "turns" provided by the beneficiaire's colleagues from the local theatres and Leeds and Halifax.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—Fred Edwards and Co. (including Miss Bertha Northam), in Kleptomaniacs, are providing plenty of fun; the sketch contains some very funny situations, and it goes with a swing. Casey's Court is presented again, with Will Murray as Mrs. Casey; there is plenty of broad, boisterous fun in the sketch, and some good singing by the juveniles, who represent street urchins. Nellie Coleman, "the female comedian," also reappears, and her broad comedy and remarkable "gets up" entertain highly; Ben Albert's "logic" proves very diverting; Melia and Mozarabar, with their cleverly-trained ravens and pigeons, give a pretty and pleasing entertainment; "Her Wedding Day" is a clever monologue, presented here again successfully by Ethel Newman; as "the stage-struck costumier" May Edouin displays ability as a comedienne; Billy French is a clever wooden-shoe dancer; the Chronomegaphone, with selections by Will Evans and Victoria Monks, presents a new attraction; and there are capital pictures shown by the Bioscope.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Harrison.—"The Smart Set" (including Miss Georgie Martin) are an entertaining company of the drawing-room type, who are particularly successful; a capital turn is furnished by the Fordyces, comedy artists and dancers; Johnny Holland and company, in My Friend Boots (substituted for The Boatbuilder), are again this week eliciting hearty laughter; Ada Fawn, in a comedienne turn, meets with much success; a very bright and clever turn by the Royal Czar troupe of Russian dancers commands hearty marks of appreciation; Hanvarr and Anna Lee ("the golfer and the maid") give a fine juggling display; there is some excellent vocalism by Adah Payne, late of the Moody-Manners company; Jack Cromo and Meg Hamilton, of recent pantomime fame here, present successfully their comedy turn The Old and New; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux are a feature of the entertainment.

BRIGHOUSE.—ALBERT THEATRE — Lessees Messrs. Beanland and Emerson; Manager, Mr. Charles H. Beanland.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company in The Lancashire Lad, under the able direction of Mr. Hugh Wallace, opened to a capital house on Monday. Mr. Joe Millane as the Lancashire Lad is well adapted for the part, and plays the character realistically; John Willie Wardle is played by Mr. Bob Anderson in his inimitable way, causing roars of laughter throughout; Mr. Hugh Wallace supplies a faithful study of Jem Wincote; Miss Molly Monaghan as Mother Wardle throws plenty of life and humour into her part; Jessie Wincote is in the capable hands of Miss Mabel Rose; the Sisters Gaye as Flossie Mayfair and Trixie Golightly score heavily with their singing and dancing. The scenery and staging are excellent.

BRIGHTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Gates; General-Manager, Mr. Ben Court.—Mr. W. V. Garrod and company opened here on Monday with A Country Girl in London. Miss Bertha Kingston sustained the title-rôle, and gave a very fine and expressive enactment; Mr. W. V. Garrod submitted an admirable representation of Frank Gordon; Mr. John S. Sheridan was highly successful as the Squire of Langdale; Mr. Stewart Quartermayne gave an excellent impersonation of Godfrey Clinton; Mr. Clifford Marle was very effective as the ne'er-do-well, Joe Smithers; Miss Josephine Colona made a charming Gwendoline Gordon; and plenty of fun was afforded by Mr. Seymour Parry as Wilberforce Puddyphat and Miss Ethel Whiteley as Adelaide Puddyphat. The play was superbly staged.

ALHAMBRA.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Alfred Smith.—There is a capital company here this week. Mr. Frank Hardie's company achieve great success in the dramatic episode The Traitor; Cressie Leonard wins very hearty applause for her charmingly-rendered songs; the Four Spanish Goldinis give a novel electrical speciality entertainment, which includes some clever carpet spinning; Eugene and Willie are a diverting pair of musical clowns; Earle and Godfrey are pleasing singers and dancers; Flo Inman, vocalist and dancer, is cordially received; Charles Leighton, comedian at the piano, gives an effective turn; the Doreen Girls sing and dance themselves into favour; Cash and Clair are clever dancers; Percy Sarrimond, tenor vocalist, is distinctly successful; and the Alhambra Picturegraph furnishes interesting and amusing subjects.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. J. Brown.—An excellent programme is sustained here this week. The pantomime The Forty Thieves meets with a very hearty reception. Great fun is provided by Bob Selvidge as Ali Baba; and among others who are highly effective are Robb Wilton (Cogia), Bertha Clifton (Ganem), Cecilia Gold (Morgiana), Poppy Holland (Zaide), and Chris Le Brun (Percy, Ali Baba's donkey). The remaining turns are attractive. The Ted Moxon Trio of Continental acrobats are very eccentric; Bostock's baboons perform some clever tricks; Mark Leslie is warmly applauded for his coon songs and dances; and Phil Bransby is very entertaining.

WEST PIER.—Secretary, Mr. A. W. Scholey.—Mr. George Lestocq and company are here this week with The Sportsman. Mr. George Lestocq gives a capital impersonation of the mendacious "sportsman," Harry Briscoe; Mr. Wilfried Compton makes a capital Dr. Halroyd; Miss M. Du Val is a charming and refined Mrs. Briscoe; Miss Agnes Maude gives a good character study as the garrulous Mrs. Critchly; Mr. Sidney Bransgrove is well suited as Mr. Perkins; and effective support is given by Mr. Gordon Smythe (Bob Briscoe) and Miss Pauline Emeric (Emily).

PALACE PIER THEATRE.—King's Royal Bioscope submits some capital pictures here this week. Italy's Marvellous Cavalry is a splendid film, A Christmas Eve Dream is highly interesting, and other pictures in the programme include The Custom Officer's Revenge, Grandpa's Pension Day, The Train Robbers, The Electric Man, Leah the Forsaken, and Moving Day.

COURT THEATRE.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Maud Barrasford.—There is a capital series of animated pictures here this week. A film depicting the Invasion of England is interesting; The Sailor's Adopted Child conveys a dramatic story; The Donkey That Was Not an Ass is a very clever production; and much amusement is afforded by The Runaway Dog, The Nurses' Race, and King for an Hour. Barrasford's Sable Operatic Minstrel Troupe are very successful in new songs and jokes.

BRISTOL.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr James Macready Chute.—This is the last week of Aladdin, which has been highly successful. The pantomime is staged to perfection, the scenery being very fine, and the dresses both tasteful and costly. The company is an exceptionally good one, the members of which all appear to be suited to their respective parts, and they work admirably together. Miss Ouida Macdermott makes an ideal Aladdin; she invests the part with considerable dramatic power, she sings very pleasingly, and her selections of songs are all in good taste. Miss Deborah Volar is pleasing as the Princess; she is a well-trained vocalist, her songs are all pretty, and she acts the part so as to render it interesting. Miss Topsy Sinden has scored much success with her artistic and graceful dancing, her part of Yu-Bu-Tee being played with considerable ability. Miss Daisy Lloyd Wood infuses plenty of gaiety into the part of Our Mary Ann (from London), and scores with her songs and dances. The comedians are all successful, Mr. Bransby Williams playing Abanazar effectively, and scoring with his character-sketches; Mr. W. H. Powell being really amusing as Widow Twankey; and Mr. Alfred Clark making a capital broad comedy part of the Emperor. Miss Florence Foster has displayed much ability as Ah Sing; Mr. Alfred Sutcliffe's singing has met with much appreciation in the part of Pekoe; and others who have rendered admirable assistance are Miss Flora Gordon (Slave of the Lamp), Mr. Jocelyn Hope (Genie of the Ring), Mr. Walter Fairbrother (Amenophis), Mr. Herbert Uzielli (Zoroaster), Miss Nellie Palmer (Love), and Miss Sabina Guiver (Power). The ballets have been universally admired, and the large contingent of extra ladies, all dressed magnificently, have added much to the effective staging of the pantomime.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Ally.—Everything still goes merrily at the "Old," as yet there being no sign of any wane in the popularity of Little Red Riding Hood. Some benefits have now been announced, with extra attractions.

PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Treasurer, Mr. F. J. V. Welchman.—Rousby's company head the bill in Greater London. The scenic and dioramic effects are very fine, the idea being a visit of tourists to the White City. Galetti's monkey comedians are amusing and well trained; Ethel Pender-Cudlip and Claude Anderson present the "Miserere" scene from Il Trovatore with appropriate scenery, both artists having exceptionally fine voices, and singing in true artistic style; the Woodwards do a clever balancing act with cycles, &c.; Will Mitcham does a good musical act; Roze and Calvert are a smart comedy duo; George Acre is successful with his song-scena "Dear Old Westminster"; Mignonette Kokin is a vivacious comedienne and an expert dancer; and the performance concludes with interesting animated pictures.

EMPIRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Henry De Vries is presenting his protean sketch, Trapped by Telephone, in which he cleverly sustains eight characters, and is ably assisted by Miss Dorothy Drake and Miss Florence Harcourt in the two female parts. The sketch is interesting and well staged. Jack and Evelyn amuse with their comic speciality, Come Into the Office; Edie Veno, eccentric comedienne, does a good turn of song and dance; Mark Tedwell, comedian, obtains applause; Austin Lenton and Agnes Lane entertain with their comedy concoction Unconsidered Trifles; the Paulastons do a good comedy tumbling and acrobatic act; Marie Wilton is a pleasing comedienne; Frank Weir, patter comedian, is appreciated; and Damerell and Rutland cause merriment with their speciality, House Full. Interesting animated pictures conclude the entertainment.

COLSTON HALL.—Sydney Carter's New Century pictures are being exhibited here, including the special film, something like 15,000ft. in length, of the Johnson-Burns fight. There is a competent orchestra, and the pictures are shown twice daily.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA THEATRE, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—Her Road to Ruin finds much favour on the first visit to Broughton of Frederick Melville's production. Miss Beatrice Edwards impressively acts the principal part of Jess Willoughby; the heroic curate, Frank Temple, is vigorously portrayed by Mr. Henry Wolston; while Philip Hardy is excellently presented by Mr. Alex Bradley. Miss Nellie Bonser as Mary Dawson, Marie de Vaune, and 'Orrible Mary does very well in the three parts; Miss Alice Bowes is a charming May Willoughby; Mr. Harry Talbot as Billy Boots and Miss Marie Wright as Jenny Crackling successfully add a lot of comic business. Mr. Duncan Yarrow as Tom Wells, Mr. Dane Clarke as the Bishop, and Mr. V. R. C. Moors as Charles Cholmondeley make excellent use of their opportunities; and the remaining characters are well placed.

BURNLEY.—VICTORIA OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Mr. George Edwardes's company is here in The Merry Widow. Mr. Frank Greene sings well and is a brilliant actor as Danilo; whilst Miss Mysie Devine is most fascinating in the title-rôle. Mr. Ripley Evans has a fine tenor voice, which is used to advantage as Vicomte de Jolidon; and pretty acting and delightful singing is done by Miss Ada Thomas as Natalie. Baron Popoff, brimful of humour, is represented by Mr. Edward D'Arcy; and Mr. Fred Fowler is a clever dancer and a funny Nisch. Mr. Clifford Seyler is good as General Novakovitch; and Miss Katie May dances charmingly as Frou-Frou. The beautiful music of Franz Lehar is excellently rendered by the chorus and orchestra under the baton of Mr Ernest Vousden.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—Arthur Dandoe and company appear in a musical burletta in three scenes, The Phonograph Belle, which goes exceeding well, Mr. Dandoe causing great fun as Crookie Shanks, while there is a capital chorus; Surrie Lindon's entertainers are very good in a miniature musical comedy, Monks at Play, introducing pretty music and excellent dances; Miss Marie Vere, chorus singer, has a most cordial reception; and Fritz Kornan wins much favour with whistling solos. The Four Scoreys in a musical acrobatic act provide a good turn; whilst the Maltans, with "Kiss me again, dear," cause great merriment. Bert Harrow and Miss Marion Walker for "On the Prom" are also warmly received; and the picture by the Empire Theatrescope is of the Cup tie between Burnley and Tottenham Hotspur.

PALACE THEATRE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr Badcoe.—Pride of place in this week's bill is given to the playlet Claude Duval, which is beautifully dressed and mounted, and most creditably performed by Messrs. Arthur Max, Harry Calver, Geo. Hammond, Jack Collinson, and the Misses Victoria Douglas and Ray Heyden. Wilton Heriot and company present a clever quick-change sketch, An Anglo-American Alliance; and J. W. Rowley, an old favourite, is warmly received. Master Day gives a clever performance with diabolo spools; and James Piper is most acceptable in a musical turn introducing bagpipes and bassoon. Cassie Walmer, coon singer, is full of dash and sings catchy songs; whilst Tate and Tate are clever acrobats and contortionists. A good programme is completed by Marion Armitage, comedienne; Harvey and Holt, comedy speciality artists; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux.

BURSLEM.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. R. Colin; Manager, Mr Matt. Hall.—Fine pictures and clever vaudeville items form the programme.

BURTON-ON-TRENT.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bennett; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. de Hague Body.—Mr. Chas. M. Bertie's company is here for the week with The Flower Girl. Miss Eva Nelson as Lily the flower girl is a winsome and clever artist, acting and singing excellently; Miss Lilian Drake is effective as Lizette de Racquet; Miss Georgie de Lara is decidedly amusing as Miss Greenhill (a Suffragette); and Miss Elsie Loir is good as Maisie Flirtington. Mr. John T. McCallum has a strong part in Joe Wheeler, and does full justice to it; Mr. John Latham is very capable as Johnny Wheeler; and as the Honourable Billy Greenhill Mr. Robert Cranny is first-class throughout; Mr. Louis du Cane as Reginald Rackit and Mr. Hy. Adnes as Alphonse de Racquet both do well; while Mr. A. Sawyer as Mr. Bunker, the bookmaker, is responsible for hearty laughter. Other parts are well played by Mr. G. Brailsford and Mr. F. Cranbourne. The piece is splendidly mounted and dressed, and the singing of the chorus worthy of commendation.

BURY (Lancs.).—ROYAL.—Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant-Resident-Manager, Mr. H. H. Potter.—Considerable interest is evinced in the visit of Mr. Herbert Sleath's company in A White Man. Mr. Frank Tennant acts throughout with ease as Jim Carson; the Earl of Kerhill is in the capable hands of Mr. Harold T. Richardson; Mr. R. A. Brandon makes the part of Big Bill stand out prominently; and Mr. Eric Hudson is the Indian Chief Tab-y-wana to the life. Mr. Gerald Earle is good as Cash Hawkins; Mr. Cecil Yapp gives a clever study of Shorty; and Mr. F. Thornton makes a capital Baco White. Valuable assistance is rendered by Mr. H. Wilmott Jackson as Sir John Applegate, Mr. William Dempsey as Malcolm Petrie, and Mr. Henry Hare as Bud Hardy. Miss Margaret Fairleigh is admirable in the part of Nat-u-ritch, and Diana has a capable exponent in Miss Eleanor May.

CIRCUS OF VARIETIES.—Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Assistant-Resident-Manager, Mr. H. H. Potter.—Some excellent films are on view this week, particularly noticeable being Custom Officers Slick and The Vampires of the Coast. Pleasing variety is contributed by the Cheers, introducing some cleverly trained cats, and Mazie Hibbs, dancer.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Manager, Mr. T. Edward Owen.—H. O. Wills maintains his popularity as a comedian of ability and originality; Captain Kettle is a neat comedy coin and card manipulator, and his patter is diverting; the possessor of a splendid baritone voice, Angus Strong is deservedly popular; and Fountainblau's dogs give evidence of careful training. Will Nosam, vocalist; Jean Kram, juggler; Edwards and Ward, comedy entertainers; the Five Bombays, harmony singers and dancers, and Lyons Trio in a clever and amusing pantomimic act complete a bill of all-round excellence.

BURY ST. EDMUNDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—General-Manager, Mr. Auguste A. Peuleve.—A flying visit of Dolly Reforming Herself, under the direction of Mr. Jerrard Grant Allen and Mr. Geoffrey Besant, has been a great attraction here. The part of Harry Telfer is excellently played by Mr. Clayton Greene; Mr. Reginald Besant's drily humorous impersonation of Matthew Barron would be difficult to improve on; Mr. Donald Calthorp is splendidly suited in the part of Captain Wentworth; Mr. Edward Sterling and Mr. Charles Hawthorne giving entire satisfaction as Professor Sturgess and Rev. James Pilcher; a winning portrayal of Dolly comes from Miss Aimee de Burgh, and the hysterical Mrs. Sturgess is cleverly presented by Miss Gertrude Bibby.

CAMBRIDGE.—NEW THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. B. Redfern, J.P., D.L.—Mr. Stanley James's company, in the comedy, My Wife, gave an interesting performance on Monday evening. Mr. C. H. Croker King is well known here, and as Gerald Eversleigh he had a part that suited him to perfection; Miss Mary Carnegy made a delightful character of Beatrice Dupré (Trixie); Mr. James Geldred was good as the effeminate Hon. Gibson Gore; Miss Katherine Harrington was taking and pleasing as Miriam Hawthorne; Mr. Cecil Brooking cleverly rendered M. Dupré; Mr. Stanley Killby was excellent as M. Valboure; as were Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald (Captain Putnam Fusby), Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree (René Falandres), Mr. Ashley Percival (Baron Granclos), Miss Olivia Edwards (Mrs. Denham Lane), Miss Barbara Fenn (Baroness Granclos), Miss Winifred Beadnell (Mme. Dupré), and Miss Dorothy Mayhew (Marie). The comedy was preceded by a refreshing little piece, entitled The Vengeance of Jim, played capitally.

CARDIFF.—NEW THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Robt. Redford.—A most welcome return visit is made this week by Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company in Tom Jones. In consequence of the regrettable indisposition of Miss Florence Smithson, the part of Sophia on Monday night was played by Miss Rene Carew, a charming young lady, whose performance was most acceptable; Mr. Harry Welchman did well as Tom Jones; Mr. Ambrose Manning's Squire Western was decidedly good; a really clever and humorous portrayal of Benjamin Partridge was given by Mr. George Elton; and Mr. J. T. Macmillan was quite at home as Gregory. Miss Joan Ritz made a bright and sprightly Honour; as Lady Bellaston Miss Alice Oppitz was seen to advantage; Mr. John Morley as Mr. Allworthy was particularly noticeable for his bass singing; and Mr. Deane Percival did well as Blifil.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. S. Dring.—An exceptional turn here is Alice Pierce, who presents several impressions of well-known players; Mr. Herbert Darnley's company is seen to advantage in The Mandarin; the Delevines are welcome with their successful act Flip and Flop; Adams and Ward are smart acrobatic comedians; Helen Forsyth, the heroine of the Queen disaster, renders a song descriptive of the scene, illustrations adding to its realism; the Coloured Meisters are acceptable with their quartettes; and Jack Lane, the Yorkshire rustic; Rex Fox, the ventriloquist on the wire; Frances Letty, America's great lady wooden-shoe dancer; and Bioscope pictures are the remaining items in a varied entertainment.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Burton.—The sketch occupying a large portion of this week's performance is The Cowboy Millionaire, presented by Mr. Harry Roxbury, in which Mr. Tubby Edlin is remarkably amusing. Mr. Bert Maddison, a Cardiff man who has just recently taken to the halls, is accorded a hearty reception; J. H. Greener, in a song of the Durham pit disaster, appeals particularly to audiences in this city; and Click and Clack, the lady barrel jumpers; Mollie and Winnie Brooke, vocalists and dancers; the Brothers Rees, cannon ball manipulators; Lisbon and Barker, comedians; and Gladys Witton, contralto, are others who help a capital bill of fare.

CARLISLE.—H. M. THEATRE.—Lessees, Mr. Thos. Courtice and Mrs. R. Stewart McKim; Manager, Mr. Thos. Courtice.—The popular melodrama Sherlock Holmes is on a return visit this week. Mr. H. Hamilton Stewart has brought a most capable company, the staging is excellent, and the quick-change lighting effects add to the impressiveness of the "curtains." Mr. Stewart appears in the title-rôle, and gives a finished and artistic performance. His strong personality and effective handling of the character made it stand out with quite unusual boldness. As Moriarty Mr. Robert Gilbert was equally successful, his powerful impersonation meeting with well-deserved recognition. Mr. Arthur Shelton as the Doctor, Mr. Walter A. Chetham as the Butler, and Mr. Mark D. Draper as James Larabee filled their respective parts with great credit. Miss A. Bruce-Joy gave a quiet and effective impersonation of Miss Faulkner, and Miss Edith Vogne's handsome appearance and capital acting made Madge Larabee prominent.

THE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting Manager, Mr. C. F. Morgan.—The Paquali Brothers top the bill here, and their performance is truly astonishing, the neatness and nerve displayed, combined with daring and skill, thoroughly meriting the enthusiastic applause they receive nightly. As trapeze artists Natalia and Diana give a clever and attractive display; Jennie Hartley has some excellent songs, which she renders with any amount of dash and go; her dancing, too, is neat and effective, and met with every sign of approval. A sensational comedy gymnastic act by Spangles and Sawdust is well and smartly worked and creates laughter and applause; Stage Aspirants, a well-played comic skit by Dene and Dawson, is not the least interesting item in the programme; and the Pepiscope shows a fine series of pictures, the most popular being Land of the Midnight Sun and Major Richardson's Bloodhounds on a Trail.

CARMARTHEN.—Assembly Rooms.—Proprietors, Public Rooms Co.; Secretary, Mr. Edward Baldwin.—Mr. Ernest Bodkin's powerful company is here in The Thief, under the management of Mr. Alban B. Limpus. Mr. Frank Darch as Richard Chelford gives such a pleasing and powerful interpretation as to elicit the warmest encomiums. Miss Kathlyn Stocks, in her excellent representation of Marise Chelford, shows that she posesses dramatic power of a high order. Mr. C. W. Lindsay gives a fine portrayal of the difficult part of Harry Leyton, his performance being very natural; Mr. Ernest Bodkin supplies an admirable representation of Raymond Leyton; Miss Mary Forrester is an artistic Mabel; Mr. T. Taylor-Vinson is an unqualified success as Mr. Protheroe, the private detective; and Mr. Akers capably enacts the minor part of servant. The dresses and scenic effects are elaborate.

CASTLEFORD.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor and Licensee, Mr. Chas. Gadsby; Business-Manager, Councillor Hy. Masterman, J.P.—On Monday Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company presented Leah Kleschna by special arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman. Mr. Charles Barrett as Paul Sylvaine is to be congratulated on his able interpretation; Mr. Barrett is fortunate in being associated in so many scenes with Miss Bessie Rignold, who gives a powerful impersonation of Leah Kleschna; Mr. William Clayton plays Kleschna extremely well; Raoul Berton as portrayed by Mr. Arthur Leigh is a sound performance; Mr. William Hielbronn makes the part of Schram stand out prominently.

Queen's Theatre of Varieties. — Proprietors, Messrs. Chas. Beanland and W. H. Emerson; General-Manager, Mr. Will H. Emerson.—Topping the bill here are Rochez's performing dogs and ponies. They have evidently been well trained, and go through their various feats as if they enjoyed them. Les Wambas are smart and elegant on the trapeze, and their musical entertainment meets with hearty applause. Harry Bland, eccentric comedian; Celest, a clever wire performer, who achieves an emphatic success; Dalton and Euston, black and white comedians; Blanche Leslie, a charming contralto; Forest and King, in smart acrobatic dancing; and Arthur Bright, Milanese piper, are also in the bill. The Loyal Dominion Company is presenting interesting pictures.

CHATHAM.—Barnard's Palace of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Beattie and Babs, a pair of juvenile artists, astonish all by their skill as vocalists and dancers; Lew Peterman raises many a laugh by his stories of the sayings and doings of his friend Levy; Ross and Lewis, the Yankee duo, go better than ever; the Avolos are particularly smart in their acrobatic act; Stuart and Evans, comedians, the Wyffs, in an amusing comedy, St. Valentine's Day, Phil Peters, jun., the rag-time boy, and Victoria Glenn, also appear; while Lacey's Erascope has a most interesting series of views of Nijni-Novgorod.

Gaiety Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Capt. H. B. Davis; Manager, Mr. G. Humphries.—At the top of the bill here we have Lottie Lennox, who is making a conspicuous success, her song, "Join the Territorials," being most popular; the Three Comerfords make a decided hit as comedy acrobats; Jimson's Pets at Home is freely applauded; and Lill Elfreda's representations of well-known music hall artists are thoroughly appreciated. Others on welcome return visits are Allsopp and Beckwith, the popular couple, and Mark Adams and company, in song scena, "The Wanderer." Fred Dornan and the Edisonograph complete the list of attractions.

CHESTER. — Royalty Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. B. Fountaine.—An excellent variety company is here this week. Lievin and Pantzer top the bill, and give a smart exhibition of acrobatic and equilibristic feats; Charles Rothwell is a quaint comedian of promise; and Marie Neilson a good comedienne and dancer. Smarte Bros. excel in the eccentric acrobatic business; and Frank Mortimer is a good light comedian. Mme. Roma's Six Juggling Girls give a clever and finished display of Indian club juggling; Miss Zona Joy's sketch absurdity, Selling a Gee-gee, convulses the audience; all members of the cast are clever, and deserve every praise. Some excellent pictures by the Imperial Biograph complete.

COATBRIDGE. — Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, the Coatbridge Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Business-Manager, Mr. John Commins.—This week the boards here are occupied by the Coatbridge Amateur Dramatic Association, who are for the first time producing Jeanie Deans.

COLCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Chas. Macdona; Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Graham Macdona.—Mr. Charles Frohman's talented company in The Hypocrites is paying a return visit this week, and the house on Monday was highly enthusiastic. Mr. H. Lewrence Leyton as the Rev. Edgar Linnell was quietly convincing and always held his auditors with a strength duly shown by repeated curtains. Miss Grace Murielle established her name with much respect as an actress of ability and adaptability in the part of Mrs. Wilmore. Mr. Charles Harley showed a great appreciation of the rôle of Lawyer Viveash; Miss Violet Harley in the very pathetic part of Rachel Neve was always an attractive study. Two most capital studies of real life were Mr. Wilmore and Rev. Daubeney as portrayed by Mr. F. Morland and Mr. F. C. Thurstans respectively, whilst two minor parts, viz., Sir John Plugenet and Dr. Blaney, were nicely depicted by Mr. Chas. Tyrel and Mr. Fred Lake. Mr. S. Dennys acted very naturally as Leonard; Miss Muriel Mason made a charming picture as Helen; and the "nosey Parker" qualities of Mrs. Blaney were illustrated with much truism by Miss Millie Emden.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Colchester Hippodrome Co.; Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Ben de Frece.—The leading turn this week is furnished by Mr. Fred S. Peake and company in the romantic sketch The Gambler, and the parts are worthily sustained by Miss Dora Davis and Messrs. Fred S. Peake, Edwin Morton, Hy. Hatchman, and S. Power. Bros. Durant, in their skit on aerial navigation, are entertaining; Frank Couch, ever original, is a most welcome turn, his personality being highly popular; the Frohmans present a musical act of a charming description; Sisters Selwyn are on a return; Peter Shannon gives a variety of dances; and films by Williamson and Pathé afford real pleasure.

CONSETT.—New Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance.—Mr. Fred Granville's pantomime company is here in The Babes in the Wood. Mr. Val Morgan plays the part of Aconita with much skill, and is well supported by Miss Maud Harvey, Miss Dolly Sables, Miss Rose Dale, Miss Madge Courtney, and Miss Aice Walton. Miss Hilda Brendt is pleasing as Sylvania, the Fairy Queen; Mr. Alf. Brooks as Araminta Koffkake is the life and soul of the humorous side of the pantomime; as Maid Marian Miss Hettie Lind is charming, with her well-trained voice and stylish dancing; Miss Mary Poulton as Robin Hood introduces some new songs, which contribute to the success of the pantomime; and other specialities are Wilson and Purdy, clever juveniles; the Kimberley Boys, good dancers; and Vi Wilson, a little mite who receives applause from crowded houses.

Daly's New Hall.—Lessee, Mr. John Cottrell; General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Campbell.—An exceptionally good programme is given here this week, amongst the best of the pictures being The Ayah's Revenge, The Little Woodcutter, The Blacksmiths' Strike, A Double Suicide, and A Clown's Christmas Eve.

CORK.—Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Thomas F. O'Brien.—A capital company here this week includes Leo Dryden, the popular descriptive vocalist, who gives a series of song playlets, which are very clever and interesting; Ernest Powell is a talented pianist, and provides a musical treat; the Gascoignes supply some amusing patter; Lil Hartley, comedienne, gains approval for her singing; Miss Elsa Joel, operatic vocalist, contributes some acceptable songs; Charles Pastor, comedian, is most popular; the Mezzettis, in comedy act, entitled The New Recruit, are clever horizontal bar performers, all-round gymnasts, &c.; and the Palascope displays some excellent pictures.

COVENTRY.—Empire Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Dance; Manager, Mr. R. Draco.—Good audiences are well repaid this week by the programme provided. Jordan and Harvey, the Hebrew comedians, are top turn, and provide plenty of amusement; a clever sketch is given by Mr. Victor Widdicombe and company, who present Her Devonshire Dad, Mr. Widdicombe taking with success the part of a Devonshire farmer; the Eight 'Varsity Girls give some pleasing songs and dances in their scena A Musical Evening; Curtis Leo is an entertaining and clever conjurer; Joe Belmont, American whistler, is a popular turn; Harry and Paul are capable trick cyclists; and Cissie Jewell is a charming comedienne and dancer. The Bioscope pictures conclude.

Hippodrome.—Manager-Director, Mr. S. T. Newsome; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. E. Wright.—Heading the bill are Barton and Ashley, who appear in the new farcical creation Adam the Second. The two artists keep the audience in one continual roar with their quaint ways and doings; Roma and Romain, two classical musicians, give selections on a variety of instruments; Stelling and his cleverly-trained dog give a very good turn; Haley's Juveniles (twenty in number) give some well-executed dances, songs, &c. One dance presents a number of tableaux in living statuary, and is cleverly done. Other artists are Jennie Johns, a dainty comedienne, who sings some good catchy songs; Billy Farrell, creator of the famous cake-walk, also sings some good songs; and McNann gives a performance on roller skates.

CRADLEY HEATH.—Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John H. Morton.—Mr. Coleman Davies' company with Beneath the Stars; or, A Lancashire Lad in London is here this week. Mr. Coleman Davies as Jemmy Hopblossom proves himself to be a comedian of the first water; Miss Eunice Udall as Becky Wiggins adds to the fun and gaiety of the piece; Mr. C. Nelson Turner as Stephen Harcourt shows much ability in a careful study; Mr. W. Fraser Brunner as Major Blonson submits a realistic picture of a true villain, and Mrs. W. Fraser Brunner exhibits wonderful dramatic power as Angel Marsden. Mr. Arthur Prescott as Silas Clipper, Mr. B. Halley as Matthew Marsden, and Mr. Harrald as Lord Silvester are also deserving of commendation.

CREWE.—Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. G. Dudley-Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Cuthbert.—Mrs. Sam Duckworth's company is here this week in Her Nameless Child. As Anthony Ford, Mr. J. W. Evelyn distinguishes himself; Mr. Sidney C. Cranston gives a good account of the rôle of Arthur Ford; as Lord Henry Woodville Mr. Arthur E. Pringle is well placed, and Mr. Frank Thompson is an efficient Mongrole. Miss Pattie Hastings gives an excellent portrayal of Phyllis Ford; and as Lady Sybil Woodville Miss Mona Gray acquits herself creditably; Mr. Larry Clements as Tom Rivers and Miss Renie Douglas as Bessie Brookes are responsible for the humour.

CROYDON. — Grand Theatre. — Manager, Mr. Roland Daniel; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company is presenting Diana of Dobson's here this week. Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce is excellent as Sir Jabez Grinley; Mr. Leslie Rea is commendable as Captain the Hon. Victor Bretherton; Mr. J. Benedick Butler makes the most of P.C. Fellowes; Miss Emelie Polini makes a charming and interesting Diana Massingbird; Miss Ada Palmer is successful as Mrs. Cantelupe; Miss G. de Serville is suitable as Mrs. Whyte Fraser; and Miss Minnie Griffin deserves a word as the Old Woman. The opening piece is The Bishop's Candlesticks, in which admirable services are rendered by Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce as the Bishop and Mr. J. Benedick Butler as the Convict.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Anthony.—Animated pictures and picture songs are drawing good houses here. Mr. Walter Hillier, baritone; Mr. Bert Williams, reciter; and Master Leonard Athersych, child soprano, are first rate.

Empire Palace of Varieties.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Walter Gibbons and Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—The Sisters Julian are pretty and clever comediennes and dancers; Fred Karno's Troupe in Mumming Birds creates plenty of fun; the Royal Tokio Troupe are wonderful in their three-ladder act; Sam Mayo is a favourite; Nellie Lunelle is an enchanting soubrette and dancer; Athas and Collins are well received in sketch, The Scarecrow; Harry Champion is a smart comedian; Geo. Newburn gives praiseworthy imitations of popular comedians; Jenny Reeve is a neat comedienne; and the Imperial Bioscope is good.

DARLINGTON.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—Messrs. Paumier and Howard's company admirably presents The Prince and the Beggar Maid. Miss Ethel Bracewell as Monica gives a charming and engaging portrayal; Miss Gertrude Branscombe as Camoila plays in able style; Miss Jessica Black is good in comedy as Viola; Mr. Alfred Brandon as Prince Hildred hits off the heavy part most effectively; Mr. Lionel Gadsden as Prince Michael shows much power and versatility; Mr. Ernest Cox gives a sound study of Prince Olaf; Mr. Robert Noble is a clever Captain Hector; and Mr. Kenneth Black's portrayal of the Bishop is excellent.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Theatre, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—Miss Marie Loftus, on her return visit, provides the star turn, and meets with a warm reception every night. The Strolling Players, refined society entertainers, are prominent in the programme, and other good turns are the Westbrooks, in their novelty dancing scena; Chas. Vincent, comedian; the Alberto Troupe, lady equilibrists; and Edgar Budden, roller skate dancer. Up-to-date pictures are shown by the Pepiscope.

Central Hall.—The Edison Picture Co. has taken this hall for some months, with Mr. Victor Bransford as General-Manager, playing twice nightly to good houses. Some fine up-to-date pictures include The Helping Hand, The King and Queen's Visit to Berlin. The singing and talking Cinephone is also a great attraction.

DARWEN.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Animated Pictorial Enterprises, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. A. Whitehouse.—Interspersed with the pick of the picture world are several good variety turns. Miss Marie Winsome is an ideal male impersonator; the Leonas are clever in their musical melange; Jarvis and Julian, comedians, cause laughter; and the Sisters Volka present an original sketch entitled My Birthday, in which some clever contortions are performed.

Public Hall and Palace of Varieties.—Lessees, Messrs. Thomson, Leivers, and Bennett; Manager, Mr. J. E. Thomson.—In addition to excellent pictures, "Mr. E." is most amusing in his patter and piquant portrayals of peculiar pictures; and the Evalos give a clever juggling and acrobatic turn. Mike Daly is announced to appear, but was indisposed on Monday night.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray's company is this week producing The Catch of the Season. Mr. Wm. Greene, who figures as the Duke, is entirely successful, and Miss Dorothea Clarke is a delightful Angela, the singing and dancing of both artists being such as to do them infinite credit. Mr. Joseph Bruce as Lord Dundreary is to be congratulated upon a good assumption; Mr. Fremlin Miles is a capital Sir John Crystal; Mr. William Gibson is cleverly portrayed by Mr. Geoffrey Berwick; and the Gibson Girls all figure in very acceptable fashion. Miss Claire de Vere as the Duchess of St. Jermyn and Miss Edna Eden as Lady Crystal are to be commended; the two step-sisters are well played by Miss Barry Eldon and Miss Kate Robertson; Miss Grace Hampton does well as Lady Caterham; and Master Ernest Grata should also be specially mentioned.

Palace. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes.—A strong attraction here this week is the Davis Gledhill Trio, who give a unique exhibition of cycle and motor racing. Second place is deservedly accorded to Maude Courtney, a charming American comedienne, whose tuneful songs and smart monologue make her an assured favourite. Ronald George, instrumentalist, renders various selections with musicianly skill; Mr. C. is an accomplished raconteur; Johnnie and Willie, acrobatic piccaninnies, are clever and amusing; Johnnie Walker, comedian, extracts all possible merriment out of a skit on football; and Lily Hayes, with song and dance, is entertaining. The Bioscope, with capital pictures, closes a well-chosen programme.

DEVONPORT.—Metropole Theatre.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Mr. Douglas Bruce's company is this week staging The Girl Who Lost Her Character. Miss Doris Brookes is Molly Vernon, the girl to whom the title is attributed, and performs the sensational parts in most commendable fashion; Mr. Richard Ferris as Captain Geoffrey Caversham is a fire-rate villain; Miss Lydia Mannington finely interprets the part of Marian Franklyn, a London mystery; Mr. C. W. Standing does well in the dual rôle of Jack England and Private Johnson; while Rose Seymour could not find a better exposition than that of Miss Cherry Veheyne.

Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Signor and Mme. Borelli's pianoforte selections are of the highest possible order of merit, whilst the humorous interludes are particularly well chosen; Mr. F. W. Purcell's company supply a dramatic tabloid entitled What Women Do For Men, which is both interesting and well acted; Larola is well described as a clever man with funny ways, and earns much-merited appreciation; the blind musician Slippere is no stranger to the West, but each visit serves to enhance his popularity; Lieut. Travis is a down-to-date and original ventriloquist; Selby and Myer furnish a well-executed dancing number; Rose Cabina is an attractive comedienne; and Chas. Rowen (eccentric comedian) and the Hipposcope complete.

DEWSBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Asquith.—Mr. Seymour Hicks' company in The Gay Gordons is here. Miss Marie West as Peggy Quainton soon makes herself a favourite, being recalled several times; Mr. Charles Childerstone ably represents Angus Graeme, his singing and dancing being greatly appreciated; Mr. Edward Carlton as Nervy Nat evokes hearty laughter; Daisy Burrell is on good terms with the audience as Victoria Siddons, her singing and dancing leaving nothing to be desired; Mr. R. H. Vallis as Jack McPrisky does a lively dance; Mr. Leonard Leslie had charge of the chorus, and an augmented orchestra, and Miss Tessa D'Alberta, who played the part of Mary McLeod, sang very sweetly.

DONCASTER.—New Grand Theatre and Empire, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—The fascinating Country Girl drew a large house on Monday, and met with a most cordial reception. There is a bevy of sweet-looking and brightly-dressed ladies in a powerful chorus. The titular-rôle is taken by Miss Anna Hickish, who was recognised as having previously created a great impression as the Duchess of Dantzic; her singing is sweet and passionate. Mr. Coningsby Brierley as Barry appears here in this rôle for the second time. This young artist has established a fine reputation, and he keeps the audience in a happy frame of mind the whole of the time he is before them. Miss Effie Vincent is a charming lady as Sophia, and makes a great success of her part. She is a capital songstress and an accomplished danseuse. The part of Geoffrey Challoner, a young naval officer, is in the capable hands of Mr. Hardy Jackson; Mr. W. O. Billington does well as Sir Joseph Verity; and Miss Lucy Lever as the Princess gives an effective and artistic representation.

DOVER.—Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Mr. S. W. Winter.—Les Xentrix, who are fulfilling a star engagement here this week, introduce a variety of pretty dances and songs into their scena The Garden of Terpsichore. The smartness of the dialogue places the little sketch entitled His Wedding Morning high in order of merit, and praise is due to Messrs. Dare Austin and Robert Harcourt for the brisk manner in which it is played; the Showells are two lady vocalists possessed of refined and well-trained voices, who sing a couple of duets with much success; harmony is also supplied by the Georgia Trio; Dan Merritt, the man behind the drum, contributes a turn which is both original and attractive; Tom Ovis has an excellent patriotic song and also a good light comedy number; and Lou Langley sings comedy songs cleverly. The Hippodrome pictures also prove entertaining.

DUBLIN.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington. — The annual Hippodrome season commenced here on Monday night, when the house was packed at each performance to witness the excellent programme provided. Miss Marie Lloyd, who is the star turn, met with an enthusiastic reception at both houses, her songs being repeatedly encored; the Colombia Trio of lady cyclists gain plenty of applause for their clever act; George Campbell, quaint comedian, is responsible for much laughter; a pleasing and dainty turn is submitted by Miss Ella Lane, a charming comedienne; George Auger, "the giant actor," and company, present an interesting novelty entitled Jack the Giant Killer, which is greatly appreciated; the Twelve Hippodrome Girls, in song and dance, are an attractive feature of the programme; and the Royal Pictures are an interesting series.

Empire. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The premier position here is held by Miss Helen Roberts, Salome dancer, whose charming and graceful performance elicits loud applause; a big reception is awarded the Stein Eretto Troupe for a remarkably clever hand-jumping acrobatic display; and Miss Ethel Walker at the piano has some good songs, and knows how to render them. De Canty's gorgeous spectacle representing an illuminated water grove arouses much enthusiasm; and Fred Land is an amusing comedian with catchy songs. In a smart conjuring act, C. H. Charlton makes a decided hit; and Frank Sylvo, comedy juggler, scores a success. Miss Lena Brunton, a vivacious comedienne, is well received; and the Empire Pictures complete a good programme.

Tivoli.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—A good bill is presented here this week. The Gregory Troupe, in a smart hoop-rolling and juggling act, win unstinted applause; the Sisters Anderson, in their dancing novelty on the rope, give a really clever performance; Rose and Challoner, the comedy couple, entertain the audience highly; the Sisters Redfern, in a pleasing and refined drawing-room act, win favour from all parts of the house; Sam Thompson, Scotch comedian, is very popular; and other acceptable turns are the Dunlops, comedy cyclists and skaters; Lilian Savado, lady gymnast, Fred Hastings, comedian, and the Bioscope, depicting More Milk for Baby.

World's Fair and Music Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The programme here includes Harry Hewitt, ventriloquist; Annie Bamford, comedienne; Dan Leslie, pedestal dancer; Witt and Wynn, duettists; Queenie Voone, all-round dancer; the Blydons, duettists and dancers; and the Cinematograph.

DUDLEY.—Opera House.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Messrs. Chas. Rogers and W. E. Wilson's company opened on Monday in The Ladder of Life. Mr. Rogers as David Gordon acted with skill and ability, and Mr. Roland Douglas as General Gordon gave an earnest rendering; Mr. Claud H. Seaton invested the part of Fergus Gordon with plenty of villainy; another favourite character was that of Donald McDougal by Mr. Ernest Gifford; Miss Connie Meadows was vivacity itself as Mary Jane Jolliboys; Miss Gladys Ford Howitt was refreshingly sweet as Meg Merrilies, and Miss Mary Ford displayed artistic ability as Olga Sobinsky. All the other parts were excellently filled.

Empire. — Proprietors, Midland Entertainment Corporation, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. H. Waters.—At the head of the programme we have Morander and Darius, who as gymnasts and instrumentalists are responsible for a clever and pleasing performance; many tricks, sensational and novel, are neatly executed by Kavados, juggler and equilibrist. The following well known artists are conspicuuous on a strong programme:—Ethel York, comedienne; Alma De Liera, soprano; Clifton Hall, baritone vocalist; Neville Delmar, comedian and whistler; Frank Waldon, comedian. The Empire pictures are entertaining.

DUNDEE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—The popularity of the Moody-Manners Opera Company was evidenced by the huge and appreciative audience which gathered on Monday to witness the production of Lohengrin. The opera was superbly staged and costumed, the principals were in capital voice, while the chorus work was rendered with a vigour, precision, and balance that were gratifying in the extreme. Especially meritorious was the performance of Mme. de Vere-Sapio, whose Elsa was an artistic, vocal, and dramatic triumph. Her treatment of the "Dream Song" was exquisite, and in the dramatic duets with Ortrud and Lohengrin she also sang excellently. Miss Marie Louise Rogers as Ortrud gave a very pleasing rendering. She is possessed of an exceedingly full and powerful voice, and her singing made quite an impression. The Lohengrin of Mr. Seth Hughes was a capital conception, his richly-resonant voice being heard to much advantage in the "Farewell" song to the Swan, which he sang with great charm and feeling. Mr. William Dever's Frederick of Talramund was a remarkably fine performance both vocally and dramatically; Mr. Charles Magrath was impressive and powerful as the King, his fine rendering of the "Prayer" being an artistic treat; Mr. R. Cliffe as the Herald was excellent, his rich, sonorous voice being heard to great advantage; and the splendid orchestra of forty-six players, which was conducted by Herr Richard Eckhold, did full justice to the score. The Meistersingers was played on Tuesday, Il Trovatore at Wednesday's matinée, Faust on Wednesday evening, Caralleria Rusticana and Pagliacci on Thursday, Aïda on Friday, Tannhäuser will be played at Saturday's matinée, and a most memorable visit will be brought to a close with Carmen in the evening.

Palace Theatre. — Lessees, the United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—An excellent company here is headed by Mr. Charles Baldwin's company of comedians, who create great merriment in the absurdity entitled Bank Clerks. Archie Royer, the American eccentric, is possessed of a fine fund of humour, his marvellous display of somersaulting being also a feature; May B. Brilliant, a vivacious comedienne and dancer, creates great enthusiasm; Ray and Calden are very successful in a cleverly conceived and executed comedy act; Albert Letine is a female impersonator par excellence; Bert Terrell, a Dutch comedian, is a big favourite; Mabel Fairchild submits her delightful dancing scena, A Belfry Dream, which meets with warm appreciation; the Ray and Delmore Trio are very popular in an amusing sketch; the Poole-Pelham Troupe of acrobats and dancers give a marvellous display; and the Palascope shows some of the latest pictures.

Gaiety Theatre.—Lessee, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Licensee, Mr. W. E. Potts; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Evans.—Topping a most enjoyable bill here is the Haydas Troupe of Manchurian acrobatic tumblers, who perform some astounding feats. A romantic comedy episode entitled My Lady Betty is excedingly well staged and played by Frank Elliston and company, which includes Richard Oliver and Nellie Stevens; Arthur Croxon, a mimic of unusual ability, is vociferously applauded, his impersonations being remarkably clever; Kathleen Cogan, a dainty comedienne and dancer, sings in her best style and is exceedingly popular; Julian Ross's turn is thoroughly enjoyable; Queenie May speedily finds favour with her catchy ditties; Willie Garvey is very amusing in his various impersonations; the Fitzroys appear with much success in their tasteful and clever trapeze and rope speciality; and the Cinematograph, with some splendid films, completes.

Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Business Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Ross.—Large crowds are being attracted to this cosy house this week to see Mr. Fred J. Webb's company in the musical comedy drama entitled A (K)night in Armour. The piece is well portrayed by a large company, and the mounting is all that could be desired. Miss N. Danvers Smith plays the part of Olive Webb, the heroine, with much power; while the brothers James and Frank Millbourne are capitally represented by Mr. George Clive Hall and Mr. F. J. Webb respectively. The singing is first-class, the soli and choruses finding favour with the audience, while the dances are also immensely enjoyed. A special item is the nightdress dance by the Eden Quartette.

Newmann's Picture Palace.—Mr. Fred Newmann has another fine assortment of pictures on view at his popular house. Amongst the films shown this week are Julius Cæsar, Musician's Dream, Opening of Parliament, The Elf King, Making House Attractive, Unfortunate Neighbours, Mother's Picture, Sailor's Reward, House Full of Excitement, &c. A "Go-as-you-please" contest is proving a popular item.

Filfillan Hall.—The B.B. Pictures pay a welcome return visit here. Amongst the pictures exhibited are Scenes in Burmah, which gives a most realistic illustration of the life and customs of the Burmese natives, and an excellent reproduction of King Edward in Berlin. Other good films are Lucy of Lammermoor, The Herring Industry of Lowestoft, Last Year's Timetable, The Model Wife, Getting Father's Consent, &c. Enjoyable variety is lent to the entertainment by the singing and playing of Frank Stanert.

Roller Skating Rink. — Managing-Directors, Messrs. C. P. Crawford and F. A. Wilkins; Manager, Mr. Bert Crump.—The spectacle presented at the three sessions daily here is a most animated one, especially in the evening, when vast crowds gratify their taste for the exhilarating delights of "rinking." The Winslow skates, which are in use here, render indulgence in the graceful art a perfect treat.

EASTBOURNE.—Devonshire Park Theatre.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Mr. George Alexander's very capable company is appearing here in The Thief. Miss Marie Polini as Marise Chelford grips the audience in intense interest, and Mr. Rupert Lister, artistic in every line and gesture is a dominating Richard Chelford; Mr. Cyril Harcourt is an earnest and effective Raymond Leyton; Mr. Owen Nares earns much praise for his well-judged efforts as Harry Leyton; Mr. Luke Forster is a smart and businesslike Mr. Protheroe; Miss Frances Leighton does excellently as Isabel Leyton, and Mr. Bernard Stevens as the servant completes the cast. The Nursery Governess precedes.

The Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; District-Manager, Mr. George Egbert; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—Miss Eileen Douglas heads the bill here, and with her effective singing and graceful dancing is well received; Miss Marjory Clark and Mr. Percy Hayden have a smart and clever musical show, By Appointment; Byron is a talented and amusing clay-modeller; the Betsons in a cycling act introduce comic and original business; Mr. Archie Cornwall, a local comedian, sings and patters effectively; Victor Kerr and Violet Dene are hard workers in a sketch, It's a Walkover; Mr. William Walton is a successful comedian, and a film of Johnson boxing proves interesting.

Pier Pavilion Theatre.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. Lewis Waller's capital company is appearing here in Robin Hood. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards is again a romantic, attractive Robin Hood; Mr. H. Elliot Ball a keen and effective Prince John; Mr. F. Clive Ross a very happy Little John; Mr. Lawrence Tessier a dashing and handsome Will Scarlet, and Mr. Stenson Liddard as Allan a' Dale uses a fine voice with effect; Mr. Colin Johnson causes much merriment as Friar Tuck; Mr. Frank Lichfield is an excellent Hugo, and Mr. Ernest Gray an able Fitz Alwynne; Miss Cahill displays graceful tenderness as Maid Marian; Miss Laurie Flockton is a vivacious Adela; Miss Roberta Pulleyne a dignified Eleanor; Miss Madge Devereux a bright Alison, and the remaining parts are well played.

ECCLES.—Crown Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers.—Dolly Ross, comedienne and dancer, pleases; Billy Merson provides lots of fun; Lester and Moure furnish a good turn; Charters and Clare amuse in mock dramatic scena; Beattie Foster, comedy actress and vocalist, causes satisfaction; Wallace Whitney is responsible for much mirth; Radie Furman is well received; Gala and Norris, in musical duologue, entitled Down South, have an excellent show; Les Rallis and his monkey are clever. Tommy and the Policeman's Whistle is depicted on the Bioscope.

EDINBURGH.—Royal Lyceum Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company is here this week with My Mimosa Maid. Miss Marie Studholme is the principal attraction in a cast which includes several clever artists. The popular actress plays with all the daintiness and brightness which make her style so delightful, and in the part of Paulette she adds another to her many successful impersonations; Mr. Charles McNaughton, a comedian of much humour and resource, is admirable as Victor Guilbert, and sings and dances with notable dash; as Max Guilbert, a bailiff, Mr. Charles A. Paton gives a droll bit of character-acting, and Mr. Percy Carr sings with taste as M. Emil Gerard; Miss Ruby Gray is a prepossessing Marcelle, and her singing is marked by power and expression; Miss Eva Sandford is a vivacious Popite, and Miss May Garstang is excellent as Madame de Pilaine; Mr. Powis Pinder is a lively Captain Louis de Laurier, and Mr. Arthur Jackson is very good as the elderly waiter, Grove. One of the hits of the piece is made by Master Archie McCaig, a boy comedian with a real sense of humour, whose acting and singing was heartily applauded. The chorus sing well, and the play is capitally mounted, Mr. Harry R. Mathews conducts with efficiency.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.

About six weeks ago I was suffering with

PIMPLES

ALL OVER MY FACE.

I was also suffering with SCURF IN THE HAIR. Being rather alarmed, I asked a friend's advice, and he recommended me to take "Clarke's Blood Mixture." I purchased a 2/9 bottle, and within a week I found marked improvement. The pimples and the scurf is entirely gone. I cannot tell you how thankful I am at having taken "Clarke's Blood Mixture," and I shall recommend it to everybody, as I think it only right that such a remedy should be known.—(Signed), JOHN HENRY JONES, known as "Little Johnny," Llandudno's Popular Comedian, Thorndale, Llandudno, Feb. 24, 1908.

VANISHED LIKE MAGIC,

—Peter Pan, now on its fourth visit to Edinburgh, opened a fortnight's season here on Monday evening before the usual enthusiastic audience. Mr. Charles Frohman still retains the charming Miss Pauline Chase in the name-part, which she has now played five hundred times, and Miss Gertrude Lang is a new and dainty Wendy, the other members of the Darling family being all well represented by Mr. Stanley Logan, Miss Sybil Carlisle, Master George Hersee, and Master Herbert Hollom; Mr. Robb Harwood makes an excellent Captain Hook; Mr. George Shelton is again irresistible in his original rôle of Smee; Mr. Edward Sillward distinguishes himself as the intelligent Nana, and Masters B. Rose and W. child are sufficiently rapacious as the crocodile. The pirates, the redskins, the mermaids, the ostrich, the pack of wolves, and the members of Peter's band—not omitting the first twin, whose pillow dance secures the inevitable recall for Miss Violet Hollom—are all as delightful as ever, and the scenic effects continue to excite admiration.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—A melodramatic racing episode by Max Goldberg, entitled Rogues of the Turf, bulks largely in this week's bill, and its half-dozen scenes are effectively presented by Mr. John F. Preston and his specially selected company of human and equine performers, the latter including three beautiful thoroughbreds, while the former comprise, besides the principal actors, numerous auxiliaries, who figure as jockeys, trainers, grooms, and a motley racecourse crowd. The piece is carried through with much vigour and breeziness by all concerned. Quite a miniature pantomime is contributed by Grace Arundale, assisted by an efficient chorus of seven ladies and a menagerie of birds and beasts, very cleverly impersonated, who form Polly Pickle's Pets in Petland. Bonnie Goodwin's Apollo Piccaninnies give a spirited exhibition of coon dancing; the Three Sisters Grosvenor are heard approvingly in operatic and popular vocal selections; Baker and Balfe are versatile xylophone experts, and Sanford and Lyons show smartness as patterers and dancers; the great Weiland's comical juggling is one of the liveliest turns in the programme; Ted E. Box is particularly happy as an amusing comedian and sifflеur; George Westland supplies the Scotch element acceptably; the Bioscope concluding.

KING'S THEATRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—The visit of the Carl Rosa Opera company is proving to be a very popular one here. The repertory of the company is large, and several operas which are seldom seen on the stage nowadays have been produced to the great satisfaction of crowded audiences. The company began the second week of its engagement with Bizet's always attractive opera Carmen. Miss Doris Woodall, a charming singer and an actress of much power, made a conspicuous success in the title-rôle, which she had played during last week. The Habanera in Act. 1 was artistically rendered and the Seguidilla in the following act called forth a storm of applause, while the dramatic force of Miss Woodall's acting throughout, particularly the passionate disdain expressed in the closing scene, compelled the unstinted admiration of the audience. Mr. Edward Davies sang the music of José's part with taste and effect, and his acting was marked by many fine touches; Mr. Hebden Foster was a strong Escamillo, and his excellent declamation of the "Toreador" song was enthusiastically encored; Madame Ina Hill acted with simplicity and pathos as Micaela, and sang with expression; and the parts of Dancairo by Mr. Frederick Clendon, Remendado by Mr. William O'Connor, and Zuniga by Mr. Alexander Richard were admirably done. The chorus work was rendered with power and precision, and Mr. Walter Van Morden conducted with ability. The Marriage of Figaro, The Bohemian Girl, Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, Esmerelda, Tannhäuser, and Faust are also billed.

THE ORIENT ORIGINAL PICTURE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. W. C. Burns.—At Cooke's Circus, Mr. W. C. Burns, who had a most successful season last year, has again opened with a variety entertainment, to which the Bioscope contributes largely. The building has been crammed nightly with delighted audiences, who are treated to a generous programme, which is changed twice weekly. The films comprise scenes both humorous, descriptive, and pathetic, much interest being evoked by a beautiful series depicting a tour through France and snapshots in Spain. Miss Muriel Dante, an admirable singer of illustrated songs, gives great pleasure to the audience by the expressive rendering of her selections, and records by a giant phonograph add to the variety.

EXETER. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—Mr. Walter Melville's company is doing good business here in The Girl Who Wrecked His Home. Mr. Fred. W. Goddard is a powerful Jack Marshall; Mr. Edward Thane ably depicts Leonard Kenyon; and Mr Alfred Richards is a successful William Stevenson. Tommy Biffen is humorously delineated by Mr. Francis Hope; Mr. George P. Lester handles the part of Joss Crockett in a capable manner; Master Dick Evans does full justice to his opportunities as Billy Stevenson; and Mr. Herbert Goddard is an excellent Henry Stevenson. Miss Ida Thompson plays delightfully as Winnie the younger; Miss Nellie Burdette causes amusement as Lottie Primrose; Miss Winifred Whyte depicts Val Raymond with skill; and as Bertha Miss Louise Hampton is powerful and sympathetic.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—The premier turn this week is provided by Carl Hertz, assisted by Miss Emeline D'Alton, and large audiences are thoroughly enjoying his mystifying illusions. The Schiavonys contribute a fine exhibition of gymnastics, and an excellent vocal turn is that of the King's College Boys, whose efforts are appreciated; merriment is introduced by Zimpa, in his act A Holiday in a Farmhouse, and Fred Lincoln is equally successful. The Athlones (Sandow's Lecture Models) meet with a good reception, as also does Princess Pocahuntas. The Hippodrome pictures maintain their high reputation.

FALKIRK.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. W. Ebbutt.—Mr. F. R. Benson's company is appearing this week in Shakespearean répertoire, which includes The Taming of the Shrew, Julius Cæsar, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Richelieu, Henry the Fifth, and Richard the Third. On Monday evening there was a capital house, and during the week the business improved. Mr. Henry Herbert took the important part of Petruchio; Mr. Robert Atkins, Lucentio; Mr. Cyril Sworder, Hortensio; and all filled their parts well, particularly the first-named, who was brought before the curtain again and again. Miss Gladys Vanderzee as Katharine created a most favourable impression as the Shrew, and Miss Violet Farebrother made a graceful and winsome Bianca. The other parts were exceedingly well placed, and altogether the piece was delightfully represented.

FLEETWOOD.—QUEEN'S THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—Mr. Harry Snelson's pantomime Dick Whittington provides the attraction here this week. The piece abounds with tuneful music, catchy sayings and smart dancing. Miss Marion Collins as Dick makes a dashing principal boy, her singing being a principal feature of her work; Miss Lizzie Levaine makes a winning and clever Alice, and is very well received. The other parts are all in good hands. The Ruby Quartette of dancers are great favourites.

FOLKESTONE. — PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. W. Rowland.—This week we have Messrs. Hardie and Von Leer's Two Little Vagabonds company. Although this play has been performed in Folkestone a great number of years, it is always greeted by large and enthusiastic audiences. Miss May Hart as Dick, and Miss Josie Beltram as Wally, in the name-parts, each played excellently, the brightness and vivacity of the former contrasting strongly with the latter's helplessness. As Marion Thornton Miss Leonora Castelle played with great intensity, and gave a powerful rendering of the part throughout; Mr. George Denham was a manly and sincere George Thornton, and the Captain Darville of Mr. Norman Yates was quite good; Mr. Jas. Skea as Bill Mullins and Miss Pritchard as Biddy, his wife, each gave a capital character sketch of low life without undue exaggeration, and Messrs. St Clair and Archer did well as their confederates.

TOWN HALL.—This week Mr. Joshua Dyson's Dioramas and Gipsy Choir are drawing crowded houses nightly. The choir consists of twenty talented artists, who discourse appropriate music, including good choruses and part-songs, fine instrumental selections, and laughable sketches. The animated pictures and dioramas are quite up to date, and are thoroughly enjoyed.

GAINSBOROUGH.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Gainsborough Theatre Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Leighton.—The variety company this week consists of John Krownow, who gives his well-known facial entertainment; Frank Ford, a clever coloured dancer; Palette in A Busy Time in the Studio, and Dog Max, Esdale Bros. (patterers), Phyllis Seymour (dainty singer), Albert Vinter (comedian), and Jack Ramsay (Scotch comedian), concluding with some excellent pictures of scenes in Norway, &c.

GATESHEAD.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager and Licensee, Mr. Harold Arnold.—The Ten Loonies with their admirable and clever musicalities are "starring" here. Lidy Nirvanah with her white posing horse supplies an agreeable novelty; J. G. Grahame, jun., and Zerlina Harrington create quite a furore in the dramatic episode A Daughter of Pleasure; Henri Bekker combines comedy and magic with good results; Oliver Martyn has a quaint style of comedy; Harry Cotton (comedian), Edie Coolville (comedienne), and the Kingscope are other items which find favour.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. R. G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's company in Her Forbidden Marriage occupy the boards here. Mr. Henry Lonsdale as George Maddison plays powerfully, yet with agreeable ease; Mr. Louis Hector is a convincing Charles Devereux; Mr. Wilfred Mansfield is well suited to the part of Sir George Lancaster; Miss Grace Lester does full justice to the part of the Mother Superior; Miss Isla Garnet-Vayne is a womanly Lucy; and Lady Lucretia is well attended to by Miss Florence Hunt.

GLASGOW.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Humphrys.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is here with Hall Caine's drama The Bondman. Mr. R. Scrope Quentin gives a powerful performance as Jason; the part of Michael is excellently done by Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves; Mr. Oswald Lingard gives dignity to the character of Adam Fairbrother, and his sharp-tongued wife is cleverly acted by Miss Madge Lanerton; the parts of Father Ferrati and Grandfather are doubled by Mr. W. H. Rotheram, and both are extremely good; and Miss Georgina Wynter as Greeba is at her best in the pathetic scenes.

KING'S LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Mr. Edward Compton commenced a week's engagement here on Monday, when once again that never-failing attraction Davy Garrick was played. Mr. Compton's impersonation of the famous actor seams to grow in public favour year by year; the Violet of Miss Kathleen Leigh was charming in its womanly grace and feeling; the company possesses an ideal Alderman Gresham in Mr. Henry Crocker; and as Tallyhaut Mr. Henry Worrall gave a capital idea of a roystering young squire. The guests (Rumbelow, Sowerberry, and Simkins) were portrayed with characteristic humour by Mr. Philip Gordon, Mr. Wallace Johnston, and Mr. Ivan Leslie; the Mrs. Rumbelow of Miss Marie Hassell was a good bit of work; Miss Constance Merton did well as Selina; and the servants' parts were ably filled by Messrs. J. W. Austin and Laurence Meade. The one-act comedy Porteus in Petticoats was played in front, the heroine, Diane de Dio, being represented in captivating style by Miss Viola Compton. The bill for the week includes The Rivals, A Reformed Rake, She Stoops to Conquer, The Scarlet Coat, and The School for Scandal.

ROYALTY, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Carpenter.—Considerable interest is being manifested in the production here of Ibsen's play The Pillars of Society, being the first time this drama has been given in Glasgow. Mr. Graham Price is responsible for the production, and gives an excellent performance as Consul Bernick. Miss Nora Dempsey is well suited as Lona; Miss Millie Wilson gave a fine rendering of the part of Dina; and Mr. George Henderson as Aune, the foreman shipbuilder, Mr. R. B. Wharrie as Doctor Rarlund, and Miss Polly White as Martha also sustained their respective characters with good effect. The other parts were ably filled, and the play was received with favour by a large audience.

GRAND.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Christie Grant.—Cinderella entered on its last week here on Monday, and but for the advent of the Carl Rosa Company might have held the boards for a month yet. Owing to a very severe cold, Miss Queenie Finnis, the charming Cinderella of the cast, has been out of the bill for a few nights. Mr. Barry Lupino, the lively Capers, has been trying some new songs this week, two of which are likely to be heard of again—and very often, too. One of these is a lively ditty with the title of "And the conversation ended just like that," and the other is "I'm going to marry Mary." It is an open secret that Mr. Harry Henderson, the conductor at this theatre, has composed the music of both, and they reflect considerable credit on him. The pantomime has been such a success that the farewell night is certain to witness a great display of enthusiasm. Misses Violet Halls, Queenie Finnis, and Nellie Wigley, and Messrs. Whit Cunliffe, George French, Tom Conway, and Barry Lupino in the principal parts have all caught on immensely here.

ROYAL PRINCESS'S.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Diccory Dok still continues to draw enthusiastic crowds, but even the most popular pantomimes must come to an end, and this week benefits are in the air. On Monday Mr. Peter Bermingham's friends rallied round him, and the popular Scotch comedian had a tremendous ovation from a crowded house. Numerous extra items were introduced, and Mr. Bermingham's professional associates rallied round him in good style. Miss Ella Retford, the favourite principal girl here, appealed to the public on Friday.

METROPOLE, LTD. — General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Very satisfactory houses have been the rule here during the week. Mr. A. Clifton Alderson's company in The Coal King is the attraction. Mr. Alderson as Tom Roberts, the hero, gave a fine, manly impersonation; Miss Winifred Love's acting as Grace Shirley was characterised by delicacy; and Mr. Ulick Burke as the Coal King, Mr. Escott Robson as Walter Hartford (the villain), Mr. Frank Dalton as Dick Shirley, and Miss Joan Wellman as Mad Ann all performed their parts in an admirable manner. Miss Max Hinton as Araminta and Mr. Sam Roberts as Jim Williams gave the humorous touches in a most acceptable fashion.

LYCEUM.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Mr. M. Russell Rosse on Monday presented Haddon Chamber's comedy-drama Captain Swift. Mr. Edward Sorlay scored as Wilding; the much-tried Mrs. Seabrook was ably portrayed by Mrs. Bennett; and the other parts were in capable hands. The piece was preceded by a comedietta, My Friend the Major. On Thursday and Friday evenings the romantic play Jim the Penman was staged.

EMPIRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Albert Chevalier and company in Behind the Scenes provide a bright entertainment. Owing to the indisposition of Mr. Tom Edwards, ventriloquial huntsman, the Anartos deputised, contributing a diverting musical performance. The Gems provide amusing diversion; Walter Bellonini is a clever juggler; the Three Prestons create boisterous laughter in their absurdity The Liftman's Rise; Grace Moore is a pleasing singer; Fayre and Manning win favour; and Lionette Roberty and her whirlwind dancers, and Frank Bertram and his company in The Chaperon are good items.

ZOO-HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Councillor E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—Mr. John Clyde and company are here in Rob Roy. Mr. Clyde gives an excellent impersonation of the bold outlaw; Miss Joan Keddie makes a sweet-voiced and handsome Diana Vernon; Mr. J. W. Bowie's fine voice is heard to advantage in the music allotted to Francis Osbaldistone; and the part of the treacherous Rashleigh is strongly expressed by Mr. Clavering Power. The worthy Bailie Nicol Jarvie is ably handled by Mr. W. G. Robb; Mr. A. Young Ritchie is a shaggy and picturesque Dougal; Helen Macgregor is finely impersonated by Miss Clara Cowper; and Miss Nana Linton is a pleasing Mattie. Mr. D. Blair as Captain Thornton is a fine soldierly figure, and Mr. Alec Hamilton makes a swaggering Major Galbraith. The incidental music is rendered by a well-balanced chorus and an efficient orchestra.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Evan Good.—La Tortajada is an artist with a bewitching style, and all her movements reveal the grace and finish of a natural dancer. The Leslie Brothers' amusing musical performance is provocative of much laughter; Jane Eyre contributes two songs in good style; Talbot and Pearce in Yo-San are in high favour; and Nan Farren, comedienne and dancer; Blake and Granby in a droll comedy duologue, "The Clarionet"; the Macdonald Troupe of dancers; and Odeyne Spark, comedienne, provide items of excellent quality.

PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; General-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—Alf Gibson, the popular quaint comedian, tops the bill here, and on the opening night submitted several songs in his original style. Dent and Harris are also appearing in their mystic musical comedietta The Indian Bottle; Dan Whitley, eccentric, is favourably received; Dave Carter is a popular Irish tenor; Madge Goodall a clever comedienne and dancer; and the marvellous Rizarellis submit a sensational trapeze act. The programme also includes Flo Deighton, vocalist; the Recar Trio of lady acrobats; and Bonnetti and Corrie, eccentric jugglers.

COLISEUM.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Burdette.—The place of honour is occupied by Joseph Hart's Rain Dears. Dennis Drew presents a successful military scena, Back to Barracks; Margaret Parker and company are responsible for a dramatic sketch entitled Sunshine; the McConnell Trio are ever welcome in Glasgow; and another city favourite is Miss Hilda Jacobsen. The Boganny's in their bakehouse scene are applauded; the Two Anartos are a good pair of comedians; Elly Adair is a smart little comedienne; Bert Williams takes well in a ventriloquial entertainment; and the Bioscope terminates a good all-round programme.

GAIETY, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Harry Bowerman.—The special novelty here is the performance of d'Artagnan, the equestrian lion, presented by M. and Mme. Gailliard. Miss Louie Freear delights with some of her inimitable impersonations; the McKinleys sing, dance and patter well; Minnie Glenn, a young coon singer and buck dancer, gives a promising show; Harry Glynn and company appear in a side-splitting playlet entitled Before the Beak; Jules and Earl in their harmonised duets give evident pleasure; Harry Leaton's items are warmly applauded; and pictures complete the programme.

PANOPTICON.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. E. Pickard.—Velma and Edward are comely equilibrists; and Edgar Cook, conjuring chef; James Tower, a clever mimic; Vante, the tramp on the clothes line; and the Nicholsons are the chief attractions. The Bioscope pictures complete.

GLOSSOP.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Sydney Spenser.—Mr. Charles Carey's company is here with the musical comedy The Madeira Maid. Miss Madge Lacey, in the title-rôle, is delightfully winsome, her singing and dancing being heartily appreciated; Miss Mari Ault keeps the house convulsed with the humour imparted into the character of Mary Ann Chovey; Miss Jessie De Gray as Mrs. Amelia Downe, Georgie Wallis and Carrie Wood as Vida and Ida Downe respectively were exponents of no mean order; Mr. Charles Carey himself gives a skilful exposition of the rôle of No-One-in-Particular; Mr. Harold Perry's representation of Jack Danby is excellent; as Mr. Eno Downe Mr. W. E. Matthews is very effective; Mr. W. Lazard as Martin Smith and Mr Jay Ellis as Major-General Coleman ably add to the merit of the piece. The music is bright, and the costumes and scenery are attractive.

GLOUCESTER.—PALACE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Pooles Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. T. Rea.—Jan Rudenyi, violinist, returns with a clever sketch, The Power of Music; Horace White, ventriloquist, at the piano, proves a novelty; the Three Calbas have a funny acrobatic comedian, and the Bros. Ford dance together in excellent style; Mr. W. G. Webber sings bass songs with success; the Sisters Desmond are capital character duettists; Spry and Bentley in a dramatic episode The Terror of Tierney's Rents are appreciated; and the Maroe, bar experts, cause amusement. The Palacescope concludes the entertainment.

KING'S HALL.—Messrs. Pooles Theatres, Ltd.—The illustrated pictures are now sung to by Miss Evelyn Herbert, who looks like being a favourite.

GOOLE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Fred Greaves.—Mr. J. B. Hart and company opened here on Monday with The Outcast of the Family. Miss Florence M Daley is distinctly good as Ruth; Miss Ethel Teeney plays Grace Redfern with much spirit; Miss Vera Neville is a lively Nancy Bray; Mr. Miles Platting submits a fine piece of acting as Sir Henry Thorne; the villain, Richard Martin, is ably taken by Mr. Clifford Bean; Mr. C. A. Olgar is a powerful Harry Thorne; and Mr. Reg. Oldroyd as Joe Bushell and Mr. J. W. Boyling keep the house in roars of laughter in the comedy scenes.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Wright.—Mr. Fred Storey and his capable company are here in Rip Van Winkle. Mr. Storey plays the title-rôle with unqualified success and receives a tremendous ovation nightly; Ena Richards is a dainty soubrette and brilliant dancer; York and Lister in their sketch, The Other Mrs. Brown, evoke roars of laughter; Dudley Hayes, comedian, is very droll; the Godfreys in their musical act The Slavey and the Coon do remarkably well; as does Alec Kennedy, a good comedian; and the Maples pay a welcome return visit, causing hearty laughter with their original skit, How to Treat a Burglar.

GREAT YARMOUTH. — ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Nightingale.—Messrs. Ebbutt and Copping are presenting the romantic drama Held in Bondage. Mr. Tom Ronald ably portrays the hero, Ivan Dronski; Mr. Richard Vane makes a fine Prince Maxaroff; Miss Constance Medwyn gives a sympathetic rendering of Zara Dronski; Miss Matt Russell is very funny as Harry Dunn; Dr. Petrovitch has a clever exponent in Mr. Harold Knight; Miss Kitty Russell is a vivacious Lisette, and Miss Aimee Grattan Clyndes plays with great skill as the adventuress, Leoni Devigne. As an additional attraction a display of animated pictures is provided during the intervals, and are appreciated by the audience.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H.

How Theatres and Music Halls are Bought and Disposed of.

FACTS OF INTEREST TO EVERYONE.

By FRANK BURT.

London is undoubtedly renowned for the ability and astuteness of the prominent firms which carry on operations in its midst. It would, however, be difficult to find in its annals one more up-to-date than the writer of this short article proposes to deal with in the limited space which the Era has allotted him. In this, the first of a series of articles of a commercial nature, it is but fitting a professional paper should review the operations of a firm closely allied to the stage. Messrs. Uloth and Sparks, Ltd., Theatre and Music Hall Surveyors and Estate Agents, of 166, Piccadilly, London, W., are the firm to whom reference is made.

To the proprietors and would-be proprietors of theatres and music halls, and to those who have land for disposal on which to erect them, they are absolutely indispensable, also in the matter of arranging mortgages and debentures, and finding capital, however large or small, for sound ventures. It is well known that their operations cover the whole of the United Kingdom. Messrs. Uloth and Sparks' offices are situated in the very centre of the greatest city on earth, immediately opposite the Piccadilly end of Bond-street, very close to the

[The Dover Street Studios.
MR. GEORGE ULOTH.

Dover-street Tube Station, and within two minutes' walking distance of the Piccadilly Station. One cannot wonder that the foresight and diplomacy exercised by the partners have gained for them a very high reputation in their particular business.

Having introduced Messrs. Uloth and Sparks to the notice of the reader, some particulars concerning their business will be anticipated. It must necessarily follow, that considering there are an immense number of theatres and music halls in the United Kingdom, there are often changes in proprietorship, and would probably be more often were it even a little better known there is in existence such a reliable firm as Messrs. Uloth and Sparks. Any individual, or individuals, requiring a Palace of Pleasure in north, south, east, or west, can always be assured of securing one upon remunerative terms if this firm are entrusted with their confidence. The archives in their comfortably-furnished offices, wherein the visitor is made at ease, contain many records of changes in which it has been necessary to exercise faith. Even solicitors are unacquainted with the confidences their clients have disclosed to this reputable firm. Messrs. Uloth and Sparks are acquainted with the history of almost every property connected with the profession.

Quite recently several large and successful ventures have changed hands, and the firm have been congratulated by all the parties interested on the expeditious and satisfactory manner in which negotiations have been conducted. The writer last week saw many pictures adorning the walls of the offices of fine and handsome buildings, which, to his own knowledge, Messrs. Uloth and Sparks had disposed of. It frequently happens that their advice is sought by someone residing a considerable distance from the metropolis. In the illustration given one of the partners is seen seated, in his fast motor-car, on a particular Sunday, ready for a long journey, the train service being on this day so infrequent. Far or near, their clients' interests are promptly attended to, a fact of importance in itself. A few weeks since this self-same car whirled one of the partners over 800 miles in the pursuit of a suitable site for a prominent syndicate, marked success attending the quest.

The offices daily present a scene of activity, and the telephone is ever being utilised to answer the inquiries made from every quarter. So complete is the list of places of amusement in the hands of Messrs. Uloth and Sparks that at a moment's notice minute particulars can be flashed over the wires. In a large measure this enterprising firm control the business done as Theatre and Music Hall Surveyors and Estate Agents, and, moreover, have been, and are now, responsible for the foundation of many flourishing Picture Palaces. Widespread, indeed, are their operations.

There is undeniably an insatiable craze amongst the people for healthy and clean amusement, but it may be news to many would-be speculators that there are yet towns with a population around of 100,000 wherein there is not an up-to-date place of amusement, but only flimsily-built structures. One prosperous town in particular was mentioned to the interviewer as an illustration. And yet in this and other similarly prosperous places land is available for the purpose, the people are clamouring to be catered for, and there is little doubt the development of the industry would result in financial success. There are also many towns where existing, but somewhat antiquated buildings might be well changed to the advantage of everyone concerned. It is no idle assertion to make that almost every property in the market passes through the hands of Messrs. Uloth and Sparks, so established is the firm's reputation.

Now that the recent dispute has been so amicably settled, to the complete satisfaction of both parties conducting the operations, and the many thousands of talented artists gaining their livelihood in an honourable profession, there is undoubtedly cause for anticipating that the coffers of proprietors and artistes will be still further enriched in the future. This fact being recognised, the interviewer, whose journalistic wanderings as an unbiassed and independent critic constantly take him into the domain of places of amusement in London town and the provinces, has no hesitation in heartily recommending Messrs. Uloth and Sparks to those interested as specialists in such operations, so assured is he they will be well rewarded. Therefore it is a pleasure to place on record some interesting facts concerning the firm.

A short biography of the responsible heads—the Two Georges, as they are familiarly called—will be perused with interest.

Mr. George Uloth was born in Gunnersbury, his parents having long been residents in that district. He was educated at Deal College, and started early in life on a commercial career. Mr. Uloth is particularly well known throughout the length and breadth of the country amongst everyone connected with the theatrical and music hall world. Mr. Uloth is an all-round sportsman; but it may well be imagined this busy man of the world has little time to devote to leisure. He is an enthusiastic sculler and motorist. Mr. Uloth resides at Gunnersbury.

Mr. George Sparks was born at Hanworth, Middlesex, his parents being socially prominently connected with the neighbourhood. Mr. Sparks was educated at Apsley House, Margate. Receiving an excellent commercial training, he quickly established a name for himself in the City on account of his energy and zeal. He is a director of several important public companies. Besides being an expert in the business with which he is connected Mr. Sparks is a skilled engineer, and in the motoring world has been responsible for the design of highly-favoured patents. Like his partner, he is fond of motoring. He is one of the oldest motorists in the country, and has gained considerable fame in racing. Mr. Sparks resides at Feltham.

Nightingale.—The patrons here were afforded a big dramatic treat last Thursday by two special performances of Dolly Reforming Herself by Messrs. Jerrard Grant Allen and Besant's company, who are making a flying tour with Henry Arthur Jones' delightful comedy. Miss Aimee De Burgh captivated the audience by her engaging personality and delightful acting as Dolly; Mr. P. H. Clayton Greene made an admirable Harry Telfer; Mr. Edward Sterling was very humorous as Professor Sturgess; Mr. Reginald Besant displays marked ability as Mathew Barron; Miss Gertrude Bibby charmingly portrayed Mrs. Sturgess, and Mr. Donald Calthrop was good as Captain Wentworth.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. George Gilbert.—The Trippellos present an exceptionally smart musical turn; Mollie O'Connor gives a clever Japanese scene; Tom Carrick creates a lot of fun with his funny songs; Miss Allisson and company in The House Next Door are very popular, and pictures on the Bioscope conclude.

The Gem.—Lessees, the Yarmouth Amusement Centre, Ltd.; Resident-Director, Mr. C. B. Cochran; Manager, Mr. Sidney Lawrence.—Considerable enterprise is being shown by the management, who last week displayed a film illustrating the Britt v Summers match on the night following the actual fight. This week an excellent set of films are being exhibited, the one entitled A Cattle Dancer being worthy of special mention. The song "Roses, roses everywhere" is illustrated by some fine pictorial slides, and the programme concludes with some excellent slides depicting the principal scenes from the play of the moment—An Englishman's Home.

GREENOCK.—Alexandra Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Directors and Managers, Messrs. A. B. and J. J. Wright.—A very popular visit this week has been Mr. George D. Day's company in The Prodigal Son. Mr. Albert Ward plays Oscar Stephensson with success, and Mr. Alfred Goddard is equally meritorious as Magnus. The dual rôles of Thora and her daughter Elin are cleverly delineated by Miss Dorrie Roberts; Miss Pearla Gardner enacts with distinction the part of Helga; Mr. Jackson Hayes displays much ability as Stephen Magnusson, as also does Mr. J. E. Savery as Doctor Olsen; Miss Maud Locker submits a lively study as Margaret Neilsen, and Miss Florence Lovell is good as Anna. Mr. B. C. Brooksmith as the Sheriff, Mr. J. H. Leigh as Neils Finsen, Mr. A. J. Williams as the Pastor, and Mr. Norman Liddell as the Director of the Casino lend able support.

Empire.—Lessees, The Greenock Empire Syndicate; Responsible-Manager, Mr. Edward McCormick; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. J. Colquhoun.—The principal attraction here is Jack Sheppard, the world-renowned handcuff king and jail-breaker, assisted by Miss Ruby Vesta, who submits an excellent turn. Capital items are also provided by the Sauternon Wonders, Zemco and Sulls (the boys in red), Taylor and Bridge (singing Lancashire mill lads), Queenie Lolo and Little May (gymnasts, contortionists, and speciality dancers), and Zellini (comedy juggler), while the Bioscope displays some capital pictures.

Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—The stage at the Hippodrome this week is occupied by the Greenock Amateur Operatic Society with an excellent production of Farnie and Planquette's comic opera Nell Gwynne, the performances being given in aid of local charities.

GRIMSBY.—Prince of Wales's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—The charming play Sunday is again here, and is meeting with its former success. Miss Janet Lind is now seen in the name part, and her delineation of this pretty and original character is quite in keeping with its interesting qualities; Mr. William Giffard represents Colonel Brinthorpe, and is equally good in the light as in the more intense moods of the part. Sunday's four picturesque guardians are realistically played by Mr. Richard F. Symons as Towzer, Mr. A. Cotton Holmes as Davy, Mr. James Hussey as Lively, and Mr. George Marriott, jun., as Jacky; Mr. Richard Trieve acts well as Tom Oxley, and the same may be said of Miss H. Graham Edwins as Mrs. Naresby and Miss Jessie Stone as the Nun.

The Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Berry.—The series of illusions presented by Mlle. Naveeda are very entertaining, and the vanishing lady trick is carried out on entirely new lines; Mlle. Racko and Partner appear in an acrobatic speciality of a distinctly original type, and the lady displays exceptional strength; the Eight Lancashire Lads are a smart troupe of clog dancers, and display much clever work; Arthur Pier gives a song scena, Only A Dream, with dramatic effect; Martin Henderson, a blind musician, is a skilled concertina soloist; Cyclumina accomplishes difficult cycling feats, accompanied by electrical effects; Alma Curzon is a pleasing comedienne and burlesque artist, and Jennie Sydney sings and dances well.

GUERNSEY.—Theatre St. Julian's.—Lessee, Mr. Edward Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—The fare provided this week is The Love That Women Desire, excellently interpreted by Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company. Miss Maude Hastings gives an intelligent reading of Sybil Thornburn; Miss Vere Rose gives sinister effect to the rôle of Marquinha; Madge Abingdon is in the safe hands of Miss Nellie Fletcher, and Miss Dorothy Hilderbrand is a vivacious Patti Swift. Mr. J. O. Stewart is suitably cast as the Squire; Mr. S. Leigh Courtney an able exponent of Richard; Mr. Sidney Bland is highly successful as Philip Carnaby; Mr. Wilton Reed is all that could be desired as Frank Hardy; Mr. John Higgnett proves diverting as Dennis O'Rourke, and as P.C. Sowerberry Mr. J. Wilkinson causes laughter.

HALIFAX.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Mr. and Mrs. C. Mackey's company, with Rollicking Rory, were at the Royal the first three nights of this week. Mr. Mackey infuses plenty of life and Irish humour into the name part, and is well supported by Miss Nana Flensburg as Rosie Callagan and a good all round company, including Mme. Constance Bellamy, who takes the part of Peggy O'Moore in the first act and Queen of the Fairies in the other acts.

Grand Theatre, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—The main attraction at this house is Reano's famous band of instrumentalists. This band has had a magnificent reception from crowded houses, Mr. Reano having to respond to numerous calls at each performance. The Three Original Bordellas give a highly-finished, clever acrobatic performance, introducing several new and very difficult feats; Mahatma, the mistress of second sight, has had a very successful week, dumbfounding the audiences by her marvellous powers; the Saletos (lady and gentleman) are another decidedly good turn, giving some remarkable exhibitions of hand and head balancing, the lady (who is quite young) acting as bottom artist in most of the feats; Sylvia Du Barry, South American soprano, is deservedly encored for her songs. The Player Company in Where's Ma Kilt? Vera and Royal, comedy sketch artists; Frank Weaver, vocalist and champion dancer; and the Bioscope complete the programme.

Palace and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—Mysticus, the English human chameleon, gives an entertaining and mystifying performance. His last trick is exceptionally smart. Crissie Cross is a dainty dancer, has an attractive appearance, is prettily dressed, and has met with a hearty and well-earned reception; A Ba-Bee's Picture Post Card Album pays a return visit, and is well received. Others appearing are Carney and Armstrong, patter comedians; Leslie's Comedy Cadets in Lights Out; Ted Waite, comedian; the Seven Wulfrunas in Fun in a Café; Miss Amy Bellwood, singer and dancer; and Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

HAMILTON, N.B.—Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Managing-Director, Mr. René Clayton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Bostock.—Billy Howard and Kathryn Harris are topping the bill in The Adventures of a Sappy Tramp; Karr and Kooney are diverting in cross-talk; the Calcotts are good in a musical turn, Rags and Tatters; Master Edward Frisby sings popular songs; Leslie, Lyn, and Willie contribute some clever glee singing; Maud Elliston and company are warmly received in Dobson's Day Off; and J. W. Hall, character comedian; Chas. Johnson, and the Bioscope complete the bill.

HANLEY. — Royal. — Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company in The Christian is this week attracting large crowds. Mr. Roy Redgrave gives a powerful impersonation of John Storm, his fine appearance and voice being great factors in the success attained. Miss Daisy Scudamore is superb as Glory Quayle; Mr. Herbert Hewetson as Lord Robert Ure is effective in a difficult rôle; Mr. Royce Milton as Lord Storm is capitally suited; Mr. John J. Hooper gives a clever rendering of the austere Archdeacon; Mr. Thomas Barry's Father Lamplugh is an artistic rendering; and Mr. John Black as Parson Quayle is also very fine. Miss Molly Hayden as Mrs. Callendar and Miss Cora Deane as Polly Love are good, and Miss Muriel Marsden plays Black Meg admirably.

Grand.—Proprietors, Hanley Theatres and Circus Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand.—Heading a good programme this week is that laughable sketch The Demon of the Cellar, excellently played by the Brothers Luck. Valazzi excites considerable enthusiasm by his original act; the Figaros are responsible for a clever musical potpourri; Georgina Lena contributes pleasing songs; Jack Barker's mimicry is of special worth; Harry Bedford is a clever comedian; Chas. Norton, a warm favourite, gives his smart imitations of music-hall stars; the Bio-tableaux portrays pleasing pictures; Alice Hollander, a vocalist of decided merit, wins loud applause.

King's.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Manager, Mr H. Kennedy.—Crowded houses are bearing testimony to the attractiveness of the pictures. Mr. Dennis McCarthy is a comedian of merit, his songs and scena being applauded.

HARROGATE.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding Smith.—Variety forms again the capital bill here this week. The Barton and Franklin Trio do a good musical act; Miss Raie Walters is a smart serio and scores with her fishing song; Bert Lytton, swell comique, sings a couple of acceptable songs; and Charles Santon is a good double-voiced vocalist; Dan Fraser is a clever Scotch comedian with tuneful songs; Agnese and Arthur Lynch in American picture songs are greatly to the liking of the audience, and the Sisters Lavender are good song and dance artists. The top of the bill is occupied by Mohamed Ben Mohamed Troupe of nine Souasa Arabs, who gain thunders of applause; Miss Billie Burford is a handsome and well-dressed chorus comedienne.

HASTINGS.—Gaiety Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—After a considerable interval Mr. Eugene C. Stafford's company is here on a return visit in that laughter-provoking comedy The Private Secretary, and opened on Monday to a well-filled house. Needless to say, the performance was masterly throughout. The rôle of the simple-minded curate was finely played by Mr. Donald Price-Evans; Mr. W. Hargreaves again impersonated Mr. Cattermole, a part with which he has thoroughly identified himself by reason of his long association with the character; Mr. Frederick Tyrrell was no less perfect as the ambitious tailor, Mr. Sydney Gibson. The remaining characters were capitally portrayed by the other members of the cast. The screaming farce, The Wild Man from Borneo, preceded.

Pier Pavilion. — General-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—After an absence of some weeks Mr. J. D. Hunter has returned to the Pavilion, and with a talented company is appearing in the laughable comedy by Buckstone, Married Life. As the dignified footman, Henry Dove, Mr. J. D. Hunter takes a very amusing character. The pleasing sprightliness of the piece and the humorous situations render it an enjoyable and spirited performance. The others of the cast are ably supplied by Mr. J. E. Cowell, Miss Blanche Bayley and Miss Eva Bayley, the Misses Clarissa Selwynne, Helen Anderson, and Cherry Wardroper, Mr. E. W. Maule Cole, Mr. Oliver Rogers, and Mr. Edward Harrison.

Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Harry Boyd; General-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Mlle. Marvelle introduces a remarkable troupe of performing cockatoos and macaws; great fun is created by Hemsley and Ambrose in a motor-car absurdity entitled The Coster's Honeymoon; Dennis and Morris are very clever in the art of step and slate dancing and humorous pattering; a skilful juggler is seen in Charles Lestree, who gains much applause; some novel illustrations of songs are pleasingly rendered by the Rinders; the Alhambra pictures are a prominent feature this week; George Prince is a favourite comedian; Renee Grahame is a very refined and talented vocalist.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Hippodrome, Ltd.—Resident-manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Miss Maude Mortimer has established herself a prime favourite by her spirited renderings of taking songs. Others appearing are Miss Rosie Ring and assistants in her musical pot pourri; W. G. Raby, comedian; Miss Nelly Neil, comedienne and dancer; a highly amusing contrivance called "Whizzing the Whirl"; Johnson and Bert, comedians; Miss Sadie Early and company in the refined song scena, entitled Memories; and a comical film on the Bioscope.

HULL.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Mortons, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—A welcome return visit has been paid this week by Mr. Seymour Hicks' company in The Gay Gordons. Though Mr. Hicks is not in the cast, his brother, Mr. Stanley Brett, fills his rôle with success. While he is on the stage the house is in one continued ripple of merriment. His dry humour, his quaint gags all afford intense amusement. Instead of Miss Zena Dare, on this occasion we have Miss Maie Ash, and it is no false compliment to say that in no sense do we feel the absence of the former. She is vivacious, arch, pretty, pleasing, and has won a warm place already in the audiences affection. Another newcomer is Miss Lily Maxwell, who is very successful; Miss Dade, in a Connie Ediss part, takes the taste of the audience—a song on the Suffragette movement is given with verve; Mr. George Carroll, a clever little comedian, does excellently as Edmund; and as the père Siddons Mr. Fred Rolph does capitally. The comedy is finely mounted and chorus effective.

Alexandra Theatre.—Mortons, Ltd.—Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—This week, instead of giving us ultra-melodrama, the management have selected a play that is already taking the city by storm—The Prince and the Beggar Maid. From whatever side considered it has attributes to recommend it; literary and stage craft alike are far above the usual. It has a fine romantic flavour, recalling Anthony Hope and Stanley Weyman. No less happy is the selection of the play than the artists called upon to represent it, foremost of whom is Miss Annie Saker, who as Princess and Beggar Maid brings to bear a fine talent. She has histrionic gifts of no mean order. The Prince Hildred of Mr. Cleveland was conceived in the right spirit; the Prince Michael of Mr. Graeme Campbell was a capital study; Mr. Wallace Court won a fine place in the audience's affections as Prince Olaf; Mr. Francis Hawley realised the Bishop with effect; and fine aid was vouchsafed by Messrs. Kendal Chalmers (Nathan) and Mr. J. Chamberlain (Col. Wellenberg). Miss Ivy Millais played with credit. The play is a great success and will meet with a good reception wherever produced.

ILKESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—The Golden Ladder is being played here this week by Mr. F. C. Leighton and company. Mr. Harry Cullenford as Rev. Frank Thornhill gives an excellent interpretation of the part, and Miss Violet Ennis-Lawson wins great admiration for her skilful reading of Lilian Grant; Miss Lily Fuller is a dainty Lily; Mr. E. W. Cudd is a good representative of Samuel Peckaby, the same remark applying to Miss M. Leslie-Cudd (Mrs. Peckaby) and Miss D. Tullyhole (Victoria Alexandra Peckaby); Miss Dora Lewis causes much laughter as "The Tearer"; Mr. F. C. Leighton as the villain Michael Severn is a clever exponent, and has able assistance from Mr. Charles Loraine (M. Peranza) and Mr. Robert Pittard (Jim Dixon).

IPSWICH.—Lyceum Theatre.—Messrs. Arthur Paumier and Walter Howard's company is here in The Midnight Wedding. Mr. E. A. Winnington Barnes plays Paul Valmar in a capable manner; Mr. John Nesbitt as Prince Leopold, Mr. Vernon H. Vayne as Von Strelsburg, and Mr. F. Booth Conway as Von Scarsbruck are all accomplished actors; Sergeant Mart, Corporal Otto, and Private Bobo are played amusingly by Messrs. James E. Page, Harry Richardson, and Algie Spalding. The part of Princess Astrea in the hands of Miss Yvonne Orchardson is an excellent piece of acting, and Miss Gwladys Faunce is a vivacious Kathie.

Hippodrome. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The house this week is occupied by Mr. J. Collins's pantomime Puss in Boots. The dancing of the Collins Sextette and the Eight Gems children is graceful, and far and away above the average pantomime companies; Miss Ethel Beech is Juan, the hero, Miss Eva Elliss is Princess Corita, and Miss May Otto the Good Fairy, all of whom at once established themselves as favourites; the King is played by Mr. Wyn Weaver, and Mr. Bobby Hall as the Widow Dolores is very funny; the Cat is impersonated by Mr. Harry Seymour; Messrs. Arthur Watts (Sancho), Mr. Algernon Lea (Pancho), Ferriss and Fornley (Bilbalio and Jobalio) are all humorous.

JARROW.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Lionel Locke.—The well-known actor Mr. William Mollison is appearing at the head of a talented company with a répertoire of classical dramas, Hamlet being submitted on Monday. Mr. Mollison's conception of the Prince of Denmark was an admirable one, and his efforts were ably seconded by Miss Evelyn McNay as Ophelia; Mr. Archie W. Chappell was a very fine Horatio, and Mr. William Calvert was well placed as Claudius. Miss Elsie Anderson did full justice to the part of Gertrude, Queen of Denmark. The remainder of the week is devoted to Julius Cæsar, The Bonnie Brier Bush, and Davy Garrick.

Empire.—Lessee, Mr. James A. Lauder; General-Manager, Mr. Edward Ranier.—The attractions here include the Little Hackenschmidt, the bantam-weight champion wrestler, who is taking on all comers; Two Sprigs of Holly, comedy duettists and dancers; Billy Myers, Tyneside comedian; Nellie Sadie, comedienne and dancer; Pauline Lucy, the female whistler; Wilbur and Wright, the eccentric couple; and Mr. J. A. Lauder, magician, who does excellent tricks.

KEIGHLEY.—Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. R. S. Kendall; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Carson.—Mr. George Dances company in Miss Hook of Holland is popular here. Mr. Alfred Wellesley is excellent as Mr. Hook, and creates roars of laughter; Mr. W. Balfour possesses a fine voice, and is successful as Captain Paap; Mr. Frank Crimp is a local favourite, and his performance of the Bandmaster, Van Voyt, is delightful; Mr. George Mudie, jun., plays well in the part of Schnapps; Miss Daisy Manning is winning and graceful as Sally; and Miss Cissie Stephen scores as Mina. Pretty scenery and a capital chorus add to the evening's enjoyment.

KETTERING.—Avenue Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Payne.—Mr. Charles Constant's company is here with Bluebeard. Miss Marie Duncan is an admirable Fatima; Miss Laura Wickender is an attractive Fairy Queen; and Miss Daisy Lake is a great favourite as Selim. The comic element is very strong, Mr. Johnny Clegg being very funny as Sister Ann, and is admirably supported by Mr. Jack Parker as Bamboozlum, Mr. Walter Freer as Pimple, and Messrs. Harlin and Hanlon.

KIDDERMINSTER. — New Opera House.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. Jas. P. Mooro; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. C. Gudgeon.—Messrs. O. Silverstone and H. Wright's company is here this week with The Nihilist. Mr. O. Silverstone gives an effective portrayal of Prince Alexander, and Mr. William A. Armour scores as Ivan Nowasky. Bobby Smart is realistically played by Mr. Henry Wright, and Mr. Cowell Clark does well as Paul Orloff. Piertree Petoff is cleverly enacted by Mr. C. Newton Buckland. Miss Edna Clare as Alexina gives a finished rendering, and Miss Florrie Kelsey as Princess Olga well supports her.

KING'S LYNN.—New Royal Theatre.—Manager and Lessee, Mr. B. Pareezer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For three nights last week Mr. Stanley James's company presented the comedy My Wife to appreciative audiences. Mr. C. H. Croker King as Gerald Eversley and Miss Mary Carnegy as Beatrice Dupré performed their parts with that precision which characterise them as first favourites with a Lynn audience; Mr. James Geldered as the Hon. Gibson Gore, successfully provoked the element of mirth throughout the play; Miss Katherine Harrington was most graceful as Miriam Hawthorne, and Mr. Cecil Brooking as M. Dupré sustained the vigour demanded by his part; Mr. Frank Stoney made a typical butler; Mr. Vernon Crabtree was most vivacious in his part as Rene Falandres, and the other parts were excellently sustained by the company. Each evening the play was preceded by a charming and cleverly-written one-act comedy-drama by Mr. Stanley James, entitled The Vengeance of Jim. This was produced for the first time on Thursday evening, and an account of it is given elsewhere.

Hippodrome.—The Elliott-Savonas are here for six nights with their marvellous musical entertainment. Their new creation The Palace of Morpheus, with its many-coloured lights present a scene of exquisite beauty, such as is seldom witnessed in a provincial town, and the dexterity they exhibit on various instruments proclaim them masters in musical art. They have with them a strong variety company, which includes Senorita Eloina, who is a clever gymnast; Burley and Burley, acrobatic comedians, present some original contortions; the Moncktons are entertaining in a comedy sketch Two in a Flat; Charles J. Lever is a tramp comedian and juggler of excellent style: Wright and Elton are vivacious and graceful in their dancing, and Miss Florence receives vociferous applause for her illustrated songs.

KIRKCALDY.—Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Mr. Edmund Tearle and company are presenting a repertory of Shakespearean plays this week. As Othello Mr. Tearle's resonant voice and exceptional histrionic ability are effectively employed. He is ably assisted by Miss Wanda Beresford, who makes a beautiful and convincing Desdemona; Mr. A. Wilson Gunning is worthy of praise for an effective rendering of Iago; Mr. Stuart Black is very successful as Cassia, and Mr. P. P. Millar is sufficiently simple as Roderigo. The smaller parts are in the capable hands of Messrs. Thomas Price, Denis Hogan, Ernest Lodge, and Misses M. Campbell, H. Macrae, and H. Robertson.

LANCASTER.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—The Love of the Princess is the attraction this week, and is staged in a commendable manner by Mr. T. Edward Ward's company. Miss Maisie Hanbury is a graceful and pleasing Princess; Mr. Wilson Coleman as Prince Conrad acts with care and judgment; Mr. E. H. Dobell plays in a clever and convincing manner as Josef, the King; and Mr. Ernest E. Imeson is well placed as Count Daniello. Miss Nellie Grahame is a pleasing Constantia; and Miss Olive Lloyd wins favour in the part of Lady Irene.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—Substitutes for Harry Radford and Mlle. Valentine, absent through indisposition, have been found in Blair and West, the clever comedians and speciality dancers; the Rays are smart equilibrists; the Eeduns supply a pleasing musical turn; La Belle Greta sings and dances well; and Datas, the man with a memory, has a good reception. The Bros. Redmond, comedians, are recalled each house; and Grogie, the character man of the South, is well received. The Hippograph with amusing pictures brings the programme to a successful finish.

LEEDS.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Jno. Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Pantomime is succeeded by The Dollar Princess, which is touring the provinces previous to appearing in London. Mr. Geo. Edwardes has secured a capable company, consisting of Miss Hilda Moody, who sings and acts delightfully; the oil magnate is amusingly presented by Mr. Fred Winn; Mr. Robert Michaelis is a capital singer, and acts the part of the stand-offish lover with ease and gracefulness; Miss Kitty Gordon sings charmingly, and her dresses are superb. Other characters in the cast are popular.

The Royal Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. MacNaghton.—A Woman Worth Winning is here.

The Empire.—Moss Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Morton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—Miss Daisy Dormer is unable to appear owing to illness; Nellie Wallace is as amusing as ever in some new songs; W. F. Purcell's company act well in a breezy sketch, That Brute Simmons; Leynard's Lilliputians perform some neat circus tricks. Others contributing to a well-balanced programme include W. F. Frame, Naughton and Gold, Phil Parsons, Les Uniques, and Edie Endon.

The Hippodrome.—Lessee, Mr. T. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Collingwood.—Following Madame Albani comes Herr Julius Walther, who has been heard in grand opera quite recently; the Klein Troupe are smart cyclists, and the daring antics of the black boy are a good addition to their act; Frank Fenton and Co. cleverly present a nutshell version of David Garrick; Arthur Reece is very popular; the Three Allison Sisters work hard in acrobatic dances; and the Bros. Zenary and Willie Allan complete.

The Varieties.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sam Jones.—Sammy Shields, of football fame, is topping the bill. Other artists include Zeta Grey and Co., Rowland Hill, Madeline Rossiter, and Boden and Bell.

The Queen's.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Bush.—Of chief importance are Carl and Mary Ohm, with their animal circus. Other good turns include Colin Coop, Lily Lonsdale, Ernie Myers, and Picitt and Lizette.

LEICESTER.—Opera House.—A first visit of Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company in Brewster's Millions, with its famous Yacht scene, is the attraction here this week. The company is an all-round good one, at the head of which is Mr. Percy Hutchison in a remarkably successful impersonation of Monty Brewster. Miss Cicely Stuckey is an altogether charming exponent of the part of Peggy; and Miss Lilias Earle scores a well-deserved success as Mrs. Dan de Mille. Mr. Cyril Rawdon is very good as Charlie Harrison. The numerous other parts are allotted to artists who well maintain the high reputation so deservedly earned by this successful and popular touring management.

Theatre Royal.—Mrs. Frank Bateman and Mr. George Conquest's company is here this week in the well-known drama The Crimes of Paris. It is a play that suits the tastes of the patrons of this drama house, and is being presented in a manner that ensures its success.

Palace Theatre, Ltd. — Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—Topping this week's bill is Ernest Shand, a particularly brilliant humorist, whose turn is brimful of smart patter. He is receiving a most cordial reception from all sections of the audience. At the other end is Fred Ginnett's musical sketch Hunting Morn, supported by a clever company of artists, who contribute a number of hunting songs. Mr. Ginnett also introduces his wonderful hunting mare Clonmel, who is brought into a drawing-room and performs some remarkable feats of jumping. The sketch is well staged, and proves very popular. Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister's company are again cordially greeted in their finely-played and thoroughly interesting American dramatic sketch, No. 99; Harry Lickson's balancing dogs are put through a most astonishingly clever performance; Florence and Lilian score a well-deserved success in their artistic musical act. The Vetter Brothers are clever gymnasts and hand-balancers; Walter Curtis, a comedian of great ability, keeps the audience in laughter; Lil O'Gorman is a capital comedienne and dancer; Winnie Oldershaw, a favourite young comedienne and dancer, appears in place of Cline and Clark. The Bioscope shows The Incendiary in ten tableaux.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—Arthur Norton, the 9st. Græco-Roman champion, is the special attraction here. The usual challenges are thrown out, but it is needless to say that Norton is always the successful man; Gilbert's dogs are put through a very interesting and clever performance, which is much to the credit of their trainer; the Laurie Brothers give a smart and clean acrobatic display; Kinnaird is a deft conjurer, whose many feats are well performed; Lily Lumaine gives an entertaining musical act; both Charles Byron, eccentric comedian, and Joe S. Aitken, quaint comedian, create much merriment; the Granvilles, song illustrators, are successful deputies for Rose Cass. Walter H. Pallister's Bioscope is a feature with Warrior's Bride and Paddy Eats Horseflesh. He is also showing the Cinephone, with new films.

Empire.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles R. Craig.—The chief films this week include the Tottenham Tragedy, The Gentleman Burglar, The Laughing Man, Modern Cinderella, Repelled by All, By a Woman's Wit, Magistrate's Conscience, Electricity, and The Press Gang. Harry Lynx, a popular and laughter-compelling comedian, is on a successful return visit, having to contribute three songs.

The Empress Rink.—Proprietors, Rinking, Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Cormack.—This new establishment has "caught on," as large parties of skaters attend, especially the afternoon and evening sessions. There is no reason why it should not become a splendid success, as efficiency is conspicuous in every department of the undertaking. Mr. H. Cormack is untiring in his duties in the managerial capacity, and Guidi's Military Orchestra adds to the pastime with excellent selections.

LEIGH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. W. H. Chippendale.—The boards this week are being occupied by Miss Maud Hildyard's company in the sensational drama The Great Awakening. Miss Maud Hildyard admirably portrays the rôle of Lola Selby; Miss Lilian Deane submits Molly Merton in excellent and sympathetic style; Mr. Bernard Copping does exceedingly well in the dual rôles of Sir Henry Merton and Jack Merton; Mr. Gordon Laws as the villainous schemer Guy Regan plays his part well; Mr. Wallis Clark is well placed as James Selby; Mr. Charles Ashwell is a creditable Captain Harry Lambert, and Mr. Gifforde Reynolds is an effective Richard Wilson; Mr. Willie Scott is intensely funny as Billy Braso, and together with Miss Isa Bellington as Selina Worte keeps the house in good humour.

Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Benson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstencroft.—An excellent programme is being submitted headed by the Six Brothers Luck in their clever absurdity Hotel Grande; Mr. Harry Wright, extempore vocalist, is very smart and refined; the popular August and September, eccentric comedians, fairly bring down the house; the Three Merrions provide a pleasing and acceptable turn; Miss Mi Narom, comedy lady, is very clever and original; the Two Erolls gain much applause for their clever tumbling act; Mr. Bruce Green, comedian; Miss Nellie Cannon, vocalist; and the Empire Bioscope complete a most attractive bill.

Assembly Rooms.—Lessees, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Walker; Manager, Mr. J. Frank Walker.—The pictures this week are drawing good houses at each exhibition. The list of films includes Sold to Thieves, Master as General, Baby's Chum, &c. The artists include the Gelders, magicians; Miss Ivy Dene, comedienne; and Mr. Alf Collinson, singing pit lad, all of which find favour.

LEITH.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—Mr. Frederick Melville's well-known drama The Ugliest Woman on Earth has been favourably received on its third visit to Leith. Miss Beatrice Homer repeats her finished and effective rendering of the difficult name-part; and Mr. Philip Darien and Mr. Leyton Chancellor are again prominent in their forcible interpretations of the hero and villain of the piece. Miss Gertrude Harrison does well histrionically as the adventuress Rose Courtenay; Mr. Freddie Bentley and Miss Nellie Jackson as Tubby Harrick and Aggie Brown successfully supply the comic relief; Miss Violet Macaree is to be commended for her Morita; and other praiseworthy impersonations are those of Antonio Luckess, Tom Redvers, Raggles, and Dr. Carr, by Messrs. Leonard Thackeray, William De Brigord, Harry Leyton, and Gerald Nolan respectively.

LIVERPOOL.—Royal Court Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—Humpty Dumpty will finish its pantomime run to-night (Saturday).

Shakespeare Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—For the opening of the dramatic season, after a successful pantomime, a work replete with life and movement, entitled The Sailor's Wedding, was presented here on Monday evening by the Hardie and Von Leer company, many members of the cast when the piece was originally given at London last September appearing. The drama was staged in admirable fashion, and an appreciative audience greatly enjoyed it. Miss Mary Pemberton was, on this occasion, the daughter of Count Bellini, and played the heroine's part with a charm that strongly appealed to the sympathies of her audience; another change in the original cast was that of Mr. Richard A. Greene, who very ably undertook Gordon Drake, into which rôle he infused a deal of spirited manliness that found favour; Mr. Cecil Klein was again Sir Victor Lascelles, which he handled with excellent point; Mr. Hodgson Taylor repeated his capital picture of the villainous Ferici; Mr. F. Finch Smiles stood out prominently in the small but effective character of Giacomo; Miss Laura Hansen acquitted herself as the distressed mother; Miss Winifred Pearson, with her original rôle of the adventuress, Lenore de Gresac, proved a tower of strength; and worthy support also came from Messrs. Walter Pemberton and Gerald Ford, the naval sailors; Miss M. Sadie, the lively waitress; and Mr. Harold Weston as Count Bellini.

ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Here this week we have had A Girl's Cross Roads, with Miss Hilda Beverley giving a powerful representation of the unfortunate Barbara Wade; Mr. Harry Cane did excellently as John Meadows; Mr. Norman B. Cannon made a fine Jack Livingstone; and credit was also due to Messrs. Fred Hodson (Toby Turvy), W. J. Butler (Cuthbert Lumley), Fred Withers (Luke Ramsden), Edward Valentine (Dr. Weston); and the Misses Jeannie Thomas (Tilly Vane), Nita Langton (Nellie Meadows), and Muriel Dean (Constance Cornell).

STAR THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—Here this week Lingford Carson's company introduced to Liverpool The Great White Chief, a well-written drama, which proved a big draw. The work was presented in excellent style, and the artists engaged were quite capable of doing justice to their allotted parts. Mr. Hugh Brady made a decided impression upon his audience by his fine depiction of Reindeer, the dumb chief; Mr. Mansell Fane, in the title-part, proved eminently successful; as Latika Miss Polly Denville acted with sound judgment and charm; Miss Dulcie Lawrence made a strong Hester Stafford; Mr. Miller Wilson (George Rupert Walker) and Miss Amy Ross Clyde (Martha Curley) provoked great laughter; and valuable assistance also came from Messrs. George Butler (Hartley Deane), and Billy Melrose (John Warton). The new feature introduced here of presenting Bioscope pictures at the conclusion of the drama has been appreciated.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Topping the programme here this week was Karno's latest, The G.P.O., with Fred Kitchen as Perkins. Among the principal supporters were Raymond Thomas, Herbert Landeck, Walter Wilby, and Jessie Grammonde. The production was richly enjoyed. An always welcome artist in Liverpool, Miss Winifred Hare paid another visit, and was received with the utmost cordiality, her latest song, "Keep a-whistling," finding great favour. She was assisted by Miss Dolly Raynor. The Bensons provided a most amusing turn, entitled The Page and the Maid; an interesting and diverting football match on bicycles was presented by the Bros. St. Clair; the Sisters Caselli as duettists and dancers, pleased generally; Sybil St. Elmo sang several numbers in good style; and the list also contained the names of Marriott Edgar, "the man in red"; Walter Aubrey, coon vocalist and buck dancer; and Dot Hardy, character comedienne.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—Here during the week Mother has been presented by Mr. Harry Foxwell's company.

LYRIC. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Gus Garrick has been foremost here during the week, pleasing everybody with his music-hall tit-bits; the remarkable juggling powers of Rapoli earned for that accomplished artist much applause; a smart vocal speciality was given by Stewart and Morgan; Marie Jones, assisted by Ernest Munro, gave her particularly clever protean sketch, The Way to Win a Bet; as child vocalists and dancers Tiny and Mite pleased generally; a novel quick-change comedy act came from the Three Behans; and others who appeared were Lenoi Dixon, comedienne and dancer; and Mlle. Eldee, "the girl in the golden frame."

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan. —Hayman and Franklin headed the bill this week with the funny sketch, A Suit for Divorce; Sinclair and Whiteford caused endless laughter with their trifle, Getting Even; the New York Comedy Four rendered some humorously harmonious numbers; Mons. Payen submitted several smartly-executed impersonations; Effie White gave her latest kaleidoscope dance, "The Spirit of the Cave"; some quaint and sensational trick cycling was gone through by Henry and Tyler; Phillip Levard presented some bewildering illusions; and contributions also came from Reg. Beauchamp, comedian; Bertisch, athlete; Iris Banfield, comedienne; and Gus Harris, Hebrew comedian.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole. —During the week the stock company here gave The Prodigal Parson, included in the principal characters being Rev. Tom Godley (Mr. David G. Noble), Enoch Jaggins (Mr. Sydney Grant), Ben Jaggins (Mr. R. Seath Innes), Phil Drive (Mr. Tom H. Solly), Karten (Mr. Cecil Ravenswood), Mrs. Snaffewich (Miss Lilian Radbourne), and Fern Godley (Miss Gwyn Warren). Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed the latest pictures.

WESTMINSTER.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—In addition to a series of cinematograph pictures shown here during the week, the following artists appeared: The Birkenhead Family of vocalists, Hall and Sanders, comedians, and Deane Tribune.

OLYMPIA.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—The Sands of Dee has put in a fifth and last week, thus proving the most popular water spectacle ever presented here. The excellent entertainment given by the Gothams was received with every satisfaction; Lydia and Amelys gave the Apache dance; a neat transformation gymnastic act came from the Trentanovi Sisters; McCann's performing dogs were a source of much interest; Walter Munroe, Irish character comedian, was heartily received on his return visit; Beatie Kent sang and danced gracefully; and others seen were Tom Collins, light comedian; and Mary Ambrose, comedienne.

PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Top of the programme here this week was Richard Corbin, with his troupe of dogs, whose antics provoked much merriment; Walter Ellis presented an amusing scena, Captain Duncan and His Airship, in which Bob Barbour and Harry Danby took part; some pleasing harmony was provided by the Wakeman Quintet, consisting of Miss Marion Bradshaw, Miss Dolly Percival, and Messrs. Will Dawson, Jack Lennox, and Charles Wakeman; Mabel Thorne brought her latest delightful songs, including "Oh! Georgie," "The Music Teacher," and "Home made Home"; a clever ventriloquial turn was given by Coram; the Eight College Girls afforded satisfaction with their pretty dancing and singing; and the programme also contained the names of Jack Crawley, with his novel act, "Lights out"; Marie Kay, juvenile comedienne and dancer; the Four Henry Hearns, comedy acrobats; and Ben Silvo, gymnast and clown.

GRAND TIVOLI.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—Much enjoyment has been got out of Audie Caine's tabloid pantomime, Goody Two Shoes, which has been foremost here this week. Mr. Caine, as the Dame, proved exceedingly droll, and he was supported by a number of able artists. Mr. Redfern's pictures gave a deal of pleasure; and variety turns were provided by Evelyn and Norrie, with a quaint act, Set a Thief to Catch a Thief; Nellie Moore, classical impersonator; Leo Fields, comedian; Molly Doon, vocalist; and M. H. Thiessan, with his dogs.

PARK PALACE.—Mr. Jasper Redfern.—The fine series of animated pictures shown here continues to give satisfaction. This week the following variety artists also appeared: Herbert and Linden, dancing and comedy duo; Frank Coyle, comedian; Two Katos, comedians; Baby Sophie, juvenile vocalist; Edmunda, comic ventriloquist; and the Forrest Comedy Company.

NEW CENTURY PICTURE HALL.—Proprietors, The New Century Animated Picture Company, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter W. Hook.—The big draw here this week has been the Bioscope picture of the Australian fight between Johnson and Burns, the film having been secured by the Gaumont Company, Ltd., in conjunction with Mr. Hugh D. McIntosh, and, so far as Liverpool is concerned, exclusively shown at the above hall four times a day. In addition, many other excellent pictures were presented, and business proved good.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Payne Seddon and George Robertson; Resident-Business-Manager, Mr. W. Payne Seddon.—Mr. Chas. H. Lester's company in A Life for a Life has been well received. Mr. Chas. H. Lester's Don Leon Farnandes is a fine effort; Mr. Chas. Felton as Pedro Li Celci is successful; and Bunker Ben is safe in the capable hands of Mr. Jack Mason. Miss Gertrude Wasley as Nancy Dorn and Miss Dorothy Riddell as Kate Evelyn act with true artistic feeling; Miss Lydia Hart as Eulalie plays with great dramatic power; and Little Winnie as Venetta brings down the house by her clever acting and singing.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA.—Manager, Mr. E. A. Smith.—Variety is again in evidence here, following drama, musical comedy, pantomime, &c. The bill includes Arthur Watson and Flo Stanley in the sketch H.M.S. Victory; Miss Alice Hughes and company present The Star of the Bazaar; and the Sisters Rene (duettists and dancers), Freedo and Preston, Mabel Moss, and Harry Desmond complete a successful bill.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert; Manager, Mr. Frank Freeland.—An audience of nearly 3,000 witnessed Monday's performance, and the various turns had a popular welcome. Messrs. Surrey and Carlton's company presented The Plucky Nipper; while the Mannikins gave a clever imitation of the marionettes. Metz and Metz (singers and dancers), Harry Morgan, and Bertha Norwood added to the general success; while the Biograph presented all the latest and best subjects.

MACCLESFIELD.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—This week we have Mr. and Mrs. John Walter's company with The Babes in the Wood. Miss Violet Thorne is a winsome and vivacious Robin Hood. Admirable support is given by Miss Lily Miller as Maid Marion; excellent portrayals of the Babes are submitted by Miss F. Parkinson and Miss Kitty Chesters; as Alkan-a-Dale Miss Edie Bracewell is decidedly good, her dancing being exceedingly pretty and effective; Miss Elsie Kedward is a pleasing Dolly Dimple; Mr. Alley M. Benson is to be congratulated upon his clever impersonation of Dame Flossie; Mr. Tom Lewis does well as the Baron; as Tommy Mr. Tom Hulme wins appreciation; Blustering Bill and Wavering Walley are well played by Mr. Martin Haley and Mr. Dan Rayner respectively; and the Cattaneo Trio are smart athletes.

MAESTEG. — TOWN HALL THEATRE.—Lessees, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. G. F. Knowles.—Messrs. Forbes and Battersby's company in The Empty Cradle is the attraction here this week. As Kenneth Bloodworth Mr. David Urquhart is a decided success; Carnaby Bloodworth is ably impersonated by Mr. St. Clair Forbes; Miss Nancy Battersby wins the appreciation of the audience by her clever portrayal of Ida Boswell; Miss Florence Trevoir is commendable as Mary Burton; and other characters are well sustained by capable artists.

MAIDSTONE.—PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. S. Baskerville.—Peter's Mother is here, and as played by Miss Emma Hutchison's company is proving very attractive. Mr. Vivian Gilbert as Peter Crewys gives a good interpretation; Mr. Drew Mackintosh is well suited as John Crewys; and Mr. Walter Russell makes a feature of the part of Canon Birch. Mr. Townsend Whitling acts well as Sir Timothy Crewys; Miss Lilian Ley as Lady Mary Crewys is womanly and sympathetic; Miss Hilda Sims as Sarah and Miss Mary Griffiths as Lady Belstone are good; and Miss Josephine Rae as Miss G. Crewys is responsible for some hearty laughs. Turtle Doves, a well-acted farce, is the curtain-raiser.

MANCHESTER. — GAIETY THEATRE — Proprietor, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Manager, Mr. B. Iden Payne; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—So successful were the performances of John Galsworthy's play, The Silver Box, at this theatre a few weeks ago that the piece was put on again on Monday, when a large audience was attracted. The performance was excellent, and the theme and its painful thrills made a deep impression. The cast is as before, with the exception of Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, whose place is taken by Mr. B. Iden Payne as Barthwick, M.P. A one-act play, Bringing It Home, precedes.

ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Last week's attraction at the Grand Junction Theatre, The Old Home, is staged here with equal success, Mr. Roland Yorke's company including Mr. Charles Franmore and Miss G. Bonser in important rôles.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son.—Messrs. Cullen and Carthy's successful pantomime, Babes in the Wood, is drawing big houses here, as it did at the Hulme Hippodrome last week. The show is distinctly smart.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's latest play, Her Secret Lover, presented by Mr. Thompson-Carruthers, made a successful appearance here on Monday. It is a strong piece, well staged and powerfully rendered. Mr. Cecil Gray as Gilbert Seymour makes a capital hero, and he is well matched by Miss Mabel Mannering in the sympathetic rôle of Ivy Seymour; Mr. Millar Anderson's villainies as John Strange are equally well supported by the wickedness of Miss Amy Ellam as Alicia Royale; Mr. Arthur Preston as Captain Rose and Mr. Milner Noble as Mr. Murfield are also well placed; while the humour of the play is smartly exploited by Miss Beatrice Reynolds as Jane Maria Wilkes and Mr. Cecil de Lee as Bill Burley. All the minor parts are capably handled, and the total effect is excellent.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—The most notably good turns here this week are provided by Hubert Casting and company in a capitally acted version of the drunken scene in David Garrick; Fred Walton, the king of silent comedians, in his Toy Soldier act; and Joe O'Gorman, the Irish raconteur, who gives of his best in his well-known racy style; very good also is Theo Bouwmeester, in his protean drama; the Stavordale Quintette give their stringed imitations of the human voice; Alf Holt is a particularly good sifflеur and mimic; and other enjoyable turns are Mabel Mavis, society entertainer; Ugo Nap, burlesque comedian; the Rawsons, youthful entertainers; and Wee Mona, an accomplished juvenile comedienne and dancer.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—Highly entertaining here this week are Clark and Hamilton in new and old business; Henrietta De Serri's reproductions of famous works of art are exceedingly well carried out; Annie Purcell charms with excellent songs, rendered delightfully; Fred Eustace, ably assisted, is particularly good in a comedy sketch entitled The Amber Light; Carrie Lauri's Kindergarten scena introduces several very clever children; Burnetti is well received as a character musician; Bessie Slaughter, contralto, sings well; Amy Anderson and company are good in a smart vaudeville act; and a sensational performance is given by Staig's Steeplejacks cycling the chimney. Pictures complete the programme.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Maurice Farkoa is starring here this week, and delighting all with his charming songs and style. The Brothers Horne cause no end of laughter in their boxing sketch, The Biter Bit; Tschin-Maa and his Chunchuse Entertainers go through a clever and interesting performance; and Miss Teddy Edmonds and company are seen in an amusing farce, The Lady Jockey; Dusty Rhodes is a capital comedian; Willie Gardner scores as a skate dancer; Jenny Alexander, a very clever juvenile, makes a hit as a mimic; and other smart turns are given by the Rangers, expert comedy cyclists; and James Bassett, vocal comedian. Palace Pictures are also included in the programme.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. R. Trippett.—Messrs. Sutton and Raynor's excellent combination of players are here this week in Captain Swift, which is given twice nightly before crowded houses. Mr. Raynor in the title-part adds to his reputation as an actor of sterling merit, and Mr. Cecil Wynne renders valuable support in the rôle of George Gardiner; Miss Henrietta Schrier as Mrs. Seabrook gives a highly effective performance, while Miss Dorothy West-Symes is charming as Mabel; good work is done also by Miss Cecilia Dare as Stella Durbisher, Mr. Milton C. Curtis as James Seabrook, and Mr. Leonard Lawrence as Marshall, the butler, and the remaining parts are all in capable hands. The programme included a performance of Harvest on Friday.

TIVOLI.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Mme. Maud Santley, the famous prima-donna, is the bright particular star here this week, and her reception is deservedly great; La Belle Nilla and partner are pleasing in songs and transformations; the Sisters Du Cane make a hit as vocalists and dancers; Ryder Davis is a good vocal comedian; Mlle. Ottino is a clever lady conjurer, with a charming style; Kitty Malone, though obviously suffering from a severe cold, did well; Cissie Astbury is a pleasing comedienne; Tom Londberg, the "one-man programme," is smart; and Eva Ward sings two songs nicely. Ruffell's Bioscope pictures are, as usual, exceedingly good.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—A change from the ordinary fare is provided here this week by Messrs. Watson and Owen's company in the domestic drama, How Women are Slandered. The strongest part in a well-balanced company of artists is undertaken with dramatic effect by Miss Phyllis Elton as the scheming Madge Gilroy, and she is capably assisted by Mr. Bert Oakes as Bob Warberton; the part of Major Sterling is engagingly filled by Mr. Edward Fryer, and Miss Rusel Spiers as Maud Warberton makes a charming heroine; while Mr. Leslie Newton ably impersonates the Squire, and humorous rôles are made the most of by Mr. Templar Ellis and Miss Mollie Hackett.

HULME HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thos. Baker. —Arnold Richardson, Ethel Lonsdale, and Flockton Foster top the bill here this week in a highly-amusing comedy-sketch, Ferdie's Ma-in-Law. The Three Warners, lady vocalists and acrobatic dancers, give an excellent turn; Ethel Loftus, a smart comedienne, makes a big hit; Pueblo and Cropp are expert sand dancers, and are well received; Seener and Fridkins are clever Russian dancers; Edwin Garth, the quaint dame, gives a very funny turn; and other capital items are those of Will Willis, comedian; the Ray Hearn Trio in sketch, The Model Husband; Major Moss, singer of old songs; and the Arthur Bedini Trio in a pantomime act. Interesting films complete.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. W. W. Keene.—Messrs. Henry Chattell and Jack Denton's company opened here on Monday with Through the Divorce Court. The drama is finely staged and mounted, the Divorce Court scene being very realistic. Mr. Cecil A. Collins gave a masterly enactment of Lord Robert Penarth; Miss Katherine Carew made a charming Lady Dolores Penarth; Miss Genna Lyndon was winsome and bright as Lady Sybil, their daughter; Mr. Ernest E. Norris acted forcibly as the scheming Mendoza; Mr. Frank E. Straker was effective as Leon Di Valdiz; Miss Edith Cruikshanks gave a praiseworthy impersonation of Lady Hilda Fitzmaurice; Mr. Jack Denton was entertaining as Algy Fitzmaurice; whilst great amusement was afforded by Miss Nellie Sheffield as Dinah and Mr. Horace Hammond as Patsy Rafferty. Deserving also of favourable mention were Miss Pattie Groves, Mr. Wilson Blake, Mr. Arthur Eastwood, and Mr. Edward Belcher, who capably sustained the parts allotted to them.

HIPPODROME.—Joint Managing-Directors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—The current week's programme has again been a varied one, contributed to by the Max Milan Trio, equilibrists and balancers; the Rosana Quartette, in their novelty dancing creation; De Lilo and Metz, comedy specialists; Gus Earle, hurricane dancer; London and Barrett, in The Dutch Flirtation; and Walter Wade in his scena Patsy Burke. This week's pictures represent The Czar of Bulgaria and The Auto Heroine.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Sole Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. Evans.—The Joseph Poole's Myriorama opened on Monday for a week with a capital programme, which included, among a series of new and interesting pictures, actual photographs showing the destruction of Messina. Among the entertainers providing the variety concert are the Mackaines, mystifiers; the Seddons, jugglers and wire walkers; and Miss Frederica's performing terriers and trained pony.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—The Thief, presented by Mr. Ernest Bodkin by arrangement with Mr. George Alexander, is here. Mr. Paul Lovett makes a natural and convincing Richard Chelford; Mr. Ernest Bodkin as Raymond Leyton is very incisive throughout; Mr. C. W. Lindsey is well placed as Harry Leyton; and Mr. T. Taylor-Vinson is admirable as the detective Protheroe. Miss Kathryn Stocks ably sustains the part of Marise Chelford; and Miss Mary Forrester is effective as Isabel Leyton.

TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—Ashley's American Circus heads a very interesting programme with cleverly-trained ponies and dogs; Will Probyn's Mirthful Mariners are much applauded; Shirley and Ransome are paying a successful return visit; and other good turns are furnished by Ernest Stidder and Gwennie Dunbar, Victor Brothers (Olympic athletes), Cliff and Kean (in a novelty dancing act), Zaleski (the Golden Spider), and Tom Yorke (coster comedian).

MEXBOROUGH.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Mr. John H. Tompkinson's Royal Gipsy company is here with an excellent vaudeville programme—La Vie, in electrical art panel poses; the Four Louberts, in the comedy acrobatic act Uninvited; Wee Winnie, vocalist and dancer; Miss Elsie Howard, contralto vocalist; Miss Irene Lyne, soprano; James Carr, baritone and descriptive vocalist; Sam Paul, actor-vocalist; Elsie Rubina, a queen of equipoise; Tompkinson's Quartette Party; Chas. Bradford, raconteur and humorist, and others.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — OPERA HOUSE. — Managing-Director, Mr. John Ed. Jowsey; Manager and Licensee, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—Mr. Walter Melville's stirring new production, The Solidier's Wedding, occupies the boards here this week, and meets with gratifying success. Mr. Wingold Lawrence brings good histrionic talent to bear upon the part of Jack Brown; and Miss Dorothy Richardson is well suited to that of Nancy Lee. Miss Alice Campbell is very pleasing as Mrs. Hatherton; and among other members of a strong cast are Miss Mary McAulay as Julie de Beauvries, Miss Mabel Love as Peggy Munroe, Mr. Fred Yarnold as Nathaniel Lee, and Mr. Fred Biron as David Munroe. The piece is admirably staged.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Chas. Imeson.—The sensational drama, Greed of Gold is being presented here by Mr. T. Morton Powell's company. Mr. James Jarrett is excellent as Tom Welstead; and Mr. Harry Parr gives a fine portrayal of the part of Harry Hood. Mr. Alf Stretton is equally good as Arthur Errol; and Miss Maud M. Powell as Dora, the heroine, displays her great histrionic ability. Humour is introduced into the play by Mr. C. Eldred Wood as Conn Creamer; and Miss Florrie Hayes as Patty Manfield.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles Rembges.—The principal item here this week is the cinematograph pictures of the great fight between Johnson and Burns for the championship of the world. The fight is given from start to finish, and every detail is seen as clearly as by those who paid fabulous sums for a seat at the actual contest. Starr and Leslie are exceedingly good in their speciality act; and Herbert Clifton also makes a welcome reappearance. Mona Garrick is a clever character actress; and Madge Temple is a dainty comedienne. Other turns are given by Woolmer Young, vocal comedian; Martin D. Pitts, vocalist; and Gold, and Stirling, comedy artists.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Manager, Mr. C. E. Nicholls.—Lew Lake and Bob Morris and large company create roars of laughter here this week, in their sketch My Pal Jerry. The Ramlos are clever gymnasts; and Wilfred Burnand's impersonations find a host of admirers. Webb and Banston, Harrigan and Holt, Jock Mills, Olnars, and Joe Reichen and his dogs are also capital turns.

MOTHERWELL.—NEW CENTURY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—Mr. Julian Graham's company is here in The Gay Goddess. Miss Kate Graham-Beck admirably sustains the title-rôle; Mr. Arthur Staples is funny as the sorely-harassed Solicitor's Clerk; Miss Leah Howard is sweet and dainty as Priscilla; Miss Amy Wood fitly acts the part of the strong-minded stepmother; Miss Louie Grey sings and dances prettily as Lottie Stimson; Mr. Fred Hammond does well as the deaf old stepfather; and mention should be made of Mr. Richard Teasdale, who ably enacts the rôle of Sherlock Blake.

MUSSELBURGH.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Hugh Ritchie; Lessee, Mr. A. W. B. Kingston; Resident-Manager, Mr. Dennis Glover.—Stock drama wears well at this house, many old pieces appearing in this week's bill. The Ticket-of-Leave Man was played on Monday.

TOWN HALL.—Clerk, Mr. John Richardson.—On Monday the late Mr. T. W. Rushbury's company paid a return visit here under the direction of Mrs. Rushbury. Roland Yorke's romantic drama The Old Home was played. A well-balanced performance and the elaborate setting of the piece keep the play at the usual high standard of Rushbury productions. Messrs. T. B. Brabazon and Walter A. Warren are still with the company, and do very well in their respective parts of Lord Avondale and Sam Adams; Hazel Dean is played by Miss Mona Garland, and the Rev. Eric Armstrong by Mr. Harold E. Kinton. Other characters are in the hands of Mr. J. P. Marsden (Daddy Dean), Miss Lillian Murray (Biddy), and Miss Alice Granville (Polly).

NEATH.—CASTLE.—Proprietor, Mr. Will Haggar, jun.—True as Steel was produced here Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Wm. Haggar had an enthusiastic reception for his powerful acting as Tom the Waif; Mr. Geo. Stanley makes a dignified Mr. Welford; Mr. W. Percy as Bill Firelock is impressive; Mr. W. Fyffe as Joe Wilkins keeps the audience in good humour; Mr. Fred Hilland as Phil Randall shows ability; Mr. Arthur Stanley well sustains the part of Harry Rathbene; Mr. Courtney scores a success as Edgar Welford; Mr. Chapman is a capable Tom Sawyer; Mrs. Will Haggar is highly successful in the double parts of Tittums and Ellinor Welford; Miss Emily Silverton is smart as Philip; Miss Lloyd plays Susan Wilkins in good style; Miss Giddings is an original Carry Carraway; and Mrs. Dench as the Hospital Matron is seen to advantage.

VICTORIA.—Proprietor, Mr. John Johnson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred D'Albert.—The military drama What Invasion Means has been presented. The leading part of Jack Lander was cleverly played by Mr. Fred D'Albert; Mr. W. Bennet created fun as Jock McKay; Mr. T. Gough was a favourite as Felix O'Dowd; Mr. John Johnson as David Ap Rees kept the house in roars; Mr. H. Reynolds was an original Joe Willing; Mr. Watson as Bertie Woodfine was well received; Mr. H. McDonald distinguished himself as Capt. Barrington; Mr. J. Desmond as Scarra, a spy, gave a powerful performance; Miss L. Pearce made a graceful Mary Orchardson; Miss T. Bennet well sustained the part of Mrs. Scarra; Miss O. Lyndale cleverly portrayed the character of Clara Miffets; and Miss G. Vane scored as Mrs. Smith.

NELSON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietress, Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft; Business-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Mudd.—The Woman Pays has been presented here by Mr. F. W. Thorne's company. Mr. Phil Harper gives a splendid portrayal of the character of Sid Armstrong; the scheming steward is powerfully played by Mr. Jno. Davidson; whilst Mr. Beresford Innes' delineation of Cyrus Treadgold is dignified and convincing. As his daughter Madge, Miss Maud Russell acts with grace and charm; Miss Kate Blair shows admirable histrionic ability in the difficult rôle of Neil Morland; Miss Avena Walton as Polly Stokes and Mr. F. M. Thorne as Micky Moloney make a very humorous pair. The scenery is very attractive.

NEW BRIGHTON.—WINTER GARDENS.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—The Royal Quintette of dancers are excellent in their various contributions, and the Kymros, Welsh vocalists, are great favourites; Mr. Harry Rogers and company appear in a finely-acted dramatic episode, Told in a Flat; Mr. Edwin Austin brings down the house by his effective playing on various concertinas; Miss Lillie Le Main in living marionettes is a pleasing and clever turn; and Messrs. Earle and Kent evoke laughter. The animated pictures are of the best.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Teale Lingham.—Aladdin is still going merrily, and bids fair to outrival the majority of provincial pantomimes in popularity and longevity. Miss Violet Lloyd returned to the cast on Monday evening, after an absence of several weeks owing to a severe attack of influenza. She received a most gratifying welcome, and was made the recipient of many beautiful bouquests and other floral tributes. Her playing, singing, and dancing is as charming and delightful as before. Miss Fanny Fields, Miss Maud Thorne, Miss Doris Dean, and Miss Florence Hersee still maintain their well-deserved popularity; whilst the mirth-provoking business of Malcolm Scott, Harry Tate, Regan and Ryan, Horace Lane, and Harry Claff is still very exhilarating.

TYNE THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessees, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham; Manager, Mr. Fred C. Satcliffe.—Mr. Brandon Thomas's London company, in the popular farce Charley's Aunt, is the attraction here this week. Mr. Theo McCausland Stewart is impressive as the Colonel; Mr. Roy Byford efficiently represented Stephen Spettigue; Mr. Hastings Lynn is seen to great advantage as Jack Chesney; Mr. Robert Burnett is successful as Charley Wykeham; while Mr. Arthur Chesney as Lord Babberley provokes much amusement with his characteristic impersonation of Charley's aunt, and Mr Sydney Compton does well as Brassel. Miss Vera Gerald assumes the rôle of Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez with entire satisfaction; Miss Sylvia Morris makes a charming Ela Delahay; while the interpretations of Kitty Verdun and Amy Spettigue are ably presented by Miss Estelle Winwood and Miss Ethel Fifield respectively. The farce is preceded each evening by a one-act play, entitled The Colour-Sergeant.

PALACE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. T. W. Rowe.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's company of juvenile artists in The House that Jack Built is doing good business here this week. Miss Evelyn Major as Jill gives a dainty and refined portrayal, her rendering of the various songs allotted to her being very good; Miss F. Taylor makes a pleasing Jack; Miss G. Wyse as Wee M'Gregor rouses the audience to enthusiasm with her clever impersonations of Harry Lauder; Miss Olive Purcell as Fairy Twinkle Star has a capital voice, and she uses it with considerable effect in several smart songs; and Mr. H. Hillerby as the Dame presents a very eccentric appearance and causes much amusement. Other leading comedians who combine successfully in keeping the fun alive are Messrs. Doyle and Gibson, Mr. W. McNorton, Mr. Paddy Sloane, and Mr. Stanley Jefferson.

GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; Manager, Mr. H. G. Elliott.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh and company, in the highly successful drama The Eyes of the World, is paying a welcome visit here this week. The piece is of intense interest, and Miss Van Praagh as Helen De L'Orme gives a study at once convincing and of rare dramatic force, her efforts being admirably seconded by Mr. G. D. Daiper as Hector De L'Orme.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Manager, Mr. W. Parham Wells. —Broad farce is the feature of this week's programme, and Fred Karno's production The Football Match, is nothing if not hilariously funny. Harry Weldon as Stiffy and W. Poluski, jun., fairly bring down the house with their laughable absurdities. A turn of more than usual excellence is that of Livesey and Rosebery, in their successful skit The Would-be Actors' Rehearsal; whilst a most pleasing and entertaining performance is contributed by Nina Wood at the piano, her tuneful and accomplished singing being especially well appreciated. Miss Alexandra Dagmar, the popular comedienne, goes well with some capital songs and patter; and other excellent turns are contributed by Alburtus and Millar, American eccentric and lady cornettist, Mlle. Haydee, Barlee and Smith, musical comedy artists, Percy Hannan, tenor, and Annette Hayward.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—Arthur Roberts and company in the farcical sketch Till Sunday head a splendid bill here this week, while other artists appearing are Lalla Selbini, Arthur Gallimore Trio, Annie Heath, Vasilescu Troupe, Dorothy Gould, Tod Lowen, Charles F. Best, and Anileda and August.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sidney Cooper.—The D'Oyly Carte principal reper-

WHAT EVERY ARTISTE KNOWS!

Hoarseness.
Sore Throat.
Loss of Voice.

That either of these troubles may lead to loss of engagement, and must be avoided at all cost.

Very many members of the Profession have, for years past, used, and been loud in their praise of Owbridge's Lung Tonic.

for the cure of COUGHS and COLDS.

At the first sign of chill or huskiness take a dose of "Owbridge," and you will be surprised and delighted at the result. Actors, Singers, Elocutionists, Preachers, &c., have written us in high terms of our famous remedy. Some time back we received the following:—

"The famous prima donna and operatic soprano, Mme. Ella Russell, told me the other day, in the course of conversation, that she never attempted to travel anywhere without a bottle of OWBRIDGE'S LUNG TONIC. She so firmly believes in it, and has derived such invaluable benefit from its use, that she strongly recommends it to all her friends."

toire company opened a week's engagement here on Monday evening with The Mikado. Mr. H. A. Lytton as Ko-Ko played with a dry satirical humour, and danced and sang well; Mr. Leicester Tanks made an impressive Mikado; Mr. Strafford Moss in the part of Nanki-Poo was certainly consistent and telling; Mr. Fred Billington was exceedingly good as Pooh-Bah, Miss Clara Dow's Yum-Yum was capital; Miss Beatrice Meredith sang nicely and acted well as Pitti-Sing; and Miss Mabel Graham was entirely successful as Peep-Bo, Katisha being finely acted by Miss Ethel Morrison. The Gondoliers, The Pirates of Penzance, Princess Ida, Iolanthe, and Yeomen of the Guard are also billed.

Empire.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. O. Stoll.—Fred Karno's sketch The Bailiff takes first place in the bill here, and for unadulterated fun it would be difficult to beat. Stylo, the hoop juggler, performs some wonderful tricks; Kroney Brothers in a street scena, London's Merry Coalmen, provoke laughter; and Austin Rudd, in humorous songs, keeps the house in roars. Van Allen is a comedian who takes well; Beatrice Bonnie is justly popular as a comedienne; and Fatmah Deard is a charming singer.

NORTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy and Mr. J. E. Cardwell's company is here this week with Little Red Riding Hood, which has had a hearty reception. In the title-rôle little Iris Vivienne acts very prettily; Miss Fannie Adamson makes a capital Boy Blue; Miss May Gibson is thoroughly successful as Miss Muffett; Miss Trixie Wyatt is good as Silvia; and Miss Daisy Clifford does well as Marjorie Daw. As Dame Trot Mr. V. Wakeman makes a great hit; Mr. Billy Melia as Sunny Jim is responsible for some funny business; Messrs. Denby and Dent as Doleful Dan and Whimsical William supply endless merriment; and Mr. J. J. Mannix makes an excellent Baron. Specialities are introduced successfully by Mr. J. J. Mannix, Mesars. Denby and Dent, Mr. Billy Melia, and the Pansy Troupe of dancers.

Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The bill here is headed by Kyoto and Esa, who introduce a marvellous ladder act, for which they are loudly applauded; Messrs. Smith and Johnson, American entertainers, win considerable favour; Comical Walker and his local Acrobatic Nippers create much merriment; Messrs. Mathews and Brown, coloured comedy duo, take well; Messrs. Hillett and Hallett, comedians and dancers, are popular; Globerino introduces a clever speciality act; and the Kiematograph, showing Moonlight on the Bosphorus and other pictures, complete the programme.

NORWICH.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Jack Crichton's excellent company is here in The Cingalee. Mr. Crichton himself is an amusing Chambuddy Ram; Mr. Arthur Cartwright is a capable Harry Vereker, his singing being thoroughly appreciated; Mr. Douglas Munroe is diverting as Boobhamba; Mr. F. W. Ford is humorous as Sir Peter Loftus; Mr. Scott Cullen is successful as Bobby Warren; Miss Alice Nixon makes a pleasing Peggy Sabine; Miss Mollie Wolstenhulme's acting is appreciated as Nanoya; Miss Geraldine Somerset is responsible for a clever dance in the second act; and Miss Pauline Hague secures admiration for her Lady Patricia Vane.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Mr. A. C. Lilley and company in the military episode Drummed Out create much interest. Don and Mabel Keir sing Scotch ballads; H. C. Lovell and company in their comedy Mam'selle Pom Pom create hearty laughter; the Wallys are clever jugglers; and Kitty Wager (comedienne), Fred Poplar (comedian), Horace Jones (character comedian), and the Hippo Bio complete.

Bank Plain Assembly Rooms.—The Franco-British Pictures are well patronised. Prizes are given to their patrons who possess the lucky numbers distributed among the audiences.

Agricultural Hall Assembly Rooms.—The New Era Pictures, with fresh scenes, introduce a singing competition, which adds to the already attractive entertainment.

Agricultural Hall.—The Roller Skating continues very popular.

NOTTINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—The Builder of Bridges is drawing large houses this week, and the company of Mr. George Alexander gave an excellent presentation on Monday. To Mr. Stephen T. Ewart must be accorded all praise for a masterly conception of Edward Thursfield, the right note of earnestness and intensity being struck, while in the third act he emphasised the passion of the scene; Miss Rosalind Ivan treated the difficult rôle of Dorothy with all care and tact, playing with a depth of tenderness that completely won over the audience; Mr. Henry Ludlow interpreted Arnold Faringay with naturalness and discretion; the narrow-minded but effusive Walter Gresham had a capital exponent in Mr. Brisco Owen; Mr. W. R. Staveley was excellent as the bluff but kind-hearted Sir Henry Killick; Mr. Eric Ward proved distinctly good as Peter Holland; Miss Claire Pauncefort made a great deal out of her part as Mrs. Debney, causing frequent laughter; and Miss Jessica Thorne as the typewriter and Miss Angela Moseley as Minnie also helped in the success.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—Mr. Mouillott's company is appearing here in A Message from Mars. Mr. W. Widdicombe enacts the rôle of Horace Parker with a thoroughness and care that draws forth hearty acknowledgments; Mr. W. H. Brougham is sufficiently brusque and sonorous as the Messenger; in depicting the Tramp, Mr. Norman Clark pays necessary attention to the minor details; Mr. Robert Grey gives a fine study of Arthur Dicey; Mr. Guy O'Neil as Dr. Chapman and Mr. Eustace French as Sir E. Vivian are well in the picture; Mr. Arthur Linay is good as Mr. Ferguson; Miss Rose Helene plays with admirable restraint in the trying part of Minnie Templar, and her work is highly meritorious; Miss Winifred Knightly is entirely successful as Miss Parker; a bright Bella is seen in Miss Ethel St. Barbe; and Miss Mary Glanbrane does well as Mrs. Clarence.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—A very pretty Japanese scena, A Vision of Japan, is presented by O Hana San and company; the patriotic spirit of Englishmen is appealed to in Mr. Norman Wrighton's playlet Wake Up, England! in which Mr. H. Scott Russell does some excellent work, supported by Messrs. Norman Wrighton, Richard Norton, and Frank Harding, and Miss Maud Stuart; Fred Earle is amongst the first flight of comic singers, and it goes without saying that all the time he occupies the stage his outrageous fun is greeted with roars of laughter and applause; J. H. Scotland has a powerful bass voice, which he knows how to use to the best advantage; Billy Hobbs is a most successful coon impersonator and dancer; Charles Kitts and Rhoda Windrum are again here in their funny military sketch, The Cuckoo, which proves to be as attractive as ever; Maudie Francis, a pretty little comedienne, and Bert Woodward, a clever cyclist, are acceptable turns; the acrobatic performance of the Achmed Ibrahim Troupe is deserving of all praise; and some excellent films showing Wilbur Wright on his flying machine exhibited through the Bioscope conclude a very good and attractive programme.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. V. Carnell.—A smart little playlet, A Man's a Man for a' That, gives Mr. and Mrs. Bob FitzSimmons opportunity to display their several attainments, and forms a pleasing entertainment; Renroff's Dancing Horse demonstrates again what can be accomplished by patience and perseverance in training; the Forsyths compel uproarious laughter in their sketch, The Tramp in the Nursery; the comic juggling of Mike Gray is another incentive to mirth; Harry Levaine's patter gives delight to his hearers; Hampton and Bauman prove smart impersonators of coon songs and dances; an excellent musical scena by the Bijou Juvenile Troupe provides amusement and pleasure; and the society entertainment of Kendrick and Laura is duly appreciated, as also Juno Salmo and the Barrascope.

NUNEATON.—Prince of Wales's.—Proprietors, Theatre and Entertainments Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. A. F. Cross; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brown.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hinton, Travis Green, and Ruth Zillwood's company is presenting Her Fatal Marriage. Mr Arthur Hinton plays with much determination as Zacc Maletto, alias Captain Vigo, and plans and carries out his villainous schemes with persistent coolness. Mr. Norman Tracey's acting as Wilfred Grey is much approved; Mr. Gerald Bryne gives a cleverly-studied impersonation of the half-witted Paul; Mr. Percy Morton-Wright as Detective Smart is ever alert and resourceful; Miss Ruth Zillwood makes an imposing Myra Maletto, and secures vociferous applause; Miss Lydia Audre as Lily, the White Angel, invests the part with much sympathetic charm. Humorous relief from the exciting incidents of the drama is provided by Mr. Frank Brunell as Peter Simple, and Miss Laura Wright as Dolly Dimple, who manage to keep the house highly amused.

OLDHAM.—Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Mayall.—Mr. Wilfred Cotton's company in the successful musical play Butterflies opened here on Monday evening. Mr. W. Louis Bradfield as Widgery Blake acts the part splendidly, his song "Puck" being much appreciated; Mr. Blake Adams as the irascible Christopher Podmore is clever in his humorous impersonation; and Mr. William Spray is capital in his conception of the part of Yarker, his acting being highly amusing. Miss Georgie Corlass as Rodanthe is charming, her singing being smartly done; Miss Stella St. Audrie as Mrs. Podmore is excellent; and Miss Constance Clive as Elsie is dainty in her acting. Mr. Richard Green sings well as Max Riadore, although suffering from a cold; Miss Alice Sands as Lalage and Miss Elsie Ashton as Myra are capital, as is Miss Cissy Gilbert as Salome. Miss Phyllis Monkman dances with excellent effect in a classical dance entitled "La Naissance de Papillon"; and Messrs. A. Selby and R. Sydney are excellent as Paul and Peter. Recalls were numerous, the dresses pretty, and the chorus is a strong one, ably directed by Mr. Pierre De Reeder.

Colosseum Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Her Luck in London, played by Mary Neil and Geo. Kirk's company, is here on a return visit. The leading rôle of Nelly Harborne is again undertaken by Miss Mary Neil, whose acting earns much applause. Miss Beatrice Hudson as the sister Lillian acts cleverly; Mr. Douglas Tremayne as the Rev. Lionel Strong is a manly clergyman; and Mr. Douglas Cecil as the impetuous Irishman Fitzgerald O'Connor is smart. Mr. William Domoney concocts much villainy as Richard Lenowen, being ably seconded by Miss Amy B. Ellis as Madame Gabrielle; Miss Georgie France is very amusing as Angelina Plantagenet; and Miss Florrie Groves as Maud Gladys and Mr. Henry Hope as Archie are responsible for smart comedy. Mr. T. Lionel Ellis is capital as the sturdy Stephen Harborne; Mr R. Wharton being good as Algie; and the remaining characters are well played.

Empire Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Herman Melot is exceedingly smart in his feats of neat illusions; the Cumberlands give a daring cycling and acrobatic turn; Viviana and Co. appear in The Toy Shop, and they introduce some clever dancing; Carlotta Levey has a hearty welcome, and is very successful; Francis Gerard gives a fine demonstration of weight-lifting; Cyrus Dare is a capital child mimic; the Donatos are clever in their dancing, jumping, and acrobatic act; Prince Schaboo sings well; and the Bioscope concludes.

Palace, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Thorne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. Sharrocks.—Jock Whiteford sings several smart songs, and is well received; Edwin Boyde is well to the fore with his quaint songs and parodies; Rejected Remounts is played by Mr. Fred Ginnett's company, being heartily enjoyed; Lee and Kingston cause hearty laughter with their funny comedy act; Lennie and Hast present a good poetic phantasy, A Sea Nymph, with success; Cara Magda is a dainty lady gymnast; Mabel Mignon is smart in song and dance; Clark and Glenny are amusing in an absurdity; and the Palace Pictures are fully up to date.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—Maud Lordys provides a marvellous troupe of well-trained dogs in a really clever show; Gracie Graham, comedienne, sings some songs very well; Blanche and Diacoff are neat and smart in their cycle act; the Sages are capital in song and dance, with good comedy; the Paolias are very good in a smart athletic turn, being well received; Harry Russell and company, including Miss Verna Reed, have a screaming comedy trifle in Binks' Blunder; the Crown Trio sing very well; Kleof and Ramsey are funny in their comedy musical novelty; Walter Stanley (comedy) and Chas. Cardow (entertainer) are good; and the Dottoscope completes.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—Luigi Salvini appears in his clever musical entertainment, and the pictures exhibited continue to draw crowds.

OXFORD.—New Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr. G. T. Lucas.—For the third time we are having a most delightful return visit of Mr. George Edwardes's admirable in the ever-fascinating play The Merry Widow, which was received with as much enthusiasm as when it first came by a crowded and evidently very well-pleased house on Monday. Mrs. Nora Barry, who now plays Sonia, sings sweetly and acts with a charm that quite brings down the house; Miss Octavia Barry repeats her former successes as Popoff's wife; and Olga, Sylvanie, and Prescovia all have the most charming exponents in the Misses Beryl Vaudrey, Kathleen Courtney, and Pollie Edwards. Mr. Leonard Mackay, a great favourite here, met with a big reception, and played Prince Danila in the natural, easy fashion that is so effective. Mr. Lionel Victor is genuinely funny as Baron Popoff; Mr. Haigh Jackson sings well as De Jolidon; Mr. Tom Redmond is very funny indeed as Nisch; and the other characters are all well played. The chorus is strong and tuneful, and in their handsome dresses will play havoc with susceptible hearts; and the scenery and appointments are all of the best. The dances are exceedingly well done. An excellent week's business is assured for Mr. Edwardes's splendid company.

East Oxford Theatre.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company is here with A Traitor Prince. Mr. Jas. Burt enacts the part of Prince Rao Dalmirez with considerable power, and Mr. Percy Coningsby is robust as the hero, Lieut. Frank Derrick. Mr. Robert Foster sustains Cara very creditably; Mr. Chas. Searle is good in the dual rôle of Richard Vane and Colonel Vane; while Mr. J. B. Stewart gives an effective rendering of Billy Bright. Miss E. Tinniswood makes a sympathetic Lola Vane; Miss Hetty Marriott is bright as Pansy Blossom; and Miss Agnes Williams is dignified and able as Vashti.

PAISLEY.—Paisley Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—The Moody-Manners Opera Company, which is under the managership of Mr. J. St Clair, is giving a selection of operas from their repertory. The week's run opened on Monday with Madama Butterfly. Miss Enriqueta Crichton sustained the title-part with passionate and intensely real art, her vocalisation being delightfully fresh; and Mr. Charles Carter made an ideal B. F. Pinkerton, singing with great sweetness and power. Mr. Marshall Vincent as Sharpless was effective and convincing; and Miss M. Dennis was a decided success as Suzuki. Admirable support was given by Mr. R. Brookes as Goro, Mr. R. Carter as Prince Yamadori, Miss A. Gill as Kate Pinkerton, and other minor rôles were adequately filled. The orchestra, directed by Mr. Cuthbert Hawley, played the melodious music with due effect. Other operas presented during the week include Maritana, Faust, Carmen, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, and The Bohemian Girl.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Stead.—Phil Rees' Stable Lads head the bill here, and do an exceptionally clever turn of singing, playing, and dancing; Starr and Leslie are intensely amusing in a novel and clever specialty act; Palles and Cussick cause laughter in their comedy act, The Funny Side of Life; Ivey Aberdare is exceedingly clever as a dancer and sings well; Walker and May are very diverting with their comedy duets and patter; Dave O'Toole is entertaining with his songs; Irvo Hayman and company are well received in a delightful episode, entitled Christmas Eve; Harry Vardon, ventriloquist, submits a pleasing entertainment; and the Bioscope completes.

PERTH.—The Perth Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—A crowded house on Monday extended a hearty welcome to Hamilton's Excursion Party on their return visit to the "fair city." The pictures are very interesting and instructive, and Mr. Claude Howell makes a capable guide. Melvin and Max give a novel dancing act; Jack Henri, Scottish comedian, keeps the audience in hearty laughter; Miss Maude May Murray executes skilful electrical dances, which were greatly admired; and Mr. J. A. Wilson and his wonderful dog, Towser, fairly take the house by storm. A fine series of animated photos greatly amuse the audience; and the programme concludes with a laughable sketch, The Haunted House.

PETERBOROUGH.—New Hippodrome, Ltd.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—The Three Royal Dreadnoughts, the world's champions in the art of rifle and pistol shooting, are the chief attraction here this week; Olive West is a dainty comedienne and dancer; the Leonards, the versatile couple, have a good reception; the Comedy Girls, Vesta and Minnie Pine, achieve great success in their musical comedy, Maggie's Day Out; and also in the list are The Indian Mutiny, a most realistic picture, and James Stewart, the original tramp at the piano.

PLYMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The Idol of Paris forms a strong attraction here this week. Miss Annie Bell impersonates Flare-Flare, a variety star, around whom the story is woven, and performs her task with credit and ability; Mr. Chas. Stafford as Phillipe D'Esterre, a man about town, has a distasteful rôle, but executes it admirably; Mr. Sydney Arnold as Victor Castelle quickly obtains the popular support, and certainly deserves his commendation; Mr. Gordon Robey as H.R.H. Prince Sergius Moresky has a fine military style and bearing; Mr. C. St. John Medley as Gustave Langlois, a notary, is particularly good; and Miss Frances Bruce's portrayal of Mme. Sancterre, a puritanical philanthropist, is very amusing.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Morris Cronin and troupe, in their wonderful juggling turn, occupy the leading position on the bill, the exhibition being clever and amusing; Ted Cowan's skit on a talkative Jack Tar is the cause of much hearty hilarity; Miss Arabella Allen gives a couple of Dickens's and Hall Caine's principal characters, her efforts being rewarded with much applause; Siveter's Mechanical Giant Head does much credit to its inventor; Bernard and Weston work hard in patter, song, and dance; a very excellent film depicting the Summers v. Britt boxing match is followed with intense excitement; and the Melbournes (comedy duo) and Alf Chester (comedian) complete the programme.

PONTEFRACT.—Alexandra Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Tom Diacoff.—Perhaps the big attraction this week will be found to be the picture of the Burns-Johnson Fight, which on Monday night gave promise of big houses. Walter Ellis and company rollick through an exceptionally witty and ingenious playlet, The Sleepwalker, which is not ill described as laughter-raising; Victor and Lewis are smart comedians; Miss Lola and Comic Jake do a clever triple-bar show, and the lady is by no means purely ornamental; Shenton and Chicks (including two very promising youngsters) put in some lightning-like sand-dancing; and comedy is well represented in Sam Clarke, the Lancashire fool and philosopher, and Harry Morris, comedian. Ray Belle, described as "an illustrated songstress," has a contralto voice of much power.

PORTH.—The Palace.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—The chief position is occupied by Leo Merode in looping the loop on a bicycle, but, owing to circumstances, this turn did not appear. For it was substituted Charles Ulrick, a wonderful jumper. The Sisters Terry, character comediennes, are warmly received; Sira is a marvellous one-legged acrobat; Reg. Bolton is deserving of praise for his original comedy scena The Editor's Imp; George Rae, eccentric dancer, gives a pleasing turn; the Robertys are clever in their balancing act; Blarney and Kennard, patterers, are all that can be desired; and the Instrumentalists who appeared (eight violinists) gave a highly-appreciated turn. The Palascope concludes.

PORTSMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Mr. and Mrs. Weedon Grossmith (Miss May Palfrey) and their highly-efficient company are here with Mrs. Dot. Miss Palfry as the wealthy, fascinating widow achieves a great success; she is ably supported by Mr. Hugh C. Buckler as Gerald Halstane; Mr. F. Kinsey Peile is excellent as James Blenkinsop; Mr. Basil Hallam does good work; and Miss Emily Patterson as Lady Sellenger and Mr. McIntyre Wicksteed as Charles are admirable. The play is well staged. The production of a new one-act piece, The Mystery of Redwood Grange, is described elsewhere.

Prince's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson is here with his own play Who is She? Prince Vladimir is in the capable hands of Mr. Graham Woods; Prince Bora is skilfully interpreted by Mr. Horace Booth; Mr. Alfred Grenville is a bluff, honest Sergt. Metroff; the Chinaman Chang-tee is ably impersonated by Mr. Edward Swinton; the title-rôle is sympathetically supported by Miss Violet Carlyle; Miss Marie Robson makes the adventuress Keta Noveitch interesting; amusing comedy is provided by Miss Alice Barber (Countess Ladori) and Miss Mary Collier (Sarette); and Miss Mabel Ronald pleases as the Little King.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Capt. E. H. Warren Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—Albert Whelan's impersonations win great favour here; the Six Cattaneos provide a smart acrobatic sketch; A. Wyndham and company are seen to advantage in Svengali, the Hypnotist; the Fimans also present a humorous sketch, The Fire Station; a picturesque scena, Primrose Farm, affords scope for Miss Lilian Lea's display of vocal and terpsichorean abilities; and the bill is strengthened by Venie Clements, George Rapley, and Payne's Bio-photoscope.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris; Assistant-Manager, Colonel F. Roberts.—Mr. Harry Fragson is paying us a return visit, his versatility and genius finding appreciation; the Ten Dixie Girls in their scena The Silver Moon, with pretty effects, songs, and dances, are attractive; and other popular turns are done by Ferguson and Mack, De Breans, Barney Armstrong, Jock Campbell, Oliver Conroy, and Bean and Belle.

King's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Claude Marner; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Thos. Barrasford.—Carl Reinsch's Horses and Dogs are well trained; sensational card tricks are performed by Thompson Carruthers; a capital item is Caryl Wilbur's new sketch, Her First; an amusing little act is A Bit of Nonsense, represented by Jules Garrison and Grace Desmond; and Tony Iveson, Brothers Damm, Four Canadians, Hersleb Brothers, and J. C. Scatter, with some good pictures from the Barrascope, make up the programme.

PRESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, the Executors of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company opened on Monday, on a return visit, with The Dairymaids. Lady Brudenell was well enacted by Miss Carrie Lacey; Lieut. Sam Brudenell, as presented by Mr. Nelson Keys, caused much merriment, especially in Scene 2, Act 2, when, in conjunction with Mr. J. Herbert Willis, as Lieut. Frank Meredith, they masquerade as the daughters of Dr. O'Bryne, R.N., another capital character cleverly undertaken by Mr. Percy Marshall, whose rich Irish brogue was distinctly refreshing. Mr. Dan Agar as Joe Mivens, A.B., kept the house in one continuous roar while he was on the stage; Miss Clare Marsden as Peggy was most pleasing, and her songs were much appreciated; Miss Vera Crichton was a vivacious Winifred; Miss Gladys Silvain as Eliza scored a distinct success, her comedy being delightful, as Miss Penelope Pychase; Miss Lucy Edwin gave a clever character study, her make-up being perfect; Miss Hazel Sayne as Helen was capital. In the minor parts of Tim Capers, Lieut. Brereton, and Togers, Messrs. Harry Cottell, J. Duval, and Fred Foster proved capable; while as the Dairymaids, the Misses Cissie Fancourt, Lily Cameron, Flora Haydu, Edna Russell, Kate Bartlett, Kathleen Sayer, and Kathleen Simes add much charm to the play. Mention must be made of "three little strangers," Dora Hodgson, Ethel Clare, and Beatrice Evenden. The excellent chorus and augmented orchestra were under the able direction of Mr. Albert Bartlitt, and contributed in no small measure to the success of the production, which is mounted and dressed in a lavish manner.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—A return visit is being paid by Hardie and Von Leer's No. 1 company, in Two Lancashire Lasses in London. Mr. George Rammell as John Edmunds acts with an earnestness throughout which gains applause; Mr. Chris Mason, in his original part, is as amusing and popular as ever; Mr. J. Edward Fletcher is a typical Rev. Frank Selby; Mr. A. Elwyn is again seen as the unprincipled Jonas Deane, and scores a success; while Mr. Herbert Sidney is equally good as his partner, Edward Langley. Mr. Jack Miller and W. Walmsley as the burglars, Jim Price and Ratty Gabbit, are both most capable exponents of the art; and Mr. Roland Clive is still seen as Jellaby, a police sergeant, a character which suits him well; as does Dr. Gay, in the hands of Mr. Jack Winslow. Miss Alice Defoe and Miss Laura Walker as Nellie and Constance (the two Lancashire lassies) win much applause for their clever portrayal of their respective characters; Miss Stanley Burt is an excellent Bessie Edmunds; and Miss Marrie Corrie is decidedly clever as the child, Lucy. Miss Evelyn Shaw is as big a success as ever as Jane Adelaide Bloomfield. The mounting of the play leaves nothing to be desired.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Houdini, the original handcuff king, tops the bill here this week, and is proving a decided draw. His latest sensation of escaping from an air-tight galvanised iron can filled to the brim with water, is little short of the marvellous, and must be seen to be believed. Miss Kitty Colyer, comedienne and expert dancer, delights the audience with her clever dancing, and wins loud applause; Miss Marie Blythe is a pleasing vocalist with an excellent contralto voice, who is much appreciated; a very clever musical act is given by the Five Musical Tritons, who render a most attractive selection in a very finished manner; the Roxbys (Phil and Kitty) have a unique sketch, entitled In the Old Man's Garden, which is well received; Bradley, the cycling Jew (who claims to be the only trick cyclist working six bikes) presents a clever turn; Mint and Mart have a novel turn, and prove themselves to be experts in manipulating paper and transforming same into elegant lace pattern curtains and antimacassars; Jack Hartley is a capital Yorkshire dialect comedian; and Martin Conway is clever.

Empress Rink.—Proprietors, W. H. Broadhead and Son.—This new craze has certainly "caught on" in Preston, and one wonders where so many people find the time to disport themselves at this most pleasurable resort. Messrs. Broadhead are to be congratulated on the immediate success of their venture.

RADCLIFFE.—Grand Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Santé; Acting-Manager, Mr. James Boothman.—Boswell's Circus Company is a new innovation here, and they are drawing well-filled houses. The show includes the clown pony, Master Know All; Mick, the riding dog; the beautiful performing pony, Robin Hood; two comical clowns; Barney, the unridable donkey; marvellous spring-board leaping over a number of ponies; Crusoe, in his great feet equilibrist act; Jupiter, the pony of knowledge; an amusing and laughable sketch; Fun on the Chairs, by the Brothers Austin; Little Togo, the wonderful little Jap; the comic ponies, Billy and Bobby; Fun in a Circus Riding School; Albert Morrow, the conjurer; and the revolving table, which produced roars of laughter. Everything went with a good swing under the directorship of Mr. James H. Boswell.

RAMSGATE.—Royal Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Lord George Sanger; Lessee, Mr. Ernest Mansell.—Miss Loie Esmond's talented company have been giving admirable performances at this theatre on each evening of the present week. On Monday evening The Sorrows of Satan was staged, the chief parts being filled in fine fashion by Mr. Edward Neville (Prince Lucio), Miss Rosie Neville (Lady Sybil Elton), and Miss L. Esmond (Diana Chesney). On Tuesday the same company put on Nana, the Rage of Paris. Miss Rosie Neville displayed very marked histrionic ability as Nana; and Mr. Douglas Howard appeared to distinct advantage as Phillippe. For Wednesday and Friday evenings The Sorrows of Satan filled the bill, and on Thursday Nana was successfully repeated.

RAWTENSTALL.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; General-Business-Manager, Mr. A. R. Feather.—We have Mr. W. W. Kelly's company this week in The New East Lynne, the opening performance on Monday last having a most cordial reception Miss Marion Lind as Lady Isabel and Mme. Vine gave a most artistic and sympathetic impersonation, and Miss Guinevere Shilton was also most successful as Barbara Hare; whilst Miss Madge Beresford was an excellent Joyce and Afy Hallijohn; Miss Doris Denville showed considerable aptitude in the part of Willie Carlyle, and Cornelia Carlyle is admirably portrayed by Miss Sophy Shenton. Mr. Fred Terriss gives a fine impersonation as Archibald Carlyle, and Mr. Leonard Booker as Francis Levison is everything desirable; and Mr. Richard Nugent as Murty O'Flynn gives an excellent portraiture. The whole of the remaining characters were admirably sustained, and the setting of the play is of the first order.

READING.—Royal County Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Mr. Milton Bode and Mr. Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Benton.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is appearing this week in Idols, adapted from W. J. Locke's novel of the same name. Miss Edyth Goodall gives an emotional and sympathetic rendering of the part of Irene Merriam; Miss Moira Creegan gives a very powerful impersonation of the beautiful, but unscrupulous, Jewess, Minna Hart; Mr. Herbert Ford is a very capable exponent of the part of Hugh Coleman; and Mr. A. B. Imeson acts most satisfactorily as Gerald Merrian. The Trial scene is a special feature of the performance, being represented in a very realistic and effective manner. In addition to the evening performances a special matinée was given on Wednesday, which was well attended.

The Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—The wonderful performance of Cliff Berzac's (late Woodward's) sea lions and seals is a very special attraction this week. Under the direction of Captain Walter Ashcroft, the animals display a high state of training by going through a marvellously clever performance. The other items include a good old Christy Minstrel turn by Reynolds's Minstrels, which includes the well-known favourite, Tom Birchmore; the Three Delaries, who are attired in Mephistopholean costume, go through a clever trapeze performance with limelight effects in their "Demon Grotto"; some clever tumbling is introduced by the Maid and Page Boy in a comedy pot-pourri act by the Four Panamas; Paul Pelham is an acceptable comedian and character vocalist; Nellie Wilson and Minnie Love both sing and dance very effectively; and Dion Wade gains much applause as a comedian and mimic. Some good Bioscope pictures complete the show.

ROCHDALE.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Burton.—Mr. Martin Harvey made his first appearance here for three nights with The Only Way. Mr. Harvey, in his original part of Sydney Carton, fairly held the audience spellbound; Mr. Charles Glenney as the coarse and vindictive Ernest Defarge played his part to perfection; Mr. Percy Foster submitted a characteristic delineation of Mr. Lorry; and Mr. Fred Wright, sen., portrayed with lifelike effect the part of Dr. Manette. An artistic study of Charles Darnaz was presented by Mr. Leonard Craske; Mr. Charles J. Cameron made an ideal President; Mr. Paul Barry portrayed with skill the part of Public Prosecutor; Miss N. De Silva created a most favourable impression as Mimi; and Miss Maud Rivers acted with a natural grace and refinement the part of Lucie Manette.

The Empire.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank

WHAT ARE MILLIONS TO THE MAN WHO IS ILL

Only a bitter mockery. The world is full of delights in which he cannot share. He can buy them but not enjoy them, and is poor despite his millions. This is specially true of the dyspeptic—the man who cannot digest his food. When the stomach ceases to effectually perform its natural work, food ceases to nourish and causes pain, heartburn, wind, acidity, and a host of other troubles which spoil life. Perfect digestion is the foundation of sound health, and that is assured by the use of the world- renowned digestive tonic and stomachic remedy, Mother Seig el's Syrup.

Mrs. S. A. Carter, of Welbeck Street, Castleford, Yorks, writes on April 13th, 1908: "I lost much time and money upon medicines which quite failed to cure me of indigestion before Mother Seigel's Syrup was recommended to me. But soon after I began to take that remedy a new world opened to me. I could again breathe freely, my appetite retu rned, and so did my old strength and energy."

MOTHER SEIGEL'S SYRUP

Mother Seigel's Syrup is now also prepared in Tablet Form as Mother Seigel's Syrup Tablets. Price 2s. 9d.

Hargreaves.—The Aribos submit a sensational series of balancing feats; Sid Cotterell and company in The Substitute evoke roars of laughter; the Musical Palmers contribute an enjoyable and pleasing turn; and other capital turns are presented by Robbie Roy (Scotch comedian), Brothers Ives (vocalists and dancers), Little Dot Moss (toy comedienne), Jules Kiaro (equilibrist act), the Loveiaces (American song illustrators), and the Empire Bioscope pictures.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Jackson Family; Business-Manager, Mr. Jno. Jackson; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Jackson, sen.—Mr. Charles Parker's Æolians in their refined vocal and dancing act are deservedly appreciated; Ed. B. Ford, the Australian Sundowner, was unable, through sickness, to appear, his place being filled by the Clements Trio in a daring and sensational acrobatic act on the swinging trapeze; Charles Harvey and company present a laughable sketch, The Broken Statue; Goggins and Davis are amusing and clever acrobats; and Maud Prenton (comedienne), Netty Janowsky troupe of head and hand balancers, Mdlle. Marjutti (in From Demon to Fairyland), the Sisters Allen (duettists and dancers), and the Hippodrome Pictures complete a most attractive programme.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—After a very long interval the legitimate drama is being staged here this week, Mr. Allan Wilkie and company occupying the boards with the following répertoire: The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, Othello, The Sleigh Bells, David Garrick, Romeo and Juliet, and Richard III. The company is here for the first time, and is receiving record support. Mr. Allan Wilkie as Shylock gives a scholarly rendition of the part; and Mr. Alexander Marsh is seen to advantage as Bassanio. Mr. John Paley scores heavily as Antonio; and Mr. Houston Meharry is deserving of mention as the Duke of Venice. Miss Agnes Gagan in interesting as Nerissa; and Miss Hunter Watts is very effective as Jessica. Miss Haidee Gunn as Portia gives a brilliant portrayal of the part, the Trial scene being rapturously applauded. The other parts are capably handled.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. Edgar Fox; Resident-Manager, Mr. Claude Shayler.—Mr. Chas. Lewis gives an original and highly finished ventriloquial turn; the Three Orros are brilliant acrobats; Messrs. Fremel and Fremel are amusing in their eccentricities; and Mr. Steve Bartle gives an excellent turn on English concertinas. Messrs. Burns and Bentley are clever vaudeville artists; and Messrs. Rell and Butt are most amusing in their act, Fun in a Garden. Messrs. George Marriott and company present a Dickens episode, Oliver Twist. Miss Edith Finlay is clever as Nancy; and Mr. George M. Marriott is seen to advantage as Fagin. Mr. Fred Conway scores as Bill Sikes; and Mr. John A. Stimson is deserving of mention as the Artful Dodger.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES'S.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr Harold Goulden.—The drama, When Other Lips, by T. Arthur Jones, is presented by a good all-round company, under the general-management of the author, who himself very satisfactorily portrays the part of the hero, Ted Daunton; Miss Marie Daventry cleverly acts and is sweetly emotional as Ruth Lingley; Basil Cunningham, the villain, is played with marked effect by Mr. Juan D'Alberti; and Miss Gwen Stewart makes a good impersonation of Octavia. A lot of comedy is provided by Mr. Olly Seymour as Tommy Neccles, Mr. Richard Webb as Dabbie Topwash, Mr. Herbert Benton as Phylocrates, and Miss Lizzie Lennon as Kitty Topwash. Nancy is charmingly portrayed by Miss P. Massey; and a large number of small character parts are well presented by the other members. The scenery is very pretty, and the staging well done.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Rosie Lloyd, comedienne, heads an excellent programme, and is well received; Leo Tell gets a lot of applause and laughter for his funny mimicry; Two's Company, Three's ——? is a sketch smartly played by Ferris and May; Capt. Maximilian Gruber and Miss Adelina have a very pleasing act with elephant, horse, and pony; Percival, a smart pianist and comedian, Williams and Warden, in vaudeville act. Mr. Dooley, Rene, clever girl juggler, Tennyson and Wallis, comedians, George James, comedian, and Nancy Renshaw, negro comedienne and expert bone solist, worthily fill the remainder of the bill.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; General-Manager, Mr. H Winstanley; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo F. Slatter.—Vanando is a very clever ventriloquist in The Park Pest"; The Pawnbroker is a very comical sketch, presented by Joe Peterman's company, including George Ricketts as Ikestein; Clown Barker, assisted by Miss Rozsika, does some very clever business with his dogs, cats, monkeys, &c. The other items include Hector and Dale, acrobatic eccentrics; Frank Boyce, character vocal comedian; Adela Crispin, musical comedy artist; Farrell and Dunn, patterers; Idento Bros., comic jugglers; and Frank E. Solbey, child mimic.

OPERA HOUSE AND ASSEMBLY ROOMS, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; General-Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. Shepherd.—In addition to Mr. Tom Sherlock's illustrated songs, large audiences are drawn by the many animated pictures, including A Mother's Protection, Forget-Me-Not Legend, Tribulation of a Lover, Choosing a Fiancée, King Edward's Visit to Berlin, A Drunkard's Dream, Good Friends, Attack on the Mail, Women Chauffeurs, and United by Misfortune.

SCARBOROUGH.—THE AQUARIUM.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—The Howards head the bill here in a comedy musical act, Military Mad, in which they appear to advantage; the San Remo Girls give an excellent turn: Gravetta and Parr are clever; Baddow, ventriloquist, is highly appreciated; the Bros. Ralston are pleasing duettists; and Hearne and Palmer are smart knockabouts. In the drawing-room act The Girl from the Hat Shop Miss Adey Spencer proves herself a skilled pianist and dancer. Kisbey also appears.

THE NEW HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock.—This week's attraction is provided by Mr. Edwin C. Jazon's pantomime company in Dick Whittington. In the name part Miss Maude Beaumont is successful; the cat is well represented by Mr. Willie Vanda; Mr. William Miller deserves praise as Fitzwarren; and Miss Vera Snowdon is well received as Alice. An excellent comedian is Mr. Fred Ward, who, as Jack, the idle apprentice, scores exceptionally well, being ably assisted by Mr. Harry Albery as the cook. Miss Daisy Dashwood is very good as the Prince, and the same may be said of Miss Olive Audley as the Fairy. The specialities are the Willoughbys, acrobatic eccentrics; Salida and Vone, Creole performers; Pearce and Ward, comedy act; Terry and Snowdon, duettists; and the Vandas.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. C. Harrison; Manager, Mr. Wallace Childs.—Robinson Crusoe is this week being played here by Mr. Chas. Elderton's company. The pantomime is beautifully staged and dressed, and the company unusually large. Miss Rosa Revell appears as Robinson, a rôle she fills with great success; Polly is charmingly presented by Miss Gertie Gavagan; Miss Lena Lewis is a rollicking Captain Kettle; Miss Bartinelli is a successful Dolly Dimple. A pleasing Princess is supplied by Miss Nellie Stuart. Prominent amongst the comedians are Mr. James Grant as Mrs. Crusoe, Mr. Teddy Worth as Billy Crusoe, Mr. Fred Boulton as Will Atkins, and Mr. Carson Hicks as Friday. Pleasing specialities are introduced by the Three Eltons, in a comedy bar act; Rowe and Holden, coloured cake-walkers; Stuart and Worth, comedians; Carson Hicks, coon dancer; the Marblesque Trio, in living pictures; Miss Olive Sara, musician; Miss Bartinelli, contortionist; the Bros. Barron, comedians and dancers; and the Boultons, comedy entertainers.

SHEFFIELD.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. B. B. Beaumont.—The new modern play Grit, in four acts, from the Kingsway Theatre, was acted to a good audience for the first time in Sheffield. The piece has been carefully rehearsed under the direction of Miss Lena Ashwell, and the cast is of all-round excellence. The scenery, dresses, and appointments are in perfect taste, and the reception of the company on Monday augured well for a successful tour.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. J. E. B. Beaumont; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. Henfrey Aldred.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company opened to a large house on Monday in the new domestic drama, A Broken Heart. As John Barnard, Mr. Gerald Kennedy acts with considerable power and emotional ability; Mr. Edward Rawlinson is good in the character part of Gash Gills; Mr. Newton Pearce is a humorous Toney Tibbetts, and the villain, Stephen Railton, is forcibly represented by Mr. George Moreton-Williams; Miss Shiela Walsh wins the warm sympathies of the audience as Mary Barnard, and the well-known favourite Miss Emma Rainbow acts with her usual distinction as Mrs. Barnard; Miss Daisy Rocheford is a pretty and intelligent little Mary and other characters are cleverly played by Miss Mabel Kelland, Mr. Vivan Charles, &c. The mounting is artistic and the play has given general satisfaction to the patrons of the Royal.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Owen Davis's new drama, Her Marriage Vow, is being performed for the first time to local audiences by a strong company, headed by Miss Lillian Herries and Mr. J. Forbes-Knowles, who appear respectively as Kate Walters and Ned Benton; Mr Edward L. Garside's experience and dramatic ability make his task an easy one as Gilbert Carlton. The comic relief is provided by Miss Grace Garside as Alida, an old maid, and Mr. Owen Remonde as Larry; Mr. Vincent Wardle as Dan, Mr. W. Bailey as Eden Chubb, Mr. J. J. Ryder as Bill Walters, Mr. W. Brookes as Jenks, Mr. Chauncey Morris as Jim Burke, Miss Nellie Shirley, Miss Effie Crawford as Maggie Clare, and Miss Nelly Shirley as Hester Norton, a beautiful heiress, all do good work. The railway sensation scene is loudly applauded.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—After a spirited overture by the fine orchestra, the following artists appeared to a packed house on Monday:—The graceful dancer La Pia in "The Spirit of the Ocean," "The Fire Fay," and other exquisite realisations of poetic conceptions, illustrated with exquisite scenery and wonderful electrical effects; the Scala Opera company in a selection from Cavalleria Rusticana; Les Frasettis in a refined and clever musical performance; Miss Edie King, a dashing burlesque actress and agile danseuse; Miss Rhoda Paul, male impersonator; Mr. Arthur Antill, whistler; Mr. Victor Newman, with dramatic imitations of Henry Irving and Wilson Barrett, which were loudly applauded; Mr. Pat Rafferty, Irish comedian, and M. de Gracia and his well-trained elephants. The performance concluded with comic pictures.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr Thos. Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. P. D. Elbourne.—In Mlle. Albani the management has secured this week a star of the first magnitude, and the great singer has naturally drawn crowded and enthusiastic audiences. The company also includes Wright and Lawson in a novel entertainment; Mr. Fullbrook's sketch troupe in a funny topsy-turvy absurdity; Elmo and Rego, comedy acrobats, the charming sisters Marion, Mr. W. T. Ellwanger, Miss Rosie Archur, the Camplins, and the talented Faludy Troupe in an original and picturesque performance. Beautiful pictures by the Barrascope are also included in the generous pragramme.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. A. W. Turpin.—Sheffield's leading picture palace, known to its many patrons as the "Electric Theatre," continues to do good business with well-produced vocal scenas and a constant change of the latest films, under the direction of the well-known Raymond Bio-tableaux Co.

CENTRAL THEATRE.—Lessees, the Jasper Redfern Co., Ltd.—Variety turns and animated photos are sharing the honours nightly.

SURREY PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Frank Howson.—This old-established music-hall, now enlarged and re-decorated and provided with a new proscenium and artistic scenery, is doing well with the following artists:—The Sheppards, vocalists and legmania grotesques; Miss Lottie Cozens, a pleasing singer of tuneful ditties; Miss Nelly Hogan, serio-comic; Mr. Tom Tonks, comedian, and the Surreygraph, with comic and pathetic new picture plays

SMETHWICK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. C. Barnard; Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson.—This week Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is presenting The Prodigal Son. Mr. Hugh Montgomery acts with all the fine sincerity and rugged sympathy necessary in his rôle of the noble-hearted Magnus; Mr. Gordon Mackintosh gains applause as Oscar; Miss Valerie Crespen enacts the patient and gentle Thora with an infinity of charm and pathos, afterwards appearing as the daughter, Elin, with even greater success; Miss Mildred Cottell gives irresistible fascination to the rôle of the temptress Helga. Other parts have excellent exponents, especially Mr. Bellenden Clarke as Stephen, the Governor, Miss Barbara Gott as his wife, Anna, Mr. Philip Renouf as the factor, Miss Marie Harcourt as Margaret, the factor's sister, Mr. E Rivarz as the Sheriff, Mr. Bruce Lindley as Dr. Olsen, Mr. Chas. A. Maynard as Neils Filsen, Mr. George W. Hewetson as the Pastor, and Mr. G. Dickson Kenwin as Director of the Casino.

SOUTHAMPTON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Weston.—The Builder of Bridges is being played by Mr. George Alexander's company with great success. A capital company is headed by Mr. Leonard Pagden, who invests the part of Edward Thursfield with great virility; Miss Dorothy Green is very successful as the changeable heroine, Dorothy Faringay; and Mr. Lewis Fielder does well as Arnold Faringay. Mr. Alfred Harris gives a capital impersonation of Sir Henry Killick; and Mrs. Kemmis creates an agreeable impression as Dorothy's aunt. Other parts are well played by Mr. Percy D. Owen, Mr. A. Vezin, Miss Beatrice Smith, and Miss Ella Collins.

PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Wm. Trussell.—Mr. Leonard Mortimer's sketch Paying the Penalty is the star attraction, and the realistic fire scene wins universal approval. The acting and scenery is also good. Chris Richards is a wonderful dancer and contortionist; Mack Ollive, for whistling scena, assisted by Miss Daisy Baldry, wins loud applause; Harwood's Juveniles submit an attractive scena; and others who entertain are Mulvey and Miriam, comedy entertainers; the Cromwells, in a smart juggling display; Rose and Wold, in a wire act; and Carr and Rose.

HIPPODROME.—Joint-Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Mouillot and W. de Frece; Manager, Mr. H. Yardley.—Alfred Lester, supported by Miss Gwen Howard, simply makes the house rock with laughter with his burleque skit A Restaurant Episode; Harry Russon is another big favourite who scores alike in song and recital; the famous Craggs achieve their usual big success; and Dora Lyric, with her chorus ditties, is as popular as ever. Allan Shaw is the smartest coin manipulator we have ever seen, and his entertainment is highly appreciated; Stirling and Love are successful in a cleverly conceived musical speciality; Hillman and Russell sing delightfully; and Fred Ellis proves a clever comedian.

PHILHARMONIC HALL.—Messrs. A. and H. Andrews are submitting a brilliant and up-to-date programme of animated pictures. Mr. Bert Pemberton is the cicerone, and sings some songs, beautifully illustrated. A full band, under Mr. J. Gabriel, helps the evening to pass pleasantly away.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Auguste Denton.—This popular picture palace still draws crowded houses twice nightly, all the latest films being exhibited, to the accompaniment of high-class vocal and instrumental music. The Sunday concerts are packed each week.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Directors, Messrs. Geo. Conquest and Richard H. Nervey; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—The Way of the World, the attraction here, is presented by Messrs. Herbert Skardon and H. Sherwood Martin and company. Miss Sidney Crowe is a powerful exponent of Lady Adela Hardy; Mr. Victor Gordon capably impersonates Capt. Fred Slade; Mr. Herbert Skardon does well as Cecil Hardy; Mr. Clarence Temple is a good Matthew Malyon; Mr. Pat Quinn is well suited as Sir John Hardy; and Mr. D'Arcy Kelway is mirth-provoking as Joe Sparrow, Mr. Lancelot Usher assisting with good fun as Horatio Bluff.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless; Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The successful grand fancy-dress Skating Carnival which took place on Wednesday evening, under distinguished patronage, was also the occasion of a complimentary benefit to Mr. Stanley E. Angless, whose amiability and courtesy have won him a host of friends. They testified in no unmistakable manner their appreciation of his capable management. Mrs Prevost, accompanied by Alderman Prevost, asked his acceptance of a gold sovereign case, a purse of gold, gold scarf pin, and a signet ring, the gifts of a few personal friends. The recipient made a feeling response amid enthusiastic cheering. An excellent programme consisted of challenge races for gold medal and silver cup, while valuable prizes were offered for other races and best costumes.

SOUTHPORT.—OPERA HOUSE WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, The Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Co., Ltd.; Secretary and General-Manager, Mr. R. Singleton.—Mr. Morton Powell's capable company is this week presenting a capital interpretation of Mr. S. Buchanan Rogerson's sensational play When It Was Dark, which was seen for the first time here on Monday evening, and was accorded a good reception from a large audience. Mr. Wilfred Lyndon submits an earnest and convincing impersonation in the rôle of the Rev. Basil Gortre, which was capitally enacted throughout; the trying part of Gertrude Hunt was brilliantly portrayed by Miss Alice O'Dea, whose acting was much admired; Constantine Schwabe, the millionaire, was admirably delineated by Mr. Cecil Mannering, who presented a striking study; Mr. William Burgess is highly commendable as Sir Robert Llewellyn; Miss Valerie Russell is clever and successful in the character of Helena Byars; Harold Spence, the Mercury correspondent, was exceedingly well played by Mr Alfred Collingham; Ionides had a praiseworthy representative in Mr. Charles Grandley; Mr. William H. Burton did well as the Vicar of Walkden. Other parts were capitally assumed by Mr. Francis Cavins, Mr. F. Venn, Mr. J. Armitage, and Miss Florrie Lyndon.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. John and Fred Coulson.—Large audiences are appreciating Mr. Fred C. Somerfield's company in Geoffrey Langdon's Wife. Mr. Paul Beckett furnishes a vigorous portrayal of Felix Beverley; Miss Mary Lovett is seen to advantage as Mary; Mr. Edward E. Ashby is a manly Jack Stirling; Mr. Cyril Grier brings ripe experience to bear upon his exposition of Colonel Mills; Mr. Edwin Jenner is good as Geoffrey Langdon; Mr. Percy Brown and Mr. Victor T. Raymond are deserving of mention as Thomas and Charles; Miss Hetty Senior is a bright Nancy; and a sound and clever delineation of the Hon. Mrs. Sands is presented by Miss Kathleen Magee.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietors, South Shields Empire Palace, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F Thompson.—The principal turn this week is furnished by Mdlle. Clasen's Living Art Bronzes, a performance artistic to a degree; J. H. Milburn is an old favourite; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Meymott in a smart duologue entitled Semi-Detached are well received; Fred Keeton, a funny comedian, causes laughter; a clever gymnastic comedy creation is contributed by Wilbert and Lealand; and other interesting items include Takio (Japanese mimic of sounds), Lily Esplin (character comedienne), George Young (blind musician), assisted by Mdlle. Louise, and the ever-popular Bioscope.

SPENNYMOOR.—CAMBRIDGE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Hugh Robertson; General-Manager, Mr. Lloyd Clarance; Resident-Manager, Mr. David Collins.—Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company, in a Soldier's Honour, is here. The company includes Mr. T. Arthur Ellis as Captain Deane, Mr. William Vane as Captain Temple, and Mr. Andrew Money as Henry Thornton. Much amusement is caused by Mr. Harry Lyndon and Miss Edie Macklin as Percy Brattle and Jemima respectively. Miss Lilla Wilde gives a strong performance as Cora Lee. The rest of the company are good.

HIPPODROME AND PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. Algie.—Mr. Fred Granville's pantomime Beauty and the Beast, under the management of Mr. Leslie Austin, occupies the boards.

STAFFORD.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—Send Him Victorious is being presented here. Mr Frank Holyoake gives a fine impersonation of the King of Baronia; Mr. G. M. Montaneni presents a powerful study of Col. Kaufmann; Mr. Oliver Birrell is a manly Captain Allison; Mr. Bert Woodlin as Geordie Walker and Miss Madge Palmer as Gretchen keep the house in good humour; and Miss Katharine Herbert gives a brilliant portrayal of Countess Kara.

STALYBRIDGE.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Fioni; Resident-Manager, Mr. W A. Jackson.—May Henderson, the dusky comedy queen, is at the head of the bill, and succeeds in keeping the audiences in a state of uproarious hilarity during the time she is on the stage; Donald McDougal, the lively Scot, is with us again and is as lively and quaint as ever; the Four Burnells appear in a musical comedy scene, which meets with approval; Nellie Nora proves herself to be a very clever instrumentalist; and other turns are given by J. H. Ellis, comedian; Hardie Palm, comedian, Dorien and Doritz, &c.

ST. HELENS.—THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, St. Helens Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. A. McLeod Loader; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harry E. Johnson.—The appearance of Mr. Harrison Brockbank, who is a townsman, gives an additional interest to the delightful musical play Butterflies. Mr. Brockbank as Puck has a great reception; the character is evidently an agreeable one to him, and he enters merrily into the spirit of the part. Miss Annie Heenan plays Rhodanthe with charm and abandon; as Christopher Podmore Mr. Edwin H. Wynne is exceedingly amusing; Miss Ada Davidson makes a graceful and natural Mrs. Podmore; Miss Lilian H. Wesson is a winsome Elsie; as the unconsciously-humorous Yarker Mr. Johnnie Wilkinson is delightfully funny; Mr. Cyril Biddulph sings with feeling as Max; Mr. Arthur Edwards is a capital Paul; Mr. Francis Rayne as Gilbert makes the most of his opportunity; Mr. Allan Mudie is lively and animated as Peter; and a classic dance, full of poetic beauty, is performed by Miss Minnie Gordon.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Leo. Weisker.—A programme of variety is presented this week, headed by Kartelli, who performs cleverly on the slack wire; Hyde and Cody Trio receive much applause for their eccentric tricks; Witty Wattie Walton, an old favourite, is most amusing; Minnie D'Aubyn contributes two songs very pleasingly; the Four Sisters Gilbey perform well on various musical instruments; and Milner and Story (comedy duo) and Montague Biggs give good turns.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Thoroughly entertaining have been the representations of The Dairymaids given here for the first time by Mr. Robert Macdonald's company. Mr. Richard Telford as Lieutenant Sam Brudenell and Mr. J. Scott Melville as Lieutenant Frank Meredith provide an abundance of fun; Dr. O. Bryne, R.N., is capably portrayed by Mr. Bernard Vaughan; Miss Empsie Brown is a delightful Peggy, and Miss Kitty Kirwin impersonates the schoolmistress, Miss Penelope Pyechase, with marked ability; Miss Edie Morton is a talented and clever comedienne, and as Eliza makes a distinct success, particularly so in the duet with Joe Mivens, a part which was amusingly played by Mr. Johnny Osborne.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, the Stockport Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—The Four Holloways in their marvellously clever feats on the tight wire have provided the chief attraction here this week. Other entertaining items are Rennie Glendower and company in a laughable sketch, A Bit Too Clever; Frances Hanlon, a dainty coon vocalist and dancer; Ruby and Laws in a pleasing vocal and comedy scena; Brothers Lydamore, amusing patterers and capable dancers; Angeline and Page, smart jugglers; Nellie Walton, the singing mill girl, who is a popular favourite; Irene and Merton, entertaining vocalists and dancers, and Decima Brooke, a much-appreciated comedienne and dancer.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—CASTLE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson; Acting-Manager, Mr Cecil Imeson.—Mr. William Maclaren's company with Claudian is here this week. Mr. William Maclaren appears in the title-rôle; his acting is very impressive and full of pathos. Miss Lily C. Bandmann is very effective as Almida; Mr. Bernard Elliott ably represents Thariogalus Tetrach; Mr. Chal. T. Chaloner is very humorous as Belos; Mr. Douglas Earle powerfully portrays Agazil; Miss Ruth Trafford does well as Edessa; Mlle. Stella Dorin performs a skilful cymbal dance. The scenery and effects are good.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Stainton—Sam Lowenwirth and Charles Cohan, Hebrew comedians, pay a return visit, and are as popular as ever; Clarice Sefton, comedienne, is responsible for some clever speciality dancing; Maxwell and Frances, in a comedy scene, take well; Denaro Bros. are clever juvenile acrobats; Lyons and Cullum are very entertaining in a novelty act; Edie Anderson is a pleasing comedienne; the Marvellous Jees are very daring in a tight wire act, and are loudly applauded; the Bioscope concludes with Back from the Grave and The Gendarme's Horses.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—Mr. M. Montgomery's company is presenting Leah; or, The Jewish Maiden's Wrong. Mr. Ernest Wingfield furnishes a fine portrayal of the character of Rudolph; and Mr. H. Hesslegrave is excellent as Lorenz; whilst Mr. F. S. Strickland submits a capital delineation of the Schoolmaster. In the title-rôle, Miss Lilian Beaumont proves most charming; and Annette is admirably represented by Miss Lina Nazeby. Payne's Bio-photoscope concludes.

STOKE-ON-TRENT.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; General-Manager, Mr. H. F. Miller; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. Moroney.—Tarro Myaki, the Japanese exponent of ju-jitsu, this week gives an exhibition of his prowess, and during his stay he will meet various "local" wrestlers. An interesting football match on bicycles is played by Hinton and Wootton, whose efforts are much appreciated; Ellis and Ellis are most pleasing International singers and dancers. The male partner is a most finished and accomplished dancer, whom it is a treat to watch. Fred Dunstone's parodies are good and well rendered; also numbered are the Seymons, Ena Corelli, Master May, and Ward and Davis. The Bioscope depicts scenes of Zulus on the War-path. On Thursday evening Mr. Miller, the genial manager, is to be accorded a complimentary benefit, at which a host of local artists and friends will help, as well as the above company.

SUNDERLAND.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. S. F. Davidson; General-Manager, Mr. Alexander Telford.—To lovers of Shakespeare especially Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton's visit here this week is of considerable interest, and the house on Monday was crowded to the doors with an audience which showed keen appreciation of the play The Taming of the Shrew. Mr. Asche has a fine presence, and literally carries all before him as Petruchio. Miss Brayton makes a strikingly beautiful and spirited Kate; Mr. Athol Forde as Grumio and Mr. R. F. Anson as Biondello both filled their parts capitally; Mr. Herbert Grimwood, a sound actor, gave an artistic impersonation of Baptista; Mr. Caleb Porter did his utmost with Gremio; Mr. R. Jan Penny was a praiseworthy Hortensio; Mr. Tripp Edgar showed ability as Tranio; and Mr. J. Fritz Russell as Vincentio and Mr. G. K. Souper as Lucentio were both meritorious. Miss Elerida Clement merits the highest eulogy for her portrayal of Bianca.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Hy. Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr George Dunn.—Mr. Augustine Knight's company is paying a return visit in The Assassin. Miss Ella Vane did well as the Countess Wanda; of Nita a sympathetic rendering was given by Miss Maud Steeple; Prince Demetri was capitally played by Mr. Augustine Knight; Ivan Ipanoff was faithfully portrayed by Mr. John Worth; Messrs. Hy. C. Ward and Edwin Jenner were equally clever as Duke Carl and Captain O'Neill; and amusement was caused by Miss Rosa Webster (Connie Jonathan) and Messrs. Murray Hawthorne (Baron Alphonse), T. J. Dillsen (Peter), and W. R. Christmas (Evangie).

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden.—Oswald Williams, the famous illusionist, supported by Winifred La Barte and company, are starring here this week. Important among the producers of high-class music were the Musical Courtiers, four pianists, playing on four splendid instruments, and five talented singers, who submitted airs from The Bohemian Girl. Les Voces, whose beautiful singing is always appreciated; the Selbinis, in their clever pot-pourri cycling act; Harry Herbert, a droll and entertaining comedian; Howell and Scott, humorous Hebrews; Minnie Mace; and Lily Palmer are other attractions.

AVENUE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Esden; Acting-Manager, Mr. R. Foulkes Edwards.—The picture entertainment at this house attracts crowded audiences, and Mr. Wm. Ross, tenor, sings an illustrated song, entitled "The Toilers."

PALACE THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Henry N. Phillips; Resident-Manager, Mr. Francis MacDermott.—A capital selection of pictures is on view at this hall this week, chief among which is the Bostock Jungle, which had a good reception.

SWANSEA.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Oswald Brooks; Acting-Manager and Treasurer, Mr. Walter Page.—Excellently acted well staged, and beautifully dressed, The Sins of Society, played by Mr. F. W. Bolam's company, is creating quite a furore here this week. Mr. E. Vassall Vaughan is an effective Sir Dorian March; Noel Ferrers is ably portrayed by Mr. C. F. Collings; Mr. Edward Lewis as James Hogg does much towards the success of the play; and Mr. Morris has a really good delineator in Mr. Frederick Annerley. Miss Grace E. Leslie is responsible for finished acting as Lady Marion Beaumont; Lady Goldbury had a winsome impersonator in Miss Vita Spencer; Miss Beatrice Hodson charms all as Lady Gwendolen Ashley; and Mr. Edwin Palmer is adequate as Parker.

THE STAR.—Manager, Mr. William Coutts; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. J. Powell.—Mr. G. Watson Mills' company is presenting A Warning to Women here. As Maria Kennion Miss Blanche proves herself a thorough artist; Mr. Edward Warden's Shaun is effective; Dr. Marcus Dread is forcibly played by Mr. Harry Robinson; and Miss Winifred Rutland makes a charming Sheila Kennion.

THE EMPIRE.—Manager, Mr. P. C. Rowe; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. H. Lennon.—Auguste Van Biene again charms local audiences with his playing in The Master Musician, Miss Mary Mannering giving him able support; a delightful musical interlude is provided by the Charles Fisher Pocket Opera Company with a pot-pourri from Il Trovatore, in which Mdlle. Lusano, Mr. Alec Johnson, and Mr. Charles Fisher appear; possessing refined style and an excellent voice, Miss Gertie Gitana proves a thorough success; the Three Dixons, banjoists and baton swingers, contribute a pleasing turn; Guyer and Valli wind up a smart sketch with some sensational dancing; the Jackley Trio, as usual, do well here; Frank Lynne scores a decided hit; Watson's Fox Terriers provide a unique turn; Allan Hanbury does well in song and story; and the Bioscope pictures are again excellent.

SWINDON.—EMPIRE THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wiltshire Entertainments Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Manners.—The attraction here this week is Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company, in Henry Seton Merriman's With Edged Tools. Mr. J. A. Rosier impressively impersonates Sir John Meredith; and Jack Meredith is splendidly handled by Mr. William F. Grant. Mr. Chas. Hartopp does capitally as Guy Oscard; and a fine piece of acting is displayed by Mr Campbell Goldsmid in the part of Victor Durnovo. Mr. J. Graham Pockett is well placed as Maurice Gordon; Miss Marie Leonhard gains the admiration of all by her charming representation of Jocelyn Gordon; and Miss Alice Belmore fills the rôle of Millicent Chyne with distinct credit. Miss Marion Fawcett acts with skill as Lady Cantourne; and Miss Florence Dulhunty as Lady Herries and Miss Violet Thorold as Marie also do well in their respective parts.

TON-Y-PANDY.—ROYAL.—General-Manager, Mr Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ridgewood Barrie.—Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow's company is here in Under Two Flags. Mr. Austen Milroy is admirably placed as Louis Victor, and as Colonel Chanteroy, the Black Hawk, Mr. Roy Jackson is forcible; Mr. Will Hook undertakes the part of Rake in a creditable manner; the Princess Corona of Miss Dorothy Lart is highly sympathetic; and Miss Agnes Verity is delightful as Cigarette.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and General-Manager, Mr. W. Stone.—An excellent programme is topped by Mlle Martha, a daringly clever gymnast on the flying trapeze; Barney Stuart is a great impersonator; Vendome and Chase score heavily in their dancing act; Burt Welch, ventriloquist; and Vena Velma, comedienne, also do well. The leading picture is Rifle Bill Caught in a Trap.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—Mr. George A. De Gray and company are occupying the boards this week in the powerful drama, The Power of the Cross. Miss Annie Hylton makes a touching and pathetic character as Margaret Seaton, whilst Miss Phyllis Vaughan is equally well placed as the charming Blanche Kingsley; Miss Stella Carmichael is a flippant and hard-hearted adventuress as Rita Lascelles; whilst the rôle of Gerald Fairfax is excellently taken by Mr. Robert Hall. As his brother, Leslie, Mr. Alexander J. Haviland does well, and Mr. T. Bowron gives a powerful interpretation of Benjamin Hawke. The part of Baron Curzola is portrayed by Mr. George A. De Gray in a forceful and vigorous manner, calling forth frequent applause.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.—OPERA HOUSE.—Mouillot and De Frece Hippodrome season.—Manager, Mr. C. V. Hoskins.—The Courtiers appear in vaudeville, and a dramatic episode, entitled An Extra Turn, is presented by Paul Mill, and well received; Lozelle performs some clever gymnastic feats; the Voldane Bros., in Dutch costume, are amusing acrobats; Harold Heath is an excellent coon delineator; and Hal Berte justifies his title of the elastic comedian. The Salisbury Plain Manœuvres are shown on the Bioscope.

TYLDESLEY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. W. Brierley.—Miss Marie Dagmar and company, in that striking drama The Tyrant, are proving a strong attraction. Miss Marie Dagmar plays the trying part of Tisbe in finished style; Mr. Roy Fortescue submits a fine performance of the title-rôle; Homodei is effectively impersonated by Mr. Norman Overton; Mr. Ed. E. Lewis makes an earnest and manly Rudolph; Miss Margaret Frame is songstress; Lydia Neilson has a rare combination of boys and girls who sing well in their sketch, An Impromptu Rehearsal; T. C. Jaques is a thoroughly versatile comedian; and Winifred Ward, the immaculate boy, again proved herself a big favourite; the Arutes are capital coloured vocalists and dancers; whilst the pictures are much enjoyed.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, the Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Jack Waters.—Hanlon and Le Fre head the bill here this week, and their sketch, The Escaped Indians, is much enjoyed; Joey Stirling is a capital comedian, and Laurie Leyton a clever boy ventriloquist, and the Sisters Brereton are dashing comediennes and dancers.

WATFORD.—Palace Theatre.—Sole Responsible Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Mason; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Wright.—A variety programme even beyond the standard hitherto maintained has been enjoyed this week. The overture by Mr. G. Whittington's admirable orchestra is succeeded by Professor Maurin's waterfall spectacle, Marie Santoi's A Night in Japan sketch, and the Selbos, Little Zola, the Sisters Brand, and the Brothers Brooks are other turns. The success of the week has undoubtdly been Mr. F. V. St. Clair, whose topical songs have produced innumerable recalls. Last (Friday) evening was set apart as a "grand fashionable night."

WEST BROMWICH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. R. Nightingale.—A new romantic play entitled Love the Conqueror is being produced here by Mr. Frank Lindo and company. Miss Marion Wakeford as Mistress Beatrice Mortimer scores a great success; Mr. Lindo, the author, appears with much distinction as Brian Norval, an outlaw and highwayman; Mr. Norton Shields is a clever Sir John Mortimer; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle has a part well suited to him as Count Leon Lascelles; Mr. Tom E. Lewis is good as Capt. Rupert Armadale; Mr. Harry Belford as the landlord of the Blue Posts Inn, and Mr. W. Gregory as Sir John's servant do much to add to the attractiveness of the piece; Miss Nellie De Benson is charming as Dame Norval, and Miss Helene Thompson is an attractive Susan.

New Hippodrome.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—There is another strong variety programme at this popular house, the bill being headed by Lockhart's famous elephants, which give a wonderfully clever performance, as also do Capt. Frank Taylor's marvellous baboons, in both instances the work of the animals reflecting the highest credit on their trainers; Ernest Montefiore and company appear in a clever sketch, The Little Colonel; the Peps are remarkably smart gymnasts; Dorothy and Joe give an attractive comedy turn, while H. E Smarte proves his skill as a whistler; Ivy Rochefort is a clever comedienne, and Vincent is an acrobatic table expert of high order. The Hippodrome pictures conclude an attractive programme.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—Grand.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Manager, Mr. H. E. Feather.—Messrs. Lyn Harding and Sidney Cooper's company is presenting The Flag Lieutenant. This is the first time local people have had an opportunity of seeing the play, and it is, therefore, proving a great attraction. The scenic effects are at once beautiful, elaborate, and realistic, and call forth expressions of keen admiration. No fault whatever can be found with the cast, which is strong all round, and the work is seen to the best advantage. It would be impossible to speak too highly of the artistic manner in which Mr. Lionel Atwill interprets the rôle of Dicky Lascelles; Mr. Montague Love also scores very greatly as Major Thesiger; Mr. Geo. Mallet is very breezy as the Admiral; whilst as Mrs. Cameron Miss Florence Jackson is a distinct success, playing her part charmingly. Miss Vina Birkett, Miss Marjory Dore, Miss Stella Leigh, and Miss Evelyn Robson all take their parts exceedingly well, making the most of them.

Palace Theatre.—Shadowgraphy is a great feature of the entertainment here this week, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilde are deservedly great favourites. Their performance is clever and novel. Lloyd's glee singers render some very fine glees in capital style, and are heartily encored; the Glanvilles are exceedingly good, both in their singing and dancing; Miss Norah Desmond introduces some beautiful pictures, with which she illustrates her songs, which are tastefully sung; the Wedburns are old favourites, and are going strong in their songs and comedy business. Another comedy couple, the Sisters Hampel, take very well; Frank Vallance, a smart magician, Maudie Forde, comedienne, and Raymond's fine Bio-Tableaux complete a good bill.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Mr. Evelyn A'Dell's company is here this week in His Sister's Honour and The Romany's Revenge. The former was presented on Monday to a large and enthusiastic audience. Mr. Evelyn A'Dell showed histrionic ability in his interpretation of Frank Stanley; Mr. Walter Wilson was thoroughly artistic as the villain, Sir Richard Redvers; Mr. Willie Barratt convulsed the house with laughter by his humorous impersonation of Timothy Timid; Mr. P. O'Brien was a praiseworthy Dr. Godfrey; and Mr. S. Verner's P.-C. Worthie is entitled to high encomiums; Dora Stanley was charmingly portrayed by Miss Flora Leslie; Miss Ethel Ashleigh showed exceptional talent as Ivy Merton; and Miss Molly Aitkins was decidedly comical as Dora's maid.

WEYMOUTH. — Pavilion Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Miss Florence Glossop-Harris's Shakespearean company is producing a selection of Shakespeare's plays, and on Tuesday a large and appreciative audience witnessed Romeo and Juliet, Mr. Frank Cellier and Miss F. G. Harris appearing to great advantage in the principal parts; Mr. Eugene Wellesley played Mercutio with good effect, and Mr. Murray Kinnell was very good as Paris; Friar Lawrence was capitally played by Mr. Francis Roberts; Tybalt was capably represented by Mr. Arthur Seaton; Capulet and Lady Capulet were effectively interpreted by Mr. A. D. Layland and Miss Gertrude Tate; and Juliet's Nurse was beautifully played by Miss Gertrude Gilbert. The other characters in the play were artistically represented.

WIDNES.—Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. Tom Swinton.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is here this week with The Village Blacksmith, a vigorous drama which makes a strong appeal to Lancashire taste. Mr. Livesey draws a fine portrait of John Strong; Mr. Albert Sinclair is an admirable Captain Leo, and his wrestling scene with Strong is naturally and cleverly performed; Mr. Edwin Maydew is well suited to the part of Lucas Marler; Mr. Thomas E. Marshall as Jeremiah Parkins is responsible for good comedy work, and Miss Florence Dooley as Sal Parkins lends valuable assistance; the Billy Twigg of Mr. Fred Haming is one of the successes of the evening; Miss Edith Giddens is a good Martha Mopps; Miss Cassie le Grande as Ruth Parkin handles a difficult part cleverly; Miss Maggie Edwards is a winning Kate Strong, and Miss Kathleen Saunders is charmingly natural as Harry Strong.

WIGAN.—Royal Court Theatre.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Company.—A welcome return visit is being paid here by Mr. J. Gar Kiddie's talented company in Babes in the Wood. Miss Marion Scott is a spirited and charming Robin Hood, and receives every support from Miss Margaret Cathcart, the vivacious Marion; a hearty reception is given to the Sisters Mawdsley, who interpret the part of the Babes to perfection; Mr. Dawson Dewick is remarkably funny as Soft Sammy; while Mr. Mark Stuart deserves special praise as Araminta; Sir Brokah de Pawn finds an able exponent in Mr. T. D. Tandy; and the Messrs. Conan and Doyle never fail in their untiring efforts to amuse as the Robbers.

The Hippodrome.—Proprietors, the Wigan Entertainments Co.—Tom and Marie Motramo top the bill here in a musical comedy sketch, Do You Reverse? which creates roars of laughter from start to finish; the Daunton Shaw troupe give an exceptionally smart cycling performance, their efforts being highly applauded; Hayes and Meritt display much ability as bouncing trampolinists; Cliff Ryland's stories provoke much merriment; and Dancit and Ernest Clifford dance themselves into favour; Alpho is a ventriloquist of much merit; and the sketch given by Pete and Minnie Lee is also very amusing; the Les Bornes are truly acrobatic wonders; while Jack Truman and Marie Liston cause quite an ovation with their songs.

The Empire.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Co.; Manager, Mr. H. C. Woon.—Some interesting films are to be seen at this popular place of amusement. The chief spools are The Road to Ruin and Richard II.; others none the less instructive are The Dog and Pipe, The Great Bear Hunt, A Soldier's Heroism, Coney Island by Day and Night &c. The usual diverting turn is supplied by D. W. Watson, who proves himself to be a clever cornet and post-horn artist.

WOLVERHAMPTON. — Theatre Royal. — Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Gerald Spencer.—Mr. E. Hill-Mitchelson's company is here this week in the romantic play The King and the Unknown Woman. Mr. James Stillwell presents a forceful picture as the hero, Prince Loris, and his rival Prince Menski proves a formidable opponent in the hands of Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan, who is ably assisted by Miss Muriel Inglis as Countess Melveitch; Mr. W. R. Winning is a good General Platz; and Mr. Cyril Harrison gives an easy and natural performance of Captain Gara; Miss F. Conyers Radcliffe makes an excellent impression as the heroine Zora; Miss Norma Dumayne is an interesting Else; and Mr. William E. Passmore as Corporal Stack and Miss Cissie Podmore as Schnapps provide plenty of fun. The play is well staged, the uniforms being particularly handsome.

Empire Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frank Weston.—Foremost in the bill this week is Mr. Arthur Lennard. He shines most prominently in "One of the brave old guard," which fairly captivates the house. Another favourite is Harriett Vernon, who presents new songs with all her old charm; Harry Friskey introduces several novel items in his juggling entertainment; Burley and Green are smart acrobatic eccentrics; and Leslie Race, vocal comedian, the Sisters Ford, duettists and dancers, and Will English, in coon songs are also in the bill.

WORKINGTON. — Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—A good set of pictures this week include Mr. Jaunty's Reception Day and Evil Spirit of the Boarding School. Variety is ably represented by A. G. Spry with song, dance, and stories; Mr. Ted E. Lucknow is a musical turn; and Renson and Waite are a pair of keen Yorkshire humorists, well worth watching.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr McKenzie Morgan.—The pictures are charming. Mr. Hefron, a good old comic, is very well received; Miss Edna West is a charming vocalist; and the two Morellis, with their hand and foot bells strike original notes and secure rounds of applause.

WORTHING.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—On the first three evenings Dickie Clare's company presented Lucky Liza. Mr. Dickie Clare, in the triple parts of Silas Slim, the Judge, and the French waiter, put in excellent work; Miss Vesta Brownie, in the title-rôle, was successful; Mr. T. W. Benson was an effective Peter Pettitoe; Mr. Martin Alwyne as Paul Pettitoe deserved special commendation; the Misses Louie Astor, Lily Bell, and Edna Evelyn gave great satisfaction; and Miss Evelyn Wood well portrayed the part of Sadie Potts. On Thursday Charles Constant's company appeared in Blue Beard.

WREXHAM.—Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Jno. J. Scott. This week the Carr Loates company, in a series of "tabloid dramas," has attracted good houses, the artists being Carr Loates, Cissy Milford, W. H. Irving, Cissy Carter, Daisy Jago, W. Melvyn, J. O. Knight, and Fred Overton. The company is an excellent one all round, and the performances have proved highly successful.

YORK.—Royal.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Mr. George Alexander's company is here in The Thief. As Marise Chelford Miss May Congdon is seen to the greatest possible advantage, and her reception has been most cordial; Mr. Grendon Bently imparts rare skill into his impersonation of Richard Chelford, a part affording him ample opportunity; Mr. Alfred Lugg does admirably as Harry Leyton, playing a difficult rôle with much skill; as Isabel Leyton Miss Mary Dibley gives a delightful performance, and Mr. Gerald Ames is seen to advantage as Raymond Leyton, an exacting part which gives evidence of careful study.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brooke.—There is a strong company here, headed by Mr. Bert Wickham, whose feats of strength have astonished crowded houses. Relwyskow, light-weight champion wrestler, has also proved a distinct attraction, and has secured applause; Ruby Norton, who is a pleasant singer of taking songs, has been well received, as has also Miss Julia Reeve, a dainty comedienne with a racy, taking style; the performance of the American Pattersons is both clever and wonderful; Corcoran Brothers are adept manipulators of various wind instruments; the Ormesby Quartette sing in first-rate style; Bert and Dora indulge in some amusing patter, which is well received, and Stratton Mills and company in an absurdity entitled Ananias II., contribute in a large degree to the evening's enjoyment.

The sixtieth annual report of the Prudential Assurance Company, Limited, for the year 1908, shows that decided progress has been made by this popular company. The number of policies issued during the year in the Ordinary branch was 80,379, assuring the sum of £7,614,898, and producing a new annual premium income of £440,376. The premiums received for the same period were £4,616,337, being an increase of £135,960 over the previous year. The number of deaths was 8,389, and 15,322 endowment assurances matured, the claims of the year amounting to £2,812,962. The number of policies in force at the end of the year was 866,797. The premiums in the Industrial branch were £6,925,755, being an increase of £264,124. The claims of the year amounted to £2,670,345, including £72,696, the proportion of bonus paid since the date of the last annual meeting. The number of claims and surrenders, including 4,355 endowment assurances matured, was 310,722. The total number of policies in force at the end of the year was 17,963,127, and their average exceeded 11¼ years. The assets of the company, in both branches, as shown in the balance-sheet, are £71,958,859, being an increase of £3,952,575 over those of 1907. The directors announce an increase in the Industrial branch bonus, in which all policies of over five years' duration which become claims either by death or maturity of endowment from March 5, 1909, to March 3, 1910, both dates inclusive, will participate.

The "flying" company of Dolly Reforming Herself, under the direction of Messrs. Jerrard Grant Allen and Geoffroy Besant, gave a matinée and an evening performance last Saturday at the Ipswich Lyceum, and in spite of the wintry weather two appreciative houses assembled. At the end of Act III. no less than eight curtains were demanded.

Pedro Valasquez ..... Mr. Frank Wheatley
Joe Crossley ..... Mr. Arthur Saunders
Jim Burgess ..... Mr. Alfred Gordon-Dobb
George Washington ..... Mr. Alfred Lafolle
Sheriff Wilson ..... Mr. Martin J. Moar
Richard Kent ..... Mr. Lewis Clarke
Esme Deering ..... Miss Hilda May
Mrs. Timothy Seymour .... Miss Louie Walton
Leonora Seymour ..... Miss Blanche Leroy

The above play is a happy combination of drama, comedy, and variety, and is, moreover, crowded with incidents of an exciting character which occur in a remote quarter of North-West America. The first act opens outside the Lone Star Hotel, where Pedro Valasquez and his accomplice, Joe Crossley, are negotiating with Kent, the speculator, for the sale of their land. This land, however, is not legally theirs to sell, as it really belongs to a certain Charles Kingston, who had left the neighbourhood many years ago and was supposed to be dead. Major Timothy Seymour, a widower, and owner of the Lone Star Hotel, returns from San Francisco with his new wife and his daughter "Rags," together with a gentleman whom he introduces as Charles Kingston. The latter explains that many years ago he bought up thousands of acres of land in the vicinity, which was at that time nothing more than a wilderness, trusting to the future to turn it into a profitable speculation. He has returned to find his hopes realised, many having settled on his land, and he has come to take possession of his own. This news causes much anger and ill-will among the settlers, Pedro Valasquez in particular. The only man who is not antagonistic to his claim is Brant Yorel, a half-bred Indian, who has settled on the land, and whom Kingston discovers to be his son by an Indian woman he had secretly married and deserted. Kingston, without disclosing his identity, wishes to atone for his deed, but finds that Yorel is full of vengeance against the man who wronged his mother. Kingston is thrown from the cliffs by Pedro Valasquez, who fastens the crime on Brant Yorel. The latter succeeds in escaping from the lynchers and rushing into the house. The mob, headed by Valasquez, are about to follow, when "Rags" appears at the door and keeps them at bay with a pair of revolvers.

Act 2 displays the interior of the Lone Star Hotel, where Brant Yorel is concealed. Valasquez, who is in love with "Rags," asks her to become his wife, but she refuses, and learning that it is Brant Yorel whom she favours, he swears vengeance on him. The sheriff and men arrive with a search warrant, but are induced to accept of the Major's hospitality before commencing their duty, and while they are at table Yorel, disguised as the negro servant, effects his escape.

Act 3 takes us back to the exterior of the hotel. The Major is in sore straits, and has borrowed 2,000 dollars from Valasquez, who intends to sell him up. Yorel, disguised as a Jewish pedlar, returns and beg "Rags" to go away with him. "Rags" agrees, and leaves home immediately. Subsequently Velasquez induces the Major to play cards, with "Rags" as the stake on the one hand and the receipt for 2,000 dollars on the other. The Major wins, and thereby discharges his liability to Pedro.

The last act passes in a hunter's deserted hut in the Rockies, where Yorel has taken "Rags." While Yorel goes out for food, an old man, wounded and half-starved, crawls to the hut for refuge. It is Charles Kingston, who, after a miraculous escape, was washed ashore near this spot. Yorel can now prove his innocence, but Pedro and Crossley discover both the old man and "Rags," and bind and gag them. The Major, who is searching for his daughter, is waylaid by Pedro, and when Yorel returns he, too, is seized and bound. The lynchers have their prey, and are about to string him up, when the Sheriff arrives and demands Yorel as a prisoner for the murder of Kingston, who is promptly brought forward as convincing proof of Yorel's innocence. Pedro, baffled, rushes at Yorel, and after a very thrilling and exciting knife duel, Pedro is killed.

Mr. Edward Leroy's portrayal of the half-breed, Brant Yorel, is a very fine conception, and his earnestness and manly bearing received due recognition at the hands of the audience. Mr. Chas. E. Lambert's Major Timothy Seymour is a typical Yankee, full of dry humour and quaint expression. Mr. F. E. Chabot as Kingston, the landowner, has a small part, to which he does full justice. Mr. Frank Wheatley as Pedro Valasquez displays throughout the desperate unscrupulous villain, and is ably assisted by Mr. Arthur Saunders as Joe Crossley, a type of scoundrel common to the district. Mr. Alfred Gordon-Dobb also scores as Jim Burgess, a Western tough ready to lynch anyone. Mr. Alfred Lafolle, as the nigger George Washington, keeps the audience highly amused. He also scores heavily with his sand and buck-dancing and coon singing. Sheriff Wilson has a capital exponent in Mr. Martin J. Moar, his duties being well carried out. Miss Hilda May makes a charming Esme Deering, a Boston belle, and captivated the audience with her dancing and singing. Miss Louie Walton's impersonation of Mrs. Timothy Seymour, the Major's new wife, is brimful of genuine comedy. Miss Blanche Leroy gives a most artistic rendering of the title-rôle, "Rags," known as "the pet of the gulch," and her singing is of a high order.

ACTORS' UNION.

The usual committee meeting of the Actors' Union was held at 49, Bedford-street, W.C., on the 26th ult., and the following members of the committee were present:—George H. Child (chair), Cecil G. Calvert, J. W. Braithwaite, Walter L. Rignold, H. Naylor Grimson, Langford Reed, Frank Gerald, and Kenneth Blackmore (secretary).

Communications were received during the week from the following committeemen:—Messrs. Paul Lovett, J. Hastings Batson, Jerrold Heather, F. Rawson Buckley, James English, Royce Milton.

It was stated that Mr. Walter L. Rignold would deliver an address on actors' organisation at the weekly meeting at Hummums Hotel, Covent Garden, and that members of the theatrical profession were cordially invited.

A manager was reported as bogus to the Secretary, and he was instructed to remove his name from the engagement board, the manager in question having applied to the Union for artists.

Mr. Langford Reed proposed and Mr. Gerald seconded, that a cricket club be formed in connection with the Union, and that the matter be left in the hands of Messrs. Reed and Rignold.

On Monday, the F. R. Benson's Shakespearean Company (South) presented the Merry Wives of Windsor in the Temperance Hall, Pembroke. Mr. Baliol Holloway gave a fine interpretation of Sir John Falstaff; Mr. Herbert Lester as Sir Hugh Evans was well placed; as also was Mr. Burgess Barratt as Dr. Caius; Mr. Charles Warburton and Mr. John Cairns as Ford and Page were both good; Mr. Victor Hardy as Slender was successful; Mr. Charles Maunsell played Fenton in good style; Mr. Frank G. Weir making a fitting Shallow. Miss Emil Leslie enacted Mrs. Ford in a thoroughly capable manner; Miss Constance Bromley as Mrs. Page being also effective; and credit is due to Miss Agnes Ray as Anne Page, and to Miss Dorothy White as Mistress Quickly.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

BERLIN, Thursday, Feb. 25.—We have had a paucity of novelties during the past week, and double quantity is announced for next. The most amusing piece in last week's bill was a three-act farce entitled Rechts Herum, by Herr Hans Gaus, which was produced at the Schiller, O., on Friday, meeting with an enthusiastic reception. The action passes in a tiny town somewhere in South Germany, the name of which is the euphonious one of Schneuzelswerth. To all appearance the leading citizens are models of virtue and piety, while inwardly, and on the quiet, they are the proverbial ravening wolves. The good old priest has the imprudent habit of committing to paper the sins of his flock, as told under the seal of the confessional, and he possesses a stack of these uncanny documents. When the holy man is gathered to his fathers, his household goods are sold, and a pile of paper is bought up by the town butcher. The consequences are disastrous. Innocent portions of sausage are found to be wrapped up in a register of somebody's sins, and when the fact leaks out the news spreads like wildfire through the little town. There is a perfect run upon the happy butcher, who never in the whole course of his career did so much trade in "Wurst," and he rejoices to think his wares are so well appreciated. The smart young journalist—that person we are so familiar with in pieces of this kind—is here, too, Dr. Paul Freihold, editor of the Schneuzelswerth Intelligenzblatt, who comes to the bottom of the run on sausage, and proceeds to revenge himself for various slights put upon him. Freihold, being opposed by nature and principle to hypocrisy, has been often treated with contumely by the burgomaster—an arch-hypocrite—and his satellites, and his opportunity has now come. He pretends he has the list of sins in his possession, and while severely cross-questioning the frightened sinners draws from their own lips the most damning evidence against them. This scene is particularly comical, causing roars of laughter from all parts of the house. Of course, each criminal gets his share of punishment meted out to him by the avenging hands of the young editor, and equally, of course, all ends as it should. The acting was remarkably vivacious, author and artists being called repeatedly in response to most hearty applause. The only thing to be objected to in the merry play is the title, which is misleading. "Eyes right" is intended by the author to mean that we should look towards the bright side of life, whereas the uninitiated German would certainly associate it with things military.

At the Friedrich Wilhelm Städtisches a very old piece has been revived after an interval of years, and with every appearance of success. It is Barnay's adaptation of Dumas's Kean, which enjoyed an almost unprecedented run at the Berliner Theatre a dozen or more years ago, when Herr Barnay was manager there, and he himself played the name-part. It exercised its old fascination on the large audience again last week. Herr Rudolph Werner gave the part of Kean in excellent manner; Herren Sarnow and Holthaus were good as the Prince of Wales and Count Coefeld; and an admirable piece of acting was the Saloman of Herr Arnold.

Hebbel's comedy Der Diamant—a work that is, wisely enough, very seldom given—was performed on Monday at the New Schauspielhaus. It was to celebrate the jubilee of one of the principal actors of the company—Herr Ernst Arndt, who has been before the public now twenty-five years. He, of course, gave the important rôle of Benjamin, the Jew, who swallows the stolen diamond. The story of the vicissitudes of the precious jewel is not to everyone's taste, and the play cannot compare in any way with the other works of the famous dramatist. The audience, however, who had turned up in great numbers to honour a favourite artist, were indulgent, and applauded cordially. Kleist's ever-popular comedy, Der Zerbrochene Krug, with Herr Arndt in the rôle of the village magistrate Adam, followed, making its customary mark.

Dr. Paul Lindau, who has succeeded Herr Barnay at the Royal Schauspielhaus in the position of director, made his début very successfully on Thursday last by the selection of Hauptmann's charming and fantastic play, Die versunkene Glocke. The idea was all the happier from the fact that the piece has never been given before in this theatre, while a long interval has elapsed since its performance at the Lessing. It made an admirable impression, the interpretation being for the most part very good. Fräulein Somary—a young actress recently engaged—was, however, not equal to the rôle of Rautendelein, and sad memories of Frau Agnes Sorma's delightful interpretation were recalled by many in the audience. The part of Heinrich was excellently rendered by Herr Sommerstorff; and Dr. Max Pohl was extremely good and judicious in the rôle of Nickelmann. That the play was beautifully staged it is superfluous to mention.

Mr. and Mrs. Maclennan have returned from their London season, and commenced their duties at the Royal Opera on Friday with Madama Butterfly. Mrs. Maclennan is cast for a new rôle this week, that of the Daughter of the Regiment.

I hear from Dresden that, in consequence of the terrible exertion demanded by Elektra, Herr Von Schuch, the chief conductor at the Royal Opera, has sprained the muscles of his right arm, and will be forced to take a long rest. A more drastic proof of this forceful composition could hardly be given.

BERLIN, Thursday, March 4.—It may at once be stated that the new piece at the Lustspielhaus is an unqualified success. Not that it is very original or that its characters are not familiar to us, but the humour of the whole is so bright and infectious that the audience frequently broke into applause by open stage. The capital acting, too, aided not a little the success, and the artists were called with the authors times innumerable. A "klubsessel," it must be premised, is one of those exceptionally comfortable morocco leather armchairs usually to be found in men's clubs. It is to this article of luxury that Johann Georg, Count of Tata-Lannatch, wishes to liken his life, which is certainly—as far as a super-optimistic nature can make it—utterly devoid of clouds. The Count and his son Johann Christoph, and an equally easy-going nephew Lieutenant Klaus, are a very charming trio of good-for-nothings, and it is not to be wondered at that the family castle comes under the hammer at last. The purchaser is a fascinating young lady named Sara, who comes over with her governess-companion from England to try to convert the frivolous Counts, father and son. These are no other than Sara's father and brother, her mother—an Englishwoman—having obtained a divorce from Johann Georg and returned to her native country, where the little girl was born. The Count's delight at finding a pretty daughter of whose existence he had no idea is great, more especially as she has inherited her mother's large fortune. Malwine Eldredge, the companion, at whose instigation Sara has come over to Germany to "save" her father, is depicted as such a virago (she is an advanced suffragette, teetotaler, &c.) that it is no wonder that the girl is more attracted by her newly-found relatives. The Count takes refuge in a hydro for a while, which provides the authors with good opportunity for some capital caricatures, notably one Colombus Vogelsang, a barefoot-walker; but ultimately our amiable hero marries a wealthy widow, who has been courted by father and son, and could not make up her mind for a long time. Pretty Sara falls a victim to the smart officer cousin, and all ends happily, although nobody is "converted." The paucity of the plot is atoned for by the characters, which are all amusing, and by the particularly bright dialogue. There is little doubt that Im Klubsessel will enjoy a lengthy run.

Nestroy's laughable farce-burlesque, Revolution in Krähwinkel, has passed its hundredth performance, and still continues to draw well. The management of the Deutsches may be congratulated upon their good business with this antique piece, which could give many a modern farce points.

"Klein Eyolf" has been given at the Lessing after a long interval as number two of the Ibsen Cycle. This most enigmatical of all the works that have proceeded from the pen of the "Northern Wizard" could never in the nature of things become popular, but that it has its interesting moments nobody would wish to deny. The acting was exemplary, a new member of the company, Fräulein Lossen, of the Munich Court Theatre, giving the rôle of Asta, one of the most sympathetic impersonations ever seen in this theatre. Fräulein Triesch's Rita and Herr Sauer's Allmers are too well known to need description; they are among the best pieces of acting on record, and Dr. Brahm had mounted the work in his customary tasteful style.

Madame Meta Illing left for London on Saturday to complete arrangements for the English-American Theatre in Germany. The season commences at the end of May in the Wiesbaden Court Theatre, and ends in some eight or nine months at Bremen. Engagements have been made for the company to appear during this time at Dresden, Hamburg, Cologne, Bonn, Frankfort, Breslau, Vienna, and many other places. In Berlin the theatre for scientific purposes known as the Urania has been placed by the authorities at Madame Illing's disposal.

News comes from America that Herr Berger, the first baritone of our Royal Opera, turns out to be a tenor, and a tenor who is going to astonish the world. The artist—whose voice has always been of a most beautiful quality—went on a short tour to the States (by special permission of Count Hülsen) to study with a famous teacher, whose discovery it is that the former Berlin and Bayreuth baritone is a tenor. Herr Berger is already termed by his professor the "German Caruso," and he is coming home to Berlin to sing the parts of Siegfried, Lohengrin, and others at the Royal Opera very shortly.

THEATRICAL FOOTBALL.

When members of the theatrical profession receive a "call" for charity, the services of a call-boy are not required; they are willing and ever ready to give every assistance possible. This spirit has been strongly in evidence during the present pantomime season in Birmingham, and Tuesday was the day fixed for the very latest effort for charity. It took the form of a football carnival, at Villa Park, the headquarters of the Aston Villa Football Club. During the morning the sun shone brilliantly, but half an hour before the commencement of the proceedings snow clouds began to gather, and threatened to spoil the "gate." Fortunately, however, well over 5,000 spectators had assembled before a blinding snowstorm set in. This happened during the progress of the game between the Aston Villa and Birmingham teams, and the twenty-two pantomime artists who were donning their respective lovelty costumes and the onlookers saw that the subsequent match between the Villa team and the performers would be seriously interfered with. There was joy in the camp, however, and hail, snow, thunder, and lightning would not have damped the spirits of the theatrical footballers. The Villa-Birmingham match over, Mr. John Power (Theatre Royal), in character, "The Last of the Brandies," led on "the boys," and there was wild cheering and much laughter when the players, in ludicrous costumes, commenced to run wild on the snow-covered ground. Mr. Eric Campbell (Theatre Royal) made an excellent 18st prize Baby, with curls and pinafore and short white socks; Mr. Jay Laurier (Prince of Wales's) was in sacking; Mr. G. H. Elliott (Prince of Wales's), was not the chocolate coloured coon, but he stuck to the old coon hat; Stephens and Rennion (Alexandra Theatre) copied their stage costumes, and one of the funniest incidents of the afternoon was when Mr. Rennion pushed the ball down his trousers and rushed through the Villa goal. Drew and Alders (Theatre Royal) were the comical sailors again; Mr. F. Blythe (Alexandra) appeared as the Baron; and George Penn (Alexandra) as an Irish Yiddisher. Mr. Keith Graham (Prince of Wales's) was the policeman, and had a very busy time arresting the Villa players in turn and marching them off the ground, until only the theatrical representatives remained, and then—well, they could not score. Nobody appeared to know the correct score at the finish, and nobody seemed to care. It was a farce from beginning to end, and was thoroughly enjoyed. Two other incidents must be mentioned. Miss Hetty King, the popular Boy Blue in the Prince of Wales's pantomime, had been advertised to kick off, and she bravely faced the snow blizzard and gracefully performed the "ceremony," to the accompaniment of loud cheers. Tom Foy (Theatre Royal) led his favourite donkey on to the field, but the Villa players objected to "Neddie" acting as goalkeeper. He was indignant and very stubborn until Tom tempted him with a piece of sugar and took him in out of the snow.

Considerable interest was manifested in the carnival, the officials of the Villa and Birmingham football clubs and the managers of the respective theatres and halls all taking part in the work of organisation. Amongst those present were Mr. J. F. Graham (Prince of Wales's), Mr. Lester Collingwood (Alexandra), Mr. Philip Rodway (Theatre Royal), Mr. Hy. Johnstone (Prince of Wales's), Mr. A. Matcham (Empire), Mr. A. Bushell (Gaiety), Mr. E. Foster (Grand), Mr. Guest (Alexandra), Mr. Tom E. Murray (Prince of Wales's), and other prominent pantomime artists also witnessed the games. A special compliment must be paid to Mr. Harry Doe for producing the official Villa News and Record on the lines of an illustrated pantomime number, the proceeds from the sale of which helped to augment the substantial sum which must have been realised on behalf of charity.

Owing to the indisposition of Miss Kitty Clinton, Miss Georgina Courtnay has been playing principal boy at the Elephant and Castle for several nights.

The artists who will take part in the 5.30 Irish concert on St. Patrick's Day (March 17) at the Crystal Palace will include Miss Annie Bartle, Miss Dora Deveen, Mr. Reginald Brophy, and Mr. W. A. Peterkin.

Presentation.—Mr. Fred Smith, the bill inspector of the Grand Theatre, Swansea, has been presented by Mr. G. P. Fenton, advance manager for the Sins of Society, with an elegant silver-mounted partridge walking-stick, suitably inscribed, as a token of his appreciation of the capable way Mr Smith had billed the play.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS DORIS FOOTE.

Miss Doris Foote first faced the footlights at the old Spring Gardens Queen's Theatre, Manchester, at the age of three, when she essayed the part of Little Leah in Leah, and received a bouquet with the stems packed with chocolates to mark the event. As memory serves, the next appearance was as Much in Robin Hood at the Theatre Royal, Rochdale, under the management of the late Mr. John Foote, at the mature age of five years. Later, engagements followed as Red Riding Hood under the Duval and Elliston management at the Theatre Royal, St. Helens, and as Jack Frost and Fairy Boy at the Theatre Royal, Blackburn, together with children's parts at both theatres, including Prince of Wales, Richard III., and the Duke of York; Jenny in The Orange Girl, besides starring engagements as the much-lamented Willie Carlyle. On a tour with the late Mr. Charles Dillon, Miss Foote appeared as Henri in Belphegor, and in other rôles. Next came an engagement for small part and chorus at the Theatre Royal, Bath, under the management of Mr. Frederick Neebe. Soon after an opportunity occurred, and Miss Foote took up the character of Cinderella at a moment's notice at the Theatre Royal, West Bromwich, with creditable results.

Next came an engagement as walking lady—"grown up"—under the management of Messrs. Elcock and Hughes at the Skating Rink Theatre, Aberystwyth, followed by a six months' engagement with the late Mr. A. Melville at the Star Theatre, Swansea, which was the forerunner of many appointments under the same management in leading and various lines of business at Swansea, Newport, Bristol, and the Queen's and Grand Theatres, Birmingham. Other experience in pantomime was gained as second boy at the Theatre Royal, Gloucester, and Alice in Dick Whittington, at the Theatre Royal, West Hartlepool, under the management of Mr. Charles Darrell; also as the Princess in Sinbad at the Theatre Royal, Worcester, under the management of the late Mr. W. Gomersal. Engagements have been fulfilled with the Liverpool Amateur Dramatic Society as Leoni in The Ladies' Battle; and with the Workington and the Ilkeston Amateur Dramatic Societies. Next came tours with Mr. Charles Dornton's Two Orphans company, as Florette, Louise, and the Sister Superior. At the Theatre Royal, Workington, during the stock season she acted First Chambermaid and Ned Doyle in Man to Man, and Patricia Caryglass in A Mother's Sin, were among her other parts. Next followed special weeks as Nelly Armroyd, Lost in London, at Birmingham and Derby; also in own company at Theatre Royal, Edmonton, 1898. Miss Foote played the irrepressible Bet Dabbs with Mr. W. H. Hallatt for several engagements; Bessie Harman, in The Wide World, with Mr. F. Brooke-Warren; lead with Mr. Arthur Carlton in A Sailor's Honour; Nancy, The Manxman, on Mr. E. Bandmann's tour; Mrs. Dingle, in A Good Time, with Mr. George Walton; Gervaise, in Drink, with Mr. Charles March; Arte O'Neil, in The Shaughraun, with Mr. Leonard Yorke; and leading parts in The Housebreaker and The Better Half, with Mr. H. Hodgson.

Miss Foote's musical comedy experience includes a six months' engagement in The Geisha chorus. This was followed by a long engagement as Polly in A Message from Mars. In character parts Miss Foote's only essay was that of the drunken hag, Mother Worrall, in The Sorrows of Satan, under the management of Mr. C. W. Somerset on tour; and Priscilla Gedge, in Captain Fritz, with Mr. Charles Arnold. Other parts include Eliza Harris, with Mr. Charles Hermann; Jess in Life, with Mr. Herbert Barrs; and Beatrice Ferrars, the lead, under the same management. She also played First Chambermaid in production of A Double Life at the Metropole, Birkenhead; Esmé, the dumb girl, in The Hand of Justice; the Duchess in Moths, and Mme. Danglars in Monte Cristo. Stock seasons at Newport, Swansea, Bristol, Workington, Llanelly, embraced parts too numerous to mention, and her career has included a tour as Chambermaid with Mr. Russell Norrie. Her répertoire rôles include those of Osric (Hamlet), Player Queen, Lazarillo (Don Cæsar), Moya (Shaughraun), and Georgina (Money).

MISS MABEL MAVIS.

The daughter of an English gentleman, holding an important Government position in India, Miss Mabel Mavis was born in that country. Very early she developed a great fondness and talent for music. At the age of six, so quick was her ear for music that she was able to play "Kathleen Mavourneen" upon the piano, after hearing a military band render it only once. Her parents were desirous that their children should learn everything which might serve them usefully in after-life, so that, with her brothers and sisters, Miss Mavis was early initiated into the arts of horse-riding, swimming, cooking, dressmaking, drawing, and painting, drill, and calisthenics, besides the ordinary curriculum of school life. Her later studies in music were carried out under various masters. At eleven years of age she composed a valse, which was published, and has since written many songs and pieces for the pianoforte, some of which also have been published. She is an accomplished miniature painter, and has executed the "counterfeit presentment" of some of our leading actresses, besides those of many "lay" individuals. But her talents are really shown to the greatest advantage in her stage performances. In addition to being an accomplished pianist, with a thorough knowledge of the theory of music, she has made a speciality of the glassophone (another name for our old friend, the "musical glasses"), which she plays to the accompaniment of an orchestra. Her répertoire likewise includes mandolino solos, playing the mandolino at the back of the head while accompanying herself upon the piano with her feet, playing the piano with right hand alone, with left hand alone, and with the elbows.

At the Empire, Leeds, on one occasion, she drew a crayon sketch-portrait of Lord Hawke with her right hand while playing a solo on the piano with variations with her left. This does not exhaust the list of her stage accomplishments, but will serve to indicate her uncommon powers. It is not many years since she made her first public appearance at a concert in Sydenham. Later, she toured the United Kingdom in association with concert parties, and finally decided to "play a lone hand."

It was while performing at the Hastings Pier Pavilion that Mr. Charles Coborn "discovered" her, so to speak. Having heard that she could give other performances besides her usual work with the glassophone, he persuaded her to give him some specimens of her varied accomplishments. He at once prophesied for her a great future, and introduced and recommended her to various managers and leading agents, with the result that before long she was engaged in turn by Messrs. Macnaghten, Barrasford, Edwardes, and others, and finally booked the entire Stoll tour. She has also appeared with the greatest success at Mr. Barrasford's halls in Paris and Brussels, and while at the former her services were secured for Monte Carlo and Nice upon very satisfactory terms.

MR. WILLIAM FULLBROOK.

Though born in Waterford, the early portion of Mr. Fullbrook's life was spent in Sussex, and his first appearance was made at the Theatre Royal, Brighton in a quartette of glee singers. He then became associated with the old Swiss Gardens, Shoreham, playing stock business, &c. Returning to the Brighton Royal for small parts, general understudy, and harlequin, Mr. Fullbrook thus gained a varied experience in a short space of time, and held a similar position for the two following seasons.

In the meantime Mr. Fullbrook toured in La Cigale, Little Christopher Columbus, The Gay Grisette, Bilberry of Tilbury, Orlando Dando, The Lady Slavey, &c. During the latter tour he was engaged by Messrs. Howard and Wyndham to appear as the Emperor in Aladdin at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, where he first met the inimitable comedian Mr. Harry Tate, with whom he was associated for over five years, supporting the principal, and also playing Mr. Tate's own parts in the side-splitting concoctions, Motoring, Fishing, and Golfing in London and the provinces. During this period Mr. Fullbrook also sustained various characters in pantomime for five seasons under the management of Mr. J. F. Elliston. During the last of these engagements Mr. Fullbrook produced his skit Astronomy, with which he afterwards toured the variety theatres, fulfilling engagements on the Stoll tour, Barrasford tour, &c. Mr. Fullbrook afterwards discharged special engagements at the London Hippodrome, to create the principal comedy parts in The Avalanche and Honeyland, in which productions he appeared with conspicuous success. On terminating his engagement at the London Hippodrome, Mr. Fullbrook resumed the interrupted Astronomy tour. He has just concluded a successful run as Abanazar in Mr. Elliston's Aladdin pantomime at the Grand Theatre, Nottingham.

MR. CYPRIAN H. MATTHEWS.

Born in Glasgow, Aug. 4, 1873, Mr. Cyprian H. Matthews was originally intended for the medical profession; but coming of an old theatrical family, with the parental instinct strong within him, he drifted naturally on to the stage at the beginning of 1896. His first professional entré was made at the old Theatre Royal, Ayr, under the management of the late Mr. Frank Pierce—a six months' stock season, playing four, five, and six pieces and farces weekly, during which time he went on for anything, from carrying a banner to juvenile lead. Mr. Matthews' next venture was a tour with his uncle, Mr. J. A. Hybert, as Phineas Fletcher in Uncle Tom's Cabin. Two seasons followed at the North Pier, Scarborough, and Pier Pavilion, Portobello, playing and producing light sketches under the management of Mr. Joseph Ellis. Then Mr. Rothbury Evans engaged him as his leading man in a round of répertoire, from rough drama to the classical, and his next engagement was with the late Mr. F. A. Scudamore for the heavy part in Against the Tide. Following this came a round of Irish drama as juvenile lead with Mr. Leonard Yorke; a tour with Mr. Henry Rutland as juvenile lead in The Woman in Black; his first engagement with Mr. Henry E. Chattell as juvenile lead in When London Sleeps; a tour with the late Mr. Osmond Tearle in Shakespeare and old English comedy; a stock season in Glasgow; three tours with Mr. Henry Swinerd as stage-manager and heavy lead, and one tour playing the baritone part in his musical play, Dare-Devil Dorothy. Mr. Matthews was next secured by Mr. Frank E. Burdett as juvenile lead in Denounced for two tours, and later by Messrs. C. and F. Renad as light comedy lead and stage-management in their Swiss Express company. A summer tour with Messrs. Bailey and Cooper as heavy lead in A Girl of To-day was followed by two tours with Miss Olga Audré, supporting her as lead in The Mockery of Marriage; and a return engagement with Mr. Henry E. Chattell as juvenile lead in Between Two Women. After a short tour with Mr. C. Finch Hatton, in From Scotland Yard, he was re-engaged by the same gentleman to manage and play heavy lead in his first tour of The Ladder of Life. A stock season in Edinburgh over, Mr. Matthews was once again retained by Mr. Henry E. Chattell for six successive tours, in the course of which he appeared as Harold Wilson in Tommy Atkins, as Tigellinus in The Sign of the Cross, Captain Rodney Haynes in When London Sleeps, and Captain Rudolph von Scarsbruck in The Midnight Wedding, a part which he is still playing on his third tour. The Tigellinus engagement was a particularly eventful one for Mr. Matthews, as it was at that time he first met his wife, Miss May Beatrice, now playing pantomime at the Princess's Theatre, Glasgow. Some of the principal rôles he has essayed in répertoire and stock are Romeo, David Garrick, Charles Surface (The School for Scandal), Humpy Logan (Master and Man), Svengali (Trilby), Jack Yeulett (Hoodman Blind), Matthias (The Bells), Lord Windermere (Lady Windermere's Fan), Macari (Called Back), Talbot (Our Boys), Harry O'Mailley (The English Rose), Claude Melnotte (The Lady of Lyons), Ingomar, Shylock (The Merchant of Venice), George D'Alroy (Caste), Prince (Ours), Hawkshaw (Ticket-of-Leave Man), Tom Cooper (Shadows of a Great City), Captain Mollineaux (The Shaughraun), Beamish McCoul (Arrah-na-Pogue), Hardress Cregan (Colleen Bawn), Levison (East Lynne), Martin Preston (Golden Plough), title-rôle Paul Kauvar, title-rôle The Curate, Philip Selwyn (A Fool's Paradise), &c. Mr. Matthews' favourite recreations are music (the violin), walking, sculling, fishing, and golfing.

MISS DORA LYRIC.

Once upon a time, as the story-books say, a bonny little fair-haired lassie was skipping down a country lane on the outskirts of Cardiff. She was singing merrily, and apparently took no heed of a clerical-looking gentleman who approached her. An exchange of words with the dainty maid soon revealed her name and address, and on the morrow the minister called upon her parents, and gained their permission for her to sing in the choir at his church. This event gave Miss Dora Lyric, now one of London's most popular chorus singers, her first opportunity of singing before a public assembly. A few years later still found her attached to the choir, but time had wrought an improvement in her voice.

There was a talk of producing a big pantomime in Cardiff, and the services of the little Dora were sought for a juvenile part. It was then the turn of the parents, being good, proper church people, to ask permission of the clergyman for her to appear in this pantomime, and he consented. This led to a highly successful engagement for the youthful actress. Her charm, natural abandon, and pleasant ways won the admiration of all. The village choir soon lost a favourite, and the stage gained a promising recruit. After playing in a number of other productions, both light comedy and drama, she joined the Lyrics, a troupe of lady singers, making it a quartette. As the Four Lyrics they came to London, and opened at Hammersmith, making a hit. As such she played at Portsmouth, where she first met Mr. Walter Bentley, who, as a comedian, was playing on the same bill. The introduction quickly ripened to more than friendship, and in May next Mr. and Mrs. Bentley will celebrate the thirteenth year of their marriage. After some time Miss Lyric accepted a variety engagement as a single turn at Sheffield, which secured her the whole of the Macnaghten tour, then three halls, and she saw that as a single turn she would show to better advantage.

That about this period Mr. Bentley evinced no particular admiration of his wife as a variety artist is clearly enough shown by the fact that when he became an agent soon after their marriage, he did not even include her in his list of clients. Another agent worked for her. Till this day Mr. Bentley admits that it was Mr. J. L. Graydon who first opened his eyes to her real talent. This was at the Alhambra, Brighton. Then, and then only, did he realise that he had wed a clever artist as well as a bonny wife, and since this awakening Miss Lyric has remained a standing star of the constellation which Mr. Bentley offers to managers. Through his agency this footlight favourite holds contracts for many thousands of pounds, running into 1915, at every hall of note in Great Britain. Always beautifully gowned, Miss Lyric delivers her songs with ingratiating freshness, and she has the knack of inducing her audience to join in her always catchy choruses, without being asked. As a judge of songs, Miss Lyric is most perspicacious. Her intuitiveness in this direction has stood her in good stead, as a bare mention of a few of her song successes will prove:—"The shamrock and the rose," "Good-bye, baby," "Your daddy doesn't love you better than mine loves me," "Somebody cares for you." These are some of her earlier ones; and her latest most popular hits are "All that glitters isn't gold," by Castling and B. Scott; "I'll tell Tilly," by Castling and Godfrey; "I'm leaving Monte Carlo," by Harrington and Powell; and "Winkles and watercress," by Alf. Ellerton. Refinement is always the keynote of her répertoire. She is a quick study. When at the Oxford a few weeks back she was asked to sing Feldman's pantomime hit, "If I should plant a tiny seed," on the Friday, and on the following Monday Mr. Blyth Pratt had double-crowns out specially mentioning her appearance in this song.

MISS DORA LYRIC.

Such a compliment has not been paid to any artist by the Oxford management before.

MR. LEWIS BROUGHTON.

Before adopting the stage as a profession Mr. Lewis Broughton was a very keen amateur, and also did a good deal of concert work. His first real engagement was with Messrs. Machin and Alderson in 1898, when he created the part of Lieut. Pelham in their production of A Soldier and a Man. The part was a difficult one for a beginner, as it included a long dying confession. Mr. Broughton, however, studied it on ingenious methods, and got a doctor friend to help him in rehearsing the different voice tones necessary to the presentation of the incident. With this piece Mr. Broughton was for seven months, and he then went to Hastings for a stock season, playing Cornelius Griffin in Niobe, Phil Marsden in One Summer's Day, Harry Seabrook in Captain Swift, and the Hon. Tom Stanhope in The Glass of Fashion. An engagement in The World Against Her followed, and he then joined Messrs. Morrel and Mouillot, under whose management he toured for about two years, first as Lollius in A Greek Slave. A suburban tour of Alice in Wonderland, in which he played the March Hare, was succeeded by a tour of The Geisha. He was then engaged by Mr. Lionel Rignold to play Fred Bonds in his first tour of The Wrong Mr. Wright, combining with it the part of Bonnefoi in A Model Wife as a curtain-raiser. Mr. Broughton rejoined Morrel and Mouillot for Pot-Pourri at the Avenue, and then toured as Sergt. Davidson in The Little Minister. Following this, he was engaged by Messrs. Harrison and Maude to play small parts and understudy at the Haymarket, at which theatre he stayed altogether three years, playing in The School for Scandal, The Rivals, She Stoops to Conquer, and The Little Minister. He also had a small part in the production of the Second in Command, and during the long run of that piece appeared in several important parts as understudy, in two cases for six weeks. During one of the vacations at the Haymarket he again went to Hastings, and played Dr. Maw in Sweet Lavender, Ted Morris in The Prude's Progress, and the light comedy part in A Bachelor's Romance. Returning to the Haymarket, he acted and understudied in Frocks and Frills and Caste. During the autumn vacation there he was engaged by Mr. Walter Maxwell to play Captain Halliwell in The Little Minister for four weeks on tour; and on the re-opening of the Haymarket he acted in There's Many a Slip and The Ghost of Jerry Bundler. Subsequently he went to the Avenue to play the same part in Jerry Bundler, and Welkins in Brown at Brighton.

Then followed a tour with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Sugden as Captain Ardale in The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, and other parts in Hagar and Wheels Within Wheels. Re-engaged by Mr. Walter Maxwell, he played Alfred Stott in The Lion and the Mouse for a long tour, and then joined Mr. Cyril Maude for the production of The Flag Lieutenant at the Playhouse, playing Captain Penrose. Owing to a previous contract, Mr. Broughton had to leave the Playhouse to undertake the rôle of Lord Kerhill in Mr. Herbert Sleath's company of A White Man, and to understudy the lead. This tour continued for five months, and at its conclusion he was secured by Mr. Lyn Harding to play Sergt. Steele in The Flag Lieutenant. Mr. Broughton is a Londoner, and his hobby is horticulture. He has a very large garden on Tulse Hill, where he grows roses and chrysanthemums for exhibition.

MISS MILDRED HODSON.

"My wish to become an actress," avows Miss Mildred Hodson, "dates from my sixth year, when I took the part of Fairy Queen in a small play for children; but, though I studied patiently by myself, trying to gain knowledge from various books on elocution, it was not until I was well on in my 'teens' that an opportunity came to join Mr. F. R. Benson's company as a pupil. Then, of course, I revelled in real elocution, dancing, and fencing lessons, and felt my foot was really on the first rung of the ladder of fame when I was given a small part." Her tour lasted seven months, and then, acting on Mr. Benson's advice to get as much experience as possible in a small company, she went into the "fit-ups" in Ireland and Wales, playing leading parts in répertoire—Lady Isabel, Nell Gwyn, &c. Though the change from touring in first-class towns was a striking one, Miss Hodson spent four months very happily, in spite of many strange experiences in the little Irish towns. Once the only accommodation she could get was a kind of loft in a two-roomed cottage—and that she had to share with the landlady! The young actress went into her next engagement—Millie Grace in The Lady of Ostend—feeling she had gained something. Then came a season in town under Mr. Otho Stuart's management, followed by stock work with Mr. Arthur Carlton, playing leading parts in the good old plays Harbour Lights, The Union Jack, &c.

After some experience in drama with Hardie and Von Leer, Miss Hodson returned to comedy, which she much prefers, and sustained Miss Fotheringay in Facing the Music, the title-rôle in A Country Mouse, and Phyllis in When We Were Twenty-one. The last-mentioned is her favourite part, and the playing of it led to an offer from Mr. Frank Bertram for Margaret in The Breed of the Treshams, an engagement she fulfilled during the last two autumn tours, in the meantime playing Grace Pennington in The New York Idea, under Mr. Herbert Sleath's management, at the Queen's Theatre, and Mabel in The Mariners of England at the Pavilion, Whitechapel. Miss Hodson's favourite recreation is playing golf, though she can only claim to be a beginner. Naturally, too, she is an enthusiastic playgoer.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

An excellent performance of Haydn's Quartette for Strings in G major, which headed the programme of the College concert on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 25, was given by Miss Giulietta Motto, Mr. Thomas Peatfield, Miss Rebecca Clarke, and Mr. Harold Pickett. In one of Schumann's Fantasiestücke for piano and clarionet, Miss Ellen Edwards and Mr. Clifford Foster were entirely successful; and Mr. Harold E. Darke, who played Three Concert Studies for piano of his own composition, had a most hearty reception from the audience. Of the three concert studies, the first, Allegro ma grazioso, proved by far the most attractive. Miss Gladys Coppin sang "The west wind loved the willow," by A. Goring Thomas; and, in the absence through indisposition of Miss Doris Simpson, Mr. John Ireland sang "Two Freebooter Songs" (W. Wallace) with admirable fulness of tone and fervant expression. Another clever vocalist was Miss Edith Leitch, whose fine voice was heard to advantage in "Verborgenbiet" (Hugo Wolf) and "Der Schmied" (Brahms). The last item in the concert of Thursday was Dvorák's Serenade in D minor for two hautboys, two clarionets, two bassoons, three horns, violoncello, and double bass, in which Messrs. H. Halstead, L. H. Fitzgerald, C. Foster, H. P. Draper, W. H. Foote, R. Tupper, A. E. Davin, F. T. Stephens, B. J. Muskett, C. Sharpe, and E. Cruft secured a good interpretation of an interesting work. The accompanists were Miss Constance Stockbridge and Miss Ellen Tuckfield.

"THE SPARE ROOM."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I notice in the papers that a one-act play, entitled The Spare Room, has been recently produced at the Criterion Theatre.

I beg leave to state, through your columns, that a one-act play with this title was copyrighted by me at the Town Hall, Crediton, on Oct. 23, 1893, was acted at the Royalty Theatre, London, on June 18th of the same year, and was taken on tour (before Betsy) by Messrs. Atwood, Barry, and Clinton's company in 1903.

As it is one of the best-known farces for amateurs, and will shortly be in its third edition, I am naturally unwilling that the title should be used for a similar piece written by somebody else.—Yours faithfully,

LEOPOLD MONTAGUE.

Crediton, Devon, March 2.

By the liberality of Mr. W. Yates Gregory, the new lessee and director of Shrewsbury Theatre Royal and Hippodrome, the entire theatre and its staff were on the evening of the 18th ult. placed at the disposal of the Shrewsbury Amateur Club, for a performance in aid of the funds of the local branch of the St. John Ambulance Society. The gross receipts amounted to £36 12s., a record for any single benefit at this theatre.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, March 1, the Play by Jerome K. Jerome, entitled

"THE PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK."

Mr. Forbes Robertson's tour opened auspiciously at the King's on Monday evening, the house being very crowded and most enthusiastic over the merits of Mr. Jerome's original sermon-play. For the piece is distinctly original, and it is certainly a sermon, preaching for good the whole way through. The inhabitants of the Bloomsbury lodging-house, broadly sketched as they are for stage purposes, with their despicably petty meannesses, are all transformed owing to the spiritual influence exercised by the "Third Floor Back," and their better selves brought uppermost. Mr. Jerome's rich humour is prominent throughout, but it is made subservient to the dominance of the supernatural being whose counsels are so productive of good. It is needless to say that Mr. Forbes Robertson as the "Third Floor Back" fulfils the ideal of the part. His sad but highly intellectual appearance, together with his delivery of the lines entrusted to him, ensure fine acting for the character, and the audience readily appreciates Mr. Robertson's efforts. An excellent performance of the raucous-voiced bookmaker, Joey Wright, is given by Mr. Ernest Hendrie; and Christopher Penny, the artist, is well played by Mr. David Powell. Mr. Ian Robertson is particularly good as Major Tompkins; as Jake Samuels, of the City, that ripe and experienced actor, Mr. Edward Sass, is bound to be successful; and Mr. Wilfred Forster plays Harry Larkcom with capital effect. Miss Gertrude Elliott is seen to much advantage as the slavey, Stasia, effacing her undoubted charms in order to emphasise the humours of the servant. A distinct hit is made by Miss Haidee Wright in the character of Miss Kite ("the painted lady"), her contrasts in make-up and acting meeting with marked approval. Miss Kate Carlyon makes an effective Mrs. Tompkins; and Miss Keith Lytton proves entertaining as Mrs. Percival de Hooley. In the part of Mrs. Sharpe, the landlady, Miss Agnes Thomas wins much praise; and Miss Amy Brandon Thomas exercises much grace and charm as Vivian. Earlier in the evening Mr. Ian Robertson's A Play in Little is given, in which the characters are cleverly sustained. On Monday evening the members of the audience were presented with a handsome folio, containing beautiful reproductions of the characters and scenes in the play, by Messrs. Foulsham and Banfield, together with appreciations written by Sir Edward Russell and Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 1, the Play,

"LADY FREDERICK."

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's well-selected company did every justice to this most amusing comedy; and although the leading lady was unfortunately too ill to appear, Miss Rita Ward made a most efficient and capable substitute as Lady Frederick, and her clever and intelligent rendering of a very exacting part caused a continuous ripple of laughter, punctuated by genuine outbursts. Mr. Robert Minster as Parodine Fouldes was excellent, his dry manner, good voice, and faultless delivery making it a pleasure to listen to the crisp lines which fell to the lot of this telling part. The Sir Gerald O'Mara of Mr. W. Barnett Parker was a good conception of a mercurial Irishman in love, and he made the most of his scene in the second act, where he discusses the problem of the education of his unborn family with his fiancée, Rose Carlisle, charmingly acted by Miss Lynn Fontanne. As Lady Mereston Miss Celia Gordon was well suited, and she made the vindictive mother as acceptable as it was possible to do. Mr. E. F. Meads as Lord Mereston, the young marquis in love with Lady Frederick, was very good, and acted naturally and with much restraint, especially in the difficult third act. Mr. Edward Bonfield as Captain Montgomery was excellent, and succeeded in making the character despicable without resort to any melodramatic methods; and Captain Gerald Gambier's experience stood him in good stead in his impersonation of Admiral Carlisle. Miss Phyllis Manners, through the indisposition of Miss Eleanor Delaporte, and the consequent rearranging of some of the characters, cleverly doubled the parts of Mme. Claude, a very British modiste, and Angelique, a very Gallic maid, and was equally good in both rôles. In the small part of Albert, Lady Frederick's footman, Mr. Bruce-Smith was unobtrusively efficient; and Mr. Harry Winton made a very satisfactory Pierre, the waiter at the Monte Carlo Hotel. A pretty little curtain-raiser, The Peacemaker, by E. M. Bryant, preceded the comedy, in which Miss Lynn Fontanne and Mr. W. Barnett Parker were a divided married couple, ultimately reconciled by the kindly wiles of a mutual friend (Miss Celia Gordon), assisted by a sympathetic doctor (Mr. Edward Bonfield). Miss Phyllis Manners was amusingly quaint as a parlourmaid.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 1, Wallace's Opera,

"MARITANA."

The concluding week of this season's visit of Mr. J. W. Turner's opera company to the Dalston Theatre has proved as successful as the preceding weeks, and lovers of the presentation of operas in English—and their name is legion in North London—are disappointed that the performances are not to be continued for a longer period. Monday evening witnessed a representation of Maritana, all the best points in which met with the customary enthusiastic reception. The occasion was noteworthy as being the first time that Mr. Charles Le Sueur, a very popular member of the company, has appeared in the part of Don César de Bazan. He met with a very good reception. Mr. Tom Griffiths was a thoroughly robust Don José, rendering the songs falling to his share with a heartiness that was much appreciated. Mr. Frank Clarke was decidedly interesting as Charles II., King of Spain. Another noteworthy performance was the Marquise de Montifiore of Mr. R. Cummings. This was quite a character-sketch in its way. Mr. P. Newton's Alcade was a careful study in every respect; and Mr. Arthur Fisher's Captain of the Guard was equally satisfactory. Miss Jessie Dennis was, as usual, thoroughly well received in the male character of Lazardio, and her rendering of "In the mansions of the blest" was enthusiastically encored. Miss Maud Esdale was just sufficiently quaint as the Marchioness. As Maritana Miss Kitty Brownless was much appreciated, and was encored for the principal songs. Mr. J. W. Turner's name has been associated during the week with the operas The Waterman and Faust, and the other works presented have been The Lily of Killarney, Il Trovatore, Martha, The Daughter of the Regiment, and Satanella.

BROADWAY THEATRE.

On Monday, March 1, the Musical Comedy entitled

"HAVANA."

Musical plays are always popular here, and the members of Mr. George Dance's company had a warm welcome on Monday when they appeared in the charming production entitled Havana. Mr. Cecil W. Parke made a dashing Jackson Villiers; the Hon. Frank Charteris was well played by Mr. Bay Russell; Mr. A. Gordon Begg acted well as Bombito; Diego, Hilario, and Alejandro were in the capable hands of Messrs. Herbert Bryan, Harry Campbell, and Clarence Hart; Mr. George Story gave a capital rendering of Don Adolpho, and his song, "The telephone," made a hit. Mr. Tom Seymour was excellent as Reginald; Mr. Mark Lester was very amusing as Nix, and sang "Faces" with good effect. Miss Gladys Guy was excellent as Anita, and her share of dance and song, entitled "A supper table laid for two," in which Mr. Bay Russell also successfully took part, was cleverly done. Miss Daisie Irving is a charming Consuelo, and sang her numbers, especially "I'm a Cuban girl," delightfully. Other parts were attractively filled by Mesdames Helen Langton, Rosa Sullivan, Beryl Gordon, Kathleen Haddon, José Sullivan, Maud Seymour, Elsie Deighton, and Maud Lennard. Mr. James Davis is also included in the cast.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, March 1, the Drama entitled

"CONSCIENCE OF A JUDGE."

There is no lack of strong stirring moments in the Conscience of a Judge, but, on the contrary, the authors, Madge Duckworth and Ridgewood Barry, have instilled into their highly interesting play many dramatic and pathetic episodes which are very effectively rendered by the company under the leadership of Mrs. Sam Duckworth, and which gave every satisfaction to the audience on Monday last, and will no doubt continue to do so during the week of their stay here. Mr. Charles Whitlock, who not only looks the part but offers a clever delineation, sustains the character of Herbert Cranstone, a barrister, afterwards the Judge, in a powerful manner, and deserves the approbation which is accorded him. Miss Eva Moss as Jessica Draycott is instinctively pathetic, and essays the rôle with delicacy and feeling, particularly in the scene at the death of her child; Mr. Frank Eaglesfield puts energy into his representation of Sir Edward Mervin, the unscrupulous scoundrel, and acts in forcible fashion; Cecil Bentley is capably played by Mr. Martin Pedler, and the same may be said of Mr. Cecil Renton as Geoffrey Granstone; Mr. Frank Eden is very amusing as Horatio Winter, and makes the most of his opportunities; Mr. Price Evans also supplies comedy relief in the person of John Summers; and is ably assisted by Miss Bessie Frank as Mary Wilson. Ethel Vaughan is daintily undertaken by Miss Mabel Coleman; Miss Mona Dawlish makes a suitable Mrs. Draycott. By no means the least agreeable feature is the acting of Miss Elsie Isaacs as Little Kitty.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, March 1, the Comedy, in Three Acts, by W. Somerset Maugham, entitled

"MRS. DOT."

An excellent company, under the direction of Mr. Percy Hutchison, has been delighting large audiences with the adventures of the rich and fascinating widow, Mrs. Dot, in her endeavours to secure as a husband a man already betrothed to another. The amusing incidents and witty dialogue, together with the excellent acting, provoke continuous merriment, and the charm and interest of the play keep the audience in a state of enthusiasm. In the title-rôle Miss Nancy Beresford scored a decided hit on Monday, when her clever and spirited acting as the fascinating widow kept the house in continual laughter. Miss Emma Hutchison played Lady Sellenger in the true light comedy style, and her capital portraiture won favour by reason of the sincerity of her acting. Miss Ethel Grahame acted prettily as Nellie Sellenger; and Miss Sybil Brooke was excellent as Miss Eliza Macgregor. Mr. Frank Lacey contributed a really funny embodiment of James Blenkinsop, making the utmost use of his opportunities. He shared with Miss Nancy Beresford the honours of the evening. Mr. Hugh Kennedy gave a smart and concise rendering of the part of Gerald Halstane, acting with vigour and earnestness; Mr. Charles A. Staite played Freddie Perkins in a dandified style, and acquitted himself with credit; and minor parts were capably sustained by Messrs. William Midgley, H. Allistoun Samson, K. Brandon, and Frank Leach. The play was preceded by Her Dearest Friend, the characters being brightly enacted by Mr. Hugh Kennedy, Miss Sybil Brooke, and Miss Ethel Grahame.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, March 1, the Farce in Three Acts,

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD."

Mr. James Welch and his company in When Knights Were Bold provide this week another of the brilliant bookings which Mr. Fredericks has made for the current year, and despite the prevalent inclement weather the holding capacity of the Borough Theatre is being severely taxed. Mr. James Welch, in his familiar part of the "slangy" Sir Guy, is irresistibly funny, and during his occupancy of the stage a dull moment is impossible; he works unflaggingly and his effervescent humour is simply contagious. Miss Audrey Ford as Lady Rowena is extremely graceful and interesting, acting in the true spirit of burlesque allied to much personal charm. Mr. Arthur Grenville submits a clever, restrained Hebraic characterisation as Isaac Isaacson, looking the part well and acting most consistently. Mr. Henry J. Ford supplies a well-defined portraiture of amiable inanity as the Hon. Charles Widdicombe; Mr. Guy Lane as the worldly, rotund cleric, the Rev. Peter Pottleberry, does exceedingly well; and Mr. Cecil Kinnaird as the fortune-hunting Sir Brian Ballymote is admirably cast, both physically and histrionically. Mr. George F. Tully as the imperturbable Wittle plays in just the right vein; Mr. Gordon Tomkins is a most commendable Barker; and Mr. Leopold Profeit speaks his lines well as a Herald. Miss Daisy Cordell makes a very prepossessing Sarah Isaacson; Lady Millicent and Lady Marjorie Egginton are daintily portrayed by Miss Maev O'Hea and Miss Doris Marshall; Miss Helen Palgrave acts with much tact and skill as the Hon. Mrs. Waldegrave; Kate Pottleberry is very appropriately played by Miss Amy Broadwood; and Miss Annie Chippendale is an excellent Alice Barker. The Wrong Side of the Road is a very entertaining curtain-raiser, the two parts being admirably undertaken by Mr. Cecil Clayton and Miss Maev O'Hea.

ARTILLERY THEATRE, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, March 1, the Musical Comedy entitled

"THE GAY GORDONS."

A very cordial welcome is being bestowed on Mr. Seymour Hicks' company in The Gay Gordons, and deservedly so, as the well-known comedy runs its course with a briskness and swing attributable only to a well-conceived play combined with lilting refrains and performed by a judiciously selected cast of talented artists, whose lively endeavours give keen enjoyment to well-filled houses, and who are also thoroughly qualified to do justice to the merry moods of the play. Mr. Frank Lincoln assumes the rôle of Angus Graeme in a very vivacious manner, and being an actor of great abilities he brings out his points into marked relief and with telling effect, and is received with emphatic expressions of approbation. Mr. Tom Graves as Nervy Nat is in his happiest vein, and is the source of much merriment; Mr. Edward Nainby does well as Edmund Siddons; Mr. Ernest Ruston contributes a capital portrait of the American millionaire Andrew Quainton; Archibald Speedy has a good representative in Mr. Buchanan Wake; Mr. Charles Tyers is thoroughly diverting in his dancing as Jack McPhrisky; Miss Dorothy Giles imparts a good deal of charm to the character of Peggy Quainton, and offers a clever impersonation and is entirely successful; Miss Mabel Dent portrays the part of Victoria Siddons in a lively fashion, and gives a good rendering; Miss Ida Laurie is amusing as Charlotte Siddons; Miss Gwynneth Hughes is satisfactory as Mary McLeod; and the same may be said of Miss Emily Mellon as Janet McLeod. Lady Graeme and Lady Millicent are capably undertaken by Miss Norah Guiness and Miss Rosa Carlisle respectively; while the orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Arthur Spittle.

BENSON SEASON AT THE CORONET.

Mr. F. R. Benson invited the Press to criticise the performance at the Coronet, on Feb. 26, of The Merchant of Venice, with a special cast, and a very excellent all-round performance was given. As Portia, one of Shakespeare's most gracious heroines, Miss Margaret Halstan scored a complete success, her sweet face, charming manner, and dignified deportment, as well as her clear enunciation, being most agreeable to eye and ear. Her delivery of the famous speech "The quality of mercy" was distinguished by rare point and emphasis, but with no undue straining after effect. As Nerissa Miss Helen Haye presented a very pleasing portraiture of the merry-minded and loyal lady-in-waiting. Bassanio, as enacted by Mr. Cyril Keightley, is a fine, manly and exceedingly handsome young nobleman, and he speaks his lines "trippingly on the tongue," and suits the action to the word—an altogether admirable embodiment. As Shylock Mr. F. R. Benson dwells principally on the savage, revengeful, avaricious nature of the Jew, and his craft, cunning, and duplicity are quite overshadowed by his ferocity; only occasional glimpses of the power of mind that underlies these more human passions is allowed to peep out. Mr. Murray Carrington makes a very patient and resigned Antonio, and his elocution is excellent; Mr. H. O. Nicholson is a capital Duke of Venice, kindly, dignified, and impressive; Mr. F. G. Worlock and Miss Olive Noble make a very pretty pair of lovers as Lorenzo and Jessecia. Indeed, the cast is notable for its handsome couples. Mr. G. Hannam Clark is very well cast as Gratiano, and does not, as so many in the part have done, overdo the boisterous gaiety of this laughter-loving Venetian. Mr. E. A. Warburton spoke his lines well as the Prince of Morocco, though he might with advantage put more fire into his performance. The part of Salanio was excellently rendered by Mr. Moffat Johnstone; and Messrs. Guy Rathbone, Wilson and Nigel Playfair were all good. There is only one real improvement we would suggest, and that is that when Bassanio makes his choice of the caskets all save, perhaps, Nerissa and Gratiano should retire whilst this momentous question is settled.

On Monday was produced Shakespeare's tragedy ing Lear. The part of King Lear is among Mr. F. R. Benson's best Shakespearean performances. As the poor old King, driven from pillar to post by his two unnatural daughters, with intermittent glimpses of the unreason which caused him to make such a witless division of his kingdom, he is seen quite at his best. The fierce struggle of a noble nature with growing madness and senility, accentuated by his privations, is most powerfully and pathetically portrayed by Mr. Benson with many apt touches of his own. Mr. Cyril Keightley gave a stirring performance as Edgar, and his simulation of madness in the storm scene was so effective as to provoke continuous applause at the fall of the curtain. Mr. Murray Carrington made a fine picturesque figure of Edmund, the double-dealing bastard son of Gloucester, and the Earl of Kent, as presented by Mr. E. A. Warburton was, perhaps, the best bit of character-acting he has done during the present season. Mr. F. G. Worlock was very good as the Duke of Albany, and Mr. H. O. Nicholson contributed a telling performance as the ill-fated Earl of Gloucester. Mr. Nigel Playfair as the fool, Mr. Moffat Johnston as Oswald, Goneril's "serviceable knave" and steward, and others submitted effective impersonations. Miss Olive Noble was a very sweet and natural Cordelia; Miss Helen Haye, though in "fair seeming," was sinister and serpent-like as Goneril, and Miss Mayne Young was a satisfactory Regan. The scenery and accoutrements were excellent, especially well-managed being the storm scene. On Tuesday evening The School for Scandal was given; the Wednesday matinée was set apart for Richard the Second, Henry the Sixth (Part 2) being given in the evening. For Thursday A Midnight Bridel and The Belle's Stratagem were underlined, and for Friday The Merry Wives of Windsor. Julius Cæsar and Macbeth are announced for this afternoon and evening respectively.

Those of the playgoing public who love their Shakespeare are much indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Benson for their indefatigable efforts to immortalise the Bard. It is seldom indeed that we get a chance to see his historical plays, with a few notable exceptions, such as Henry V., which Mr. Lewis Waller has taken under his ægis, King John, for which Mr. Tree has displayed a partiality, among others. Last year Mr. Benson produced Henry IV. (Part 2) at the Coronet, and now we have Henry VI. (Part 2) let upon the public in masterly fashion, and in a manner highly creditable to the direction of Mr. Benson, and the stage-management of Mr. Harry Stafford. So indefatigable is Mr. Benson in the smooth and successful working of his plays that, after the death of Cardinal Beaufort, he took his call at the close of the play garbed as one of the rabble! The part of King Henry VI. is portrayed by Mr. F. G. Worlock, and while he earns our sympathy for this weak, well-meaning monarch, he forfeits our esteem by his display of spiritless irresolution and irresponsibility. The learning and piety of good King Henry were far in advance of the troublous and warlike times in which he lived, when might was right and treasons, stratagems, and spoils abounded. According to the Bard, he was for ever telling his beads and moralising when he should have been up and doing; ever lilting "I dare not wait upon I will" and delivering up the reins of government to whoever was at the moment most in power, be they honest and statesmanlike or unscrupulous and self-seeking. The play also touches upon the Jack Cave insurrection, and vaguely hints at the outburst of fanatical hatred against the innovation of printing and book lore as being a form of witchcraft and the promptings of the fiend. Certes, Shakespeare anatomatised in no niggardly fashion the inmost souls of kings, ministers, and caitiffs. Mr. F. R. Benson contents himself with the part of the choleric and ambitious Churchman, Cardinal Beaufort, Bishop of Winchester, and instils much vindictive rancour into the part; whilst his depiction of the death of the aspiring Prelate, unshrived and unrepentant, is a very gruesome and awe-inspiring scene. As the smooth-tongued Suffolk, who does not stop at conniving, in conjunction with Winchester and York, at the death of Gloster at the hands of common murderers, is played with excellent judgment by Mr. Murray Carrington. Mrs. F. R. Benson as his patroness and illicit lover, Queen Margaret of Anjou, acts with fervour and conviction, and limns the portrait in all its primary colours of baseness and intriguing passion. Miss Helen Haye gains great and deserved applause by her impressive rendering of the part of Eleanor, the Protector's wife, whose vaulting ambition doth o'erleap itself and lights i' the mire. She commands sympathy and attention for what is after all an ignoble, scheming, and unscrupulous character. Miss Leah Hanman gets her chance here as the witch, Margery Jourdain, and in the scene of the incantation and her doom to be burnt at the stake, she moves the audience to awestruck wonder. Mr. Lock as John Hume, the conspiring dealer in magic, is also impressive and convincing. Mr. H. O. Nicholson contributes a sound, sterling performance as the hapless Humphrey, Duke of Gloster, and as the Duke of York Mr. Hannam Clark acts and speaks with an air of authority. Mr. B. A. Pittar is powerful and virile as Warwick, the king-maker; Mr. Plingo does well as Sir John Stanley; and as Buckingham Mr. Guy Rathbone, and as Salisbury Mr. Harry Caine are eminently satisfactory. The part of the truculent scoundrel Jack Cade is rendered with great vigour and aplomb by Mr. E. A. Warburton, and he displays great fire and ferocity in his death scene; whilst Mr. Ribton Haines as the armourer, Mr. Wilde as Dick, the butcher, Miss Regina Laurence as Mrs. Simpcox, and others give valuable assistance in the scenes of riot and disorder. Mr. Nigel Playfair brings in some welcome comic relief as the witless Peter Thump; Mr. Caine as the clerk of Chatham and Mr. Caithness are good; and the other small parts are all carefully and discreetly rendered.

"THE LUCK OF ROARING CAMP."

Will Gordon	Mr. Robert Purdie
Tom Barnes	Mr. Chas. E. Johnson
Gonzales	Mr. Geo. Porteous
Ebenezer	Mr. Clarence Ibbotson
Paddy McGinty	Mr. Hyland O'Shea
Old Pard	Mr. G. Cuthbertson
The Sheriff	Mr. Arthur Redmond
Snapshot Harry	Mr. Tom Sharpe
Whiskey Jim	Mr. Alfred Rochester
Bunco-Eyed Bill	Mr. Alfred Cooper
Red Pete	Mr. Arthur Watson
Jovita de Sutro	Miss Flo Melrose-Millett
Tommy	Baby Audrey
Fanny Twinkle	Miss Norah Dillon
Pinky Tibbs	Miss Gracie Lawrence
Mrs. O'Flynn	Miss Jenny Clare
Nell Curtis	Miss Olive Wilton

Characters of Western American mining life which Bret Harte has made famous are introduced to us with vivid realism in the piece under review, and playgoers who delight in strong melodrama as a change from the lighter stuff which we have had in such abundance recently will welcome this new four-act drama, adapted from Mr. Bret Harte's stories by the well-known playwright Mr. Ben Landeck.

The play has the advantage of novelty—the novelty of situation and of characters—and gives us the breeziness, the dash, the dare-devil recklessness of the "free-from-law-and order settlers" of the gold-diggings of California. In the particular gold-diggings known as Roaring Camp, and made famous by the great novelist, Bret Harte, were men who were "neither God-fearin' nor revolver-fearin'," whose shouting and yelling had gained for Roaring Camp its title, and whose singular proficiency with the revolver kept all but the most reckless and daring spirits from settling in Roaring Camp. Into this "City of Refuge," where most men dropped their surnames—probably it was safer and gave no clue to their past—and were known as Whiskey Bill, Buck-eyed Barney, Jay-Bird Charlie, and the like comes young Will Gordon, the son of a New York banker, and he falls in love with Nell Curtis, the daughter of his partner (Old Pard). In the first act, the scene of which is the Devil's Gorge, near Roaring Camp, Tom Barnes, the evil spirit of the camp, and Gonzales, a Mexican adventurer, are accomplices in the murder by night of Old Pard, and they take from his pocket certain documents which give his real name and indicate that he is the heir to property in England. They accuse Will Gordon of the crime; he is Nell's sweetheart, and her love for him saves his life. Barnes urges on his roughs to lynch Will. The rope is round his neck, the other end of it in the hands of the lynchers, when Nell dashes on and covers them with her revolver. "The first man who pulls that rope is a deader! Now who wants a funeral?" They know she means what she says, and in the confusion Will escapes. Barnes, in gaining possession of the papers for which the old man was murdered, finds the clue to the mine, and learns from them that Nell is heiress to this vast wealth. He asks her to marry him, but she declares in her characteristic manner that she would rather marry "any old bull frog"; so he chloroforms and carries her off to a secret cave 200 feet beneath the earth's surface. Here Barnes tells her she will rot as his other victims have done unless she agrees to marry him. Nell still refuses; he, enraged, attacks her; and, at the critical moment, when all hope for her seems over, occurs the great rescue scene—one must see this to fully appreciate the effect of a difficult piece of stage-business. Exciting scenes follow each other in quick succession—the "Dice of Death," the pistol duel, the intrigues of Jovita, a handsome Southern woman, who has tracked Barnes to Roaring Camp, and the final fight between Barnes and his Mexican confederate. There is never a dull moment, and the fun is fast and furious when the three excellent comedians, Ebenezer the nigger, Widow O'Flynn, and Paddy McGinty are on. Of course, everything ends happily for the hero and heroine.

This sort of play requires to be given with whole-hearted vigour to be successful, and the company do not fail in this respect. Mr. Robert Purdie acts with great power and tenderness as the hero Will Gordon; and Mr. C. E. Johnson is no less strenuous and effective as the villain Tom Barnes; while Mr. Geo. Porteous gives a good study of the revengeful Mexican Gonzales. Mr. Clarence Ibbotson has an eccentric rôle as the nigger Ebenezer, and keeps the fun alive with unflagging spirits. In this he is ably seconded by Mr. Hyland O'Shea as Paddy McGinty. Mr. G. Cuthbertson is good as Old Pard; and Mr. Arthur Redmond does well as the Sheriff. Miss Flo Melrose-Millett shows good work as the adventuress Jovita; and Baby Audrey as her child, Tommy, soon becomes one of the favourites with the house. Miss Norah Dillon and Miss Gracie Lawrence satisfactorily fill in the parts of Fanny Twinkle and Pinky Tibbs. Miss Jeanny Clare puts abundant life into her work as Mrs. O'Flyn, and gets many a laugh. Miss Olive Wilton plays capitally as Nell Curtis, the heroine, and shows her capacity both in action and in the emotional moments. The piece is picturesquely and beautifully mounted. Mr. Eric Merric is managing the show on behalf of Miss Molesworth and Mr. Blow.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 1, the Play entitled

"THE SIGN OF THE CROSS."

A more suitable play for this Lenten season than The Sign of the Cross could scarce have been booked for Kennington Theatre, and despite the wretched weather conditions, which have seriously affected business elsewhere, Mr. H. B. Brandreth has had the satisfaction of seeing good houses assemble nightly at the place of entertainment over which he presides. The production is of the high standard one always associates with Mr. William Greet's enterprises, and it has been almost as well received on the present tour, which opened after Christmas, as during the first years that this remarkable play was before the public. The company is one of all-round excellence, and the dressing and staging leave nothing to be desired. In the first and third acts particularly there is a wonderful blending of colour as the principals move by in their flowing classical robes, whilst the scene when the Christians are surrounded at the Cestian grove is also strikingly effective. The Sign of the Cross of course abounds in dramatic situations of great intensity, and full justice is done to these by Mr. Austin-Lee, who enacts the rôle of Marcus, and by Miss Constance Little, on whom falls the task of interpreting the part of Mercia. Mr. Austin-Lee possesses histrionic gifts of a high order, and he makes full use of them in the countless opportunities which the play presents. He gives a wonderful study of the strong-willed Roman Prefect, brought into humble submission to the Christian faith by the purity and unfaltering courage of Mercia. Miss Constance Little is the embodiment of the gentle Christian girl devotee. She makes as sweet and innocent a Mercia as we have seen for a long time, and is deserving of the warmest encomiums for the sympathetic rendering she imparts to a difficult part. Mr. Chas. Aldred makes a splendid Tigellinus, and Mr. J. Weatherall is well placed as his fellow conspirator, Licinius Ædile. The Nero of Mr. C. Yorke is a remarkably fine piece of acting, all the hideous attributes of the tyrant being carefully presented; the Poppæa of Miss Beryl Hamilton is enacted with considerable success; while Miss Lily Ward makes a brilliant Berenice. Philodemus is adequately impersonated by Mr. H. Jones, while Mr. Walter Fleet makes an impressive Favius. The Stephanus of Miss E. Drayson is remarkably well enacted, and wins general sympathy, the faltering courage of the boy in the dreadful ordeal he has to undergo being finely interpreted. Others who deserve mention are Mr. Frank Wood (Glabrio), Mr. Thurston Harris (Servilius), Mr. G. W. Ruff (Virturius), Miss Cissy Carlton (Dacia), and Mr. G. Blunden (Titus).

NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, March 1, the Drama,

"AS MIDNIGHT CHIMES."

Mr. Tom Taylor has a particularly good, well-balanced cast to perform the well-known drama The Midnight Chimes. Mr. Melville Bickford, in the rôle of Luke Dezzard, gives a powerful performance; and as Dave Stannard Mr. Clifton Boyne wins warm approval from the audience for his manly interpretation of the part. Mr. Walter Westwood is decidedly good as Ezra Gamble; Mr. F. Vernon Travers does well as Captain Trevethick, the chief constable of Barryhaven, and also acts as Mr. Taylor's general-manager. Miss Marjorie Davenport presents a pleasing and sympathetic portrayal of Mary Stannard; Miss Mabel Hall is a clever child actress, and Little Davy is well acted by her; as the Indian girl Zamora Miss Lilian Earle is quite satisfactory in a difficult part; Miss Josie Farrington is a pert and pretty maid Suzette, and, with Mr. Tom E. Sinclair (who proves himself an excellent Tat Spavin), provides most of the humour of the piece. The remaining characters are all well played, and the show is nightly meeting with enthusiastic receptions from crowded audiences. The new year is proving very prosperous at the Lyric, and Mr. Wentworth Croke and his popular manager, Mr. Fred S. Jennings, should be very satisfied with the state of affairs.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, March 1, the Drama, Adapted from Mrs. Henry Wood's famous novel, entitled

"EAST LYNNE."

By arrangement with Mr. J. Pitt Hardacre Mr. Tom Watt's company is appearing here with marked success in East Lynne, a play which, like Tennyson's brook, seems destined to go on for ever. Mr. Edmund F. Kennedy's delineation of Archibald Carlyle left nothing to be desired, and his suave manners and easy bearing, coupled with his clear enunciation, made his portrayal a distinctly memorable one. Mr. Frank G. Bayly enacted Sir Francis Levison, alias Captain Thorn, in cool, calculating fashion, and the West Londoners warmly resented his nefarious designs. Mr. Frederick Jacques sustained the irascible Justice Hare in a forceful and convincing way; Mr. Cyril Hayward made an admirable Lawyer Dill; Mr. Rayson Cousens played in an earnestly effective style as Richard Hare; Mr. Joe Rowland quickly became a pronounced favourite with his racy and humorous portrayal of P.C. Bullock; Miss Ida Heron pleasingly sustained Barbara Hare; Miss Lilian Mason was decidedly assertive as Cornelia Carlyle; Miss Isabel Singleton did very well as the faithful Joyce; and in the trying rôle of Lady Isabel Miss Julie Kennard was seen at her best, especially in the emotional scenes. Miss Alice Moseley and Miss Ethel Ray played intelligently as Little Willie and Little Isabel respectively. Mr. Cecil Elgar is the general-manager for Mr. Tom Watt.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

Minutes of the Council meeting held at 353, Strand, on Tuesday, March 2. Present: Mr. J. Poole Kirkwood (in the chair), Mr. H. W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Messrs. Clive Currie, Jackson Wilcox, C. Hayden Coffin, Robson Page, Gilbert Esmond, F. J. Arlton, Langford Reed, Miss Agnes Imlay, and Mr. Hubert Blount, secretary.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The hon. solicitor presented the report, which was accepted.

Elsie Goulding, Marjorie Carey, Lionel Yaldwyn, and Betty Stannard were nominated for election; J. Boyd Pearson, Helen Child, and Rule Pyott were elected; and Miss Amy Grace was reinstated.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I should esteem it a favour if you will give publicity to the following in your next issue:—

The Council of the Actors' Association have issued a notice that: "In order to increase the membership two awards of honour should be made to the members who introduced the largest number of new members during the ensuing year. The awards will be:

(a) A life membership.

(b) A fully-paid membership for the ensuing year."

When I read it I was reminded of my "kindergarten days," when my aunt promised me my favourite jam for tea if I gained the highest marks at school, and greed made me attain the coveted number.

May I point out that the method suggested by the Council has its drawback both for the canvasser and the one canvassed.

I was a victim to the former when playing last week at Birmingham. I had the pleasure of meeting four charming actresses, great enthusiasts of the stage, and on hearing they were not members I asked them to join the A.A. I noticed, however, that a merry twinkle passed between them and so we dropped the subject.

Imagine my horror when on reaching home and looking at the paper, I read about "the awards." The merry twinkle was explained. No doubt the girls thought it would be a big haul if in one afternoon I could catch four victims to suit my own ends. No; it makes one hesitate canvassing on those lines. Let the A.A. rather offer one or two prizes for the best-written playlet, comic song, dancer, mimic, &c., and at an A.A. entertainment the artists to appear; the competition only open to members.

Last year, when, in conjunction with Mr. Fredk. Annerley, I got up an entertainment, we stipulated that only members should perform. We gained two new members, and one of them as a result had her monologue produced at the London Coliseum, and this was just at one of our usual socials.—I am sir, yours faithfully,

JOAN PEREIRA.

UNACTED AUTHORS.

With reference to the notice which appeared in our last week's issue on the above subject, a meeting was held on Wednesday, March 3, at 217, Piccadilly, to consider the position of the "Unacted Authors."

Mr. Mayne, after expressing his pleasure on seeing so many people present, said that when he wrote his first letter to the Referee and the Daily Mail in reply to Miss Lena Ashwell's letter on the dearth of good plays he had no idea that the matter would be so largely taken up as it has been, and no one could be more pleased than he that such has been the case, as he feared his letters would simply be one more ineffectual "kick against the pricks."

Continuing, Mr. Mayne said that the first object of the Society which they might form would be, if possible, to get the approval and support of the managers and the heads of the theatrical profession, and this, he thought and hoped, could be done, as undoubtedly they would welcome any scheme which would relieve them of the trying work of having to wade through so many plays which were absolutely useless and unactable; and if eventually the Society could be worked to such a position that managers would refuse to read any play by an unknown author unless it had been passed by the Society and its reader as of some merit, a great benefit would accrue, not only to the managers and authors, but also to the stage generally.

After pointing out the many different kinds of unsuitable plays which were submitted by authors and the reasons of their unsuitability, touching on the other play-producing societies and expressing the hope that no feeling of rivalry might arise, and giving a few details as to his own experience with managers and bestowing high praise on Miss Lena Ashwell for her endeavour to do more for "Unacted Authors," Mr. Mayne proceeded to lay the following proposals before the meeting, supplemented by a rough idea as to the cost of production of the Society's plays, the particulars of which he had obtained from several well-known producers:—

To appoint some competent person to read plays of the Society's members, after such plays had been passed by a committee of the Society as good. This reader to be, if possible, a fairly well-known actor. What remuneration possible should be offered in the first place, and this to be increased when the Society was more firmly established. The reader to, in each case, give a written and candid criticism of each play, pointing out faults, and also suggesting alterations, &c.

To approach managers for the use of their theatres for the production of the members' plays, to which any actor, actress, or manager who is well known would have free admission on presentation of their card.

The production should be public and advertised and the seats should be sold at reduced rates; performances to be matinées on days when there were no professional matinées.

To approach the Actors' Association and the profession generally with a view of getting their support, and to obtain from them the help of competent artists to play in the production of members' plays. Artists at first to give their services, with a view, in the case of provincial artists, to themselves being seen in London and by London managers. When the Society was in a position to do so, they would undertake to give a small payment to those actors and actresses who took part in the productions.

To approach the theatrical papers to get their support, and to ask them to publish letters on the progress of the Society, and to send critics to their productions.

To approach some well-known person who is known to be interested in literature and the drama to consent to be nominated as president of the Society.

Every member shall pay an entrance fee of 10s. 6d. and an annual subscription of £1 1s.

The members shall appoint two committees from their number (1) to manage the affairs of the Society and arrange all business, and (2) to read members' plays and judge which shall be submitted to the Society's engaged critic. The Reading Committee to be elected by the members.

A president (who shall preferably be some outside well-known person), secretary, and treasurer to be appointed by the members, the last two of which shall be ex-officio members of each committee.

A member as soon as he or she shall have had a play accepted for production by any recognised management through the medium of the Society shall pay to the Society a sum to be arranged and if a second play is taken, a further sum such member then becoming an honorary member and undertaking to do what they can to promote the work of the Society from outside.

The Society shall only produce plays by members of the Society which are likely to appeal to managers.

Plays shall only be produced at matinées on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays.

No translations from foreign authors shall be produced unless such author is at the time of such production a member of the Society and "unacted" both in English and his own language.

There shall be no Sunday evening performances.

No play shall be produced by the Society which in the opinion of the Reading Committee or the Society's critic, would be prohibited by the Censor.

For the production of the Society's members' plays the services of a reliable and well-known producer shall be retained.

After a batch of plays have been approved as worth production by the reader, the mode of selection of such for production shall be either by ballot or drawing. One-act and three- and four-act plays shall be drawn for separately, and one of each performed at each production.

Each member shall be entitled to two seats for each performance of the Society.

That friends of members or others who are interested can become honorary members of the Society on payment of an annual subscription of £2 2s., for which they shall be entitled to receive two seats at each performance of the Society.

A general discussion then took place, and it was ultimately unanimously decided to form an "Unacted Authors' Association," and it was agreed to hold the next meeting of the Association on Monday, March 15, at 5 p.m., to complete the formation of the Association and elect officers. Notice of this meeting will be forwarded to all those who have already joined the movement. Others wishing to join are requested to communicate with Mr. N. Thorpe Mayne, 217, Piccadilly, W.

Letters and telegrams expressing approval of the scheme, hopes for its success, and offers of assistance in the production of its plays have been received, and were read at the meeting, from Mr. C. Aubrey Smith, Mr. Dion Boucicault, Mr. William Haviland, Mr. Charles Maude, Mr. Blake Adams, Mr. Ralph R. Hutton, Mr. Clarence Derwent, Mr. Walter Pearce, Miss Dorothy Green, Miss Drusilla Wills, Miss Rose Mathews, &c.

There were thirty authors present, and many letters were received from others sympathising with the movement who were unavoidably prevented from being present by reason of the severity of the weather.

MR. CHARLES FROHMAN has entrusted Mr. Edward Michael with a new play for a week's trial performance in the near future at the Theatre Royal, Margate. The piece is at present unnamed.

ACTOR-MANAGERS OF THE PERIOD

MR. ALLAN WILKIE.

Mr. Allan Wilkie completed on the 23rd of last month his tenth year on the stage, and there is probably hardly another actor in the profession who can claim to have accomplished such remarkable results in a similar period.

After a varied training in Shakespeare, old comedy, melodrama, and farce in every class of theatre from fit-ups to His Majesty's Theatre, London, Mr. Wilkie some years ago embarked on the stormy sea of theatrical management, and his rapid rise as a manager has been simply phenomenal. Commencing with a small company of about sixteen artists, which has since grown to thirty-seven, playing a round of high-class dramas, Mr. Wilkie, who had always cast a longing eye on the Shakespearean drama, first introduced The Merchant of Venice into his répertoire, and then followed one production after another, so that now his répertoire embraces all the more popular Shakespearean plays, several of the old comedies, and at least half a dozen high-class dramas.

To give some idea of the remarkable breadth and variety of his répertoire, his bill during a recent visit to Grimsby will form the best illustration. Opening on Monday with Macbeth, it was followed by The Sleigh Bells, The Corsican Brothers, The Fool's Revenge, She Stoops to

MR. ALLAN WILKIE—RICHARD III.

Conquer, and The Two Orphans of Paris. As Mr. Wilkie states with pardonable pride, there is no other touring company in the British Isles that could adequately present such a heterogeneous programme.

Apart from Mr. Wilkie's exceptional ability as an actor—which, after all, is not of much use without the business instinct—a great share of his remarkable success may be attributed to the fact that he was the first English manager to realise the full possibilities of pictorial printing with regard to Shakespeare, and he has had specially cut what is probably the largest plant of pictorial printing of any company in the world, consisting as it does, of over twelve hundred sheets. Another important factor in the success of his productions is the incidental music, which is composed and written by his own musical director.

Mr. Wilkie has only recently attained his thirty-first year, and is therefore the youngest actor-manager we have at present playing the legitimate drama. He is already on visiting terms with several of the No. 1 theatres and shortly contemplates a London season, when he will present twelve different plays on twelve consecutive nights, and afterwards the most successful of the twelve for the remainder of his season.

Mr. Wilkie's company is run on purely professional lines. He does not receive any pupils, and has no school of any kind attached to his company. He is of opinion that the bad business which so many managers in the provinces complain of is directly traceable to the habit of filling the smaller parts with inexperienced and incompetent artists.

Mr. Wilkie's chief successes have been made in Shylock, Richard III., Othello, Hamlet, and Bertunio in The Fool's Revenge, but the part which he desires to play above all others is that of King Lear, which he hopes to include in his London season. Mr. Wilkie's career will be followed with the greatest interest, and there can be little doubt that, if his past performances at the early age of thirty-one are any criterion, his future will be one of exceptional brilliance.

THE annual supper of the working staff of the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, which takes place at the close of each pantomime, was held on Monday night after the performance of Aladdin at the King David Hotel, St. Michael's-hill, and the proceedings were of the usual harmonious character. Unfortunately, Mr. J. M. Chute was unable to be present, owing to indisposition, and in his absence the chair was taken by Mr. Henry Turner (stage manager), who was supported by, amongst others, Mr. F. S. Green (acting manager), Mr. George Chapman (chief of the orchestra), Mr. George Jackson (scenic artist), and several of the principals in the Aladdin pantomime, including Mr. Bransby Williams, Mr. Arthur Sutcliffe, Mr. W. H. Powell, and Mr. Alfred Clarke.

THE toast of "Mr. J. M. Chute" was proposed in a felicitous manner by Mr. H. Wilson (master carpenter), who spoke in eulogistic terms of Mr. Chute's many good qualities. The chairman acknowledged the compliment on behalf of Mr. Chute, and then submitted "Heads of Departments." This being duly acknowledged "The Official Staff" was similarly honoured.

IN replying for "The Pantomime Principals," Mr. Powell spoke in high terms of Mr. Chute's management, and said members of the profession throughout the country were always delighted to appear at the Prince's Theatre. Mr. Bransby Williams made a characteristic speech in speaking on behalf of the ladies. The pleasure of the company was also materially enhanced by the recitations of Mr. Bransby Williams and contributions by others present.

FULHAM meets Wolverhampton in the Second Division of the League at Fulham this afternoon, at 3.30. The team will be selected from Fryer, Charlton, Lindsay, Sharp, Collins, Suart, Mouncher, Lee, Smith, Freeman, Dalrymple, Brown, and Lipsham. Fulham Reserves and Sittingbourne will also be opposed this afternoon at Sittingbourne. Fulham and Burnley meet on Monday at Fulham, the kick-off being at 3.15. The home team will be as above. Should Burnley draw to-day with Manchester United (English Cup) the match will be postponed.

DEATH OF MR. GEORGE WEIR.

It is with deep regret that Mr. Benson announces the death from Bright's disease of Mr. George R. Weir, which sad event took place on Tuesday morning at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast, where he had been lying ill for the past two months. For twenty-six years Mr. Weir was Mr. Benson's most able lieutenant, being the only one remaining of the original company, and it must have been a matter of deep regret to the old Bensonian that he was unable to join his comrades at the Coronet for the London season, to which he always looked forward with such keen pleasure.

The deceased actor came with Mr. Benson's company on the occasion of their last visit to Belfast, when they performed for a fortnight at the Theatre Royal there in the last week of the old year and the first week of January. He had been indisposed before arrival, but made the journey, hoping to fight off the illness with which he was seized; but his condition was so serious when he arrived that he could not take his place in the cast, and Mr. Benson enlisted the services of Professor Sir William Whitla, who recommended his removal to hospital. Since that time Mr. Weir has been a patient in a private ward in the Royal Victoria Hospital, where he has received the unremitting attention of Sir William Whitla and the hospital staff; but he gradually sank. For some weeks his wife and daughter have been in Belfast, and they were constant in their attendance on the deceased gentleman in his last days on the stage of life. Mr. Weir, who was fifty-six years of age, was a native of Glasgow, and for some time past his residence has been at Southend-on-Sea. He leaves a widow and four children, to whom will be extended the sympathy of the departed comedian's professional colleagues and of the general public, with whom he was such a favourite.

By the death of Mr. Weir the stage loses an actor steeped in the best traditions of Shakespearean and old English comedy, and his value in such a company as that of Mr. Benson must have been beyond appraisement. His Bottom the Weaver, was an impersonation richly comical, and one that captured the fancy of London playgoers when Mr. Benson gave, for the first time, at the now defunct Globe Theatre, a production of A Midsummer Night's Dream which for charm and fantasy has not been excelled. In this Mr. Stephen Phillips, the poet-dramatist, played Flute, and Miss Jessie Bateman made her first appearance as Cobweb. This was on Dec. 19, 1889. On Jan. 23, 1890, at a revival of The Taming of the Shrew at the same theatre, Mr. Weir scored a further success as Grumio; but an even greater triumph was reserved for him in Mr. Benson's production of Hamlet on March 6, 1890, in which Mr. Weir played the part of the First Gravedigger with delightful simplicity and humour. He repeated the performance at the Lyceum on the afternoon and evening of Thursday, March 1, 1900, when Mr. Benson revived Hamlet in its entirety. Other Shakespearean characters in his répertoire included Sir Toby Belch, Falstaff, Dogberry, Stephano in The Tempest, and the Fool in King Lear. At a performance at the Coronet Theatre, Notting Hill, on March 2 last year of a version of Don Quixote, by G. E. Morrison, Mr. Weir played Sancho Panza with a ripe unctuous method that realised the humour of Cervantes. The death of Mr. Weir will be specially regretted by those who have enjoyed Mr. Benson's artistic revivals at the Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon. To his bereaved family and friends we tender our sympathy.

Amidst many manifestations of sorrow the remains of the popular actor were laid to rest on Thursday afternoon. The funeral cortège left Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast, at 2 p.m. for St. George's Church, High-street (where a special service was held at 2.30 p.m. by Rev. Dr. Murphy, Chaplain of the Actors' Union), thence to Dundonald Cemetery, where the burial took place. Amongst those present were:—Mr. Cuthbert Ricketts (manager, Mr. F. R. Benson's No. 1 Company), representing Mr. F. R. Benson; Mr. James M. McCann and Mr. W. A. Salmond, representing Mr. Fred W. Warden, managing-director of the Grand Opera House and Theatre, Belfast, at present in London; Sir Otto Jaffe, Kt., representing the civic authorities; Dr. Nelson, representing the medical profession; and others. The casket was covered with beautiful wreaths.

DEATH OF MRS. CHARLES H. LONGDEN.

We regret to announce that Mrs. Charles H. Longden, sister to Mr. Ernest Dottridge, passed away on Saturday last after a long and severe illness. Although only forty-seven years old, the deceased lady had practically been in the business that length of time, commencing her career when quite young at McDonnell's Music Hall at Hoxton. This was, however, her only appearance in the halls, as she was taken in hand by her uncle, Pitney Weston, at Bolton, and played small parts in stock seasons. Later, meeting Mr. Chas. H. Longden, they married, and toured for several years, eventually settling down at the Queen's Theatre, Leeds. Mr. Longden is the partner of Mr. Ernest Dottridge, of the well-known firm Dottridge and Longden.

The interment took place on Wednesday at Chadderton Cemetery, in the presence of a large number of the friends of the deceased lady, who evidently had the esteem of all with whom she came in contact. The body, which had been embalmed, was enclosed in an English oak coffin with panel sides, and six massive silver handles. On a silver plate was the inscription: "Edith Longden (Henderson). Died Feb. 27, 1909; age 47 years. 'Peace, perfect peace.'"

The chief mourners were Mr. Chas. H. Longden (husband), Miss Longden (daughter), Miss Louisa Dottridge (sister), Mr. Ernest Dottridge (brother), and Miss Weston (cousin). Amongst those present were Mr. Chas. Bush and Mr. C. P. Wentworth, managers for Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; Mrs. Dubois, Mrs. Howarth, Mrs. Harrison, and Miss Foster, The Village Blacksmith company, The Midnight Mail company, Empire Theatre of Varieties company, Grand Theatre staff, Empire Theatre staff, and Royal Theatre staff.

Wreaths were sent by the husband, daughter, brother, and sister, Mrs. Dubois, and Mrs. Howarth, the directors of the Empire Theatre Co., Edith and Richard Aston, the Grand Theatre staff, artists and staff of Royal Theatre, The Midnight Mail company, The Village Blacksmith company, E. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Livesey, Jennie Weston (niece), Miss Mildred Carr, staff of the Empire Theatre, Joseph and Ada Platt, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. Wolstenholme, Mr. H. Kilroy, Mr. and Mrs. James Chadwick, Edith and Jack Chester, Wm. and Lillie Maclaren, Mr. and Mrs. Brewster, Miss Bradshaw, Mr. John Waddington, Mr. Chas. Bush, and staff of the Queen's Theatre, Leeds, Miss Henderson, and Mrs. Forest.

THE Welsh National Eisteddfod, which is to be held in London from June 15 to the 18th inclusive at the Albert Hall, will be under distinguished patronage, including that of the King and Queen, while the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition will act as presidents. Mr. Balfour will preside at the chief choral competition on the first day, and the competition for male voice choirs, which will take place on the concluding day, will be presided over by Mr. Asquith. The musical adjudicators are Sir Charles Villiers Stanford, Dr. McNaught, Mr. Emlyn Evans, Mr. Dan Price, and Mr. Harry Evans, of Liverpool. The conductor of the Eisteddfod Choir is Mr. Merlin Morgan. The chairing of the bards will take place on the last day, the crowning occurring on the preceding day, and the Gorsedd ceremonies will be held on the mornings of June 15, 17, and 18 in Hyde Park.

THE LATE MR. DENIS CAMPBELL.

A brief paragraph in our obituary column announced the death at Liverpool on the 19th ult. of Mr. Denis Campbell, the well-known Irish comedian, and the husband of Miss Annie Barclay, who has received much sympathy in her great bereavement. The deceased gentleman, after being educated at Black Rock College, Dublin, made his first appearance on the stage as Solon in The Octoroon at the Queen's Theatre, Dublin. An Irish nigger with blue eyes did not altogether accord with the fitness of things, and young Campbell very soon forsook the "African" side of Boucicault for the Hibernian, and made his first appearance in England as Harvey Duff in The Shaughraun at the Theatre Royal, Oldham, where he attracted the notice of Mr. William Sidney, who engaged him for the part of Barney O'Toole in The O'Dowd. After that the deceased actor toured for many years with Mr. John S. Chamberlain, and also with Mr. Hubert O'Grady, whom he understudied.

Mr. Campbell was the original Mulcahy in Muldoon's Picnic at the Theatre Royal, Scarborough. He was also with the late Charles Sullivan for some time, and also toured in the companies of Haldane Crichton, Hardie and Von Leer, George Kirk, J. M. East, Ernest Carpenter, Morton Powell, Walter Reynolds, and Lester Collingwood (with whom he starred for five years). He also went into management on his own account with Irish drama. He was playing on Feb. 16, three days before his death, with Walter Reynolds's company at Liverpool twice nightly.

THE TERRITORIAL QUESTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Will you allow me to answer the criticisms of your correspondents of last week?

To Mr. Charles Clifford we say, "Bring along your friends and come yourself, and help to make it a success this time." So far we have worked practically single-handed, and if Mr. Clifford will assist us at recruiting we shall be grateful. We don't acknowledge a chance of failure, for our recruits are coming along quite as speedily as we expected.

To Mr. Norman Yates, "being an old Volunteer," we give an invitation to join. We wish to point out to him with regard to his statement—"We all know the petty jealousies that arise in the profession, and I fear they would be carried on to the parade ground"—that soldiering is a "man's" game, and that the sort of individual he describes will quickly be made a man. The question of company and battalion drills will all be arranged, and a man will be able to drill with battalions at battalion parades.

To Mr. Hargreaves we offer an invitation—come and join, prove your pessimistic ideas wrong. We have men now from the profession who have been able to do their territorial work as well as their stage work, and in their stage work they do forty-two to forty-six weeks' work per annum, which is a fair year's work; aye, and they are keen Territorialists. Read Mr. Edmund Vyson's letter of a week or two ago. Mr. Mayne Lynton, we hear, is going to join us. We shall be glad to welcome him, and as many of his friends as he can enlist for us.

Before we report progress let us point this out—no man who is absolutely engrossed with self had better join; he will find himself more "at home" reading his morning paper, describing Territorial work as a "mug's game," criticising our great generals, and telling his sympathetic family what he would have done if he had been there. Self is not the only thing in this world. A man's duty to his country comes before self.

Since we wrote you last week we have had a letter from the War Office, telling us that our scheme had been put before the Army Council; and the letter goes on to promise us consideration when we have our numbers together. It is definitely arranged that Captain Hunt Helmsley (Mr. George Alexander's manager) is to be our first company commander. This will be a step in the right direction, for we have here a theatrical man who will understand the difficulties we face in the pursuit of our profession. We have now in actual verbal and written promises some eighty to 100 members, and these numbers are increasing every day. Amongst those who have promised to join are several managers and agents, and they are all joining as privates and working for promotion. We shall be glad to have every able-bodied man in the two professions, theatrical and music hall, as members. Don't wait to write and ask for forms; but write and say "Count me amongst your members," and give us your permanent address, and let us know the earliest date you can attend at headquarters to be sworn in.

The scheme is being arranged to suit your spare time, and not to interfere with your work.

Thanking you for your kindness in publishing my letter,—Believe me, truly yours.

CHARLES C. OMMANNEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—We note with pleasure the account in last week's Era of the Territorial Boy Scouts movement undertaken by Mr. C. Barnard at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, and would like to draw your attention to the fact that our manager, Mr. James Marks, at the Picturedrome, Ashton-under-Lyne, has had a similar movement in hand for some time, and brought this into actual practice early last month, the first muster being 720. You will see from the enclosed this is no flash in the pan, but has taken firm hold in the town, and very great patronage from Col. Wainwright. Our sincerest wish is that the movement may extend throughout these islands.—Yours faithfully,

PARIS, THURSDAY, March 4.—Under the auspices of the well-known dramatic society "Les Essayeurs," Les Désarmés, a three-act play by M. René Wisner, was brought out at the Théâtre des Arts, and met with a first-class reception. It is a clever work, worthy of finding its place on the répertoire of a leading Paris house. The plot is laid in a military milieu, and illustrates the troubles of Lieutenant Marchal, a penniless officer, in his attempt to keep up a decent appearance in Society. Marchal, married to the charming Juliette, has nothing beyond his lieutenant's pay, out of which he has even to provide for his mother and sister. To make matters worse, Juliette is fond of finery. Her dowry of £1,200 has in course of time dwindled to £800, and she owes money to dressmakers and milliners of which her husband is not aware. Acting on the advice of Sénart, an ex-priest, Marchal entrusts the £800 to a financier, who promises him big returns; but the financier absconds, and Marchal, hopelessly ruined, is in a terrible plight with his wife's debts staring him in the face. De Rodières, the colonel of the regiment, questions Marchal as to his financial position, and on being told that it is desperate informs the poor lieutenant that the affair may have serious consequences for him. Sénart, the cause of the trouble, pretends to be unable to advance the small sum that will assist the Marchals over their difficulty; but when Juliette, boiling over with anger, threatens to divulge to the anti-clerical Press his underhand dealings with the before-mentioned financier, Sénart takes up a different position and promises to help them. He keeps his word; and the author here shows the occult power of the clergy in all matters pertaining to the army. Through Sénart's influence Marchal's creditors consent to give him all the time he wants to discharge his debts, and Marchal's chances of being promoted captain—at one time doubtful—are now perfectly secure. M. Beaulieu, who reminded us of the Jesuit Rodin in Eugène Sue's "Wandering Jew," supplied a capital sketch of the wily Sénart; M. Scheler was very convincing in the rôle of the luckless Lieutenant; Mlle. Méry gave us a charming Juliette; and the other parts were also well sustained.

The evening's entertainment began with Notre fils, one act, by Mme. Lucy Achalme. Germaine's husband is a nobleman of the rough sort. He and his wife live all the year round in their lonely country house in Brittany, the Count's time being taken up with shooting and hunting. Their little three-year-old boy is suddenly taken ill, whereupon Germaine sends for the doctor, who says that an operation is necessary to save the child's life. From a conversation between her and the doctor we gather that she was his mistress before her marriage, and that he is the father of the child. The Count will not allow the operation to be performed, whereupon we witness a violent scene between him and his wife, culminating in the woman confessing her guilt, and telling him that under these circumstances his interference becomes odious and grotesque, and when the Count, despite these explanations, still withholds his consent, his wife seizes a gun and kills him, calling out to the doctor, "Now, let us save our boy!"

"J'EN AI PLEIN LE DOS DE MARGOT,"

Comedy, in Two Acts, by MM. G. Courteline and Pierre Wolff, Produced at the Renaissance on Feb. 27.

Margot	MLLE. JEANNE DESCLOS
Camille	MLLE. MARGUERITE CARON
Ursule	MLLE. C. DELYS
Amélie	MLLE. L. GUENOT
Lavernié	M. LUCIEN GUITRY
Lauriane	M. FELIX GALIPEAUX
Marvéjol	M. BERTHIER
Facteur	M. DELANGLE

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

J'en ai plein le dos de Margot, like all Courteline's productions, leaves a bitter aftertaste. Lauriane lives with a charming little ex-ouvrière named Margot, whom, with his ill-humour and malice, he leads a terrible life. Finally, he confides to the painter Lavernié that he is sick of Margot, and that the painter can have her if he likes. In truth, this is only an exaggeration of irritable temper, and is not meant to be taken seriously. But the heart-broken child, who confesses that she has no will to help herself or to resist, makes Lavernié understand that she loves him. There follows a flirtation between her and the painter. When Lauriane learns that his mistress is at the painter's, he arrives in a fury, and the scene that ensues is very comical. Lavernié says Margot shall stay with him; Lauriane fumes, expostulates, rants, and finally wheedles. When he finishes up by telling Margot that he will marry her, she gets up and follows him, leaving the painter. And so the incident ends. Those two consummate actors MM. Guitry and Galipeaux worked wonderfully well together, and helped considerably to make the work a success. Mlle. Desclos did not throw quite enough warmth into her part, but otherwise proved a winsome Margot.

THE Renaissance also revived Le Juif Polonais, known to most English people, who will remember the late Sir Henry Irving in the English version, The Bells. The plot of Erckmann-Chatrian's famous play is sufficiently well known, and need not be retold. It was beautifully acted. M. Guitry, who made an imposing Mathias, was especially telling in the scene with his prospective son-in-law, the "maréchal de logis," and in the very difficult tableau of the dream, in which the guilty man is judged and condemned by the spectral court. The work, creditably mounted, was interpreted by an efficient cast, comprising MM. Magnier and Dubosc, and Mmes. Dux and Denèga.

THE Chantecler question is getting on our nerves. The fuss made about it in the theatrical world is verging upon the grotesque. Our Fine Arts Minister has very properly refused M. Le Bargy permission to impersonate the principal rôle in Rostand's play whilst still a member of the Comédie-Française. M. Le Bargy is, therefore, now out of the running; and as it was he who made the most noise in the affair, we need not trouble about the others.

THE old management—I should say mismanagement—of the Théâtre de l'Ambigu has made a graceful exit, and MM. Henri Hertz and Jean Coquelin, of the Porte-Saint-Martin, are now in possession. They intend to inaugurate their reign with a revival of Le Courrier de Lyon, wherein M. Léon Noël will again impersonate Choppart. Then will follow a revival of L'Assommoir, with Mlle. Léonie Yahne as Gervaise, a rôle played at that theatre by Mme. Suzanne Desprès. The part of Nana will be entrusted to Mlle. Marie-Louise Roger. No novelties have thus far been announced.

MM. MESSAGER and Broussan are clinging desperately to their posts. But will they be able to retain them? They are being fearfully attacked; but many of these attacks come from unclean quarters, and have an unpleasant smell of blackmail.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Sir Charles Wyndham is included among the list of speakers at the annual meeting of the Duchess of Albany's Deptford Fund. The gathering will be held at Lord and Lady Portman's West End residence on Thursday afternoon, May 27, and Her Royal Highness will preside.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree has given an earnest of his intention to secure a "star cast" for his forthcoming revival of The School for Scandal by the engagement of Mr. Edward Terry for the part of Crabtree. Miss Marie Löhr will be the Lady Teazle, Miss Ellis Jeffreys the Lady Sneerwell, Mr. Robert Loraine the Charles Surface, Mr. Basil Gill the Joseph Surface, Mr. Henry Neville the Sir Oliver, and Mr. Lionel Brough Moses. The production is at present underlined for Saturday, April 10.

Mr. George Alexander has accepted from Mr. A. E. W. Mason a new comedy entitled Colonel Smith, for production at the St. James's at the conclusion of the run of The Prisoner of Zenda, the revival of which is being justified by excellent houses. Mr. Mason, whose Parliamentary duties have occupied the time which might otherwise have been devoted to the stage, was last heard of on the occasion of the production of his comedy, Marjory Strode, at the Playhouse in March last. His latest work deals with life under modern conditions, the action of the piece being laid in the country. Mr. Alexander and Miss Irene Vanbrugh will both appear in the new play.

Mr. H. B. Irving brought his season at the Shaftesbury to a close on Saturday amid a remarkable display of enthusiasm, and many wishes for a speedy return to the West End. After King René's Daughter Miss Dorothea Baird, who had a very hearty reception, was presented with an exquisite basket of yellow flowers; and at the end of The Lyons Mail, which followed, Mr. Irving was the recipient of a huge wreath of bays.

After responding to numerous recalls, Mr. Irving was at length induced to make a short speech, in the course of which he said that after a tour to begin about Easter, he hoped to return to London, his dramatic home, when Mr. McCarthy's Cæsar Borgia play, which the success of The Lyons Mail had prevented him from staging in the present season, would be his first production. The popularity of the revivals of the last few weeks had encouraged him to contemplate appearing in The Bells, and the welcome given to Louis XI. suggested to him that the play should be put up for a run. Each interesting statement was received with cheers of the most encouraging description.

A pleasing ceremony was enacted on the stage after the performance. All the company and staff being assembled, Mr. Irving was summoned from his dressing-room, and was presented by Mr. Frank Tyars—so long a valued member of Sir Henry Irving's company—with an address and a large and beautiful silver Georgian inkstand, which bore the inscription: "To Henry Brodribb Irving, in commemoration of his first season as a London manager, at the Shaftesbury Theatre, Oct. 15, 1908, to Feb. 27, 1909, and also in celebration of his 125 consecutive performances there of Lesurques and Dubosc in The Lyons Mail, with the good wishes of his company and staff."

Mr. Martin Harvey has sent a further sum of £2 to the Secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, collected on his present tour by means of his autograph, and Mr. C. H. Workman, of the Savoy Theatre, has forwarded a further sum of 12s. obtained by the same means.

Miss May Palfrey and her husband, Mr. Weedon Grossmith, will form an attraction that could not well be resisted by Stratford playgoers at the Borough Theatre on Monday, the former making her first London appearance in Mrs. Dot, which has met with so much success in all the big provincial towns visited by Miss Palfrey since last September. Included in the cast are also Mr. F. Kinsey Peile, Mr. Basil Hallam, and Mr. Hugh C. Buckler.

Following Mr. Somerset Maugham's diverting comedy, Mr. Weedon Grossmith will be seen for the first time in London in the piece which he produced at the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, on Monday, entitled The Mystery of Redwood Grange, a new and original play, in one act, written by "An Englishman." The little piece, on the initial performance, met with a most enthusiastic reception, and Mr. Grossmith, who achieved a triumph, will no doubt be seen in it in the West End at no distant date.

Mr. Martin Harvey made his first appearance in Rochdale at the Theatre Royal on Monday, and was enthusiastically received in The Only Way. On Thursday Mr. Harvey, Miss de Silva, and their company travelled to Halifax, where they opened to a very large audience. The performance last night was under the patronage of the Halifax branch of the Dickens Fellowship, and it goes without saying that Mr. Harvey's Sidney Carton was received with enthusiasm.

Next Monday the popular actor inaugurates the spring dramatic season at the Royal Court, Liverpool. Following his week's stay at Liverpool, Mr. Harvey begins the Scottish portion of his tour, which, this spring, is limited to three weeks, one being devoted to Edinburgh and two to Glasgow.

Miss Ada Reeve, fresh from her pantomime success at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, resumes her part of Rhodanthe the Witch in the principal Butterflies company at the Tyne Theatre, Newcastle, on Monday. The company, which is under the direction of Mr. Wilfred Cotton, includes Messrs. Louis Bradfield, Blake Adams, Richard Green, and Lauri de Freece, Misses Stella St. Audrie and Phyllis Monkman.

Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton, who had been drawing crowded houses at the Castle Theatre, Stockton-on-Tees, during last week, were called before the curtain after the closing performance of The Taming of the Shrew on Saturday night. Responding to an enthusiastic demand for a speech, Mr. Asche expressed himself as intensely gratified at his reception at the Castle Theatre, which he remarked was one of the handsomest he had played in. It was his first visit to Stockton, but he hoped it would not be his last. Miss Brayton and he were shortly going on a tour in Australia, and they hoped on their return to pay another visit to the town.

Mr. Asche has decided to produce Count Hannibal on the 18th, at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol. The play has been adapted from Mr. Stanley J. Weyman's famous novel by Mr. Asche himself, with the assistance of Mr. Norreys Connell. It will be mounted on the usual sumptuous scale of Mr. Asche and Miss Brayton's productions. Costumes have been specially designed by Mr. Percy Anderson, Mr. Joseph Harker being responsible for the scenery. Mr. Asche appears as Count Hannibal de Tavannes, and Miss Brayton as the fair Huguenot Clothilde, and with the exception of one or two special engagements, the principals will be supported by the company which has been so long associated with them. It may be added that the novel has already been dramatised by Freeman Wills and Frederick Langbridge, whose play under the same title was produced at the Alexandra, Stoke Newington, in the April of 1906.

Mr. Edward Terry will commence a short spring tour at the Grand Theatre, Swansea, on Monday, with a repertory including Sweet Lavender, Liberty Hall, The Magistrate, and The Passport. The company supporting Mr. Terry will consist of Misses Edith Coleman, Christine Rayner, Evelyn Ormonde, Sophie Lingwood, Lydia Busch, and Ella Dixon, and Messrs. Edmund Hollick, William Dexter, Percy Goodyer, George Byrne, J. Poole Kirkwood, Percival Madgewick, and Christopher Steele. Mr. George Byrne will be responsible for the stage management, and Mr. A. Græme will be the business manager.

Mr. J. Bannister Howard has escaped all the rigours of the wintry weather at Ventnor, Isle of Wight, where he is recuperating after his indisposition. Mr. Howard sings the praises of the island enthusiastically, describing it as "better than all your Nices." He is enjoying warm weather, the sun being really hot, while violets and primroses are in full bloom!

Messrs. George Edwardes and Robert Courtneidge will produce The Devil at the Adelphi on Saturday, April 17. The piece, which has enjoyed marked success in America, is by a Hungarian author named Ferenc Molnar, and the London version is by Mr. Henry Hamilton.

His Satanic Majesty is presented as a man of culture, whose purpose is to prevent the illicit affection of an artist and his model being brought to a termination. The title-rôle will be played by Mr. Lyn Harding, who may be trusted to make the best possible effect out of the part, and the cast will also include Miss Alexandra Carlisle, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Miss Helen Leytol, Miss Gladys Mason, Mr. Vincent Clive, Mr. J. B. Gordon, Mr. J. S. Blythe, Mr. Edwin Lewis, and Mr. Bassett Roe.

Mr. W. V. Garrod will produce his new play Are You the Man? by Frank Price, at the Grand Theatre, Nottingham, on April 8. The entire production has been made and painted by Mr. E. Egerton of Bradford.

At the Parish Church of St. Andrew's, Holborn, on Saturday, the wedding took place of Miss Daisy Kersey and Mr. George Kenneth Underwood, of Southend-on-Sea. The bride has had a varied dramatic career, having been on the stage since she was twelve years old, and it was while playing the Princess in Aladdin at Southend that she was introduced to her future husband. She is more particularly known in the provinces, having played popular musical comedy parts, including those of the bride in The Girl from Kay's, and Irene in The Duchess of Dantzic. She is retiring from the stage on her marriage, Mr. Underwood being, we understand, of independent means.

Upon the termination of a successful tour with Robinson Crusoe, Mr. Harry Benet and his manager entertained the whole of the company at the Horse and Groom Hotel, Maesteg, on the 26th ult., to a sumptuous supper. Mr. Benet was the recipient of a gold match box, presented to him by the lady members of the company, and of a gold watch by Mr. Willie Kloof, the popular manager. A most enjoyable evening was finished up with a dance.

The ladies' annual dinner of the O.P. Club will take place at the Criterion on Sunday, March 21, with the president, Mr. Max Pemberton, in the chair. The guests of the evening will be Miss Violet Vanbrugh and Miss Marie Löhr, who will respond to the toast of "The Ladies," proposed by Mr. T. McDonald Rendle. The toast of "The O.P. Club" will be proposed by Mr. Henry Neville, and will be acknowledged by the President.

The introduction to the fourth issue of "The Green Room Book; or, Who's Who on the Stage," which will be published by T. Sealey Clark and Co., Ltd., on Monday next, is written by Mr. Beerbohm Tree.

Miss Marie Leonhard, who is at present playing Jocelyn Gordon in Messrs. Armitage and Leigh's With Edged Tools company, has won the beauty prize for the division of Lancashire in the competition recently held by Pearson's Weekly. Miss Leonhard has the distinction of being the only actress who has won a prize.

"The Luck of Roaring Camp," which is being played this week at Fulham, is another success for Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow. The play has been meeting with great appreciation in the provinces, and future bookings include Bradford, Leeds, Newcastle, Alexandra Theatre, Hull, and Liverpool.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Rollo Balmain will be pleased to know that their son, Augustus Rollo, has just matriculated at London University, and is now studying for the medical profession. Young Rollo is a godson of the late Sir Augustus Harris, and made his first appearance on the stage for a charity at his father's theatre—the Royal, Plymouth—under the patronage and presence of Royalty, in the Drury Lane play The Royal Oak at the age of four and a half months. It is reported that he preserved a masterly inactivity and a dignified silence. He recently toured as Valma in The Gay Lord Quex, and last appeared as the Rev. Mr. Eden in a revival of It's Never Too Late to Mend at the Theatre Royal, Cardiff, under the management of Balmain père.

Miss Amy Willard, having concluded her engagement with the Jack Straw company, has been engaged for the part of Amy Brown in the No. 1 company of An Englishman's Home, opening at Birmingham on Monday next.

At a meeting of the members of the Urban Club, held on the 26th ult., Mr. Farlow Wilson in the chair, it was unanimously resolved that Mr. E. Chas. Fache be elected hon. secretary in succession to the late Mr. W. E. Church, who held the position for thirty years. A letter was received from Mr. Chas. Cruikshanks, an old member of the club, in support of the appointment of Mr. Fache as hon. secretary. Mr. E. J. Odell and other members present made sympathetic references to the death of Mr. W. E. Church, who, besides having achieved distinction as an able and eloquent lecturer on literary and antiquarian subjects, was for many years on the staff of the Daily Chronicle and Lloyd's newspapers as dramatic and art critic. He was well-known to members of the dramatic profession, and highly esteemed by a large circle of literary and artistic friends.

It was resolved that the postponed dinner and entertainment in honour of the veteran actor Mr. Hermann Vezin, at which Mr. Bram Stoker has promised to preside, should be held at the end of the present month. It is proposed to invite Mr. Frank Desprez, the editor of The Era, to be present at this interesting celebration as the guest of the club. Although the Urban Club has by the much-regretted death of Mr. W. E. Church sustained a severe loss, it is hoped that the new hon. secretary will, with the united support of the members, succeed in maintaining the strength and popularity of a club which has been in existence for more than half a century, and can boast of having had amongst its members many men distinguished as authors (dramatic and otherwise), artists, and actors.

"Hamlet," which is to be produced by Messrs. Smith and Carpenter at the Lyceum on Tuesday, will be found to be arranged in a manner that will appeal irresistibly to the popular taste. Excisions have been made in the original text, but everything of importance bearing upon the story and the development of Hamlet's character has been retained.

Mr. Matheson Lang's reading of the title-rôle will be watched with interest, and Miss Hutin Britton's Ophelia may also be expected to reveal the quality of dramatic resource. Mr. Eric Mayne will be the Claudius, Miss Mary Allestree the Gertrude, Mr. Geo. Fitzgerald the Polonius, Mr. Halliwell Hobbes the Horatio, Mr. Lauderdale Maitland the Laertes, and Mr S. Major Jones the Gravedigger; and other parts will be entrusted to Messrs. Sidney Vautier, Cowley Wright, Richard Andean, and George Relph.

Miss Iris Hawkins, who is taking up singing as an art, has commenced studying with Mme. Kate Flinn. Miss Hawkins is proving an apt pupil. She had a great success at a recent concert given by Mrs. Hammersley in her two songs and dances from Pinkie—"The Bunny Song" and "When I am grown up." She was encored three times for the first contribution and twice for the second. Mme. Kate Flinn is giving a concert at the Steinway Hall on May 4.

The votes and interest of Freemasons are being solicited for Mrs. Ellen May for the May election for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Widows of Freemasons. Mrs. May is sixty-eight years of age, and is residing at 368, Camden-road, N. She is the widow of the late W. Bro. Samuel May, theatrical costumier, of Bow-street, W.C., who was initiated in the Temple Lodge No. 101 on November 4, 1862, and remained a subscribing member till his death in 1876. He was also a member of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780, the Globe Lodge, No. 23, the Lewis Lodge, No. 1185, and the Grand Stewards' Lodge. He was also P.Z. of a Masonic chapter. The late Bro. May was life governor of all the institutions, and acted as steward on many occasions. The applicant also is a life governor of the boys' schools. Votes are respectfully solicited, and will be duly acknowledged if sent to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

A meeting in support of the Territorial Boy Scouts scheme was held on Tuesday at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, among those present being Mr. Chas. Barnard (chairman and founder), Messrs. Sidney Barnard, H. Sherwood Martin, F. Bernardo (manager for Lester Collingwood), John Coghlan (secretary), and J. H. Thurlow (manager Denmark Music Publishing Co.). Letters were read from Mr. F. H. Pedgrift and Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett expressing sympathy with the movement and their regret at being unable to attend. An application from Mr. Walter de Frece to inaugurate corps at the various towns at which he directs so many music halls, beginning with Portsmouth, was approved.

"The Swiss Express," under the personal direction of Messrs. Charles and Frederick Renad, will resume its merry career on Easter Monday next During the vacation this celebrated play, which has contributed so liberally to the gaiety of the nation, has been brought fully up to date, several new features being introduced.

Charles and Frederick Renad will produce shortly an original farcical comedy in three acts entitled The Merry Territorial. This play was intended to follow their successful Swiss Express, but in view of the present patriotic boom they are arranging for its production early in the autumn. A tour embracing the principal provincial theatres is now being booked.

Miss Glossop-Harris and her talented company have met with great success on their first visit to the handsome New Pavilion Theatre at Weymouth, by no means the least enthusiastic among the vast audiences who have nightly visited the theatre being the officers and men of the Channel Fleet. The company have presented seven Shakespearean plays, and conclude to-night with Othello.

Mr. Robert Arthur has made arrangements for a season of Italian grand opera at the Coronet, to commence on April 26, when Mr. Louis Hillier is to introduce to London an Italian operatic combination, with a large company of "bel canto" singers, full chorus and orchestra, and their own mise-enscène. The operas will be chosen from a répertoire of over fifty works, many of which will be novelties to the music-loving public.

Mr. Alfred B. Cross, who has so long had the management of Mr. Hall Caine's play The Manxman, and has played Pete for the last seven or eight years, has secured what promises to be another success, in the fine American play by Mr. Hall Reid, entitled The Night Before Christmas. The initial performance at the Opera House, Coventry, on Monday, met with a most auspicious send-off. Both Mr. Cross and his wife (Miss Minnie Watersford) have parts that will help to maintain their reputation. A tour of the best dramatic theatres has already been booked.

Miss Violet Lloyd, happily recovered from her severe illness, resumed her rôle of Aladdin at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Monday, and obtained a hearty welcome. Her every appearance was greeted by floral offerings, amongst which a beautiful lamp of violets illuminated by electricity and the word "Aladdin" formed by a huge garland of flowers, stood out prominently.

Miss Jeannie Thomas has been engaged for the autumn tour of The Passing of the Third Floor Back to play her sister's—Agnes Thomas—part of Mrs. Sharpe.

The benefit of Mr. Philip Rodway, acting-manager of the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, and joint-author of the book of the pantomime, Dick Whittington, was marked by the presence of a crowded and enthusiastic audience. The ordinary book was departed from in many details in order to make room for the large number of artists from neighbouring theatres and halls who contributed special turns to the entertainment. Miss Hetty King hurried from the Broad-street playhouse to give her song "Hang out the front door key," and had to make a speech before the recalls would subside. Mr. Jay Laurier, another popular comedian, from the Prince of Wales, and Miss Ellaline Thorne, from the Alexandra Theatre, Mr. Nat Clifford and Mr. Frank Harwood from the Gaiety Theatre, Messrs. Bliss and Bliss from the Hippodrome, and others had very hearty receptions.

Many of the artists who are appearing in Dick Whittington contributed special numbers for the occasion; among these Miss Sybil Arundale made a particularly good impression when she appeared as Columbine and gave a graceful dance. Mr. Tom Foy, the clever comedian who has done so much for the success of the pantomime throughout, gave, with assistance, "A Yorkshire Lad in London"; and Miss Ada Reeve motored over specially from Liverpool, where she has been appearing in pantomime, and received an ovation. In the course of the evening Mr. Rodway made a little speech gracefully acknowledging the services of the various artists, and was presented by Mr. Tom Foy, on behalf of the members of the Dick Whittington company, with a handsome silver inkstand. Other presentations were made behind the scenes.

Mr. F. R. Benson, who is again entrusted with the organisation of the Shakespeare Festival at Stratford-on-Avon, has arranged for Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh to give a special matinée of Macbeth on April 27, during the second week of the Memorial performances. A background of curtains will be used in lieu of scenery.

The cast for The Noble Spaniard, which will be staged at the Royalty on March 20, is now complete. Mr. Charles Hawtrey will appear in the title-rôle, and Miss Fanny Brough has been engaged for an important part. The remainder of the characters are allotted to Mr. E. Lyall Swete, Mr. Athol Stewart, Mr. Leon M. Lion, Miss Vane Featherston, Miss Muriel Beaumont, Miss Joy Chatwyn, and Miss Gladys Cooper. The last-named artist, it may be added, is now appearing in Our Miss Gibbs at the Gaiety.

The Shaftesbury, which is to undergo important alterations both structural and decorative, will be reopened at Easter by Mr. Robert Courtneidge with a new musical play by Mark Ambient and A. M. Thompson, with music by Lionel Monckton and Howard Talbot. In the cast will be included Mr. Dan Rolyat, Mr. Harry Welchman, Miss Phyllis Dare, and Miss Florence Smithson.

A new trick pantomimic sketch, written by Ward Bailey, and entitled A Bandit's Blunder, will be played by the members of Miss Dorothy Ewins's company at the West London on Monday. An unusual feature of this sketch is that the ladies also take the leaps. Amongst the troupe will be found Mesdames Dorothy and Agnes Ewins, and Messrs. James and Harry Ewins and George Robertson.

Miss Constance Collier has concluded a very successful engagement as Ann Marie in Samson in America, and sailed on Wednesday by the Adriatic, which is due to arrive at Plymouth on the 10th.

"The New Housemaid" is quite fulfilling its mission of creating laughter among provincial audiences. The business done in Dublin last week was phenomenal, and prosperity is also attending it this week at Barrow. Mr. E. Oswald Brooks is prominently identified with the production.

The Ian Maclaren Répertoire Company, which is travelling under the direction of Mr. E. Oswald Brooks, is one of the most completely equipped Shakespearean répertoire companies now touring. Immediate dates are being booked, and an autumn tour is being arranged for, preparatory to a London season in 1910.

We offer congratulations to Lady De Clifford on the birth of a daughter. Her ladyship will be remembered as Miss Eva Carrington, who before her marriage was a member of Mr. Seymour Hicks' company.

During the visit of Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company with The Dairymaids to the Grand Theatre, Oldham, last week, Thursday was set apart as a Territorial night. The Mayor (Alderman T. Bolton), the members of the Council, and the officers of the local battalion, the 10th, were present, and Captain Armstrong made a stirring appeal for recruits to the large audience assembled.

Mr. William Heath, upon his retirement last Saturday as manager of the Theatre Royal, Leigh, was the recipient of a handsome gift, which took the form of a purse of gold. Mr. W. H. Chippendale (his successor) made the presentation on behalf of the staff, Mr. Heath suitably responding.

At the Grand Theatre, Falkirk, on the 24th and 25th ult., Miss Rosalie Notrelle played the part of Ruth in Mr. Frederick Melville's latest success, Married to the Wrong Man, at three hours' notice. Miss Notrelle received congratulations on a clever performance of the dumb girl.

Owing to the indisposition of Miss Pamela Gaythorne, Miss Nell Carter played the part of Clotilde in Samson very successfully at the Garrick on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Mr. Hermann Vezin, to whom we offer our sincerest congratulations on the attainment of his eightieth birthday on Tuesday, has been alluded to by a morning contemporary as the "father of the English stage." That distinction, however, should surely belong to Mr. Frederick Wright, sen., who in his eighty-third year still retains his place in the company of Mr. Martin Harvey, with whom he has been so long associated.

The Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, which for a little over two years has been known as the Stoke Newington Palace, will on Monday next be reopened as a theatre. Next week it will be occupied by Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, who will present Peter's Mother, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh being engaged for the part of Lady Mary Crewys. Raffles, in which Mr. Leonard Boyne's company will appear, is underlined for the following week.

We are informed that the Theatre Royal, Whitehaven, has been purchased by Mr. Stanley Rogers, the lessee of the Theatre Royal, North Shields, the Grand Theatre, Lancaster, and the Opera House, Workington. Extensive alterations, costing upwards of £2,000, will, we understand, be carried out, and the theatre will be considerably enlarged and made thoroughly up to date.

Mr. F. M. Paget, who is residing in Windsor, has kindly consented to recite "The Fireman's Love" at the entertainment to be given by the local fire brigade at the Royal Albert Institute, Windsor, on Wednesday evening next. Vocal music will also be included in the programme.

The artists of The Babes in the Wood pantomime, which has had such a long run at the Elephant Theatre, and will terminate to-night, had supper at the White Hart Hotel, eighty people sitting down. The arrangements were in the hands of Messrs. H. Sherwood Martin and Will Cartwright.

"Paid in Full," the powerful American drama, which excited so much enthusiasm on its production last year at the Aldwych, will, by arrangement with Mr. Charles Frohman, be taken on tour at Easter by Miss O'Neill. This latest recruit to the ranks of the actress-manageress is a promising young player of which much may be expected, while the play, strong as it undeniably is, ought to prove highly acceptable to provincial audiences. A first-class company has been engaged, and some excellent dates secured. Mr. Wentworth Croke has charge of the entire arrangements.

The popular Hutchison management, always to the fore in the world of theatrical enterprise, have arranged with that charming actress Miss Mabel Love to appear at the Broadway Theatre, New Cross, next Monday for a special week in the title-rôle of Mr. Somerset Maugham's great play Lady Frederick. Miss Love will be supported by a strong cast, including Mr. Robert Minster, who has made such a decided hit in the part of Paradine Fouldes. Lady Frederick has attracted and fascinated big provincial audiences this spring, and Miss Emma and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company, with such a strong additional attraction as Miss Mabel Love, will be sure to be welcomed at the Broadway with much enthusiasm.

Mr. Seymour Hicks' Gay Gordons company will be at the Crystal Palace Theatre next week. The following week the Palace will have a distinguished visitor in Mr. Edward Terry, who will appear on Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday in Sweet Lavender; on Wednesday evening and Saturday matinée in Liberty Hall; on Thursday evening in The Magistrate; and at the Wednesday matinée and on Friday evening in The Passport—truly a most attractive array.

The King has thoroughly maintained his reputation as an ardent theatregoer this week. On Monday His Majesty visited Wyndham's and witnessed An Englishman's Home, and the following evening found him at His Majesty's for Mr. Tree's revival of The Dancing Girl. Accompanied by the Prince and Princess of Wales, King Edward on Thursday witnessed the performance of Henry of Navarre at the New Theatre.

A special matinée of Ibsen's The Master Builder will be given at the Court Theatre on March 16 by Miss Jessica Solomon, who has just returned from touring Merely Mary Ann. Miss Solomon will be supported by Miss Maud Borrow, Miss Beatrix Filmer, Mr. Rathmell Wilson, Mr. Campbell Cargill, Mr. Esme Filmer, and Mr. Ross Share.

A new comedy, entitled A Sense of Humour, by Cosmo Hamilton, will be produced by Mr. Reginald Dance at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, on the evening of Monday, March 22. A strong cast, including Miss Beryl Faber, has been engaged.

Mr. Ernest Imeson, who to-night reaches his 200th performance of Count Danillo in that successful "imaginary kingdom" play The Love of the Princess, claims the distinction of being the only person who has played in Sweet Nell of Old Drury (Haymarket version) both in the British Isles and in Australia and Tasmania. In Australia he appeared in the juvenile part of Sir Roger Fairfax, and with Miss Julia Neilson and Mr. Fred Terry as the light comedy heavy Lord Rochester. Whilst under that management, moreover, he spoke the first line in The Scarlet Pimpernel, and obtained the first laugh in that perennial play as Mr. Hempseed, an old countryman, and also having the pleasure of making His Majesty King Edward VII. laugh when he appeared before him.

Miss Florence Imeson, who concluded a successful nine weeks as principal girl at the Shakespeare, Liverpool, on Saturday, wishes, through our columns, to thank all those who presented her with floral and other tributes on that night, and also to thank the kind friends who presented to her the massive gold fountain pen for singing at the concert.

We announce with regret the death of Mr. Fred Thomas, a veteran actor, who passed away on Monday at 159, Trumpington-Road, Forest Gate, at the advanced age of seventy-five. The deceased gentleman was very popular in his time, having played many principal parts at the old Grecian, Pavilion, and Stratford Theatres in the early fifties. He leaves a sorrowing widow, who nursed him during an illness which lasted for upwards of ten years. The funeral was announced for yesterday (Friday) at Woodgrange Cemetery.

Statistics issued by the French Society of Authors show that in the last twelve months seven playwrights have earned over £4,000 each, eight over £2,000, twenty-seven between £1,000 and £2,000, and twenty-eight between £500 and £1,000, while of 430 others none has earned less than £200.

The Liverpool Shakespeare pantomime, Jack and the Beanstalk, terminated its run on Saturday night last amidst great enthusiasm, there being a tremendous audience present. Bouquets were plentiful, and all the principal artists came in for a rousing farewell, several being called upon for a speech. Before the audience burst out into "Auld Lang Syne," Mr. John Gaffney, the esteemed manager of the theatre, in reply to a strong demand, came forward and thanked the public for the support they had given the pantomime, and announced that the title of next year's production would be Dick Whittington. On the Friday evening Miss Ada Reeve, the "Jack," was presented with a handsome pantomime cake, she having received 2,317 votes more than any other lady artist in the city in the competition for popularity and ability.

Mr. Ernest Digges, a popular and prominent member of Mr. Allan Wilkie's company, reached his twenty-second birthday on Wednesday, and received from friends both before and behind the curtain hearty congratulations and good wishes for the future. He was also the recipient of several presentations.

The Bill amending the copyright law which protects musical compositions from infringement by automatic pianos and other mechanical means was passed in the House of Representatives at Washington on Wednesday. The measure, which has already been passed by the Senate, provides that the composer shall receive a royalty of one penny per disc or roll when the composition is used for reproduction. It also completely revises the previous copyright laws relating to books, music, and works of art, and gives a foreign author sixty days within which to make arrangements for publishing a work in the United States without endangering his copyright.

A company of English and American players has been organised by Frau Meta Illing, a prominent Berlin actress, for the purpose of giving performances of London and American successes in the principal towns of Germany. Frau Illing's scheme is supported by the British Ambassador at Berlin, the American Ambassador, and many prominent men, and committees have been formed in Wiesbaden, Frankfort, and other towns to help the company.

Among the plays to be produced will be Bernard Shaw's Candida, Sutro's The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt, Pinero's Iris, R. C. Carton's Mr. Hopkinson, Henry Arthur Jones's Hypocrites, The Truth, by Clyde Fitch, and plays by Zangwill, William Gillette, and Augustus Thomas. There will also be performances for schools of The School for Scandal, scenes from Pickwick, and one of Shakespeare's comedies. The tour will begin at Wiesbaden on May 1, and the international company will next proceed to Frankfort.

On Tuesday afternoon a flying visit was made to King's Lynn by the company presenting Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's famous play of Dolly Reforming Herself. Considerable interest was created by the arrival of the powerful motor-cars which have been specially constructed for the use of the company on their tour. The large audience appreciated the excellence of the play, and were gratified with this brief opportunity of enjoying the clever acting of the artists. Miss Aimee de Burgh as Mrs. Harry Telfer (Dolly) has considerable work to do, and notwithstanding a severe cold she gave a most praiseworthy interpretation of her part, and successfully centred the interest of the piece upon the gradual growth of her reformation. Mr. P. H. Clayton Greene was excellent as Harry Telfer (Dolly's husband), the dignified bearing of Mr. Reginald Besant as Matthew Barron was fitting the part. As Mrs. Sturgess (Renie) Miss Gertrude Bibby displayed great ability; Mr. Donald Calthorp as Captain Lucas Wentworth, Mr. Edward Sterling as Professor Sturgess, and Mr. Chas. F. Hawthorne as Rev. James Pilcher all tended to the success of the play.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Shakespeare and Bacon.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—"In the controversy of the Shakespeareans and Baconians the latter point out the actor William Shakespeare to have been a rough, uncultured man, who could hardly write. They base this argument on the fact that five signatures on documents are regarded as all that we possess of Shakespeare's handwriting, and that these signatures are at least partly of such a neglected form as to cause doubts in the culture and mental education of their writer. They forget, indeed, that at least one of these signatures was damaged by persons examining the testament and making tracings of the famous name. There exists a copy, though, of this signature, as of all the others, out of the first two scores of years after the discovery of the testament in 1747. This copy is clear and good and shows, as well as all the other signatures, a strongly individual and highly gifted personality of a passionate disposition. These signatures are small material, though, for a thorough study of character. It is therefore an important discovery that they are identical with the handwriting of the three large sheets of the testament, said to be written by a clerk, a saying not based on a single fact, but contradicted by more than one. This discovery by M. Thumm-Kintzel, with all the handwriting material, is given in the latest copy of the German monthly magazine Der Menschenkenner (Leipzig, Otto Wigand). The pedantic, unpoetical handwriting of Francis Bacon is here compared with the highly genial, poetical, and artistic strokes of the testament and the signatures of William Shakespeare. They are described as follows:—'The handwriting of the testament and the signatures reveals the character, the mind, and the gifts of a giant, and is worthy of being placed aside of the handwriting of a Beethoven, a Goethe. Bacon's handwriting, though, shows a busy and serious scientist, too serious and humourless for Shakespeare's works. But a poet? No. It shows a politician and a lawyer, but a poet's phantasy and imagination? Never!' These investigations are the first attempts at solving the Shakespeare-Bacon question by comparisons of handwriting."

"The Easiest Way."

OUR New York correspondent states that the theatrical syndicate there have refused to book a play called The Easiest Way and several others that have been characterised as immoral. As the syndicate controls the majority of the leading playhouses of the country, it certainly looks as if the American stage is to be purified. The Easiest Way was produced by Mr. David Belasco, who is the head of the "independent" theatre managers. They control comparatively few theatres, and, in order to make up a profitable tour, are compelled to depend on the syndicate theatres to some extent for their bookings. Another play to which objections have been made is The Blue Mouse, which Mr. Clyde Fitch adapted from the German. It has been playing to crowded houses at the Lyric Theatre, New York, and it is said that the syndicate has refused to book it. This play is produced by the Shuberts, who control a number of theatres in the South and West, and the exclusion of such a profitable attraction from the syndicate houses is likely to start a theatrical "war."

"I TAKE the position," writes the author of the play, "that the decent people of this town are in ignorance of just what that wrong is, and how to fix it. I have written a play to show them the terrific influence of a certain element of newly rich or irresponsible rich sons who find their pleasure in playing with weak and unfortunate women as others do with their dogs and horses. It is the truth, and what harm can there be in the truth? Those whom the truth hurts in this instance need not see the play, but can look into their own consciences and their own memories, and those whom the truth does not hurt cannot be injured by seeing the play, because it will show them a side of life that some time, some way, they may be able to alleviate. And if one woman's soul is saved from the human wolves of the 'Tenderloin,' then the play has done something.

"'THE EASIEST WAY' is true to life. It is the arraignment of an evil that is virulent as an ulcer, eating up the vitality and strength of the American nation. It is an evil that is growing with such tremendous strides that, unless properly controlled or stopped altogether, it will spell destruction to the home and to the honour of our people and our Republic. I had an idea that the best way to deal with this was to condemn it. The Easiest Way is devoted to its arraignment, not its glorification. I also believe that from the condemnation of wrong-doing right-doing will result."

The Actor's Magnetism.

"IRVING'S aim," says Mr. Robb Lawson, in a clever and thoughtful article in the Fortnightly, "was closely akin to that of Diderot and Talma, but to the requisites of these two he added another, the virtue of personal magnetism. Psychologically, the gift is difficult to explain in a popular way. Certainly, there was in Irving's stage presence a subtle indefinable stream of magnetic power which compelled your attention, although it may not have enlisted your entire sympathy. It suggested latent power and a certain mysterious reserve. It is doubtful whether personal magnetism can be accounted a legitimate virtue in acting. Of its effect upon an audience, there can be little room for doubt. The question is one which is bound up with that of personality in acting. The conflict in the actor's mind lies between the self and what is not self: it is the striving to express a given character by sloughing off his own consciousness. To impersonate effectively demands intellectual operations of a high order. It implies the ability to maintain a certain balance of the tendencies at work in the mind. When any single tendency, or group of tendencies, inclines to overrule the others, the balance is overthrown, and the dominating tendency has the sole opportunity for expression. Such is the law of personality. And if it so happen that the personality be a dominating one, it is very probable that the sympathies of the audience will be more easily enlisted by this kind of actor than by the entirely impersonal one."

It was so Funny.

A REMARKABLE incident occurred recently at the Queen's Theatre during the performance of The Belle of Brittany. A lady seated in the pit laughed so heartily that at the conclusion of Mr. George Graves' eccentric dance, she became exhausted and lapsed into unconsciousness. A doctor, who happened to be in the stalls, hurried to her assistance, and the lady was removed to a cloakroom, where after great difficulty she was revived, and later on recovered sufficiently to be taken home.

Almost too Natural.

IN the successful melodrama The Girl Who Wrecked His Home, which has been running at the Luisen Theatre, Berlin, an accident happened the other night which might easily have proved serious. A revolver used by the hero in the second act had been loaded with shot instead of being supplied with blank cartridge—a reprehensible piece of carelessness on somebody's part. The actor, Herr Stuenker, in his attempt at suicide, received, happily, only a slight wound, and was able—with a bandaged head—to finish his part. The audience noticed nothing wrong, and merely thought—when he fell to the ground with fright—how unusually well he was acting.

Messrs. Edgar Smith and Maurice Levi's piece does not claim to be more than a "farrago," and it fully justifies the description. It is, indeed, merely a background for the display of the talents of two remarkable performers with strongly contrasted styles. It is somewhat difficult to describe the piece itself. The action opens in the Alps. Here a couple of tourists, a rich mustard manufacturer named Gesler and a man from Liverpool called Henry Hawkins, are enjoying themselves, accompanied by Charley Hammersley, Hawkins's nephew, and Gesler's daughter Philopoena. She is a big, bold, half-educated American girl; and her parent and Hawkins are anxious that a match shall be made between her and Charley. The young people are strongly opposed to this arrangement, Charley being enamoured of a beautiful "Bohemian" of Paris, one Mimi de Chartreuse, while Philopoena has her eye on a youth called Sam Walker. They agree to cause a quarrel between Gesler and Hawkins, and to do so induce them to go to Paris. Before they depart, Gesler and Hawkins dress up as William Tell and his son, and are menaced by a number of Hammersley's friends disguised as Swiss brigands.

The scene of the second act is the Bois de Boulogne near the Cascade and Restaurant. Here there is some funny business with the garçon, caused by the tourists' ignorance of French; and Walker is induced to dress up as a waiter. Gesler and Hawkins discuss absurdly a will which the latter has made in favour of Miss Gesler. In this act there are some agreeable interludes, which are none the less acceptable to the audience for not having any visible connection with the play. A party of students from the Quartier Latin, disguised as North American Indians, enter and sing a song with a chorus; and Mimi gives very sweetly and pleasantly the Jewel Song from Faust. After much rather foolish fun, a satisfactory conclusion is arrived at, and the curtain descends amidst applause.

The success of Philopoena is a personal one, and is achieved by Miss Marie Dressler, an American artist with a striking personality and a real humorous talent. She throws herself into her work with great energy and earnestness, and she possesses the vis comica in a remarkable degree. She has several capital songs. In one of these, she embodies a "respectable working girl," who is greatly shocked at anything improper; in another she gives an amusing description of various types of musical play artists, which should appeal especially to professionals in the audience. Its satire is keen and its comicality undeniable. In one instance, at the end of each verse of a song, she does a sketch or burlesque of a well-known dance. These saltatory skits are very funny, and bring down the house. The vigour of Miss Dressler's appeal is irresistible, and she has personal advantages for comedy which cannot be ignored. She won the hearts of the audience entirely at the Aldwych on Saturday. Mme. Morichini's style of beauty is typically French, and she has a sweet speaking voice and a very bewitching style. The faculty of charm is certainly possessed by Mme. Morichini; she sings the Jewel Song in a way that proves excellent training. Mr. Frank Bernard and Mr. Stanley Cooke work together ably and amicably as the comic tourists; and Mr. Sydney Barraclough sings well and acts with ease and animation as Charley Hammersley, Mr. Ralph Nairn making the most of the not very thankful rôle of Sam Walker. Mr. Edward Kipling is alert and vivacious as Antoine; and Mr. John Bennett speaks his few lines well as Biffkins, a tourist from Tooting. The remainder of the rôles are subordinate, with the exception of that of Hans, a tame bear, ably represented by Mr. Richard Lomas, who quite gets into the skin of the part. The scenery by Messrs. Philip Howden and Alexandre Bailly is effective, Mr. Howden's Alpine view being picturesque, and Mr. Bailly's idealisation of the Bois de Boulogne Restaurant being very dainty and delightful. The chorus is well drilled and very earnest and efficient.

Philopoena was followed by a piece in one act, book and lyrics by Edgar Smith, music by Maurice Levi, entitled

"THE COLLEGETTES."

Prof. Witheredloon ..... MR. SYDNEY BARRACLOUGH
Jim Witheredloon ..... MR. RALPH NAIRN
"Ratty" McGown ..... MR. STANLEY COOKE

Mrs. Trimley Dazzle ..... MISS LUCY KIPLING
"Stubby" ..... MISS LESEMOIR-GORDON
Polly ..... MISS GIPSY DALE
Jennie ..... MISS D. DOLARO
Tilly Buttin ..... MISS MARIE DRESSLER

With the exception of Miss Dressler all the artists who appeared in this ridiculous "skit" have our sympathy. It is a burlesque of The College Widow, the odd American football play which was presented to a London audience at the Adelphi last April. Mr. Sydney Barraclough and Mr. Ralph Nairn battled bravely with the difficulties of their tasks as Professor Witheredloon and Jim Witheredloon, and Mr. Stanley Cooke as the "Coach" made the most of the opportunity afforded him by a bit of mock elocution. The remainder of the cast was submerged by the silliness of the play, which was only saved from failure by the energetic and broadly-comic exertions of Miss Marie Dressler as Tilly Buttin, an "emergency half-back," a part which she sustained with energy, earnestness, and stolid comicality.

AN A.U. CRICKET CLUB.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—It having been decided that an Actors' Union Cricket Club be formed, we, the undersigned, would be glad to hear from all cricketing Thespians. The subject will be fully discussed at the Actors' Union weekly meeting at Hummum's Hotel, Covent Garden, March 9, at 2.30 p.m., and members enrolled.—Yours faithfully,

LANGFORD REED and WALTER L. RIGNOLD,
Hon. Secs.

"THE HEAD OF THE FIRM."

Play, in Four Acts, Adapted by Leslie Faber from the Danish of Hjalmar Bergstrom, Produced at the Vaudeville Theatre on Thursday, March 4.

John Lydford ..... MR. JAMES HEARN
Philip Lydford ..... MR. HARCOURT WILLIAMS
James Browne ..... MR. J. D. BEVERIDGE
George Heymann ..... MR. LESLIE FABER
Edward Dalby ..... MR. EVELYN BEERBOHM
Torley ..... MR. ERNEST COSHAM
Helen Lydford ..... MISS HENRIETTA WATSON
Betty Lydford ..... MISS ETHELWYN JONES
Mrs. Dalby ..... MISS SYDNEY FAIRBROTHER

Mr. Leslie Faber's translation of Hjalmar Bergstrom's drama was not received at the Vaudeville Theatre on Saturday in quite the same spirit that its author probably intended; but, nevertheless, it held their attention firmly, created strong interest, and evoked hearty laughter. It is a drama of sociology and business, and the scene is laid in the house of John Lydford, the owner of the Lydford Ironworks. In order to indulge his taste for pictures he has allowed the reins of government at the works to be taken out of his hands by his manager, George Heymann, a young Jew of great cunning and ability. The great rivals of the Lydford works are a certain American Iron Trust, who threaten the Lydford establishment with extinction by underselling. Philip Lydford's son is an idle theorist, who has been spending his time abroad, and has become a strong Socialist. Mrs. Lydford fears and suspects Heymann, and when she learns that, by his advice, the business is to be turned into a limited liability company, she offers Lydford the alternative of dismissing Heymann or being separated entirely from her and from his son. Mrs. Lydford's father, an elderly schoolmaster, advises Lydford to consent to his wife's departure, but to send her daughter, Betty, who is secretly in love with Heymann, away with her. Betty at first refuses to go, but consents when Heymann asks her to do so. He then declares his love, and they become engaged. But when it comes to the point, the ironmaster consents to postpone the conversion of the business into a company, and has a violent quarrel with Heymann, who reveals the fact that the firm is in a dangerous position, with a strike imminent and the Trust menacing its prosperity. However, he resigns his position, and goes out.

The last act is taken up with showing that Heymann, l'homme nécessaire, must be reinstated. The son goes out to address the rioters, and is received with howls and insults. He returns, convinced that he is helpless, and the curtain falls on Lydford, with his wife's full consent, sending for Heymann to resume his post.

The piece was admirably acted, the most strikingly clever performance being that of Mr. Evelyn Beerbohm as Edward Dalby, an entirely original character, a young man overcome with conceit, who has started forging banknotes with the idea of making money of no value and thus doing away with capitalism. There was something so quaint and distinctive about Mr. Beerbohm's style of dressing and acting the part that the audience took him into favour at once, and laughed at every line he had to speak. Mr. Leslie Faber gave a very fine performance as George Heymann, his delivery of Heymann's defence when attacked by Lydford for "ingratitude" benig full of dramatic power and expression. Mr. Harcourt Williams gave a picturesque performance as Philip Lydford, and put an immense amount of fervour into Philip's Socialistic speeches. Mr. James Hearn was very happily selected to represent John Lydford, the weak, vain, nervous nature of the man being suggested with admirable art; and Miss Sydney Fairbrother made a brief but striking impression in the comic part of a "carneying" old work-woman. Mr. Ernest Cosham was efficient as a servant; and Miss Ethelwyn Jones played the lively and self-willed daughter very prettily; Miss Henriette Watson giving a most artistic representation of Mrs. Lydford's nervous and excitable nature. The Head of the Firm was preceded by the one-act piece by Keble Howard called The Dramatist at Home, in which Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Faber appeared to great advantage.

"TERENCE."

Comedy in Four Acts, Adapted by Mrs. B. M. Croker from her Novel of the same name, Produced at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, on Monday, March 1.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mrs. B. M. Croker is the authoress of several successful Irish stories besides that on which she founded the play which Mr. Murray Carson and company produced at the Gaiety, Dublin, on Monday.

The first act opens at the Fly and Fish Hotel at Ballybay, a popular angling resort. Lady Nita Fanshawe, during the fishing excursions of her husband with a lively young widow, Mrs. Duckett, has been flirting with Captain Bertrand Lovell. Her half-sister, Maureen D'Arcy, a wealthy young Australian lady, prevents Lady Fanshawe from eloping with the Captain. Terence, a coachman, is the last of the ancient family of the Desmonds, who has sold out from the army. He and Maureen, after a perilous ride across the mountains, overtake the fugitive lovers. They abandon their intention, but Lady Fanshawe has left a letter at the hotel addressed to her husband which would compromise her completely. Sir Greville and Mrs. Duckett are expected back shortly; and the situation is urgent. By the help of Terence the letter is secured in time, and Maureen falls in love with him, Lady Fanshawe returning to her wifely allegiance repentant. Mr. Murray Carson's company gave a fine performance of the piece. Mr. Carson as Terence acted with his usual alertness and vivacity; Mr. J. R. Le Fane as Patrick Ryan was very characteristic; and Miss Lillian Hallows as Maureen D'Arcy acted with remarkable expression and charm. Miss Eugenie Vernie played the landlady of the Railway Hotel neatly, and Mr. Ernest A. Douglas as an inquisitive guest at the hotel was very quaint and humorous. Mr. Edgar Kent, Mr. Philip Leslie, Miss Hilda Dick, and Miss Gwladys Morris also did excellent work. The play was staged and dressed liberally, and had a cordial reception.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—with reference to your notice in The Era of to-day, of the production of the new comedy, Bluffing One's Way, it is not correct to say that I have utilised more of my own ideas in it than those of Eugène Scribe, from whose comedy, Le Puff, it is adapted, though it would be quite correct to say that I have utilised many of them. By far the greater part of the ideas are those of Eugène Scribe, but the dramatist who made the adaptation for me had necessarily to omit a certain number of them, seeing that Eugène Scribe's comedy is in five long acts, and the adaptation had to be made in three fairly short ones.—Yours faithfully,

Mr. Henry Hamilton's adaptation of Dumas' novel was produced at the Globe Theatre on Oct. 22, 1898, with Mr. John Beauchamp as Cardinal Richelieu, Mr. Bassett Roe as Athos, Mr. Charles Goodhart as Porthos, Mr. Gerald Gurney as Aramis, Miss Kate Rorke as Anne of Austria, Miss Florence West as Miladi, Mis Eva Moore as Gabrielle de Chalus, and Mr. Lewis Waller as d'Artagnan. Mr. Waller revived the popular drama at the Lyric Theatre on Wednesday with marked success. His d'Artagnan is, indeed, one of the best rôles in his repertory, and he plays it with a spirit, verve, and entrain, and a dry, natural humour that are thoroughly effective. Fortunately that excellent actor Mr. Bassett Roe was again available for the part of Athos. Mr. Roe endows the personage with a chivalrous grace and serious dignity which make his performance noble and artistic. Mr. Herbert Jarman is a magnificent Porthos, and his splendid appearance, combined with a majestic largeness of style, fill the eye and satisfy the mind completely. Mr. Shiel Barry gives a dainty and delicate performance as Aramis; and Mr. Cronin Wilson is altogether excellent as M. de Treville, acting with warm feeling and bright, manly energy. Miss Evelyn D'Alroy gives a queenly and charming representation of Anne of Austria, and Miss Auriol Lee as Miladi cleverly combines coquetry with cunning and wickedness, Miss Madge Titheradge being a delightfully bright and natural Gabrielle de Chalus. Mr. Vincent Clive is a gallant Duke of Buckingham; Mr. A. E. George's Richelieu is a clever bit of historical characterisation; and Mr. Gayer Mackay contributes a well-considered and effective reading of the rôle of Louis XIII. Mr. Alec F. Thompson and Mr. Herbert Vyvyan do capital comedy work as Planchet and Mousqueton, and the subordinate rôles all have good exponents. The scenery is picturesque and suitable, and Mr. Waller's production of the play, in which he has had the valuable assistance of Mr. Herbert Jarman, is without shortcomings or defects, Mr. Charles La Trobe's stage-management having much to do with this result. The overture and incidental music, cleverly composed by Mr. Frederick Rosse, are admirably performed by Mr. Leonard Chalk's excellent orchestra. The revival has had a hearty reception.

"THE SPARE ROOM."

Play, in One Act, by E. M. Bryant, Produced at the Criterion on Saturday, Feb. 27.

Keziah Crauford ..... MISS ALICE BEET
Jane Crauford ..... MISS AMY LAMBORN
Dulcie Crauford ..... MISS GWENDOLEN WREN
Mary ..... MISS MAY TAVERNER
Henry Crauford ..... MR. LYTTON GREY

One of Tennyson's most touching poems is concerned with the triumph of infantile charm over the heart of a relentless parent, and a similar theme is treated effectively in the new one-act play which now precedes The Real Woman at the Criterion. The sentiment of the story is skilfully preserved by the writer, who has managed to weave into it a humorous interest, and so provide a piece that might well warrant an early arrival at the theatre. The authoress, of whose little play, The Peacemaker, we have agreeable memories, has been at some pains to limn the character of Keziah Crauford, the maiden lady who rules with a rod of iron the little country cottage of which she, her sister Jane, and her brother Henry form the sum total. If Keziah has a weak spot it is that of her affection for her nephew Hector, whom she had brought up from childhood. What is her horror, therefore, to receive a letter in which it is stated that during his sojourn in America Hector has married, having concealed the fateful fact from her for two years. Moreover his young wife is coming to England to take up her abode with his aunt until such time as he shall have recruited his fallen fortunes. Jane, who is for welcoming the visitor, ventures to suggest that she shall be accommodated in the spare room, but Keziah warmly dissents from the proposal, and when the young wife arrives gives her a frigid reception, eventually assuring Hector's wife that she will never forgive her nephew. The young lady indignantly announces her intention of going to London, when Keziah becomes alarmed at her determination, and Henry, who has been banished from the room for fear that the designing young person may influence him, is recalled to prevent her departure. Keziah's defeat, thus begun, is emphasised by the appearance of baby, and is made complete when she learns that Hector's child has been named after herself, the aunt being left caressing the child as the curtain falls.

A cordial reception was given to the little piece, which was acted with sympathetic care and finish. Miss Alice Beet gave a clever character sketch of the prim and precise Keziah, retaining her adamantine firmness to the end, when the innate tenderness of the maiden aunt was pleasingly expressed. The young wife was presented with girlish freshness by Miss Gwendoline Wren, whose graceful appearance and refined style were invaluable in the rôle, and the concern of the good-hearted Jane was quite affectingly portrayed by Miss Amy Lamborn. Mr. Lytton Grey drew an amusing picture of a benevolent elderly gentleman as brother Henry, and a comic creation was supplied by Miss May Taverner's "slavey," who is reputed to be either breaking crockery or gossiping with the neighbours.

The Real Woman is being thoroughly enjoyed by large audiences, to whom Miss Evelyn Millard's portrayal of the society butterfly, first fascinating, then generously impulsive, and finally convincingly sincere, becomes very engrossing. Miss Annie Hughes makes one of the most conspicuous successes of a notable career as the delightfully original Duchess of Dorchester, and Mr. Henry Ainley, Miss Kate Cutler, Mr. Allan Aynesworth, and Mr. Herbert Waring contribute valuably to a production which well deserves to figure among the successes of the season.

THE Theatre Royal, Cardiff, has been closed for alterations.

"THE FOLLIES."

The bill which was offered to the audience on Monday at the Apollo was composed of a variety performance including ten items; that clever, amusing, but rather unfair "skit" Everybody's Benefit, and two of "Pélissier's Potted Plays." The taste for travesty was strong in the days of the old burlesques, and the public still finds pleasure in the caricature of well-known pieces. A tribute is paid to the success of What Every Woman Knows by its being travestied by the Follies. The stage represents a combination of the first three scenes of Mr. Barrie's play. The best burlesque is undoubtedly that of Maggie Wylie, which has just the necessary amount of resemblance to Miss Hilda Trevelyan. Mr. Pélissier is physically unable to "embody" Mr. Gerald du Maurier as John Shand, and falls back on pure drollery, appearing attired in a railway porter's jacket, a kilt, and a top hat, the last-named being intended to show that he is trying to be a gentleman. Much fun is got out of the accents of the personages, the double of the Comtesse de la Brière giving up Scotch in despair, and resorting to the more easily imitated Welsh. There is also a suffragette, who dashes in at intervals demanding "votes for women." The skit does not satirise any weakness in What Every Woman Knows; it simply uses the original as a suggestion for a "screaming" absurdity. The conventional effects of comic opera lend themselves even better to burlesque; the "potted" version of The King of Cadonia is a light-hearted and comical skit on that successful entertainment and its leading exponents. The loudest laughter was heard when one of the Follies, raised on a platform on wheels, was pushed on to caricature Miss Isabel Jay's charming mannerisms. Mr. Pélissier does not require to burlesque any particular person; he is a "droll positive"; and his entry in the royal robes made so familiar by a celebrated "poster," and wearing enormous boots, evokes roars of laughter. There are some hits at the alleged inanity of the choruses and the choristers, and a great deal of harmless fun, such as the use of penny trumpets to supply the absent "brass." The "hit of the evening" was made in a very ingenious manner. Mr. Pélissier, coming forward, apologised for the non-production of the proposed "pot" of An Englishman's Home. Then cries of "Let's do it!" were heard behind the curtains, accompanied by the sounds of firing and the explosion of shells. Mr. Pélissier frantically endeavoured to stop the performance, but his efforts were in vain. The cannonading continued; and when the curtains were at last drawn the scene represented "Britannia's Villa," after being bombarded by the army of the "Empress of the North," knocked almost to pieces, with a "To let" board standing in the garden. This "surprise" had an immense success. The miscellaneous entertainment which preceded it is very bright, amusing and agreeable. Mr. Louis Laval and Miss Maud Evans play on the double grand; "The Follies" sing a tuneful chorus, and support Miss Muriel George in her rendering of "My Moon"; Mr. Lewis Sydney tells some funny stories; Miss Gwennie Mars and Mr. Douglas Maclaren join in "I Worship the Ground"; Miss Effie Cook and Miss Muriel George have a quaint operatic duet; Miss Ethel Allandale sings "Teddy Bear," the rest of the company fondling each a specimen of those furry toys; "There's a sun still shining in the sky" is given by Mr. Pélissier with all the old effect, and an allusion to the censor's recent prohibition; Miss Effie Cook warbles "Never More"; and the Beverage Quartettes, "Port," Harrogate Wells," "Cyder," "Rum," and "Blubber," are as comically-childish and quaintly clever as before. In the interval Mr. Alfred H. West plays his original "Famous Patrol." The humours of Everybody's Benefit again appeal strongly to non-professional audiences, though anyone who has been present at such benefits as that to Miss Nelly Farren, for instance, realises the unfairness and unfounded satire of the "show."

TRIAL PRODUCTIONS COMPANY.

A new enterprise intended for the exploitation of novelties was begun at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Tuesday afternoon, when a performance chiefly embracing the lighter form of variety was given, under the direction of Mr. Lewis Willoughby. The entertainment was designed to put forward fresh acts rather than new talent, for some of the artists taking part bore names well known on the stage. Widespread invitations had been issued, but the audience was late in arriving, and the proceedings began under the depressing circumstances of an array of empty benches, though a number of agents and people connected with the profession put in an appearance in the course of the afternoon.

The most promising item proved to be that of The Elites, a burlesque of a pierrot entertainment, enacted by Mr. Grahame Herington's company, which includes Miss Dorothy Payn, an earlier member of the popular Follies. The little piece, which is written and arranged by Lawrence Hanray, is a laughable travesty of the customary beach entertainment, and includes a funny chorus by the troupe and a couple of comic contributions, one of which deals with "The bunkey and the bushroom," sung by a lady with an evident cold, the other being a song with the refrain "Clutch me round the neck," delivered by a big-voiced comedian. The lackadaisical tenor, who objects to go round with the collecting-box and does all his work under protest, is also a quaint personage, though it is somewhat difficult to determine whether the chorus to his song is intended to be burlesque or a real attempt at harmony. The skit contains a good deal of amusing business, and might well be elaborated into a smart show.

Another sketch was that presented by Mr. Douglas Finck, entitled The Artist's Muddle, in which Miss Adele Levey, of the famous Sisters Levey, played the part of Tottie Biggs, who impersonates a lay figure, and by pretending to be a ghost frightens the father of the artist into consenting to her marriage with his son. The dialogue is not particularly brilliant, but the sketch was briskly enacted by Miss Levey and some experienced artists, whose names were not given.

The programme was opened by Miss Esme Hubbard and Miss Evelyn Erskine, who appeared as Pierrot and Pierrette, and joined in a melodious duet. Later they sang a humorous effusion, in which a sausage and a sausage-roll figured, and a feature of their performance was the mimicry by Pierrot of several leading actors and actresses reciting the Balcony scene from Romeo and Juliet, the impersonation of Mr. Martin Harvey bearing perhaps the nearest approach to the original. Violin solos were given by Mr. Albert Cazabon, who displayed a complete command of the instrument in several showy selections, in which some difficult bowing and pizzicato effects were obtained. Miss Clara Alexander, weirdly made up as a plantation Negro of the Uncle Tom description, sang a nigger ditty, and recited a stirring tale in the style of "Kissing Cup's Race," for which she obtained a hearty recall. "Dances of the East" were contributed by Miss May Hoey, who indulged in those classical evolutions which have been described as "the spontaneous expression of the spiritual state." The accompaniments throughout were rendered by a competent little band consisting of piano, violin, and 'cello. Subsequent performances are announced to take place every Tuesday, and should afford opportunity for embryo talent to put forth its best efforts under favourable circumstances.

A COPY of "THE ERA" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

THE REVIVAL COMPANY.

None of the four one-act plays presented before a small audience at the Rehearsal Theatre under the auspices of the Revival Company on Sunday evening, the 28th inst., was distinguished by great merit. The opening piece was

"LOVE AND BE SILENT."

An Original Play, in One Act, by Mrs. Chas. Sim.

Major Gerald Thornton ..Mr. Henry le Grand
Dr. Pownall .....Mr. William Pringle
Dick Shelton .....Mr. Charles King
Phyllis Thornton .....Miss Adah Barton
Violet Mostyn .....Miss Florence Tressilian
Carson .....Miss Frances Wolviston

Mrs. Thornton, whose health is in a very precarious state, and whose days, according to her medical adviser, are numbered, has written a letter to her husband, Major Gerald Thornton, which is to apprise him of her condition. The letter is given to her sister, Violet Mostyn, to post, but that young lady comes back with the letter and the news that the Major has been ordered to the front. It is then that, apparently realising the opportunity that is offered to her husband, and wishing that he shall leave with a mind not distressed on her account, Mrs. Thornton decides to hold back the letter and to refrain from informing him that they will never meet again in this world. The Major returns to say farewell, and Mrs. Thornton leads him to believe that she is vastly improved in health, and that he need have no anxiety on her account. And so, much against the doctor's wish, husband and wife part, the latter preferring to "love and be silent" rather than speak the truth.

Miss Adah Barton adequately represented the pathos of the character of Mrs. Thornton, and Mr. Henry le Grand was affectionate and manly as her husband, while Miss Florence Tressilian acted in vivacious fashion as Violet Mostyn.

The second piece was

"FIFI."

A One-Act Play, Adapted from the German, by Ella Erskine.

Fifi .....Miss Ella Erskine
Raymond, Baron de Courcelles .....Mr. C. Leveson-Lane
Pierrot .....Mr. Langford Reed
A Waiter .....Mr. William Pringle

To a private room in a restaurant in Paris Fifi, a masked dancer and a demi-mondaine, is taken by Raymond, Baron de Courcelles, who, during supper, intimates to the girl that he would like her to accompany him on a long voyage. He would, first of all, like to know the story of her life. And so Fifi's sad story is related. She is an illegitimate child, and her mother, who is dead, was deserted by her father, and left to do the best she could for herself. Fifi in course of time became a shop girl, but getting tired of the monotonous drudgery of that calling, she adopts a somewhat different rôle in life. Her one desire now is to meet the father who has brought such misery and shame upon her. A few questions as to her real name and that of her mother—the names, curiously enough, are suggested by the Baron—are a sufficient indication to her that the man who is entertaining her is her own father. And then, instead of accepting his offer to make ample requital for the past, and look after her as he would look after a daughter, she bursts into a strange access of feminine ferocity and declares that she will revenge herself upon him by following him wherever he goes and proclaiming to the world in general and to his friends in particular that she is his daughter; after which she rushes out to join her fast companions.

Miss Ella Erskine displayed considerable dramatic power as Fifi, and her enactment of the rôle was commendable. Mr. C. Leveson-Lane submitted an able study of the Baron de Courcelles.

This piece was followed by

"THE FRIENDS."

A One-Act Play, Adapted from the German, by Ella Erskine.

Mme. de Chaumont ....Miss Victoria Addison
Mme. de Livardeau .....Miss Maud Kirwan
Louise .....Miss Dorothy Heal

Mme. de Chaumont and Mme. de Livardeau discuss in the former's boudoir their husbands and their admirers, and the views expressed by Mme. de Chaumont scarcely do credit to that lady—or, rather, they would scarcely do credit to any married woman. On parting the two ladies kiss each other most affectionately, and then Mme. de Chaumont makes use of her friend's confidence by getting her servant to write an anonymous letter to M. de Livardeau informing him of his wife's clandestine relations with another man. The little piece was extremely well acted by Miss Victoria Addison and Miss Maud Kirwan, in the respective rôles of Mme. de Chaumont and Mme. de Livardeau.

The concluding item on the programme was

"FORTUNE'S FOOL."

A Short Play, by Rathmell Wilson.

Mignon .....Miss Gertrude Robins
Cardo .....Mr. Esme Percy
Velma .....Miss Winifred Rae
Jabot .....Mr. Campbell F. Cargill

It is not possible to bestow commendation upon this playlet. The author seems to possess some notion of poetic expression, but his phrases are as old as the hills, and the sentiments in which his characters indulge come as familiarly to one's mind as the words of "Home, sweet home." In a moonlit garden on a summer's eve Cardo and Mignon proclaim to each other their love. They are overwhelmed with joy in the blissful state which precedes an arranged marriage. But when Cardo is left alone in the garden there comes to him a former lover, Velma, who knows all about Cardo's new affections—for he has told her that he had loved her for her body and not for her soul—and begs of him one last favour—namely, that they may on this farewell night share "Love's Banquet" together. Cardo surrenders himself—unwillingly, we are led to believe—and unfortunately the proceedings are witnessed by Mignon and the ancient Jabot. Of course, this unfaithfulness on the part of Cardo causes Mignon such sorrow of heart that that organ within a few minutes ceases to beat, and Cardo, who is subsequently informed of the tragedy, piously promises that it would be an act of cowardice on his part to commit suicide, but he will bemoan his unhappy fortune for the rest of his days. The different parts were well spoken by the members of the little cast.

At the Theatre Royal, Barnsley, this week, Mr. J. A. Campbell's company, which is presenting The Old Folks at Home, is again proving popular. Mr. H. E. Herbert and Miss Mary Fulton enact the principal parts, and they are surrounded by a capable company.

The students of the University of Birmingham paid their annual visit to the pantomime at the Theatre Royal on the 26th ult. There was a plentiful supply of fun, but a total absence of anything approaching horseplay, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent by all in the theatre. As is customary, a large number of the students attended in fancy dress, and the majority of the costumes were both topical and original. The judging took place in the "Palace Gardens" scene in the second act, Miss Sybil Arundale (Dick Whittington) adjudicating. Both Miss Arundale and Mr. Tom Foy (Idle Jack) contrived to introduce good-humoured allusions to University life into their songs, and in assuming the garb of an undergraduate Mr. Foy made a decided hit. During an interval Mr. Philip Rodway, the popular acting manager of the theatre, in response to many requests for a speech, extended a very hearty welcome to the students, and expressed the hope that their visit would be repeated annually.

"THE STORY OF VIRGINIA PERFECT."

By Peggy Webling. Methuen and Co.

Miss Webling's novel is appropriately entitled. It is the "story" of a young watchmaker's wife, very beautiful, simple, and affectionate, who attracts the attention of an artist of genius, and is married to him after her rather uncongenial husband has been killed in a "trap" accident. There is an under-plot, in which a certain Constance Malet, a pretty, shallow girl who goes on the music hall stage, infatuates another painter, George Hunt, who eventually hangs himself in despair. The book, however, does not depend for its success upon its plot, but upon the faithfully-described characters which it contains. The life chosen for depiction has evidently been studied at first hand; and the result has all the conviction-carrying power which truth to Nature creates. The "variety" business in the story of Virginia Perfect is rather darkly shaded; but the following picture of an elderly teacher of dancing is decidedly clever and amusing:—

"Mrs. Cortelyon was a tall, very dignified lady, whose appearance made Virginia think of the picture of a witch in an old, paper-bound copy of 'Grimm's Fairy Tales' she had had as a child, a witch with dyed hair, a nut-cracker nose and chin, and very bright, fine eyes. Her dress was amazing, and she held her skirts high, displaying a pair of thin, high-heeled shoes with buckles and brown silk stockings, frays in the silk—'ladders' as she called them—being neatly darned with black thread. Virginia tried stealthily to count her petticoats, starting at the frills of a threadbare black moiré, covered with lace, but giving it up at the third short red flannel. Her black velvet bodice, trimmed with jet, was open at the throat, showing some mysterious striped undergarment, and was half concealed by a grey woollen jacket, the whole being kept together by a big cameo brooch at the top, and a wide belt, from which a few spangles still hung, at the waist. She wore several rings on fingers cramped with rheumatism, and a couple of bracelets over black knitted cuffs.

"But Mrs. Cortelyon, in spite of torn finery and haggard face, retained something of the grace and elegance of more prosperous days. She was severely respectable, strictly honest, and made a point of attending church every Sunday, accompanied by her little girl, both of them tidily dressed, and perfectly happy in each other's society.

"Constance had changed her ordinary skirt for a shorter one of cheap muslin, gathered in big folds round the waist, and tied a pair of heelless canvas shoes—ballet girls' practising shoes—round her ankles with black tape. Having no piano, Mrs. Cortelyon hummed a tune, sitting on a rather high chair and indicating the steps with her daintily-shod feet, her confusion of underskirts nearly to the knees.

"Virginia could have shrieked with laughter—she had not felt such an inclination to laugh for months—but she managed to preserve a gravity of demeanour suitable to the occasion.

"Connie's earnestness and evident delight in Mrs. Cortelyon's patronage surprised her, but Connie was always surprising her. A shallow nature is sometimes as difficult to understand as a deep one.

"'One, two, three, change! One, two, three—steady! One, two, three—parbaray! One, two three, change!'

"Beating time with her heel, Mrs. Cortelyon hummed her directions to the tune, and Connie danced with laborious effort, counting under her breath, with her eyes fixed on her teacher's face.

"Mrs. Cortelyon had been well trained by an Italian ballet master in her girlhood, but she had forgotten many of the steps, and anglicised their French names out of all recognition. 'Parbaray' was her favourite word, being doubtless intended for pas de Bourée, and whenever she was uncertain how to end a movement or make up time she fell back on 'parbaray.' More than half of Connie's pas de seul seemed to Virginia to consist of parbaray.

"'Keep it up, dear!' cried Mrs. Cortelyon, 'one, two, three—battlements! (battement). One, two, three—rondaljam! (rond de jambe). One, two, three—parbaray!'"

The book is full of these bright and piquant little sketches; and the tender humanity of its tone, its constant variety, and its delicate sentiment should recommend it to many readers.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL LAW.

BY A. A. STRONG, LL.B. (LOND.), SOLICITOR.

Your book will, I am sure, be a valuable aid to all managers and actors.—Sir Henry Irving.

Mr. Strong states the whole case very clearly.—Illustrated London News.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun

Furnishes useful information.—Daily News.

The work succeeds in making plain the thorny legal path that every manager and artist must tread, and by a timely consultation of its pages they may avoid much misapprehension and trouble.—Star.

Mr. Emanuel Warner (Manny), partner in Somers and Warner's Agency, is receiving many congratulations on the birth of a daughter.

At the Boscombe Hippodrome Fred Karno's Mumming Birds is the chief attraction this week, and is greatly appreciated. The Frière Troupe give an extremely smart acrobatic performance and receive loud applause; Medley Barrett, the popular comedian, also comes in for a good round of applause; Will Driscoll, swell comedian and dancer, is very popular here; Florry Cooper, vocal comedienne, is much appreciated; Jimmy Frizzell, the Dorset Yokel, Bros. Roland, Herculean equilibrists, and Little Leighton, comedienne, also deserve mention. The Hippo pictures conclude.

The funeral of Mrs. Young, whose death occurred on the 26th ult., of the Chequers Hotel, Walthamstow, which was used as the "professional house" of the Palace, Walthamstow, took place on Wednesday last at St. Patrick's Cemetery, Leyton. Many members of the variety stage were among those who followed. The deceased lady was well known for her philanthropic work in the district, and will be sadly missed. Amongst those who sent floral tributes—numbering nearly a hundred—were Miss Marie Lloyd, Miss Kate Carney, Mrs. Ellis Fredericks (Stratford Theatres), Two Bostons, Mr. Frederic Baugh (General Manager, Macnaghten Circuit), Mr. and Mrs. Harvey (Palace, Bow), Staff, Palace, Walthamstow, and many other professional friends. Mrs. Kate Sly and Gertie Youlande, daughters of Mrs. Young, wish to thank, through our columns, numerous friends for their sympathy.

RECOLLECTIONS OF WAGNER.

Musical London was torn with dissension in the seventies concerning Wagnerian musik-drama; ink in gallons was shed in condemnation of what was regarded as the extraordinary theories of the Bayreuth master, who for the first time in the history of music claimed to have given the orchestra its rightful place in lyrical compositions; and the cabal against the greatest musical genius of the nineteenth century derived as much of its power from artists grounded in the school of Bellini and Donizetti as from critics. We are again familiarised with the strenuous fight the Leipzig maestro had for recognition of his work in the volume of Angelo Neumann's "Personal Recollections of Wagner," translated from the fourth German Edition by Edith Livermore, and published by Archibald Constable and Co., London, at the price of half a guinea net. Neumann was fired with an early enthusiasm for the genius of Richard Wagner by Therese Stilke-Seesi, of Vienna, who gave him his first introduction to the composer by teaching him the part of Wolfram in Tannhäuser. This was in the early forties; but though the young singer became an ardent disciple he found it utterly impossible one night to sit through an entire performance of The Flying Dutchman, then being given at the Royal Opera, Vienna. Of the company at this famous house Neumann himself became a member in 1862. This very year Wagner—who had come from Paris disheartened at the reception there of Tannhäuser, which he withdrew after the third performance—began his career in Vienna, and his three years in that city must be counted as among the most distressful of his entire career. His hopes and prospects lay in a successful performance of Tristan, and all his efforts to bring about such a performance failed. After fifty-seven rehearsals the work was definitely shelved, owing to the incompetence, physical, or otherwise, of the tenor Ander.

We learn that Angelo Neumann played the Herald in Lohengrin in the old Kärnthnerthor Theater, Vienna, and in the spring of 1864 went to Stuttgart to play a short engagement. "When I returned to my hotel after our first rehearsal of Don Giovanni I was greatly annoyed by a man in the next room pacing up and down in squeaky boots." It was Wagner, who was then in great financial straits, being indeed utterly without funds. Karl Eckert, the conductor, relieved the master's impecuniosity. The first performance in Vienna of the Meistersinger, in which Neumann played the Night-watchman, was marred by a stormy scene got up by a cabal of anti-Wagnerites; but in May, 1872, the Viennese had overcome their prejudice against the master. Connected with this visit of Wagner to Vienna the following good story is told:—

"On the 12th of May the Master conducted a concert in our new music hall, and on this occasion the hornist, Richard Levy, had the misfortune to make a slip on a high note—a 'Gicks,' as they call it in the orchestra. If I remember rightly, it was in one of the most difficult and intricate passages of the Scherzo in the Symphony Eroïca. Edward Mauthner, a well-known wit and writer of comedies, took this occasion to jeer at his friend the soloist from his place in the front row. In the intermission, when all those qualified (or who considered themselves qualified) as artists had assembled in the green-room, Wagner took the occasion to reprimand any who had seen fit to laugh at such a slip. Those who understood the mechanism of the horn and its technical difficulties, he said, would surely realise that the greatest artist could come to grief, since the least drop of moisture in the instrument was fatal. With that he embraced our hornist warmly to console him for his misadventure.

"Presently Levy, who was a wag of the first order, stepped up to Mauthner, saying, 'My dear fellow, that was not nice of you at all to laugh at my little "Gicks."' Mauthner tried glibly to explain, but Levy continued solemnly, 'No, really it was not nice of you at all—and most ungrateful. Truly, I wouldn't do such a thing to you. I've never laughed at one of your comedies in all my life!' The cheers and uproar that followed this sally may be imagined, and Wagner led all the rest in his gleeful shouts at the discomfiture of the luckless playwright."

Speaking of Wagner as a director, Neumann becomes enthusiastic: "How inspiring he was! I never hear a performance of Tannhäuser or of Lohengrin without his image rising before me in certain scenes.

"How wonderfully he took the part of Tannhäuser finding himself at the crossways in the forest after his release from the enchantments of Venusberg. Riveted to the spot, he stood like a graven image, with arms upraised; then gradually, at the entrance of the pilgrims, came to life with a tremendous shuddering start, and, finally, overcome with emotion, sank to the ground as the chorus proceeded; to break out at the end in his great cry—'Ach, schwer drückt mich der Sünden Last!'"

In rehearsing Lohengrin he took each part in turn, not only the title-rôle, but Telramund and the King as well, showing each player his every attitude and movement.

"The Elsa of our cast was making her début, so he went through that whole long act with the King, showing her each expression, each movement of the hand. How well he simulated Elsa's rapture as she throws herself into Lohengrin's arms, and how he arranged for the eager interest and acclamation of the chorus. As the curtain fell on this great scene—orchestra, chorus, soloists and the director crowded wildly about the Master, clamouring in their enthusiasm to shoulder him and bear him off in triumph. But Wagner, though evidently touched by this spontaneous ovation, waved them back, saying earnestly, 'That'll do, that'll do, children; that'll do.' Then we went to the second act, where he showed us, in the great scene between Telramund and Ortrud, how the latter rises snake-like from her prostrate pose on the Minster steps as she finds she has won Telramund for her purpose. Now came the scene between Ortrud and Elsa, and I must say here that the Elsa of this cast was Mila Kupfer-Berger, one of the most beautiful creatures who ever took that rôle."

The neatly printed and excellently got-up volume contains many letters from Wagner, which reflect his enthusiasm, his gratitude, and occasionally his irritability. He was not tactful—great geniuses seldom are—and he was very naturally impatient of the ignorant diatribes of his critics. Before his death he saw many of them confounded, but the full recognition of his genius did not come till the dawn of the twentieth century. The "recollections," which do great credit to the translator, are illustrated with some excellent portraits, and the copious index adds much to their value.

At the New Court Theatre, Bacup, Lena Stanton and Harry Joseph's pantomime Aladdin is presented this week. Miss Janet Lawton in the title-rôle is vivacious and plays with inexhaustible freshness. She possesses a good voice, and her songs are well rendered. Miss Norah Neville makes a captivating Princess, and her songs are well received; Miss N. Gibson makes an attractive Pekoe; Mr. George Melville is a clever exponent of the Emperor Chow-Chow; Mr. W. Shephard as What O and Mr. F. Shephard as What Hi are very popular; as Mrs. Twankie Mr. Rex Kempton was excellent; and as Slavee Slo Miss Minnie Millwards is a great favourite; Miss Rene Willoughby is an effective Fairy of the Enchanted Ring. The specialities include the Gibson Girls, the Sabot Trio, the Brothers Shephard, and the La-Dor Troupe. The scenery is pretty and the music attractive.

AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

(From our own correspondent.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Miss Julia Marlowe, having experienced some difficulty in finding a suitable play, has been absent from the metropolis for a rather long period. But now her name shines forth on Broadway once again, and she is enjoying the success which naturally belongs to an artist who holds such an eminent position on the American stage. Miss Marlowe began an engagement at Daly's Theatre last week, appearing in a five-act play, by Mary Johnston, entitled The Goddess of Reason, which, while it deals with the well-worn subject of the French Revolution, is made up of incidents, the faithful and vivid representation of which will never fail to hold the interest and quicken the pulses of the large majority of playgoers. In the heroine of this drama Miss Marlowe has found a rôle that fits her personality, and has added a memorable creation to her répertoire, her performance having won unanimous praise. Miss Marlowe impersonates a peasant girl named Yvette, who lives near Quiberon, on the sea coast of Brittany. The revolt of the people has begun, and Yvette participates in an attack on the mansion of the lord of the manor, Baron René de Vardes. The peasants attempt to set fire to the château, but their plans are frustrated and several of them are taken prisoners. Baron René does not condemn them, however, but sets them free, thereby disgusting his aristocratic friends, and places Yvette in a convent at Nantes. He does this because he has encountered the girl on a previous occasion whilst riding through the woods, and at their second meeting they are strongly attracted towards each other. Furthermore, he has learned that Yvette is really a cousin of his, being the illegitimate child of his uncle, Baron Henri de Morbec, now deceased, and the wife of one of his yeomen. The young woman presently escapes from the convent to join her friends of the revolutionary movement, which is now at its full height. In taking this step she is prompted by jealousy of Clarice, Marquise de Blancheforêt, with whom she fancies René is in love. Moreover, one Redmond Lelain, a revolutionist, who loves Yvette and hates René, fans the flame of jealousy and appeals to her patriotism until she rejoins the revolutionary mob. Two years later, in Nantes, Yvette is chosen by the Republicans to be the "Goddess of Reason," and is thus enabled to control a bloodthirsty gathering led by Lelain, and to save the life of René de Vardes when his enemies are about to dispatch him. When she discovers that René has protected Clarice, however, she denounces them both, and causes their arrest as enemies of the Republic. But when they are threatened with death Yvette repents, and being overwhelmed with remorse sends a purse of gold to De Vardes, containing a written message, which she has extorted or beguiled from the rascal Lelain. The production of this message in court would effect the release of René and Clarice, but the plan miscarries and Clarice is slain. De Vardes is imprisoned in an old church, where he is visited by Yvette, who learns when it is too late that he has never loved Clarice, and receives from his lips the avowal of his love for herself. When she hears the doom of her lover pronounced in the crowded court-room at Nantes she casts aside her cap and tri-coloured badge and denounces the Republic, thus procuring her own condemnation. And at night the two are bound together and thrown into the dark waters of the Loire. The play is sumptuously staged, and the scene in the Judgment Hall at Nantes is very effective. Mr. White Whittlesey, Mr. Wilson Melrose, Mr. Vincent Sternroyd, Mr. Theodore Hamilton, and Miss Olive Temple distinguish themselves in important rôles.

The new German theatre in Fifty-ninth-street, which was opened last October, has passed into the hands of the Shuberts, who will present their own attractions there in English at popular prices. The house will be known as The Plaza, and will be the ninth theatre, exclusive of the Hippodrome, under the management of the Shuberts in this city. The old Irving-place Theatre, formerly conducted by Herr Conried, seems to meet the requirements of the German population of New York.

Actresses who want to keep their hands white, soft, and smooth, should use Vinolia Cream. It is unrivalled in its influence on the skin, making it very beautiful.

The following artists will take part in the six o'clock promenade concerts at the Crystal Palace next week:—Misses Helena St. Clemens, Nora Meredith, Sara Hendy (with songs at the piano), Evelyn Russell (solo violinist), Ethel and Mary Williams (in duets), Messrs. V. L. Cockburn, Reginald Davidson, William Maxwell, Robert Dennant, Julien Henry, and the Harmonic Singers—Messrs. Sydney Hart, Frost Lambert, Gilbert Lockyer, and Seward Phillips.

Church and Stage are coming to the closest quarters in America, the Universalist Church at Atlanta, Georgia, having decided to run its own theatre, plays, and actors. The pastor maintains that as the theatre had a distinctly religious origin, it is capable of great moral good. The first play will be The Servant in the House, and to accommodate the production the lower floor of the church is being converted into a stage, with footlights, scenery, curtain, and other properties.

A private conference of local and other authorities was held at the Mansion House on the 26th ult., under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, to discuss the future of the Crystal Palace. As the result of the conference a motion proposed by the Mayor of Westminster, "That this meeting is of opinion that, subject to a market price being agreed upon, it is desirable that the Crystal Palace should be acquired and vested in the public and dedicated to their use for ever," was unanimously adopted.

The Foreign Press Association in London have organised a dramatic and musical matinée at the St. James's Theatre, on March 18, in aid of the Messina Earthquake Fund, when four new one-act plays will be produced. The first is a musical piece by Louis Hillier entitled A Christmas Fast. This will be followed by a fairy tale, The Village of Youth, by Bessie Hatton; A Maker of Women, by Edith A. Browne, and a duologue entitled In a Bathroom, by John Raphael. The patronage of the Ambassadors and Ministers of many foreign Powers has been secured.

New Pieces Produced at the Provincial Theatres. See The Era Annual, 1909.

MR. LOUIS DE REEDER has been engaged to conduct the new comic opera Dingley Dell which is to be produced by Bath amateurs at the Theatre Royal on March 25 and following days.

AT the Stalybridge Hippodrome last week, during the engagement of J. H. Greener, the singing pit lad, a collection was taken in aid of the Relief Fund organised to assist the sufferers through the Durham colliery disaster at West Stanley, and the amount realised was £13 2s. 10d. This sum has been forwarded to the Vicar of West Stanley by Mr. W. A. Jackson, the resident-manager.

IN an action for damages for slander brought during the week by Miss Florence Ellis (of Ellis and Ellis) against Miss Gladys Dillon, of Deansgate, Manchester, the Lord Chief Justice, in giving judgment for 40s. and fixing the costs at £20, observed that young ladies of the music hall profession lived amid great temptations, and a great many things were said about them that were very hard and often very untrue. He could understand Miss Ellis's resentment at the least suggestion made upon her character and virtue, and he was forced to the conclusion that the memory of the defendant as to what she actually said was not perfect, and therefore there must be some damages.

"IT has been usual," says Hazlitt in his "Table talk," "to raise a very unjust clamour against the enormous salaries of public singers, actors, and so on. This matter seems reducible to a moral equation. They are paid out of money raised by voluntary contributions in the strictest sense; and if they did not bring certain sums into the treasury, the managers would not engage them. The sums are exactly in proportion to the number of individuals to whom their performance gives an extraordinary degree of pleasure. The talents of a singer, actor, &c., are therefore worth just as much as they will fetch."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

[We cannot undertake to answer the inquiries of correspondents by post. In all letters names and addresses must be given as a guarantee of good faith. Initials only or pseudonyms will be used in the replies if so desired.]

NEMO.—The title of the Aquarium Theatre was changed to that of the Imperial on April 20, 1877.

SCENA.—We should say not, as there is no such word in French. Should it not be "La Marraine"?

F. H. MURPHY.—Very probably; but you do not give the front name. The "Gaiety" Dallas is J. J.

HENRY CHERRY.—Probably you refer to Mr. William Hogarth. Mr. John Howson was the original, and Mr. Frank Celli also appeared in the part.

TERRIER.—The banquet in aid of the fund for the establishment of the home for aged professionals (the Music Hall Home) occurred on Dec. 13, 1896, at the Hotel Cecil. Mr. John Brill, of the Old Royal, Holborn, took the chair, and Mr. Dan Leno, who was in the forefront of every movement for the amelioration of the lot of his professional brethren, was in the vice-chair. The amount then raised and promised on that occasion approached £340. The first home was in Lambeth close to the York-road.

W. BUSCH (St. Louis).—We do not undertake literary agency, but for the placing of your book you might try the Author's Syndicate, 5-7, Southampton-street, London, W.C.; the Incorporated Society of Authors, 39, Old Queen-street, Westminster; or the Authors' Club (Secretary, G. B. Burgin), 4, Whitehall Court, London, W. As to the staging of one of your plays, it depends so much on its nature. You might seek the help of one of the societies devoted to the production of works of unknown playwrights, such as the Play Actors (Secretary, Miss Winifred Mayo, 93, Oakley-street, Chelsea, London, W.); or the Stage Society (Secretary, Mr. A. E. Drinkwater, 9, Arundel-street, Strand, London, W.C.).

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, & DEATHS.

The charge for inserting in "The Era" an announcement of a Birth, a Marriage, or a Death, or an "In Memoriam" notice, not exceeding twenty-four words, is One Shilling and Sixpence.

As a guarantee of good faith, the name and address of the sender must accompany each notice.

WILL EVANS, the favourite comedian, is a man with a golden laugh. You would know his guffaw from a thousand others. He is inventive in the extreme, and probably puts on more new ideas in the course of a year than any other music hall comedian. His make-up is, like his laugh, unlike that of any other. He goes to the Hackney Empire on Monday.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,
By ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).
Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.
"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

TO MESSRS. DAVID ALLEN and SONS, LTD.
Towards the end of last autumn we received from customers of ours a block of a drawing by Mr. John Hassall, used in connection with the Comic Opera "Amasis," with an order to print cards from it. We printed the cards and supplied them for use as advertisements in the various provincial towns visited by the theatrical company performing the said Comic Opera until the month of Nov. last. We now learn that the copyright of the drawing in question belongs to you, and that the printing and publication of it by us constituted an infringement of such copyright. We wish to express to you our sincere regret that we should have inadvertently infringed your copyright, and we have consented to this apology being published and to pay your costs as between solicitor and client in connection with the proceedings which you have instituted against us in respect of such infringement.
Dated this 27th February, 1909.

SATURDAY, MARCH 6, 1909.

THEATRES BILL AND SKETCHES.

Mr. ROBERT HARCOURT'S recent letter to the Daily Chronicle reminds us of the existence of his Theatres Bill, of which so much was heard in January. By the Bill, as our readers may remember, it is proposed to enact that the powers of the Lord Chamberlain under the Theatres Act, 1843, in respect of the licensing and closing of theatres within the ancient Parliamentary boundaries of the cities of London and Westminster, and of the boroughs of Finsbury and Marylebone, the Tower Hamlets, Lambeth, and Southwark, shall be transferred to the London County Council. Also that the licence of the London County Council shall be required in respect of a theatre within the said ancient Parliamentary boundaries authorised by virtue of letters patent from His Majesty or his predecessors in the same manner as if no letters patent had been granted in respect thereof; but that nothing in the Act shall affect the powers of the Lord Chamberlain under the Theatres Act, 1843, in respect of the licensing and closing of theatres in those places outside the Administrative County of London in which His Majesty, his heirs and successors, shall in their Royal persons occasionally reside. The first clause in the Bill proposes that it shall not be necessary to submit any stage play to the Lord Chamberlain before the first acting or presenting thereof, whether for hire or otherwise, and it shall not be lawful for the Lord Chamberlain to forbid the acting or presenting in Great Britain of any stage play.

It appears from Mr. ROBERT HARCOURT'S letter that emphasis was laid on the Censorship part of the Bill merely as a matter of policy. "The promoters of the Theatres Bill," says Mr. HARCOURT, "are fully alive to the importance of the legalising of the production of sketches at music halls, and as a matter of fact they consulted with Mr. OSWALD STOLL and Mr. BUTT, of the Palace, on the point last December. It was thought desirable at first as a matter of tactics to concentrate discussion in the Press on the single point of the Censorship, but when the Bill reappears this Session it will contain a clause to legalise a situation which already exists de facto."

The situation is a curious one. Theoretically the present arrangement is absurd; practically it is working extremely well, and no one wants it altered. When the Theatres Bill was first brought forward many of the leading London managers were opposed to it, especially to that portion of the Bill which would do away with the censorship. Mr. FORBES ROBERTSON said, "I am not in favour of the Bill." Miss LENA ASHWELL considered our present conditions preferable. Mr. LEWIS WALLER could "see no reason for changing the existing order," and Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER hoped the censorship would be retained. Mr. HENRY R. SMITH asked "What has arisen recently, or, indeed, at any time, in the conduct of theatres which should cause anyone to bring forward a Bill on these lines? I really see no necessity for it. I know of no London manager who has expressed any feeling antagonistic to the Lord Chamberlain or to the way in which the duties of his office are carried out. Mr. ERNEST CARPENTER and myself have always found him perfectly reasonable in regard to the censorship of plays, and I cannot see that he has treated anybody badly. We have no desire to introduce anything that might be objectionable into our plays; we want to present what is popular. We are perfectly satisfied with the reader of plays, who is a man of wide experience, and have no desire to change a system which has lasted long and worked well. But if there are any London managers who are dissatisfied with the Lord Chamberlain's department let them speak out now and say why they are dissatisfied. Some dramatic authors, I dare say, may desire a change; but the managers, so far as I know, are quite content to let well alone. The Lord Chamberlain has the power to grant or to refuse licences, and if a licence were abused it would very quickly be revoked."

Opinion on the other part of the Bill, that which proposes to remove the existing anomaly with respect to sketches at music halls, is not unanimous. It will be remembered, indeed, that when the arrangement between the theatrical managers and the music hall managers was arrived at, Mr. HENRI GROS refused to join with his brother managers of variety theatres in accepting it, on the ground that the compromise was unsatisfactory and unfinal. It cannot be denied that Mr. GROS'S contention was correct. The production of sketches at music halls is illegal, and goes on only in the absence of "common informers." In his letter to the Daily Telegraph on Thursday, Mr. CECIL RALEIGH said "sketch artists receive £460,000 per year for doing illegal work. Not a single one of the contracts under which they perform is valid; and not a single halfpenny they earn is recoverable by law. Ought this to go on?" The well-paid and prosperous sketch artists will probably say, "Certainly. We do not care how illegal our performances may be as long as they are not interfered with and we draw the £460,000 per annum; and as long as the theatrical managers are so well disposed that they will actually, as in the case of Mr. LOUIS CALVERT and the Palace Theatre, permit artists under engagement to them to fill up an interval by appearing at a music hall. All that we ask is that the present arrangement be not disturbed, and that we may go on reaping our golden harvest. The ordinary variety artist who may dread the rivalry of the sketches does not desire to increase their legality or to bring about a condition of things which would free sketch production from the restraints as to length and number which were imposed by the compromise. And the theatrical manager who does not wish to produce plays that would be prohibited by the Censor, and desires that no unworthy rival shall be allowed to make a success by appealing to prurient tastes, is, like the gentlemen we have quoted above, luke warm, to say the least, as to the abolition of the Censorship. It is hard, therefore, to perceive from what quarter Mr. ROBERT HARCOURT is to expect support.

There is an easy and simple method of satisfying all parties without the introduction of any Act of Parliament. Let it be permitted to any proprietor of a building which has satisfied the requirements of the County Council as to safety, &c., to apply for and receive a double licence. This plan is already working in the suburbs; and what can be done at Richmond and Walthamstow is surely not impossible in Spring Gardens. In this way no revolutionary alteration of existing methods would be needed; and certain inconveniences removed without an upheaval which would be against the wishes of most of the persons affected. At present, however strong be the logical arguments in its favour, we see no prospect of the passing of the Bill.

"THE VENGEANCE OF JIM."

A Comedy-Drama in One Act, by Stanley James. Produced at the New Royal Theatre, King's Lynn, on Thursday Evening, Feb. 25.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The scene opens in the Eureka Hotel, at One Tree Diggings, California, where the diggers are assembled on Christmas Eve; the bar is being decorated in honour of the festive season. Colonel Buckle, the proprietor of the hotel and President of the Vigilance Committee, sees that the wants of his patrons are satisfied and receives a complaint from Jim Stanton that he has been robbed a few days previously of a nugget of gold. In corroboration of evidence as to the guilt of one named Ted Leeder, Foxy Flint produces a clay cast of a footprint, which he asserts is Leeder's. Foxy informs the company that Leeder has gone to Prestonville and will return in the evening, calling on his way back at the hotel. Jim Stanton, anxious to wreak his vengeance upon the culprit, desires to meet him on the way back, but the Colonel decides that he shall be apprehended and given a fair trial, and every provision made for his widow and children. During these proceedings Grace Leeder and Maggie Leeder, wife and daughter of the culprit, make their appearance at the hotel, and to the consternation of the Colonel, Maggie invites the company to dine with her husband and family on Christmas Day, to celebrate a piece of luck which has come to them in the shape of a sum of money from a friend. The plaintive appeal of Mrs. Leeder that the culprit, whoever he might be, should have mercy shown him at this particular season is most pathetic. Jim Stanton, the aggrieved man, is prevailed upon by the child to play with her, and eventually she falls asleep with her head on his knee. At this moment the guilty man makes his appearance and is stricken with terror as he beholds the occupants of the bar. The touching appeals of the wife for mercy and the innocence of the child have a transforming effect upon Jim Stanton, who, instead of taking his vengeance, extends his hand to the man who has robbed him, freely forgiving the wrong done. Mr. Cecil Brooking made a striking figure as Colonel Buckle, and Mr. Lionel Hanson was effective as his assistant. Mr. Vernon O. Crabtree as Jim Stanton faithfully portrayed the character, and Mr. Stanley Killby as Jim Leeder gave a splendid delineations of a difficult part. As Grace Leeder Miss Katherine Harrington was in both voice and gesture admirable. Miss Beryl St. Leger as Maggie Leeder showed ability seldom found in a child of such tender years, and there is little doubt that she has a most successful future in store.

THE KING was present at the performance of The Dancing Girl at His Majesty's on Tuesday.

MR. IVAN CAPELL writes to inform us that he was responsible for the production of Mr. John Hart's pantomime, Goody Two Shoes, at the Theatre Royal, Sheffield, and at its conclusion was the recipient of several handsome presents from the management of the theatre and the principal members of the company.

COURT THEATRE.

Four new one-act plays were produced on Wednesday evening at the Court by the Amateur Players' Association, and whatever was good in four new one-act plays was spoilt by bad acting. The performance was organised in aid of the funds of the Victoria Hospital for Children, and, as is usually the case with amateur entertainments of this nature, we do not suppose that the medical establishment will benefit much. The opening piece was

"THE SILVER TANKARD,"

A Simple Play in One Act, by Cecil Egerton.

Colonel Heathcote ..... MR. J. HARTLEY
John Saunders ..... MR. R. HARRISON ARCHBALD
Robert Hardy ..... MR. FRANCIS W. WATTS
Martha ..... MISS FRANCES SHEWRY
Jessie ..... MISS DODGSON

Here we had an old idea rather prettily worked out. Robert Hardy, a carpenter, who helps his widowed mother, and is engaged to be married to Jessie, another character in the play, is tempted in his poverty to steal a silver tankard belonging to Colonel Heathcote, at whose house he is doing some work, and is afterwards conscience-stricken when the Colonel finds him a permanent situation. Fortunately, however, the theft is not discovered, and Jessie has in the meantime replaced the tankard which her lover had stolen. The piece was produced by the Marlborough Dramatic Club, the members of which certainly showed better "form" than the representatives of the other two clubs producing a couple of the following pieces.

The Twelfth Night Players were responsible for the production of a very poor dramatic work.

"THE END OF THE STORY."

A Play in One Act, by Neilson Morris.

George Powys ..... MR. LIONEL CORNISH
Charles Cochrane ..... MR. DAVID DAVIES
Inspector Morrison ..... MR. EDWIN FEIS
Isobel ..... MISS ADRIENESSE CLARKE

Isobel has murdered the father who had brought about the death of her mother by his cruel treatment, and who had made the daughter's life intolerable by his brutal assaults. George Powys has fallen in love with Isobel, who is now flying from justice, and he gives her temporary refuge in his bungalow "up the river." Inspector Morrison duly arrives there, and permits himself to engage in a foolish conversation with Powys' friend, Charles Cochrane, whom in every sentence he addresses as "Sir" with, in addition, an occasional "Mr. Cochrane." We hope that such a silly specimen of a police officer is not to be found in the Metropolis. The Inspector discovers Isobel, who is placed under arrest, George Powys protesting and swearing that he will remain true to her. Cochrane is, perhaps, a little wiser, for he slips into the hand of the haggard Isobel—Isobel fleeing from justice in evening dress!—a revolver, the subsequent use of which brings the sad story to an end. We are quite unable to congratulate the authoress upon this piece. Mr. David Davies, who appeared as Cochrane, is the only one to whom a word of praise can be given for the acting.

"SPOILING THE BROTH."

A Comedy in One Act, by Bertha N. Graham.

Mrs. Chance ..... MISS MARIE W. GOLDIE
Joey ..... MR. LESLIE THOMAS
David Wells ..... MR. H. CLIFTON DALE
'Melia Hammond ..... MISS NINA HAZEL

Miss Bertha N. Graham's amusing and rather well-conceived sketch of low life in Camberwell lost most of the merit it possessed by the way in which it was presented by the company known as the Curtain-Raisers. The story tells of the attempt to cure Joey Chance of the drink habit, of the love-making between that young man's mother and the lodger, and of Joey's own affection for pretty 'Melia Hammond.

"THE BLACK COTTAGE."

A Dramatisation in One Act of Wilkie Collins' Story of the same name, by David Kimball.

Aaron Black ..... MR. H. V. HODGSON
Abigail ..... MISS MAGGIE GALSWORTHY
Bessie Black ..... MISS LILLIAN GRAY
Abel White ..... MR. FRED P. DAVIS
Mrs. Knifton ..... MRS. FRANK ANDERSON
Mr. Knifton ..... MR. GERALD LINDSAY
"Shifty" Dick ..... MR. DAVID KIMBALL
Jerry ..... MR. R. MALCOLM MORLEY

The late Mr. Wilkie Collins might not, we fear, feel flattered by the association of his name with this unsatisfactory dramatisation of his story, "The Black Cottage." Briefly, the plot concerns the determined attempt of two blackguards to break into Aaron Black's cottage at night, for the purpose of stealing some banknotes, and how their scheme is fustrated by Black's daughter, Bessie, who sends her younger sister, Abigail for help, and how Bessie's lover arrives on the scene as rescuer. Miss Lillian Gray displayed some dramatic talent as Bessie; and Miss Maggie Galsworthy was an engaging little personage as Abigail; while Messrs. David Kimball and R. Malcolm Morley furnished suitable studies of the two ruffians.

"THE MYSTERY OF REDWOOD GRANGE."

Play, in One Act, by "An Englishman," Produced at the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, on Monday, March 1.

Mr. Wilkins ..... MR. WEEDON GROSSMITH
Coachman ..... MR. H. C. BUCKLER

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

At the conclusion of the performance of Mrs. Dot at the Theatre Royal, Portsmouth, on Monday, special interest was centred in The Mystery of Redwood Grange, a one-act playlet written under the nom de plume of "An Englishman." It was produced by Mr. McIntyre-Wicksteed and the author, with incidental music by Mr. A. Humphreys. The plot is woven around the visit of a Mr. Wilkins, of London, to a country house—where a previous owner had been murdered—for the purpose of sleeping there one night previous to his taking it as a country residence. The night of his arrival is a very stormy one, with thunder, lightning, and wind, so Wilkins, in the presence of the coachman, whom he asks inside, simulates a false courage. After listening to the ghostly revelations of the coachman, Wilkins begs him to stay the night, but is unable to persuade the man. Left to himself, despite sundry whiskies, what with doors mysteriously opening, imaginations of echoes, the racing of rats through the empty rooms, and finally smashing of glass, Wilkins' nerves become so over-wrought that he falls to the ground, thinking his last hour has arrived. A man enters, to whom he pleads for life, but finds him to be his own servant, who has missed a train. Mr. Weedon Grossmith acted admirably as Mr. Wilkins, and Mr. H. C. Buckler was good as the coachman.

MME. CLARA BUTT has now recovered from her recent illness, and is leaving England in order to complete her cure at Cannes, where she will remain for several weeks. Her first appearance upon her return will be at the afternoon concert at the Crystal Palace on Good Friday. Besides Mme. Butt and her husband (Mr Kennerley Rumford) Sir Charles Santley, Miss Agnes Nicholls, Miss Gleeson White, and Mr. Charles Saunders will appear. The London Symphony Orchestra, the Crystal Palace Choir (augmented to 300 voices), and the Crystal Palace Military Band will take part. Mr. Fred W. Holloway will be at the organ and Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock will conduct. The usual familiar hymns will be sung by the audience and choir.

At the evening concert at 7.45 the artists will be Miss Phyllis Lett and Mr. Thomas Meux. The full band of the Coldstream Guards will be conducted by Dr. Mackenzie Rogan, M.V.O., Lieutenant and Bandmaster.

"THE YEOMEN OF THE GUARD."

Revival of the Comic Opera, in Two Acts, by W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan (Originally Produced at the Savoy Theatre on Oct. 3, 1888), Savoy Theatre, Monday, March 1.

Sir Richard Cholmondeley ..MR. LEO SHEFFIELD
Colonel Fairfax ..... MR. HENRY HERBERT
Sergeant Meryll ..... MR. RICHARD TEMPLE
Leonard Meryll ..... MR. LAURENCE LEGGE
Jack Point ..... MR. C. H. WORKMAN
Wilfred Shadbolt .... MR. RUTLAND BARRINGTON
The Headsman ..... MR. RICHARD SHAW
Corporal ..... MR. CECIL CURTIS
First Yeoman ..... MR. W. DAVIDSON
Second Yeoman ..... MR. FRED HEWETT
First Citizen ..... MR. FRED EDGAR
Second Citizen ..... MR. SIDNEY ASHCROFT
Elsie Maynard ..... MISS ELSIE SPAIN
Phœbe Meryll ..... MISS JESSIE ROSE
Dame Carruthers ..... MISS LOUIE RENE
Kate ..... MISS BEATRICE BOARER

The announcement that Mrs. D'Oyly Carte concludes her season of Savoy Opera after a four weeks' run of The Yeomen of the Guard has given rise to a general feeling of regret among the lovers of music and fun, and if the joyous time spent by a large audience on Monday—the opening night of the revival of the work named—be any criterion, we may not be too sanguine in looking for a continuance of Gilbert and Sullivan at its old home. The gallery boys and girls spent the time of waiting by singing favourite excerpts from Pinafore and other of the more familiar works; but when Mr. Cellier—received with a hearty cheer—tapped his desk, there was a call for silence, and no company could have played to a more appreciative audience. Sir W. S. Gilbert, who was called and complimented at the close of the performance, is indebted for the main incident of his libretto to Don Cæsar de Bazan, and one does not wish—least of all the witty writer—to conceal the obvious similarity of the character of Jack Point to Touchstone. The freshness and geniality of the music are as apparent as ever, and encores on Monday were frequent. In the bulk of the score the composer has written elegant melodies, exactly suited to the spirit of the words, for in the lyrics Sir W. S. Gilbert has been most happy.

When the curtain rose on Monday Miss Jessie Rose, the latest Phœbe Meryll, sitting at her spinning wheel, sang the graceful opening air, "When maiden loves she sits and sighs," with considerable charm; and was particularly roguish in her scene with the lugubrious gaoler, Wilfred Shadbolt, in which she scored an unmistakable success in "Were I thy bride," the arch and animated manner in which she alternately cajoled and repelled the advances of the grumpy Wilfred amusing the audience greatly. Miss Elsie Spain as Elsie Maynard made her success assured on her first entrance with the jester. Of course the duet "I have a song to sing, oh," which is one of the gems of the opera, was rapturously encored, and Mr. C. H. Workman and Miss Spain might have accepted a double bis. In the final scene with Colonel Fairfax Miss Spain's acting calls for high praise, and throughout she was dainty, interesting, and dramatic. Mr. C. H. Workman in a former revival of the opera, in May, 1897, appeared as the first citizen, afterwards going in for hard work in the provinces. We doubt whether we have ever had a Jack Point who has realised so cleverly and completely the pathetic side of the part, and he had a specially hearty call at the close of Monday night's performance. He made a great hit in the song of the second act:—

"If the jests that you crack have an orthodox smack
You may get a bland smile from these sages;
But should it, by chance, be imported from France,
Half-a-crown is stopped out of your wages!"

Mr. Rutland Barrington for the first time took up the part of Wilfred Shadbolt, originally assigned to Mr. W. H. Denny. Wilfred fancies he has a pretty wit, and believes he is "the merriest dog that barks," and his smug self-satisfaction is drolly emphasised by Mr. Barrington, who is quite admirable in the character. Mr. Richard Temple was at hand to take up his old rôle of Sergeant Meryll, and to his principal number, "A laughing boy but yesterday," he did complete justice. In the Courting scene with Dame Carruthers his success was shared by Miss Louie Rene, who made the most of her rather grim song, "When our gallant Norman foes." Mr. Henry Herbert is improving in his acting, and his Colonel Fairfax was always interesting. Mr. Leo Sheffield was an effective Sir Richard Cholmondeley; Mr. Richard Shaw realised the lugubrious character of the headsman; and other parts were adequately handled by Mr. Laurence Legge as Leonard Meryll, Miss Beatrice Boarer as Kate, and Mr. Cecil Curtis.

MR. JOSEPH CORNISH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—An earnest appeal is made on behalf of Mr. Joseph Cornish, for sixteen years representative of Stedman's Musical Agency; also with the late Sir Augustus Harris at Drury Lane, Covent Garden, and Olympia; and the late Mme. Katti Lanner and Mr. Imre Kiralfy, and associated for many years with Mr. Seymour Hicks' companies.

Mr. Joseph Cornish has recently undergone a series of heavy and undeserved misfortunes and much illness and domestic trouble. He is at present out of an engagement, and his son (twenty-four), upon whom he depended for some assistance, has now been for nineteen weeks an inmate of St. Mary's Hospital, suffering from tuberculosis, having had six severe operations, including the amputation of the left leg and one finger, and this week another operation on the right leg. He will be entirely incapacitated from further work, and when sufficiently recovered the doctors say he must be immediately removed to sea air.

Under these painful circumtsances it is hoped and believed that all those who know Mr. Joseph Cornish will generously assist him to provide for his helpless son and meet temporary necessities during the few weeks which must elapse before he can take up the duties of an already-promised situation.

I shall be pleased to receive and acknowledge all subscriptions, and to give any further information desired.

M. A. VICTOR.

The idea of establishing in London a German "Volksbühne," a people's theatre, apart from being commendable as of service to the dramatic art, should, from the nature of the productions at moderate charges, appeal to the greater portion of the German colony, and thus prove financially successful. The wealthier contingent of merchant princes of German origin are, from some curious if not altogether admirable reason, rarely proud of their descent. With an adaptability which even the Hebrew race can scarcely rival, they very soon Hibernis ipsis Hibernior become Englishmen to the backbone, with the average Britisher's wholesome contempt for everything foreign. But there remains a very large number of moderately well-to-do Germans in the metropolis to whom the classics of their home recall the days of their youth, and who take an intelligent pride in the education of their children. The play selected for the opening of the series, if somewhat ambitious from the producers' point of view, was admirably adapted for its purpose. It breathes the spirit of mediæval romance, dear to the sentimental Teuton; that spirit which inspired de la Motte Fouqué, Joseph Victor von Scheffel, and other German lyrists and which even at times overwhelmed a cynic like Heinrich Heine.

Käthchen von Heilbronn, the putative daughter of the town's armourer, has become infatuated with the handsome young Knight of Castle Strahl, Friedrich Wetter, who, however, mindful of his degree, will have naught of her. There exists, furthermore, in his family, a legend which foretells that he is to wed the daughter of an Emperor. Kunigunde von Turneck, being a descendant of a previous Emperor and a lady of great possessions in her own right, seems therefore to be chosen by fate. Having ruthlessly thrown over two previous lovers, Kunigunde, with diabolical cunning, sets about the capture of Count von Strahl and the destruction of Käthchen. The accidental revelation of the latter plot brings about the frustration of the former. The Count realises and avows his love for Käthchen, who turns out to be the Countess of Suebia, the reigning Emperor's daughter, who, for reasons of State, had in her infancy been handed over to the care of old Theobald Friedeborn.

Miss Eleonore Driller made a charmingly sympathetic Käthchen, ably assisted by Mr. Paul Wind, who, at a moment's notice, owing to a serious accident sustained by Mr. Rudolf Exner, took over the part of Count von Strahl. An excellent characterisation was that of Fräulein Hedwig Rohmann as Kunigunde von Turneck, notably in the scenes with Herr Hermann Zettler as Count von Freiburg and Herr Hugo Bergmann as Count von Stein.

The next performances of this series will take place as follows:—Thursday, March 18, Goldfische; Saturday, March 27, Dorf und Stadt; Thursday, April 8; Donna Diana; Friday, April 23, Der beste Ton; and Thursday, May 20, Die Hochzeit von Valeni.

MASONS AT WORK.

The brethren of the Lodge of Asaph held their March meeting on Monday last at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London, under the presidency of their Master, Mr. Ernest H. Paterson, who was supported by his officers: Messrs. Herbert Chenery, I.P.M., Tom Clare, First Steward, acting as S.W., Chris Hilton, J.W., Chas. Cruikshanks, P.A.G.Std.Br., Treasurer, James W. Mathews, Secretary, Albert Le Fre, S.D, W. E. Holloway, Second Steward, acting as J.D., E. Wesley Woolhouse, I.G., John Gilbert, T., Rev. W. P. Besley, Chaplain, E. H. Bull, P.M., acting as Director of Ceremonies, and J. E. Hambleton, P.M., Organist.

The Grand Lodge of England was represented by Mr. John Strachan, the Grand Registrar, and Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, P.A.G.Std.Br.

Considerable interest was taken in the discussion which arose upon a proposition made by Mr. Tom Clare, seconded by Mr. Chris. Hilton, that the day of meeting should be altered from Monday to Tuesday. After various members had given their opinions on the subject, it appeared that any day in the week would be more or less inconvenient to many, and it was ultimately agreed that the resolution should be withdrawn, to be put forward on some future occasion when a larger gathering of the members could be secured.

There were present Messrs. A. Alexandra, Jesse Birch, Fred W. Crellin, Geo. H. Dyball, Philip Howden, Ed. Humphrey, Harry Locket, Charlton Mann, Cecil H Phillips, F. Lyndhurst Schmitz, C. O. L. Smythson, and Charles J. Taylor; and Messrs. E. W Hincheliff (Orchestral Lodge), Wilton G. Brown (Morning Star Lodge), H. J. Squire (Temple Lodge), A. H. C. Squire (Temple Lodge), Edward A. Davis (Jubilee Masters' Lodge), and Fred Terry (Green Room Lodge), visitors.

Letters of regret and apologies for non-attendance were received from Messrs. Chas. B. Powell, Jas. Weaver, and Richard Abbott.

Mr. Arthur Garrett was a candidate for initiation into the mysteries of the Order, and his proposer and seconder having brought the matter before the members in the manner which is customarily observed on such occasions, the ballot was taken, and proving to be unanimous in his favour, Mr. Ernest H. Paterson in a most impressive manner admitted Mr. A. Garrett into the Order, and conferred upon him the privileges connected with the first stage in his Masonic career. Mr. Paterson was assisted by his various officers, and at the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. Herbert Chenery, the Immediate Past Master, addressed the novice in fitting terms.

Messrs. Philip Howden and Francis Lyndhurst Schmitz, who were admitted to the Order at the last meeting, now offered themselves for advancement, and, having satisfactorily complied with the regulations, they were duly invested with the privileges connected with a further stage in their Masonic progress.

Certain details of a purely business character having been disposed of, the meeting was closed.

The next meeting of the lodge will be held on Monday, May 3.

MR. HERBERT AUSTIN has been appointed by Messrs. Jay and Mann, the lessees of the Palace Theatre, Brighton, to the post of manager.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

For the first time in our advertisement columns the Walter de Frece Circuit calls appear with those of the Moss and Stoll Empires, and the fact marks the completion of the arrangements for a combine which has been agitating professional circles for some months. The De Frece Circuit will still have the active personal supervision of Mr. Walter de Frece, its managing-director, who has taken up his quarters at the Co-operative Offices at Cranbourn Mansions.

Miss Vesta Victoria, who had a great welcome from a crowded house at the London Pavilion on Monday on the conclusion of her three numbers—"Mary took the calves to the Dairy Show," "Is anybody looking for a widow?" and "Now I have to call him father"—was the recipient of a magnificent bouquet.

The popular artist's exalted position on the variety stage was never more clearly demonstrated than on Monday, when a delighted house laughed at her clever exposition of domestic humour, and sang with enthusiasm and heartiness the chorus of each number. America has been enthusiastic in its praises of Miss Victoria, and English audiences are not going to be outdone in their affectionate demonstrations towards an artist with such a delightful personality.

It is hoped that Mr. Weedon Grossmith will appear at the Palace Theatre in the course of the spring. Mr. Alfred Butt has made the popular comedian a generous offer, which will be accepted if nothing stands in the way.

Mr. Seymour Hicks and Miss Zena Dare will appear in Papa's Wife at the Coliseum on Monday. It was originally produced at the Lyric on Jan. 26, 1895, when the music was announced as by Ellaline Terriss, the authors being Mr. F. C. Philips and "Seymour. Mr. Hicks will also present his well-known character Ebenezer Scrooge.

Mr. Will Evans, as we informed our readers some time ago, is interesting himself in the formation of a golf club on his estate at Mitcham. At present thirty-six acres are available, and it is proposed to plan nine holes and subsequently obtain additional ground so as to extend the course to eighteen holes. The club will be a private one, and will be called the Ravensbury Park Golf Club.

Mr. Louis Calvert, who is making his first appearances on the variety stage in the sketch Ezra Solomon at the Palace, is a member of His Majesty's Theatre company, where he is playing David Ives in The Dancing Girl. That Mr. Tree has lent him to Mr. Butt is eloquent proof of the popular actor-manager's breadth of view, and also affords palpable evidence that theatrical managers, in London, at any rate, regard the provisions of what John Hollingshead called the Moll Flanders act of Queen Anne as, practically speaking, dead.

Mr. Harry Lauder will make his reappearance in London at the Tivoli on Monday with two new songs, "Bonnie Leazie Lindsay" and "I've loved her ever since she was a baby." In this latter song Mr. Lauder is assisted by a lady, the scene being a kitchen. Mr. Joseph Wilson has arranged to give Mr. Lauder a Scottish welcome on his return to the Tivoli, where he remains for thirteen weeks. Consequent on the success of Mrs. Lewis Waller and company in The Admiral's Lady, that lady's engagement has been extended.

The announcement is made that Miss Alice Hollander, the well-known Australian contralto, was married at the Marylebone Registry Office on Feb. 17 to Mr. F. R. H. Carew, a gentleman of independent means, of Beddington, Surrey. Miss Hollander, who is the daughter of a physician, was born at Sydney. She studied in Paris, and afterwards toured in Australia, the United States, and South Africa. Later she appeared in Sergeant Brue at the old Strand Theatre, and in My Darling at the Hicks' Theatre in March, 1907. She is an immense favourite also at the halls.

The Alexandra Theatre, lately the Palace, Stoke Newington, re-enters the original phase of its existence next Monday, when Mr. Oswald Stoll, as managing director of Moss' Empires, Ltd., and the Hackney and Shepherd's Bush Empires, Ltd. (the new proprietors) will reopen it as a theatre with Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company in Peter's Mother, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, who has been specially engaged, playing the leading rôle.

Most interesting performances are promised at the Balham Assembly Rooms on Wednesday and Thursday next, when a grand juvenile pantomime, Little Red Riding Hood, by Arthur Le Clerq, will be played. In the cast will be the sons and daughter of the late Dan Leno (Ernest, Bert, and May Leno), Miss Lillie Leonard, a daughter of those favourite duettists Bob and Jennie Leonard, and a sister of the Sisters Pine, and Arthur and Cissie Le Clerq, the son and daughter of George Le Clerq, that unctuous and droll exponent of the best traditions of burnt cork comedy.

After a most successful season at the London Pavilion, the Euston, and other Metropolitan variety theatres, Miss Henriquette Maude, the little New Zealand girl, starts, on Monday, a tour which will not terminate until the summer, when she again returns to town. During her provincial engagements Miss Maude will probably recite in khaki uniform some stirring verses on the Territorial question. She could most appropriately do so, as she is descended from a long line of distinguished soldiers.

Messrs. H. and M. Rayne, of the Theatrical Stores, Waterloo-road, forwarded on Thursday for distribution £15 between the Actors' Benevolent Fund, the Variety Artists' Benevolent Fund, and the Music Hall Home, being the balance to date on the proceeds of the sale of their handy little pocket telephone call and date book.

The Palace Theatre ball, given on Thursday night at Prince's Galleries, had a variety of orchestral conductors, among them being Dr. J. Mackenzie Rogan, M.V.O., Mr. Leslie Stuart, Mr. Lionel Monckton, Baron Oscar von Ernsthausen, Mr. H. G. Pelissier, and Mr. Herman Finck, who each conducted his own dance music. On the committee were such stage favourites as Miss Maud Allan, Miss Alice Crawford, Misses Zena and Phyllis Dare, Miss Evie Greene, Miss Gertie Millar, Miss Gabrielle Ray, Miss Ellaline Terriss, Miss Vesta Tilley, and Miss Ruth Vincent.

Mr. Henry Ford, formerly a butcher of Brixton, who lost £22,000 in connection with the Palace-by-the-Sea at Clacton, opened at Whitsuntide, 1906, by Mr. George R. Sims, asked for his discharge in the Bankruptcy Court on Thursday. The cost of the Palace was £36,000, of which the debtor had to borrow £20,000. Up to the present his assets had realised £10. The Official Receiver submitted that the applicant had brought on his bankruptcy by rash and hazardous speculation, but this was disputed, and the application stood over.

Miss Bessie Butt, who was the undoubted success of the Kingston Theatre pantomime as Dandini (which for the occasion was made principal boy), has been secured by Mr. Robert Arthur for the next three Christmas seasons. This clever little lady has been making a great success at the London Pavilion with her popular song "Sunshine Soo."

The Brighton Town Council on Thursday decided to offer "uncompromising opposition" to the Casino and Marine Palace Bill. A petition is being signed by the fishermen against the Bill.

Mr. Thomas Hargreaves, proprietor of the Rochdale Empire, has leased his premises for a lengthy term to Mr. Ralph Pringle, who we understand will shortly take possession of the house, and open it as the "Ralph Pringle Picture Palace."

The opposition which had been threatened by a body of clergymen of different denominations to the renewal of the licence for the Brighton Aquarium collapsed at the adjourned brewster sessions, held on Tuesday. A solicitor wished to hand in petitions against the licence, but the justices ruled that no such procedure could be permitted. Ultimately the magistrates announced that the licence would be renewed.

At the adjourned annual licensing meeting for the City of Wakefield on Tuesday great interest was evinced in an application by Mrs. Fanny Sherwood, who asked for permission to sell intoxicating liquors six days a week at a music hall proposed to be erected in Kirkgate.

Mr. R. L. Prince, in support, said Mrs. Sherwood had purchased a valuable site in Kirkgate at considerable expense, and an elaborate building was to be erected at a cost of £8,000 or £10,000. The place would accommodate about 1,232 people. The licence was wanted for the convenience of the people who would go to the hall for entertainment.

Mr. T. T. P. Sherwood, son of the applicant, stated that the music hall would cost about £13,000. Without calling on the opposition, the Bench refused the application. Publicans, brewers, and teetotallers were among the opposition.

Miss Lillie Lassah has scored a brilliant success at the Argyle, Birkenhead, during the week, crowded houses giving her a rousing reception.

Mr. Harry Leslie, the Manchester variety agent, informs us that plans prepared to his ideas by Mr. Albert Winstanley, architect, are now in possession of the Town Hall authorities, for the erection of a high-class theatre and music hall on the site of his Rusholme Alfresco Pavilion, corner of Wilmslow-road and Dickenson-road, Rusholme. It is proposed to spend £10,000 on a building to seat 2,000 people. The theatre will have a frontage in Wilmslow-road. The "novelty" will be that in the summer the theatre can be made alfresco.

The revised plan for a new theatre and hippodrome to be built at the corner of Abington-street and St. Giles's-terrace, Northampton, for Messrs. Stanhope and Co., London, will be laid for approval before the adjourned Northampton Borough Council on Monday next. Plans will also be submitted for a new music hall and shops in Marefair by Mr. Mark Bromet, London.

Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton have not yet been able to find a suitable site for their proposed Northampton music hall. When built, these and a prospective skating rink promise to make the old borough a lively place.

Arthur Carlton, the well-known comedy card manipulator, has taken a company of his own to the Worcester Theatre, run by another well-known Arthur Carlton. Of course, Carlton, the hanky-panky merchant, is no relation whatever to Carlton, the theatrical proprietor, although both have a right to the same name. But both have had to occupy the same office and read each other's letters, and in some cases, have had to guess for whom they were meant.

Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt, proprietors of the Norwich Hippodrome, with much enterprise have succeeded in purchasing the lease of a large area of ground at the bottom of Rose-lane, and situate close to the Prince of Wales-road in Norwich, of about 200ft. long by 160ft. in breadth, where they intend to establish a permanent skating-rink.

The building will be of corrugated iron, and laid with American maple. There will be no columns or other obstructions to impede the skating. A staff of efficient teachers has been engaged. A handsomely furnished tea-room will be provided, and everything will be up to date in the finest rink in the Eastern Counties. The building will be known as the Rinkeries, and will be close to Thorpe Station and the tramways.

Ipswich is indebted to the enterprise of Mr. E. H. Bostock for the provision of a new roller skating rink, for which there has been a demand for some time. The building is centrally situated on what is known as the Old Market, and is nearing completion. The length of the skating floor, which is of finest maple, will be 160 feet, with 55 feet width, giving accommodation for 250 to 300 persons to enjoy the sport at a time. A good band will be provided, with tea-rooms and other accessories, and it is expected to be ready for opening on Saturday, March 13.

The local Bench, after granting a three months' conditional licence to the Palace, Watford, had an application for renewal up to Dec. 31 next before them on Tuesday last. The police superintendent spoke in the highest terms of the performances and conduct of the house under the management of Mr. T. M. Sylvester, and the application for renewal was accordingly granted.

Miss Sylvia Cavalho made a hit with What's Charles Worth? in Birmingham, the Birmingham Press being highly eulogistic in extended notices of the wit and freshness of the skit. This week the burlesque has been pleasing the patrons of the New Cross Empire.

The Musical Palmers, when playing with Mme. Vonetta's variety company at the Hippodrome, Spennymoor, last week, were asked by Mr. Algie (the proprietor) to assist in making the nightly collection in aid of the West Stanley Colliery disaster. This they did with the most gratifying results.

The charity festival promoted jointly by Aston Villa, Birmingham, and the various theatres and music halls of that city was not blessed with the best of weather. But things improved a bit before the popular Miss Hetty King (Prince of Wales Theatre) set the ball rolling, and put in action one of the most motley crowds who ever took part in a football burlesque. For a time the fun was fast and furious, all laws and regulations being out of consideration for the time being. When George, the Villa goalkeeper, was rendered hors de combat (in a theatrical sense) by a revolver shot, the soldiers and sailors, tinkers and tailors, together with giants and mannikins, took possession of the entire arena.

One at a time the Villa players were escorted from the field by a bodyguard, and without opposition goals were scored in a most remarkable manner. It was excruciatingly funny to those who entered into the spirit of the thing, and it is satisfactory to know that in spite of the unpropitious conditions there will be a fair sum to devote to the cause of charity. Early in the second half the snowstorm increased in intensity, and the game was abandoned.

Mr. Gus Elen is just recovering from an attack of influenza, which kept him a prisoner all last week. He went out for the first time on Tuesday for half an hour, and will be quite himself again by the time these lines are in print.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the Crown Hotel, Charing Cross-road, on Wednesday next at 4 p.m.

H.M. the Queen, in graciously accepting a copy of Miss Ethel de Fonblanque's patriotic poem "A Call to Arms," now being recited by Miss Decima Moore at the Tivoli, expressed her warm appreciation of its excellence and appropriateness.

Mr. Ivan Berlyn will present his new Anglo-Russian alien episode at the Canterbury on March 15. He will play Karl Veronski and Vareska Orloff. The leading female part will be performed by the well-known and gifted actress Miss East Robertson.

Dainty Daisy Dormer was the recipient of many valuable presents on the last night of the Leeds Grand Theatre pantomime. The gifts included a bag from the pricipal boy and numerous articles from the local children. No fewer than thirty boxes of chocolates were thrown on the stage during the lady's dainty rendering of "Carolina Brown."

Mr. Charles Adams, who succeeded Mr. Fred Miller as manager of the Canterbury, has been appointed district manager of the Gibbons-Barrasford halls in the metropolis. It is understood that Mr. Ernest Lepard, who was associated for some years with the Brighton Alhambra, will follow Mr. Adams at the hall across the water.

Among the merry party sent to Australia by Mr. Tom Pacey were the Three Laurels, who will fulfil a long engagement "down under" with Mr. Harry Rickards, and then go on to Africa to play at the houses controlled by the Hymans.

Miss Gipsy Woolf will be at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday next with her bright and pretty production of The Mermaids of Margate. This will be Gipsy's first appearance in town after her successful Continental tour.

It speaks well for Will Oliver's protégé, Cliff Diamond, that having only as yet played four of the syndicate halls, he is already rebooked to do the whole circuit from March 7, and at increased terms. And only eleven and a half years old!

Queen, Le Brun and Co. (five in number), who went to Australia with Mr. J. C. Williamson for six months and stayed two years, have just returned to England. Mr. George Queen is now running the great sporting absurdity, The Cockney Huntsman, entirely on his own with a specially selected company.

Mr. Will Collins, who left the Moss' Empires in February, 1908, to become general manager of what are known as the Syndicate halls, is leaving Durham House-street on Saturday to take up on Monday a similar post with the London Provincial and Continental Combination (Walter Gibbons and Thomas Barrasford). Mr. Collins will be joint manager with Mr. Harry Masters, and will give his attention mostly to the Barrasford interest.

A musical fantasy entitled The Old Willow Plate, written by Robert Wilford and composed by Mark Strong, has been winning high encomiums at the Holloway Empire during the week. It is well staged, and Mr. Herbert Cottesmore's company includes several artists well known to lovers of opera in English, comprising as it does the names of Miss Christine Gomez and Miss Ursula Graham and Messrs. John Ridding, G. P. Polson, F. Maxwell Stewart, and Maurice Wright.

Miss Kitty Colyer, the famous dancer, has been the victim of a hoax at Bath, where she has been appearing at the Hippodrome. Some practical joker advertised in the Bath Herald for three little dogs and two large dogs, to apply on Monday at the Hippodrome, and ask for Miss Colyer. The time fixed was at the start of the weekly rehearsal, and dogs were brought in such large numbers that the Hippodrome looked like a National Dog Show.

The fair artist, in her letter to the journal mentioned, says: "I know nothing of any such advertisement. I am not in the habit of playing practical jokes upon my friends and kindly patrons the public, and regret they should have been involved in some unknown person's attempt to play a trick upon me."

The Stockham Grecian Ladies' Band, consisting of fourteen ladies in beautiful Grecian costumes, is conducted by Mme. Stockham, and includes the famous Stockham Harp Trio. The curtain had to be raised four or five times at the conclusion of their turn at the Grand Theatre, Birmingham, this week. Their success must be very gratifying both to Mr. Stoll and Mme. Stockham, and their enthusiastic reception has already resulted in a number of tempting offers for home and abroad.

Friends of Mr. Vernon Noble (late of Leslie's Comedy Cadets), husband of Miss Tina Frank, will be sorry to hear of his death, which took place at the Eldon Grove Private Hospital, West Hartlepool, on Friday, Feb. 26, after a short illness. Mr. Noble, who was only twenty-eight years of age, suffered from pneumonia and enteric fever. Miss Tina Frank has cancelled her engagements for a few weeks owing to her bereavement.

Caicedo, king of the wire, who has entered the agency business, has received a commission from the management of the Gran Teatro Soriano, Barcelona, to supply artists for the programme and to transact the whole of their agency business. Caicedo is a "globe-trotter" and a cosmopolitan, and his World's Agency should prove a very successful concern.

At Amiens-street terminus, Dublin, on Sunday evening, over 100 members of the Pawnbrokers' Assistants' Association, accompanied by their past-president, Mr. Thomas Doran, the executive committee of the concert given in the Rotunda last week, and several friends, gave Mr. and Mrs. George Lashwood (Miss Edith Fink) a send-off on their leaving Dublin to fulfil an engagement in Belfast. They return to Dublin on Monday to the Empire. Mr. Lashwood was presented recently with a silver-mounted dressing-bag by the Association.

At the Music-hall Home committee meeting at the Camberwell Empire on Thursday (Harry Barnard in the chair), there were present Harry Blake, Douglas Stuart, Harry Gage, Leon Bassett, C. Cornish, Ben and Jim Obo, Jimmy Tray, and Ben Woodger (secretary). Several applications were considered. The Secretary begs to acknowledge the donation from President Thomas Barrasford of £2 10s., per P. J. Brown; Mrs. O'Brien, "Rule's," Maiden-lane, £1 1s. 10d., box collection; and Mlle. Marjutti, card, and 10s., which will appear in The Era list. The next committee meeting will be held on March 18.

The position of Chairman of the Executive of the Variety Artists' Federation will now be filled by Mr. Fred Russell, the well-known ventriloquist, who had no serious opposition to contend with. Mr. James Allison will be the vice-chairman and Mr. William Lee the treasurer.

Mr. Fred Russell, in his address, announces his intention of giving a fair trial to a policy of moderation, which he has never ceased to advocate, and directly that policy is departed from on any essential point he will consider himself at liberty to place his resignation in the hands of the executive.

He very properly adds, "There must be no shuffling and no evasion of what is the obvious intention of the arbitrator." This applies to artist and proprietor. He hopes that moderation will not be mistaken for weakness.

The charity matinée question, he considers, has engendered bad feeling, and has robbed the Federation of the support of men and women whose membership they could ill afford to lose. In the case of performances in aid of bona-fide public charities, hospitals, or benevolent or patriotic institutions, Mr. Russell thinks the artist should be allowed to act without consulting the V.A.F.

With the object of bringing about a better understanding all round, the new Chairman proposes a conference with the proprietors, when will be laid before them an excellent suggestion of Mr. Joe Elvin, and in this way arrive at a "mutually satisfactory settlement of a dispute which was never worth the trouble it has caused, and which might possibly have been avoided had a little more tact been displayed in the first instance."

The relationship of the Federation to Trade Unionism is responsible for a considerable diversity of opinion, and the matter will be fully debated in committee. Mr. Russell also proposes to appoint a Board of Control, consisting of all the chief officers, who shall be empowered to act collectively in a crisis.

In speaking of Mr. Joe O'Gorman, Mr. Russell says:—"I have been opposed to him at times when I believed him to be mistaken; but my admiration for him personally and for what he has done for the Federation has never wavered. His honesty of purpose and unfailing devotion to duty are beyond all praise."

Miss Winnie Stanhope desires to inform managers and others whom it may concern that her interests are no longer represented by Mr. Didcott.

The following subscriptions have been received for the Primrose Fund:—My Fancy, 6s.; Harry Low, 5s.; Nina Osborne, 5s.; Kenneth Altamont, 5s.; T. E. Dunville, £1 1s.; Wal Pink, £1 1s.; and Miss Vicat, 2s.

Mr. Fred Elton, the popular entertainer and composer of some of our latest novelties, has been secured by Oswald Stoll through his agent, Will Oliver, for 1909, 10, 11, and 12.

"A Dance for Life" is the title of a new scena produced by Miss Rosa Bennett at the Palace, Hammersmith, on Saturday night last. The feature of this turn is a novel dance, with a startling and dramatic climax. It has been specially arranged by Mr. John D'Auban, and was received with great enthusiasm.

A military sketch, by Mrs. Mildred Brammall, entitled The Dead-shot Brigade, was produced at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on Monday. Well acted and finely staged, it was quite worthy of a London West-end house. The Boy Scouts are given an important part, and are one of the novel features of the sketch.

The duologue Married or Photographed, presented by Warden Reed and Jennie Stevens, has already had a most successful run for over six years, and has topped the bill in England and Australia. It was recently given at Nasirabad, India, the quarters of the Durham 1st Light Infantry, and made an uproarious success, with one of the boys playing the girl's part.

"Captain Duncan and His Airship" is the title of a new "spectacular absurdietta" which made its first appearance in Manchester three weeks ago. It has been written and produced by Mr. Walter Ellis, of Sleepwalker fame. The excellent scenery alone of this new act must be a great acquisition to any bill, and the amusement it affords will no doubt make it a very great attraction. Mr. Robert Barbour and Mr. Harry Danby are responsible for the greatest share of the fun. The turn is booking rapidly, and will undoubtedly be much sought after for pantomime.

On Saturday night, while Dr. Bodie was putting himself through a stringent test by passing the full current from a 4in. spark-coil, he was seen to collapse, and great excitement prevailed. Some of the audience thought he was dead, and the curtain was immediately lowered. Meanwhile, Dr. Bodie lay in the wings, and first-aid was rendered to him. His body was perfectly rigid, with occasional convulsions, as is usual when a powerful electric shock has been received. It was not until nearly midnight that he regained consciousness and was sufficiently recovered to sit up in his dressing-room.

Many of the large audience remained in the vicinity of the hall until after midnight. As the result of the excitement caused Dr. Bodie's daughter, who is presently on a short holiday with her parents, was taken seriously ill, and is now lying in Southport, being carefully nursed by Mrs. Bodie. It is hoped she will soon be on the road to recovery. The Doctor himself has now fully recovered, although still suffering from shock, and very much bruised with the fall, but he will positively appear Monday next at the New Cross Empire, where he has been specially engaged by Mr. Oswald Stoll.

Dr. Bodie's second story of his "Harley the Hypnotist" hypnotic tales appears in this month's number of the Novel Magazine, and should be a great success. The title is "The Rival Flying Machines," being an exciting story of hypnotism and clairvoyance. Many of the leading daily papers have stated that the Doctor's latest effort is a serious rival to Sherlock Holmes and Captain Kettle, and is a new and refreshing character in fiction. He bids fair to become a very popular fiction writer.

The Pall Mall Deposit and Forwarding Co., Ltd., of Carlton-street, Regent-street, S.W., give publicity to the fact that their New York agent, Mr. Paul Tausig, of 104, East 14th Street, well known by all artists who have visited the States, will gladly, without charge, meet and assist performers arriving in New York, and will have his broker, who makes only a reasonable charge, at the pier awaiting the steamer, so that the baggage can be cleared with the least possible delay. They have a special American and Colonial Exchange Department, and always advise M. Tausig well ahead of all artists whose passages have been arranged by them, and they will be glad to give any information regarding all passenger lines, shipping baggage, and scenery, or any matter connected with the States or elsewhere. Artists going to America should ring up 3,763 Gerrard, or, better still, interview the secretary of the company, Mr. E. J. Doble.

The Terriers' Association will hold a grand ladies' concert on Sunday at the Three Stags, Kennington, at 9 p.m.

The Terriers' annual dinner and ball will be held on Sunday, March 21, at the Horns, Kennington, at 9.30 p.m.

Mr. Percy Curry and Mr. F. A. Hooper were initiated on Sunday last into the mysteries of the Terriers. Recently-made Terriers include Barney Hyams, George Brown, Fred Durban, Spangles and Sawdust, and Leo Roland.

The Corporation of the Borough of Hartlepool invite tenders from Pierrot parties for the right to give performances on the Promenade during the ensuing season. Tenders to be sent to Mr. H. W. Bell, Town Clerk, Hartlepool, not later than March 27.

We extend hands across the sea to the New York Clipper, our American variety contemporary, which marks the commencement of its fifty-seventh year by a number that is eloquent of the popularity of vaudeville in the States. The issue has many features of interest, some admirable portraits, and an artistic cover.

Miss Helena Walbran successfully produced on Monday at the Foresters' a sketch, specially written for her, entitled The Sailor's Lass, which will be played at Sadler's Wells next week.

The offer of Mr. Mansell to hold a "Territorial Night" at the Royal Palace Theatre, Ramsgate, to encourage recruiting for the local detachments has been heartily accepted by the local officers. At a meeting to deal with the arrangements, held at the Royal Palace Theatre on Thursday afternoon, Feb. 25, and presided over by the Deputy-Mayor, it was decided to hold the "Territorial Night" on Wednesday next.

A provisional programme was adopted, consisting of Bioscope pictures of military subjects, patriotic songs, and a series of tableaux—"The Past," "The Present," and "The Future," in which the boy scouts will figure. A military sub-committee has been elected to carry out the details, Major Lewis being appointed senior officer in command, Capt. Page, acting adjutant, and Mr. J. H. W. Porter, secretary.

Mr. Jesse Jewell died suddenly in Brooklyn on Feb. 14, of vertigo. Mr. Jewell had been enjoying splendid health up to five minutes previous to his death, and had been busy preparing a new act for the vaudeville theatres of America. At the time of his passing his wife and family were 3000 miles away, appearing at the Orpheum Theatre, Oakland, Cal., with the famous Jewell's Mannikins Act. Awaiting the arrival of the deceased's family, the body was embalmed, and the funeral took place on Wednesday, Feb. 17, the remains being interred in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Numerous mourners followed the hearse to the grave, and beautiful floral remembrances were sent by the United Booking Offices of America, Martin Beck, of the Orpheum Circuit, Pat Casey, White Rats of America, Mr. Frank Bostock, of London, Mr. and Mrs. James Bostock, of New York, and others too numerous to mention. Mrs. Jewell is completely prostrated, and wishes her many friends who have been so kind to her in her bereavement to accept her heartiest thanks for their many expressions of sympathy.

Referring to the Bradford City v. Sunderland football match, played at Bradford last Saturday week before 40,000 people, the Bradford Telegraph said:—"And so the Cup-tie was decided, and amongst the most salient features (to an outsider) were the delighted recognition which our Sunderland guests bestowed upon Mr. Craig, the popular manager of the Empire, when he made his appearance for a moment on the field, and which caused him to beat a precipitate and blushing retreat, to the accompaniment of shouts of 'Hello, Percy.'" Bioscope pictures of the match were shown at both the Sunderland and Bradford Empires, and some of the views show the crowd cheering Mr. Percival Craig.

At the Bradford Charity Carnival last week, held in the open air, no less than £225 was taken as a result of the efforts of the artists engaged at the local pantomimes and variety theatres. A strong attraction was the football match arranged by Mr. Percival Craig, of the Empire Theatre, between Karno's XI. (with Harry Weldon, "Stiffy," as captain) and the Bradford City Reserves.

At the general meeting of the West Hartlepool Town Council on Wednesday the plans for the new theatre to be built by Mr. Richard Thornton, and which had already been passed in committee, were submitted for approval. Councillor Fryer said he understood there was to be a bridge over the back street. Were they getting monopoly value for that? Councillor Horsley asked what attention had been paid to the question of exits and entrances? Alderman Macfarlane said he had seen the plans, and they were a great improvement on anything they had had in the town, so far as he could judge. It did, however, occur to him that there was a question with regard to the desirability or otherwise of having so large and commodious a building with such narrow streets round about. There were many streets much wider.

Alderman Sargeant stated they were not getting anything for the bridge across the back street. They did not want to impose any undue restrictions, as, according to the plans, this would be one of the most up-to-date theatres in the country. Replying to Councillor Horsley, he said that the committee and the Borough Engineer were thoroughly satisfied with the exits of the theatre and the safeguarding of the public generally. There would be everything that man could wish for from the point of view of comfort and safety. The plans were unanimously adopted.

On behalf of the Committee of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, 61, New Oxford-street, W.C., Miss Melinda May (secretary) begs most gratefully to thank Miss Hetty King for her generous gift of a guinea, Miss Flo Banks (collecting) 10s., Mrs. Jennings (Dick Turpin Co.) (collecting) 3s. 6d., Mrs. Ernest Collins (collecting) 3s. 5d., Miss Lottie Albert (collecting) 2s. 6d., Mr. Will Ellis (collecting) 2s. 6d., Mr. Tom Conover (collecting) 2s. 6d., Mrs. Schaller (collecting) 5s., Mrs. Walter Curtis 5s. (through Mrs. Joe Elvin), Mrs. Herbert D. Cohen £1 1s., subscription (through Mrs. Bradgate); Dr. Crippen, for large bottle of oil and bundles of lint (for little Willie Valesco); Dr. J. O. Dwyer, 51, Hackney-road, for promise to attend one of our pensioners that way free of any charge; Mrs. Alfred Artois, parcel baby's clothing; Miss Edith Fink (Mrs. George Lashwood), stage costumes; Miss Amy Grace (through Miss Lottie Albert), box of clothing; Mr. Edward Luke (Southsea), boxes of toys, and collecting 2s. 6d. for Miss Flora Lington, who is now at the National Sanatorium, Bournemouth. Contributions to this most deserving case should be sent direct to the Guild. Ladies of the Guild are helping at a concert in aid of St. Saviour's Hospital, Osnaburg-street, given at the Café Monico on Thursday next, March 11. Tickets for the same may be bought at the Guild, 61, New Oxford-street.

SONGS, WRITERS, AND SINGERS

MISS VESTA VICTORIA has just acquired a new song, by Fred Murray and Charles Collins, entitled "On the same place every time." Messrs. Francis and Day have secured the song.

FOR upwards of fifteen years that well-known author and composer E. W. Rogers has been threatening to write a song for Mr. Tom Costello, and has at length fulfilled his promise, and the result on Monday night, at the Granville, Walham Green, was an unmistakable and emphatic success, the chorus being taken up by the house instantly. The song is named "You're still one of the boys," and deals with the jovial recognition by a crowd of merry Stock Exchange members in the lounge of a big hotel, during the interval of a grand "smoker," of an old companion who has come down in the world.

THE song has been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day, who have already issued Mr. Costello's current comic song, which is causing hearty laughter both at the Pavilion and Granville, and which is entitled "I got married to a widow," by Joe Burley and Maurice Scott.

"THE GREAT INVASION PLAY," Miss Maidie Scott's new humorous song, will most probably be produced during the coming week at the Lyric, Liverpool. Miss Scott, who has bottomed the bill at the Granville during the week, has been photographed in a very original costume, which photograph will adorn the frontispiece of the "Invasion Play" number when issued shortly by Messrs. Francis and Day.

AMONG a number of new songs and dances about to be placed upon the market by Mr. David Day's firm are the following: "Ten a penny walnuts" (sung by Miss Bertha Stuart), by Joseph Tabrar; "Moonbeam, a dream of Cinderella," by A. J. Lawrance and Harry Gifford; "That wasn't so bad for a start" (Fred Hastings), by F. Hastings and E. A. Searson; "The boys of the Territorial Army" (Pat Rafferty), by F. W. Carter; "Billy 'Possum," two-step, by T. W. Thurban; "La Venue de Printemps," waltz, by H. R. Hood; "Rolling round on the rollers" and "There are more heavens than one," by Harry Castling and C. W. Murphy; "The Agitator" (Ernest Shand), by Tom Wick; "The last of the cabbies" (Harry Russon), by Bowker Andrews; "Don't hang your trouble on me" (Miss Sable Fern), by Frank Leo; "Let me dream" (Miss Ella Lorraine), by Harold Bagley and Donovan Meher; "I cheered as the boat went out" (Bernard Russell), by Edward Elliott and Harold Lonsdale; "Don't be angry, Mr. Bee" (Miss Amy Clevere), by G. A. Stevens; "Who's the lady?" by Harry Staunton and J. P. Long; "My little river bungalow," by George Arthurs and A. J. Lawrance; "Love's sunshine," by Miss Winifred Ethel Heard and E. Jakobowski; and "With flying colours," march, by E. Jakobowski.

MR. ARTHUR FRANCIS, the composer of the well-known "Valse Lilian," is ill with influenza, as is also Mr. Charles Osborne, and Mr. Will Hyde has just got the better of a sharp attack of pneumonia.

MR. BILLY WILLIAMS, the "Man in the Velvet Suit," has accepted a song by Harry Heath and Will Hyde, entitled "Since poor father joined the Territorials." Will Hyde has also, in conjunction with Heath, just fitted Mr. Frank Seeley with a number entitled "The little black patch my mother patched."

EVERY season has its popular ballad. This year undoubtedly the most sought after is the song entitled "Sweetheart days," which has gradually won its way into favour on its intrinsic merits. Its dainty words set to a charming and haunting melody has already caused it to be included in the répertoire of all the leading sopranos, contraltos, tenors, and baritones, as the pretty ballad is suitable for all voices. Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, the publishers, have thus early been notified by all the principal seaside entertainers of their intention to include it in their programmes. "Sweetheart days" has undoubtedly come to stay.

MESSRS. FRANCIS, DAY, AND HUNTER have much pleasure in announcing that they have arranged with Miss Ouida Macdermott to feature at all her engagements their popular number "Bravo, Territorials," with which she has already created such a furore at Bristol. In addition, Miss Macdermott has acquired from the same firm the sole rights for three months of that delightful descriptive song "In the land of the kangaroo."

MISS DAISY DORMER will introduce to English audiences the popular American success, "Are you sincere?" which is already the latest rage of America. This pretty refrain, sung with its ear-haunting melody, will fit dainty Daisy Dormer like the proverbial glove. It is another likely candidate for the hall-mark of success, namely the street organ, which has ground out so many of this little lady's popular successes.

THE professional department of Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter are having an exceptionally busy time. In addition to fixing up all the leading al-fresco entertainers with new items for the season, they have within the last few days placed new numbers with most of the leading variety stars, including George Lashwood, Hetty King, G. H. Elliott, Ouida Macdermott, Arthur Reece, Millie Legarde, Truly Shattock, Marie George, Mabel Green, Winifred Hare, Dorothy Craske, Madge Temple, Alexandra Dagmar, Bonnie Godwin's Pics., Maude Courtney, Elsie Kerry, Dora Lyric, and J. H. Milburn. Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter have another batch of winners ready for exploitation by other stars.

MISS FLORRY COOPER is producing a new song entitled "You don't know the value of the sun till the rain is coming down," which this popular vocalist thinks will be even more successful than "The stars are angels' faces."

DURING the last week or so the Von Tilzer Co. have added the following songs to their catalogue of shilling editions:—"Poor old John!" (Dan Rolyat), "Fat, Fat, Fatty Whack" (Harry Champion), "I always like to do things nice and friendly" (Harry Ford), and three of Sam Mayo's latest successes, "I felt so jolly I jumped for joy," "He's got no work to do," and "The wind blew hard from the North-South-West."

MISS GERTIE GITANA has found another winner in her new song, "When the harvest moon is shining, sweet Eileen," which is a successor to "In the evening by the moonlight, dear Louise," both numbers being published by Von Tilzer's.

A SUMMER BOOK containing fifty comic songs for pierrot work is now being prepared by the Von Tilzer Music Co., which will undoubtedly prove invaluable to all al-fresco artists needing a large répertoire. All types of songs are to be included, and the latest successes of Sam Mayo, Harry Ford, Wilkie Bard, Harry Champion, Bernard Russell, George Formby, Fred Earle, T. E. Dunville, Whit Cunliffe, Arthur Lennard, &c., &c., will figure prominently.

THESE publishers are also issuing budgets of ballads and descriptive songs, and comedy chorus numbers, full particulars of which will be found in our advertisement columns. All the above pierrot songs will be ready in about a fortnight.

"THE MOTOR CHASE."

A "Mile-a-minute" Sensation, in Five Scenes, by Sydney Blow. Music by Edward Jones. Produced by Frank Parker at the London Hippodrome, on Monday, March 1.

Duke of Stroud ..... MR. EVELYN VERNON
Walley Berkeley ..... MR. PHILIP CUNNINGHAM
Lord Winkworth ..... MR. CLIVE CURRIE
Count von Brisen ..... MR. H. LATIMER
A Loafer ..... MR. O. E. LENNON
Mr. Issy Tass ..... MR. C. W. SOMERSET
Lady Sybil Pinbury ..... MISS MAUD CRESSALL

The melodramatic devices of the Boucicaultian school of melodrama fade into insignificance when compared with the thrilling modern-day dramettas, presented with such profusion at the Hippodrome; and could some of the dramatists of the last century revisit this terrestrial sphere, they would rub their eyes with astonishment at the sensations devised with such prodigality by that ingenious stage-director, Frank Parker, who will, if we mistake not, add considerably to his already high reputation by his latest production at the Leicester-square arena. It is entitled The Motor Chase, and is described as a "mile-a-minute sensation." Considerable care has been shown in the mounting, and the ball in the drawing-room of the Duke of Stroud, which forms the opening scene, is an elaborate apartment peopled by guests who are beautifully gowned. If the Adelphi "guest" of the days of Ben Webster has departed from the theatres, he or she has found no abiding place in the houses of variety, and the whole scene of the dance, with the fashionable throng careering round in a waltz and polka has quite the aspect of Mayfair. The story is soon told. Issy Tass, a Hebrew, rich beyond the dreams of avarice, has been lending large sums of money to the Duke of Stroud, impecunious and proud. The monetary obligations of the Duke are used as a lever to make him consent to the union of his daughter, the Lady Sybil Pinbury, with Tass, who demands her hand in marriage, threatening as an alternative to make the Stroud family penniless. Lady Sybil declares that the Jew may buy everything, but he cannot buy her love. She is staunch to her sweetheart, Walley Berkeley, who is to appear at the ball that night disguised as the Count von Brisen, who has business with Tass, but has been called away. The lovers meet, and arrange to elope from Hyde Park to Plymouth, there to get married, and spend the honeymoon on Berkeley's yacht, which is lying in the harbour. As a temporary expedient to gain time, Lady Sybil pretends to accept Tass.

At Hyde Park Corner a sham carriage accident is brought about by Lord Winkworth, a friend of the young people, in order to attract the attention of Tass who is driving the fastest car in the world. Tass discovers the subterfuge, but meanwhile Lady Sybil has dismounted and joined her lover in his car. The race then commences. At a level-crossing Tass is held up by a passing train, and later, while on the point of overtaking the fugitives at a dangerous curve on the Plymouth road, his car crashes through the wall, and Tass and car are hurled to the bottom of the silent pool. There is a wonderful illustration of a railway train—complete, with an immense engine, tender, guard's van, and several carriages. A marvellous illusion is obtained by telescoping the scene. The company is well chosen. Mr. C. W. Somerset, an admirable actor of character parts, makes a cool and calculating money-lender, and every word of the dialogue of Tass is heard in the most distant portion of the gallery. Mr. Philip Cunningham plays with perfect ease and naturalness as the chivalrous Walley Berkeley; Mr. Evelyn Vernon is a dignified representative of the aristocratic Duke of Stroud; Mr. Clive Currie plays with a light touch as Lord Winkworth; and Mr. O. E. Lennon is characteristic as a loafer. Miss Maud Cressall, who looks very pretty indeed in some delightful confections, sustains the interest of the dramatic situations by her clever treatment of the part of Lady Sybil. The scenery by Messrs. Bruce Smith and J. C. Harker is well arranged and excellently painted, and Mr. Oswald Stoll may be heartily congratulated on another triumph at the Hippodrome. Mr. Frank Parker was very highly complimented on Monday by a demonstrative and thoroughly appreciative house.

"THE MAN FROM PARIS."

A Sketch, by Henry W. Barker, Produced at the Muncaster Theatre, Bootle, on Monday, Feb. 22.

Pauline ..... MISS NINA VAUGHTON
Mark Hammerton ..... MR. STANLEY S. GORDON
Lord Darborough ..... MR. ARTHUR CHISHOLM
Servant ..... MR. JOHN SAXON

This is a smart and interesting little fifteen minutes' production, and well entitled to a place in any variety programme. The story sets forth that Hammerton, a French painter of repute, has completed a picture which has attracted attention, when the impecunious Lord Darborough comes on the scene and obtains possession of it under the pretence of having it handsomely framed and placed in the French Salon. He, however, makes off to London with the picture, where he obtains a big price for it. Hammerton follows, and, disguised as an art patron, obtains entrance to Lord Darborough's house, where he engages him in a game of cards, and wins the money received for the picture. As the badly-used painter, Mr. Stanley S. Gordon acted with distinct ability; Mr. Arthur Chisholm handled the part of the rascally lord in excellent style; and Miss Vaughton showed her high qualifications in the rôle of the easily-persuaded Pauline. The sketch will shortly be presented at a West End hall.

MR. HARRY CARLTON has just written and composed a Yiddisher coon song, entitled "Ruby Rubenstein," for Jack Marks, who will produce it at the Paragon and Oxford on Monday.

MISS HETTY KING will produce immediately after pantomime two new songs, specially written for her by Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford, entitled respectively "I do make a hit with the ladies" and "Rain, Rain, go away."

As already stated in our columns, the Tynemouth Palace, which cost over £100,000 to construct, was recently purchased by a North Shields syndicate (represented by Messrs. Dodds and Johnson). It is now undergoing complete internal reconstruction, and will have a seating capacity of over 2,000. The ground floor is to be devoted to orchestra and pit stalls, which will be seated with tip-up chairs. The old side promenade has been removed, and a tier supported by steel cantilevers, capable of seating 800, has been substituted. At the rear of the circle will be a large and luxurious foyer, where about 500 patrons may see and hear the performance. The basement is to be used as a skating rink.

"EZRA SOLOMON."

Play, in One Act, by Arthur Layard and Leopold Pam, Produced at the Palace Theatre, on Monday, March 1.

Prince Sarstoff ..... MR. WILLIAM HAVILAND
Ivan ..... MR. SEBASTIAN SMITH
Anna ..... MISS LUCIE CAINE
Ezra Solomon ..... MR. LOUIS CALVERT

The advent of prominent actors on the Palace Theatre has become a weekly event, and therefore Mr. Alfred Butt's engagement of Mr. Louis Calvert to take the principal part in a sketch has not excited the comment that would have been the case even a couple of years since. Mr. Calvert appears in the title-rôle of the playlet Ezra Solomon, by Arthur Layard and Leopold Pam, and by his admirable acting does much to stimulate interest in the simple little story. The rich Ezra wishes for an audience of Prince Saratoff, High Chancellor of the Russian Empire, to plead for his support of a measure of toleration for the ancient race. Help in the attainment of his object comes to Ezra through the humble Ivan, who blacks the Prince's boots, and is the victim of a hopeless love for pretty Anna, the daughter of the Prince's lodge-keeper, whom he cannot marry for the lack of 500 roubles. Ezra promises this sum and another five hundred after the wedding, providing that Ivan will obtain for him an audience. The Prince restricts Ezra's speech to one word, but is not sparing of voluble abuse of the Jews, incidentally barbing his remarks by a quotation from Portia's speech in the Trial Scene from The Merchant of Venice. When the measure of toleration shall come on for discussion, the Prince will advocate its rejection. "Tell me, in one word what you demand of me." "Silence!" says Ezra with uplifted hands, and the curtain falls. Mr. Calvert is excellently supported by Mr. William Haviland as the Prince, Mr. Sebastion Smith as Ivan, and Miss Lucie Caine—a winsome Anna.

Of Miss Maud Allan's return to the house of her triumphs we spoke at length a fortnight since. In spite of her jeremiad against the dancing of the schools, Mr. Butt still retains his belief in the attractions of Spanish dancers—whose methods are partly founded on the Moorish—and he has brought from Seville Los Floridos—Marie and Pepe—who delight in their three numbers.

The greatest novelty of the programme is, however, the Kinemacolor, a short and appropriate name for the presentation of animated scenes and moving objects bioscoped in the actual tints of Nature. The beautiful results are the achievement of Messrs. Charles Urban and Albert Smith. Kinemacolor wholly and radically revolutionises all previously-expressed theories concerning the possibility of bringing the hues of Nature within the range of the bioscope. The scenes are taken by an ordinary Urban Bioscope camera, fitted with a prismatic screen, or colour filter. This screen, or filter, divides all the colours of the spectrum into two groups—one ranging through white and yellow, then orange and scarlet, to the darkest reds; the other, through white and yellow again (those two being at the head in luminosity and requiring the fullest representation) to green, blue-green, blue, violet, and indigo, to black.

From beginning to end there is no stencil or hand colouring in the picture at all; the newly-enlisted sunshine completely eclipses the colourist. The resultant film (as the ribbon of celluloid which bears the pictures, each no bigger than a postage stamp, is termed), though to all appearances an ordinary monochrome, or black-and-white production, becomes sensific again to the colour filter when run through the projector and shown upon the sheet—in reality, the lens of the lantern links up the colour waves and throws them upon the screen with all the gradations of tone and shade that composed the original scene. We see the original colours of roses and chrysanthemums; we gaze at the yellow of the corn in the picture of the reaper, and even the gloss on the coat of a chestnut horse is permanently registered by the new process, which bids fair to revolutionise the cinematograph industry, for the pictures are simply beautiful.

Other turns in Mr. Butt's fine bill include Contadina, an Italian lady violinist, who plays with excellent technique and expression; Miss Anita Bartling in a juggling scena, and Melville Ellis, whose pianologue might be more successful if his enunciation were clearer. One can quite easily understand Mr. J. P. Ling, who, unaided by any instrument whatever, keeps his hearers in a roar. He has certainly made a great advance as an entertainer. Arthur Prince is on a return visit; Eadie and Ramsden open the programme in Charlie's Visit; and the Palace Girls are as bright as ever. The real quality of the fine orchestra under Herman Finck comes out in the beautiful rendering of the Peer Gynt suite.

MR. WALTER STANTON is the talk of Melbourne as the Giant Dancing Rooster in the Jack and Jill pantomime produced by Mr. J. C. Williamson. It is a magnificent production, that would do credit to Old Drury. Money is being turned away at every performance, and it looks like beating all records.

THAT famous family of musicians, the Elliott-Savonas, hold the premier honours on next week's Hackney Empire bill. One of the things which the Savonas will always look back upon with the greatest of pleasure is their association with the gigantic combination raised and matured by that famous pair Barnum and Bailey. That was years ago when the present performers were very young, and owing to their immature age the American authorities arrested both Mr. Barnum and Mr. Elliott. A special performance had to be given by the children before a committee of doctors, who felt their pulses, examined their hearts, and performed other troublesome operations in order to ascertain if the performance was likely to injure the children in any way. In the end the artists won the case, and though they lost some money over it, they got an excellent advertisement. The amusing part of the affair, however, was that one of the boys was dressed as a girl when appearing before the doctors, and a full account of "her" symptoms appeared in the evidence given, and was duly reported in the papers.

THE Savonas find travelling very awkward owing to the amount of luggage which they have to carry. Altogether they travel considerably over fifty musical instruments, including three large organs, which are mounted on rostrums in the Palace of Orpheus scene, a number of dresses, a private switchboard, and scenery.

"A CRITICAL OPERATION," Cayley Calvert's new medico-comedy sketch, produced by Mr. Harry Bawn this week at Edmonton, has for its scene a doctor's surgery. On the production night the singular coincidence was discovered that three out of the four members of the cast are connected with the medical profession. One is an ex-medical student, and the fathers of two others are West End doctors at the present time. No wonder they knew so well how to treat the case.

MR. CHAS. ELDERTON, the managing-director of the Whitley Bay Amusements Company, is sparing neither trouble nor expense to increase the already numerous attractions at the Spanish City for the coming season. This year, in addition to the capital variety entertainments in the handsome pavilion, there will be many other diversions, including the Maze, Scenic Railway, Water Chute, Flying Machine, the Geo-Whizz Katzenjammer, the Flip-Flap, and other unique American attractions. Everything is expected to be completed by Whitsuntide.

"A CRITICAL OPERATION."

Sketch, by Cayley Calvert, Produced at the Empire, Edmonton, on Monday, March 1, 1909.

Charley Racket .....Mr. Edmund Baker
Tin Tacks .....Mr. Basil Lynn
Dr. Carnegus .....Mr. V. R. Gill
Bessie .....Miss Ida Chapman

Mr. Cayley Calvert's latest bid for a prize in the arena of music-hall sketches possesses the two essential elements of success—it is never dull and it is not too long. The story—what there is of it—is compact and firm; each of the four characters has a distinct individuality; the situations are adroitly worked up to; the dialogue is throughout bright and amusing, and commendably free from the taint of undue straining after brilliancy.

The plot of A Critical Operation is simple and straightforward. If in its development the clever author has, or seems to have, allowed himself to be influenced by dramatic work that has been seen before, he can at least claim to be only following in the footsteps of other dramatists much esteemed by the world, from Shakespeare downwards; and, perhaps, the presence in the cast of a young actor who has been associated with a certain character not unknown to fame may have supplied part of the inspiration.

Dr. Carnegus has a lively young assistant rejoicing in the name of Tin Tacks—the reference is not particularly clear—who, although very clever, has not yet won his spurs. He (the doctor) has also one fair daughter, Bessie, whom he loveth passing well. Needless to say, the two young people are ardently devoted to each other; but "the father of she" will not listen to any matrimonial arrangement between the young couple until the untried assistant has proved himself capable of performing a critical operation. Tin Tacks has no convenient patient on whom he can experiment, and they are on the verge of despair when there opportunely arrives on the scene a mutual friend, Charley Racket. Tin and Bessie explain to their vivacious visitor exactly how they are placed, and implore his assistance. Charley is good-naturedly delighted to do all he can, at first, but when it is explained to him that he must, for their sakes, consent to undergo an operation, he has qualms of conscience—and fear. Ultimately his scruples are overcome, and he agrees to lend a helping hand. His disinterested friendship, however, is put to a severe test when he finds that it will be necessary for him to assume petticoats, pass himself off as an elderly lady suffering from a distressing complaint, and submit to an operation in the presence of the old doctor. However, he again consents, and the change into the necessary feminine habiliments is made in view of the audience. When the disguise is effected Charley Racket presents a wonderful family resemblance to a certain well-known "Aunt" from Brazil, where the nuts come from. When he is finally induced to stretch himself on the operating couch, and prepares to undergo the great operation in the presence of the dreaded pater, the fun becomes fast and furious. Tin does his best to assume the necessary professional air of a skilful surgeon, while Bessie, charmingly got up as a nurse, aids and abets him. Needless to say, the burlesque operation is highly successful in hoodwinking the doctor, who at once removes his ban against the proposed marriage, and all ends happily.

Chief acting honours are easily won by Mr. Edmund Baker, who, when made up as the elderly patient, presents a wonderfully clever reproduction of the elderly lady already referred to. Mr. Baker's assumption is brimful of genuine humour, and never, even in its wildest moments, oversteps the line of strict decorum. A very clever performance. Mr. Basil Lynn is refreshingly bright, easy, and loquacious as the bewildered Tin Tacks, speaking his lines with distinctness and point, and acting in the best comedy spirit. Miss Ida Chapman, with, perhaps, fewer opportunities than are vouchsafed to her male accomplices, plays brightly and cleverly. Mr. V. R. Gill (whose company it is) will do better as Dr. Carnegus when the cares of management no longer interfere with the efforts of the actor. A Critical Operation has started well on what should prove a successful career.

EALING HIPPODROME.

Although not in the first blush of youth, the "golf-turn"—with variations—of the Sisters Sprightly continues to bristle with fun. In fact, with maturity, the "holes," "bunkers," and "putting greens" have multiplied their surprises until what the aunt, niece, and maid of this versatile trio are ignorant of in the way of "spoof-lofting" is not worth knowing, and an amused house is not niggardly in its acknowledgments of the vim and frolicsomeness of their sparkling little show. In their second turn "Isn't it Funny How Fashions Change; or, Dresses Now and Then," the Three Sprightlys are equally happy as amusement makers. There is the high-crowned sugar-loaf headgear of the Queen Eleanor period, the Directoire costume of the Revolution, and the pork pie, and crinoline-dressed dame made famous by John Leech. Fresh from his tour of the provinces, Primavesi presents his unique juggling act, "A Farmer's Boy" and is responsible for some clever business with his milk-can and ball manipulation, while his candle-lighting trick is a particularly neat example of juggling. As assistant he has a smart soubrette whose song "In this enchanted land," makes one wish for more of the same fare. Primavesi's bonhomie aids him greatly, and his popularity is never in doubt. Supelessi is a sort of boneless phenomenon, to whom tying knots with his own body for a cord presents no difficulties. Clothed in a epiderm of green and gold bespattered with sequins, there is something serpent-like and uncanny in all his movements; his whirling performances upon the trapeze are remarkable. Stacey and Williams, "the immaculate comedy pair," are not inexpert dancers and singers, but it is as cross-talkers that they attain the greatest success, and here they invoke volleys of laughter. Enid Errol has three pretty dances to her credit—the jester, the Chinese, and the première danseuse—and in each she foots it merrily and daintily. Chas. Lilburn, in his first song, sings of how "You are the girl I have been waiting for," while in his second number he tells of the way "He employed his time." Both chansons have merit, but "this rising comedian" would do well to supply himself with some more amusing patter.

Johnny Fuller's cat, by himself, is a very expert feline, both as a wire-walker and dancer, and Johnny must have watched long and often to be able to reproduce "Master Tom" so cleverly. Little Tich, who brings with him "King Kiko" and "Sergeant Rose," is here this week. With his first line "I am the Blokio who rules in Kokio" he starts the house laughing, and when his wonderful legs commence to "talk" it screams. As usual, some fine films are displayed by the Imperial Bioscope, while Mr. Malcolm Park's band is heard to advantage in the "Pique Dame" (Suppé) overture. Mr. J. A. Molloy, the popular manager here, is to be congratulated upon his bill of fare.

Master Max Darewski, the famous boy composer, conductor, and pianist, makes his first appearance at the Paragon on Monday next. Master Darewski has scored the greatest success all over the country, and is sure to do the same at this hall.

The energetic proprietors of Stedman's Agency have made still another addition to their already large staff in the person of Marshall Moore, the well-known producer, whom they have engaged to produce their own plays, sketches, and scenas, and also as manager of their new dramatic department.

"THE KING OF TERRORS."

By Roy Redgrave and Harry Roxbury, Produced for the First Time at the Battersea Palace on Monday, March 1.

Jack Ralston .....Mr. Bernard Mervyn
Captain Blackstock .....Mr. Wellesley Draper
Peter Gigg .....Mr. Ernie Spalding
Bessie Power .....Miss Mamie Rendle
Marion Ralston .....Miss Dorothy Kitson
Olga Lament .....Miss B. Doyle

The King of Terrors is an admirably-written sketch, in which there is a vein of domestic interest that strongly appeals to the affections of the audience; but why it is called The King of Terrors is not clearly defined. Jack Ralston, a fugitive supposed to be dead, has left a will by which his daughter Marion inherits his property; but Captain Blackstock, a so-called friend of Ralston, forges another by which Olga Lament, the child's mother, and himself obtain control of it. Jack unexpectedly returns—disguised—and overhears a conversation between the precious pair, and confounds them by his reappearance. In the meantime the child, who has been brutally treated, is slowly dying, and they are desirous of obtaining a doctor. Her father, again disguising himself, impersonates one, and is brought face to face with his daughter, and in answer to her repeated cries makes himself known to her. The others are in a terrible way owing to the return of Jack, and visiting the chi'd again cannot believe she has seen him, and the Captain gives her a severe hiding with a whip to compel her to say a prayer cursing her father. Eventually Ralston returns, and, giving the Captain a downright good thrashing, which he thoroughly deserves, the poor girl dies in his arms.

The playlet is undoubtedly well played by Mr. Bernard Mervyn and his capable company, Mr. Mervyn undertaking the arduous character of Jack Ralston, a part that requires very careful handling, as in some portions it could easily be overdone, which would spoil a good impersonation, but the artist is equal to the occasion, and must be complimented on a very fine character study. Miss Doyle as Olga Lament has a part that suits her admirably, and gives her ample opportunities of displaying those histrionic powers which she possesses, and scores a great success. Mr. Wellesley Draper is an excellent actor, and his performance of the despicable and callous Captain Blackstock is meritorious and deserving of great praise. Miss Mamie Rendle plays artistically the small but important part of Bessie Power, which adds considerably to the success of the sketch. Mr. Ernie Spalding causes amusement by his rendering of Peter Gigg; Miss Dorothy Kitson is to be complimented for her very natural playing of Marion Ralston, speaking her lines very clearly and impressively, and was heartily applauded for her performance. The sketch, which was well mounted and smartly dressed, was produced under the personal direction of Mr. Fred Baugh.

"SAVED BY WIRELESS."

Sketch, in One Scene, Produced at the Empress, Brixton, on Monday, March 1.

Dick Medway .....Mr. George Belmore
Martin Lancaster .....Mr. Arthur Ross
Harry Grant .....Mr. Gilbert Heron
Kitty Delaney .....Miss Jessie Dennis

Wireless telegraphy has at length been pressed into the service of the stage, and the result is to be seen this week at Brixton, in the shape of an engrossing sketch. A real Marconi apparatus is said to be used in the scene, which is laid at an operating station on the coast of Ireland, and affords quite a lesson—rudimentary, it is true—in the intricacies of the system. There is no lack of sensational episodes, and an ingenious story is woven round the schemes of a young operator named Harry Grant to gain wealth by easy means. Having elaborated the Marconi principle so that he can convey messages to any part of the world, he forms a plan by which the winners of the French races are to be transmitted to New York ahead of the cables and the horses heavily backed before the news can reach the city in the ordinary way. Harry arrives at the telegraph station where his friend Dick Medway is in command, and having got him out of the way by a ruse, he prepares for his task in the presence of his confederate, the unscrupulous Martin Lancaster. Before he can apply himself to business, however, a message comes from a stranded ship which has caught fire in mid-ocean. It proves to be the vessel in which Harry's wife and child are travelling, and the young man, realising that he is being punished for his intended crime, would give up his nefarious project, but is compelled by Lancaster at the point of a revolver to carry on the work, until Harry gets possession of another pistol and forces Lancaster to depart. Harry works the signals feverishly, in the forlorn hope that some ship may go to the rescue of the burning vessel, but in vain, and in despair he clutches the revolver and places it to his forehead. The weapon is snatched from his hand by Dick Medway, who returns in the nick of time, and the movement of the machine denotes that a message is being delivered. The tape is eagerly scanned, and Harry learns that his efforts had not been ineffectual, and that his wife and child had been picked up safe and sound by a homeward-bound steamer.

The sketch was followed with rapt attention by the audience, and at its close the performers were loudly cheered. Good work was done by Mr. Gilbert Heron, who acted the difficult part of the young inventor with power and intensity. He received effective support from Mr. George Belmore as Dick Medway and from Mr. Arthur Ross, who made a cool and sardonic scoundrel of Martin Lancaster. The mounting was very realistic, the electric coil, the receiver, and the "co-hearer" appearing to the uninitiated to be copied in every detail.

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

"THE WISHING WELL."

Madge .....Miss Hasker
Officer .....Mr. Lionel Rothery
Tommy .....Mr. James Glover
Sally .....Miss Emmie Glover
Dairymaids .....Miss Benham, Miss Lily Kendall, Miss Kate Temple
Gleaners .....Miss Kendall, Mr. Edgar

Amongst the excellent turns presented on Monday evening at the Middlesex was an attractive musical sketch, which was accorded a capital welcome. Miss Edith Summers, the authoress, is to be congratulated upon this, her first work staged at a legitimate music hall, and much should be seen of it in the future. The scene opens with the return from the Islington Dairy Show of prettily-costumed dairymaids, who sing of their experiences, as does Sally (Miss Emmie Glover), the maid-of-all-work, who superintends operations while the country girls are in London. The three maids had found lovers during their visit, as had Sally, in the person of a soldier. The legend of "The Wishing Well," so well-known to country folk, is introduced in one scene. The curtain rises on a pretty farm scene, the well, country cottage, and many implements used in the pursuit of agriculture being displayed. Melodious, catchy songs have been expressly written for the sketch by Mr. James Glover, especially "Three little dairymaids are we," "The Territorial" (delivered by Sally's soldier lover), and a comic duet, "Proverbs," anent the tale of "The Wishing Well." The cast includes Mr. Lionel Rothery, Miss Dolly Hasker, Miss Emmie Glover, Mr. James Glover, Miss Kendall, Miss Temple, and Miss Maud Benham. The Wishing Well is certainly an exceedingly pretty production, and those present at the first performance on Monday predicted for it an assured success and a long run.

Miss Tressie Stuart, of Stuart and Stuart, wishes to thank Mrs. Royston Dene for handsome diamond bracelet, presented to her at the Standard, Pimlico, last week

Monday next has been fixed by the directors of the Empire Theatre for the return of the famous juggler Maurice Cronin and his merry men. The skill of Mr. Cronin and his company has been already witnessed by Empire audiences, and his return visit with an entirely revised performance will be of considerable interest.

The will has been proved of the late Mr. James Lynam Molloy, the popular song composer, the value of the estate being £2,083. Mr. Molloy, who lived at Hambledon, Bucks, and was a barrister, acted as a war correspondent during the Franco-German war. Among the most popular of his songs were "The Carnival," "Love's old sweet song," "The Vagabond," and "By the river."

WATER RATS' BALL.

The annual ball of that delightful fraternity known as the Water Rats started on Thursday night, and came to a conclusion a little after five o'clock yesterday morning. The function was held in the Empire Rooms at the Trocadero, the presiding spirit being, of course, King Rat (Mr. Fred Ginnett). Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Le Fre, Mr. Sidney Wood, Dr. and Mrs. Crippin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Martinetti, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Bartram, Mr. Ben Brown, Mr. Burt Shepard, Mr. Frank Macnaghten, Mr. "Papa" Brown, Mr. Geo. Hughes, Mr. B. Carslake, Mr. G. Fraser, Mr. E. W. Manning, Mr. and Mrs. Protti, Miss Susie Ungley, Mr. and Mrs. Bayly, Mr. and Mrs. Coutts, Mr. and Mrs. "My Fancy," Dr. Goldberg, Mrs. Jules Jordan, the Sisters Macarte, Mr. and Mrs. Cruickshank, Mrs. Mayer, Miss Selkirk, Mr. C. P. Richards, Mr. Victor Kelly, Mr. Fred Reeves, Mr. Will Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Landsman, Miss Greenhill, Miss Fox, Mr. Dibdin Lewis, Miss Wright, Mr. Lionel Carson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Murray, Mr. Jesse Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. F. Cass, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Osborne, Mr. and Mrs. Farland, Mr. Fred Russell, Mr. Dick Kendal, Miss Florence Kendall, Miss Marie Kendall, Mr. Steve McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maple, Dr. and Mrs. Robertson, Miss Sohl, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Austin, Mr. Geo. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Aylin, Mr. W. H. Clemart, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, Miss Annie Wood, Miss Maud Wood, Miss Rose Hamilton, Mr. M. Hyman, Mr. Ben Dillon, Mr. W. Griggs, Mr. T. F. Dawe, Miss Clara Beck, Apollo, Mr. Danny Maher, Mr. G. Williamson, Mr. Wilkinson, Mr. H. Rich, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Levy, Mrs. Shaw, Mr. W. Cobbett, Mr. H. G. Hibbert, Mr. Fred Karno, Mr. L. Zeitlin, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hargreaves (Ella Shields), Miss Hardy, and Mr. Holt.

There was a capital programme of dances, and in connection with these the Rats had the very able assistance of Mr. Knightsmith as master of the ceremonies, and many merry little scenes were enacted. Supper was partaken of about two o'clock, King Rat being in the chair. The speeches were commendably brief. After the loyal toasts had been heartily honoured, King Rat proposed "The Visitors." He said that it gave him very great pleasure to see all parties connected with the music hall interests present. During the past two years they had been fighting against serious troubles. He was of the opinion that the proprietors would be perfectly willing to meet the artists more frequently than they did, and he thought that they could get over all their little difficulties without fighting at all. They could not live without the proprietors and the agents, and the best thing they could do would be to bury the hatchet. He had very great pleasure in welcoming their visitors.

Mr. James J. Morton, a prominent member of the Vaudeville Comedy Club and the White Rats of America, who has been appearing at the Palace Theatre recently, replied on behalf of the visitors. He stated that he had never met with a more manly lot of men, a more jovial set of good fellows, and a more open-hearted "gang" of boys than he had since he had been in London. If visitors from America had the commonsense to go where they belonged—among their brother professionals—he did not think there would be any need for any visitors at all. There was only a pond between England and America, and their language was the same, and they were all brothers and sisters. He had never had such a pleasant nine weeks in his life as since he had been in England.

Apollo briefly proposed "The Ladies," and Mrs. Ginnett gracefully responded.

Mr. H. G. Hibbert proposed the health of King Rat, and after the toast had been drunk amid musical honours, Mr. Ginnett expressed his thanks for the compliment which had been paid to him.

STOPPING A SALARY.

In an action tried at Bloomsbury County Court on March 4, 1909, a matter of some importance to music hall proprietors was determined. Amos Howard sued the Macnaghten Vaudeville Circuit for £10 16s. 8d., being one week's salary due to him for a week's performance at defendant's hall at Bradford during the week commencing Jan. 25, 1909.

The plaintiff was engaged by the defendant to appear at Hartlepool during the week commencing Feb. 1, 1909.

On Jan. 28 Howard declared his intention of not appearing at Hartlepool during the week following, and Mr. Fred Baugh, manager for the defendant, informed Howard that his salary would not be paid for Bradford, but would be kept by the defendant as a set-off against the damage the defendant would suffer through the plaintiff not appearing at Hartlepool.

The plaintiff sued for his week's salary, and the defendant counter-claimed for £10 damages for plaintiff not appearing.

Mr. Doughty, instructed by Judge and Priestly, said the plaintiff's claim was admitted, and that it was upon the defendant to show whether he could succeed on his counter-claim.

Mr. Martin O'Connor, instructed by Blackwell and Co., said that the defendant was justified in doing what he did. At the moment the plaintiff informed the defendant that he would not appear at Hartlepool, damages to the amount of the salary that would be paid to the plaintiff became due to the defendant from the plaintiff. That being so, the defendant was entitled to deduct these damages from the salary of the preceding week. All the plaintiff could be entitled to was 16s. 8d., the difference in salary between Bradford and Hartlepool. That amount had been paid into Court.

Mr. E. Edelsten was subpœnaed by the defendant to prove that he booked the plaintiff for Hartlepool, and that the engagement was made subject to the Arbitrator's award. Mr. Doughty contended that the agent was the agent of the defendant, and that the agent had offered other engagements to the plaintiff, which the defendant did not confirm; that the refusal by the defendant to confirm these justified the plaintiff in refusing to go on.

His Honour held that that evidence was inadmissible, as it was quite clear the plaintiff had agreed to appear at Hartlepool, and the defendant was entitled to hold the money due to the plaintiff for breach of contract at Hartlepool.

Judge Bacon held that the 16s. 8d. paid into Court, together with the 2s. costs, settled the plaintiff's claim, and entered judgment for Mr. Macnaghten, together with costs on the counter-claim.

Mons. Jules Charmettes, the Anglo-French eccentric, otherwise the French Harry Lauder, will be at the Olympia, Shoreditch, on Monday next.

Mr. Harry Day, whose health of late has not been all that his best friends could desire, is taking the cure at Bath, and improving rapidly.

The latest quotations for music hall shares are as follow:—Alhambra, 1 7-16; Canterbury, ½; Empire (15s. paid), 1⅞; ditto (10s. paid), 1⅛; London Pavilion Ord., 3⅜; ditto, Pref., 5; Metropolitan, ⅜; Moss Empire, 5 3-16; ditto, 5 per cent. Pref., 4½; Oxford, 6⅜; Palace, 19s.; Tivoli, 6½; United Varieties, 1; Variety Consolidated Theatres, 9-16.

Miss Madge Temple has been scoring a great success this week at Middlesbrough. Her rendering of those delightful songs "Sue, Sue, Sue" and "Come, be my rainbow" has established her as an artist of the highest order. She has caused great amusement with her matinée hat and song. It was her first appearance in the town, and judging from her success she will soon be there again.

SHILLING COLLECTION FOR THE
MUSIC HALL HOME.

2,476 SHILLINGS.

In again directing the attention of our readers to The Era's Shilling Fund on behalf of the Music Hall Home we are in the happy position of being able to associate with the appeal thus being made the name of the foremost music hall comedienne—Miss Marie Lloyd. It seems scarcely necessary to remind our readers of the deep interest Miss Lloyd has ever taken in matters affecting the welfare of her brothers and sisters of the variety profession. It is her desire that her "year" will be marked by a considerable increase in the subscriptions of previous years, and she therefore, through The Era, commends the Music Hall Home to the charitably-minded. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the President of the Fund, is again this year exerting himself in its behalf, and this fact is sufficient indication that he is satisfied as to the way in which the institution is being conducted, and that he considers it worthy of support.

Mr. Ben Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, tells us that in 1907 the inmates averaged ten, but that in 1908 there have been as many as twelve. The address of the Home is 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, and there the matron (Mrs. Fruin) busies herself for the comfort and convenience of her "family." At present there are eleven of these, and the desire is to increase the number, which can only be done when sufficient funds for the purpose are collected. During the past twelve months three or four of the inmates have recovered their health and strength sufficiently to enable them to look for engagements. These secured, they left the Home, and the vacancies thereby created were immediately filled up. Now, this Home requires keeping up, and it cannot be kept up on air. There is no need for us to refer to all the good work which has been performed by the institution in the past, as that must for the most part be within the recollection of our readers. The ages of the inmates range from fifty to seventy-six. In all probability these men will be maintained in the Home until the day of their death, and their funeral expenses paid for out of the funds of the Home.

The Era's Shilling Fund is the main source of income to the Home, and this means of sustenance is added to by the donations of artists, either given directly, or through the collecting boxes through which many managers of variety theatres collect pennies from "dead-heads" and from artists who desire free admission.

Anyone can be supplied with a collecting-card by sending a postcard to Mr. Woodger.

Briefly, we may once more repeat that the objects of the Music Hall Home Fund are to provide shelter for deserving members of the variety profession who have been stricken with poverty or illness in their declining years, or who have in other ways fallen on evil times. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, will be pleased to receive filled-up collecting cards addressed to him at The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., and to acknowledge them in these columns.

These firms have agreed that they will supply films in Europe (including Great Britain) only on the conditions set out below :—

1. No film shall be lent or hired out by the purchaser or by any person to whom he may sell or hand over the same at a less rate than that specified in the Schedule of Hiring Charges following, and any purchaser selling or handing over any film shall take all necessary steps to ensure that this condition is duly observed.
2. Under no circumstances shall the trade mark or the identification number or mark on any film be removed, destroyed, or mutilated.
3. No film shall be allowed to enter France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, or Austria-Hungary, or any other country of which notice may be given from time to time by the signatories or some person authorised on their behalf, except on the condition that such film be returned into the hands of the signatory from whom same was purchased, carriage paid, with all trade and identification marks intact, within four calendar months of the date of receipt of such film by the purchaser, who shall be responsible for, and who shall take all necessary steps to ensure, such return.

   NOTE.—Exception is made in the case of films which are exclusively for scientific purposes and not used for public exhibition before a paying audience.
4. Any film supplied on approbation shall be returned undamaged within forty-eight hours of its receipt, and shall not in the meantime be used for the purpose of public exhibition or shown before a paying audience, and if so used it shall be deemed to be purchased.
5. Every film shall be paid for by the purchaser within thirty days from the end of the calendar month during which the same was despatched to him, and no discount shall be allowed under any circumstances.
6. Films shall not hereafter be purchased or obtained by the purchaser from any person, firm, or company, other than the signatories, neither shall a purchaser or his servants or agents use any film other than one produced or furnished by one of the signatories.

Schedule of Minimum Hiring Charges per 1,000 feet and pro rata.

To come into operation March 1, 1909.

For the first six weeks from the date of publication :—

Plain Films, per week 50s., per one day 25s., per two or three consecutive days 37s. 6d.

THE CRISIS IN THE CINEMATOGRAPH WORLD.

NEWS FROM ALL SIDES.

We are inviting the free expression of opinion from all sides on this great question. We realise that the issues at stake are too important to be dealt with consistently and effectively without the most careful thought and liberal consideration for the film-users as well as the film-makers. It is all to the good that the film-users have organised themselves. The Makers' Union has now an organised body to face—an authority able to speak for, and to act for, the whole body of film-users. As in the allied professions and industries of the amusement world, the trade societies have been brought together in times of serious crises; so now in the cinematograph world the serious crisis will be met, and peace, it is hoped, will be secured after both sides have got together at a round table conference—where, under an impartial chairman, the differences may be adjusted, and the real interests of the trade and business of cinematography may be placed on a permanent basis. Why not a conference? We assume that there are real difficulties in the manufacture and distribution of films that have led to the powerful union of makers. We need not assume (at least, not on merely ex parte statements) that the object of the Makers' Union is to corner the business of making films in Europe and to dictate prices and terms of distribution. It may look like it; but is it? Let the whole transaction of forming the Makers' Union be before us, and then will be the time to give judgment. We have heard (nay, we have seen) the articles of association, and we know the prospective power of a combination so obviously strong. We are told (semi-officially at least) that even people in the Union view its great power with alarm.

We also know that film-users condemn the proposals that came into force on March 1 with a unanimity that is striking in its vehemence and volume.

Film-users on the Question.

An extremely important section of film-users are the travelling showmen. It is no exaggeration to say that next to the introduction of steam and electric power riding machines, the cinematograph theatre is the greatest revolution in the British and Continental show business.

The showmen are already organised, and have powerful trade societies to act in their interests.

The guild chaplain and organiser, the Rev. T. Horne, acting on the advice and authority of the guild president, Mr. Patrick Collins, attended the private meeting of the customers of Pathé Frères called last week by that firm. After hearing the opinion of such experts in the business as Messrs. Griffiths, Jury, Henderson, Lever, Haggar, and Jacob Studt, Mr. Horne, as representing the large interests of the showmen of Great Britain, warned the conveners of the gathering that whatever might be thought good enough trade methods for the Continent would not be accepted by British users of films without full proof that the new methods were for the general good. He laid particular emphasis upon the economic fact that Great Britain was a Free Trade country; that the "American combine idea" was abhorrent to all right-thinking Britons; that to attempt to corner the film-making business and to dictate terms to the users was too big a venture to succeed in Great Britain.

Speaking as the accredited representative of the organised showpeople, and in the name of Patrick Collins, the leader and president of the Federated Societies of Showland, he expressed his strong conviction that such schemes, however skilfully engineered, were foredoomed to failure.

The guild chaplain's words of warning to the Film-Makers' Union were most warmly endorsed by the representatives of the business present.

We now submit a few opinions, giving first place to the president of the Showmen's Guild. Writing, Mr. Patrick Collins says :

"Dear Mr. Horne,—I am exceedingly obliged for your long and explicit letter re Cinematograph Film Makers' Combine meeting. Showmen could not afford to hire films on the proposed terms; our business is different from the music-hall business. In halls they can run one spool of films daily for a week, and then send it on to the next hall, while they receive a fresh spool from another hall. They work in circuit, and only change their programme once a week. We on the fair-grounds have to change our programme daily, sometimes twice a day, till we hit the taste of our public. We must carry many hundreds of pounds worth of films with us, to enable us to give good entertainments. And as our films are worked so many times a day, they wear out quicker than those used in halls, so that the film maker would continually complain about their condition when returned, and soon would want to charge us more again. I doubt that all makers will join, and if they do, new ones will spring up and sell films outright. Thanking you again for the interest and trouble you have taken, believe me, yours faithfully. "P. Collins.

Other Opinions on the Subject.

Mr. James Leo, a well-known showman, and formerly proprietor of a cinematograph theatre, has given us his opinion and that of the Midland showmen he has been in touch with since the crisis began. He admits that, judged by the circulars sent out by the allied manufactures, and now in the hands of their showmen customers, the combination of film makers is a big thing. He does not deny its power to harden prices, and for a time to control the output. He is, however, sure that the "combine"—for so he does not hesitate to call it—will find that the exhibitors as a body will be too strong for them. We need not give his excellent letter in extenso, as Mr. Collins has covered (and effectively) most of the ground in his letter given above. He points out that showmen who are enterprising enough to sink a capital of between four and five thousand pounds in a portable palace of cinematography are certainly able enough to make their own films should necessity drive them to that extreme course. He emphasises the obvious fact that there is no law in Great Britain against starting film manufacture; that the showmen alone could find the capital and the skilled workers to do this. He is amazed at the fatuity of the promoters of the new scheme in that they persist in imposing conditions irksome to every user of films, and especially detrimental to the show business.

A French colleague of Mr. Leo sends to his English confrères the news that already the French showmen have taken steps to form a syndicate to make their own films. The entente cordiale is so real a fact that perhaps it may be well (if driven to it) for the French and English film users to combine forces.

We shall be glad to receive the views of other users, and also equally glad to hear what the promoters of the new conditions in the cinematograph films trade may have to say.

Dudley Spring Fair.

Here were some of the principal show and machine attractions of P. Collins and Son, the superb palace of cinematography, "Wonderland," the new two racing motors, and the steam yachts. Houp-las were to the fore, and well provided by Messrs. Hayes, Harris, Wagstaff, Cooper, and Chaplain. The shooters were by Messrs. Dobson, Ford, and Humphreys. The other caterers with novelty stalls and throwing games were Messrs. Cooper and Wilson and several others whose names did not transpire.

Notes from Wales.

Wadebook's Cinematograph and Palace of Varieties continues to draw big houses at Maesteg. A film which proves a big draw is that of the Britt and Summers Fight, while other pictures equally as interesting are being shown. Rex and Ford are responsible for the comedy element.

Electric Theatres (1908), Ltd., have taken over the sites arranged for by Provincial Electric Theatres, Ltd., with a view to extending their operations throughout the provinces.

THE GINNETT-SANGER WEDDING

The marriage arranged between Mr. J. F. Ginnett, eldest son of Mr. Fred Ginnett, and Miss Maud Sanger, third daughter of Lord John Sanger, was solemnised at Burstow Parish Church, on Tuesday, March 2. A reception was afterwards held by Mr. and Mrs. John Sanger at their residence, Burstow Lodge, Horley, Surrey.

A large company of guests were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ginnett, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. George Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. James Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. H. Austin, Mr. and Mrs. S. Lockhart, Mr. W. Pinder (grandfather

THE CHITTOCK FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Permit us once more, through your columns, to express our sincere thanks to the ladies and gentlemen of the showman and travellers' community for the gracious way in which they have contributed towards our defence fund. In meeting two law suits none of us like to lose our homes, be they good or bad. Law suits are distressing, even to the rich, and to the less fortunate even more so. Great praise and thanks are due to Mrs. E. J. Panton, of 34, Torrington-square, W.C., the home of the showman traveller when in town. This lady will receive and be thankful for the smallest donations. The fund will be open until March 16. This is a bad time of year to ask of our fellow travellers, but if they cannot send large sums, send small. A penny will be received with thanks as well as a pound, and the names of all will be made public in this paper.

This is a list of the names of ladies and gentlemen who have already subscribed :—Mrs. E. Panton and personal friends, £5; Mr. Reed, £2; Unknown Subscriber, £2; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chipperfield, £1 10s.; Mr. James Chipperfield, £1 5s.; Mr. Henry Chipperfield, £1 5s.; Mr. and Mrs. Hanniford, £1; Mr. W. Wilson, £1; Miss Minnie Chipperfield, £1; Mr. Charles Day, £1; Mr. John Hastings, £1; Mrs. George Kemp, 5s.; Mrs. W. Wilson, 4s.; Mrs. Henry Powell, 2s.; Mrs. Richard Pettigrove, 2s.; Mr. Charles Simpson, 2s.; Mrs. Frank Wilson, 2s.; Miss Rose Sedgewick, 1s. 6d.; Mrs. Bennett, 1s.; Mrs. Le Neve, 1s.; Mrs. Elijah Ball, 1s.; Mrs. G. Lee, 1s.; Mr. Manning, 1s.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Manning, 1s.

If any of the ladies or gentlemen whose names and subscriptions have been omitted will send Mrs. Chittock a postcard, Acton Green, Chiswick, London, it will be acknowledged in next week's Era.—Thanking you all, allow us to remain, Dear Sir, yours sincerely,

JAMES AND SOPHIA CHITTOCK.

White City, Old Trafford (proprietor, Mr. John Calvin Brown).—Mr. Brown has arranged to have Gilleno's circus—which was a source of much enjoyment when it was here the first season—in this beautiful amusement park, which opens in a few weeks. The Japanese Puzzle House, which was a popular attraction at the Franco-British Exhibition last year, is one of the novelties for this season here.

Wombwell's Show at Gloucester.

Bostock and Wombwell's menagerie was located here on March 2, and had crowded houses at each performance. A local publican entered the lion's den at the evening show, and drew a big audience.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE.

Second Series.
[Copyright.]
By the Rev. Thomas Horne
(Chaplain to the Showmen's Guild).
"TELLING THE TALE."
The Old Doorsman's Reminiscences.

Scene I.

Picture a venerable showman resting in the plenitude of a grand old age. At home surrounded by every comfort of life, his children, "even unto the third and fourth generation," around him. Sitting in his garden in the glorious sunset of a summer day, the old man is in "The glory cloud of precious memories." He sees pictures in the sky, and muses thus :

'Tis the sunset of life, so I sit here and muse
Of the long, long ago till my old brains refuse
To think any longer—or to answer the test—
After full ninety years the "brainpan" must rest.
Yet, most wonderful pictures I pass in review,
Life's Panorama—all the scenes I've been through—Things won and lost, things done and said, find their true niche,
When the world is the show, when the mind is the pitch.
Not freaks of the brain, but a mind richly blest
With the schooling of life, at its worst, at its best.
So I'll "Tell you the tale" as the scenes quickly change—
To repeat the old patter, "A tale passing strange."

Scene II.

The dear old showman seer recalls—

Memories of Lynn Mart.

I would winter in town, then in springtime would start
The Great Round of England, at the Fair of Lynn Mart.
Showmen travell'd by road in the great long ago
Before railways and tractors—we travell'd the show.
Over highways and byways, in the sunshine or rain;
Could I live my life over I would do it again.
Memories of Lynn grow as flowers round my heart,
There in the late fifties Sanger's circus did start;
It was but a small tent, I remember it well,
With George on the run-up what a "Tale" could he tell.
Ah! he could "Tell the Tale." He could draw the whole town—
Outside with his "patter," in the ring with the clown.
It was there at King's Lynn Fred'rick Savage began
His world-famous machines to make and to plan :
Of bike track, of switchback, gondolas as well,
Of gallopers and motors—what a "Tale one could tell"!

Scene III.

Still in rapt vision he continues his tale.

Memories of Knott Mill Fair.

Well do I remember Manchester's Great Fair—
When the best in the kingdom were gathered
there—
When the people flocked in from the big towns around,
When great Wombwell and Pablo stood on their old ground;
"Chorus Tommie" with Dollies was just all the rage,
When old Lomas, the Mummer, with kids of the stage;
When old Billie Strand started wild beast;
When the bells of St. Matthew rang out Easter
Feast;
When the stalls lined Deansgate right up to the Fair,
And Fearn's pannum stall was the entrance there;
When young Randall Williams began his great life
With his two waggon load and clever young wife—
I picture them now as they worked with a will :
She danced in her tartans, he pattered with skill.
He could "Tell the Tale," for the people must know
The mystery and mirth of his conjuring show.

Scene IV.

A Vision of Old Glasgow Fair.

The shows were all pitched on Old Glasgow Green;
The best in Great Britain were there to be seen :
Menagerie and circus, with shows great and small,
On the Green's great quadrangle, I remember them
all.
I was Doorsman for Ewing's, the big waxwork
show,
And "Telling the Tale," for the people must know
The song of the famous that history sings,
The world's greatest heroes, its leaders, its kings.
I was careful to tell them that inside we'd got Burns, their own poet, old Margery Scott,
Rob Roy Macgregor, Great Wallace, and Bruce,
The most lifelike models art could produce.
A great group historic inside could be seen—
The beheading of Mary, their sweet martyr Queen.
Ah, that was the magnet that drew without fail,
As I stood on the steps "Telling the Tale."

Scene V.

A Vision of Old Bartholomew Fair.

Once London could boast of old England's best
Fair,
For the showmen from all parts were gathered
there.
'Twas in the early forties of the century past—
When each Fair at Smithfield was condemned as the last—
That I stood on the steps of George Wombwell's great show
And was "Telling the Tale," for the people must know
Of the wonders of nature treasured within,
Of the great lion-fight about to begin;
That Tim Newsome, the tamer, the bravest of men,
With sixteen mighty lions performed in the den,
Man's power o'er the brute he'd show to them
there,
How he hunted the lion in his African lair.
Then we'd birds, beasts, and reptiles from every clime;
That the charge was but sixpence—it was then feeding-time—
When the band ceased to play, most positively then
The great lion-tamer would enter the den.
Thus I stood on the steps of Wombwell's great show
"Telling the Tale" for the wide world to know.

Scene VI.

Memories of Nottingham Goose Fair.

When the story of Britain's great fairs is told Nottingham Goose Fair will be written in gold;
Where'er Britons meet, our mother tongue spoken,
Nottingham's proud record will stand yet unbroken.
Whilst other towns neglected or killed their old fairs,
Nottingham men cherished and built up theirs.
For full sixty years I ne'er missed a fair,
I picture the showmen I've been Doorsman for
there—
George Wombwell, Billy Manders, Batty, and Day,
In the years when wild beast shows held popular sway.
I remember the rise of the marionette show,
When Walter Calver and Holden were just "all the go,"
Till the great ghost illusion overshadowed them
all—
Randall Williams and Bailey and bluff Harry Wall.
But the marvel of all the great changes I've seen
Was the rise and perfection of the riding machine.
In my old age I ponder, till thinking powers fail.
But as I have remembered I have told you "The Tale."

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

FILM GOSSIP.

Showmen and Managers throughout the United Kingdom, and in every English-speaking country, will find in this column particulars of some of the best and newest Films in the Market. Many of these Films we have seen ourselves, and can confidently recommend showmen to add them to their list of attractions.

Pathé Frères.

THE GOLD PROSPECTORS.—Under this title Messrs. Pathé have produced an interesting dramatic film. At the camp the gold prospectors are making ready to proceed on their way, with the help of a youth who has just joined the party. After a long ride the horses are unharnessed and put to graze in a fresh place while the prospectors set to work, and a few hours later they are able to bag some nuggets which form the commencement of their future fortune. In a savage and rocky spot, a gang of pirates of the plain are plotting to bereave the prospectors of their gold. A scout is now riding towards the encampment, but the young prospector recruit is lying in wait behind a rock for a bird he is covering with his gun, when he perceives the robber, and understanding that danger is hovering over his friends he gives the alarm. The horseman, noticing that he has been seen, disappears in the distance. The prospectors, after loading their guns, ride away to the camp. On their arrival the bags are taken from the horses' saddles and carried into the hut, outside which a sentry is being placed. Then they have time to greet their families properly. Meanwhile, the scout has returned to his confederates in the mountains, who are not long in jumping on to their saddles and repairing to the prospectors' camp. The latter are now enjoying themselves round a bright fire, and their placid features do not betray the least suspicion of the enemy's approach. The sentry seems to be asleep. One of the thieves, using some of the tricks of the Red Indians, skirts the hut, and arriving near the man on watch, stabs him with his knife. In a short time the hut is ransacked, the bags of gold are slung on to the saddles, and away go the gang through the limitless prairies. The gold prospectors, soon finding out the theft, follow the pirates' trail, and arrive before a grotto at the entrance to which a man is keeping watch. Bullets are exchanged, and after a hot fight the prospectors, who have the best weapons, take back their belongings. The boy, armed by his father, kills the last opponent and becomes the hero of the day.

THE SHROVE-TUESDAY TURKEY.—The maid has just put a superb turkey on the table, stuffed with truffles, and Jane and George Darling, aged eight and five respectively, think they would like to taste it; but the servant coming in at that very moment, threatens to give the fowl to the Bogey man, at the same time as she puts it on the window-sill. A young male friend of the family takes the dish away in order to play a trick on them. Just then he perceives, coming towards him, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Darling, who shake hands with him, and invite him to partake of the Shrove Tuesday turkey, which is by now in a sewer-main, for he has disastrously thrown it away at the sight of his friends. The poultry is taken from the sewer-main by an urchin, who carries it to his humble home; but his mother, after enquiring as to the source of supply, orders him to restore the turkey to its owner. Meanwhile, the young guest, having promised to the desperate Darlings to replace the missing fowl, finds the little boy near the entrance to the sewer, and taking the turkey from him gives him some money, and restores the appetising turkey to its former place on the table, where everybody does it justice.

BAD EXAMPLE.—In front of a whitewashed house, where her two children are playing, a mother tries vainly to keep her husband from going to the public-house. As she cannot make the man heed her remonstrances, she sends her boy to watch him. A horse dealer comes and sits down beside the father and his friend, and unsuspectingly speaks about his business, a bargain just sealed for the sale of two magnificent draught-horses. The bad friend plays his part of the eavesdropper to perfection, and after making sure that the workman is in his cups, he goes with him to a place the horse dealer must pass on his way home. As soon as he sees the merchant he assaults him, and is on the point of appropriating his money, when the workman's son, who has followed from a distance, comes up in order to prevent him from executing his black designs. The assailant is so frightened that he takes to his heels. The boy runs home, and soon comes back with his mother. The two at last succeed in carrying the wounded man to their house, where they nurse him carefully. At last he recovers, and thanks profusely those he calls his rescuers, while the culprit is overcome with grief and remorse.

DANCING THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.—People of different countries are seen performing their national dances: Brittany displays its motley crowd of clog-shod peasants slowly keeping time in the open air with the tune played on the bagpipe. Chinese women, famous for the smallness of their feet, dance with diminutive movements. Caucasian girls, possessed of gliding steps, alternate with South African dancers, imitating the ostrich in a most ludicrous manner, while the Japanese women gracefully move their be-jewelled hands and smile, and Spain presents us with the Bolero and the Fandange, danced to the accompaniment of guitars and castanets.

THE LEADER.—The foreman is having his midday meal at home, surrounded by his happy family. The father and elder son go to work soon after with their joiner's tools thrown over their shoulders. The factory owner, who is watching his workmen as they come in, dismisses one of them whom he sees smoking on the premises during working hours. The man is a lazy creature imbued with ideas of revolt, who posts himself the following evening outside the gates, in order to lure his fellow-workers into a strike. He succeeds entirely in causing them to sign a petition demanding an increase of salary of 1d. per working hour, at the same time as a decrease of two hours' working time per day. A deputation of workmen is sent to the works' owner, who refuses to grant anything; after this the workmen hold a meeting, during which threats are uttered. The foreman comes in with his two small children. "Who will feed them," says he, "You? for I have no money. I shall go to work to-morrow, and woe to those who stand in my way!" The foreman withdraws after this speech, under the threats of the strikers. The next day the father and son go to work as usual. Meanwhile, a furious crowd of strikers go to the foreman's house, where the poor mother folds the children in her arms in order to protect them from the stones which smash the window-panes. Afterwards, a burning torch is thrown into the room, while the husband has his hands full at the factory with another gang of the strikers. The dismissed workman who heads them kills the foreman's son with a plane. The poor father ceases fighting, and snatching the dead boy in his arms, he goes home with his precious burden, protected by the police. The poor mother throws herself on her dead son, while the father groans with sorrow in a corner of the room. On leaving the burial ground, the factory owner shakes hands affectionately with the bereaved father, a victim to his duty, and the workmen, awed by Death, give up striking. The master comes to the strike leader, and taking him by the shoulders, forces him to kneel down and ask for pardon. The mourning family walk home, while the workmen, realising the consequences of their mistake, rush upon the leader and serve him according to his deserts.

THE WAY TO HAPPINESS.—An unknown painter is trying hard to make a name for himself, but the struggle would prove too much for him if he had not at his side his devoted wife, who has taken up artificial flower making in order to make both ends meet. Fortune smiles on them at last, in the shape of a wealthy lady who sits for her portrait. The artist is so fascinated by her that he forgets his gentle wife, and makes love to his model. His paintings have won him fame by now, and in his new surroundings he forgets the past. His deserted wife, who in the days of dire want did not hesitate to pawn her Sunday frock to procure bread and colours, is utterly forgotten by her fickle husband. Soon, however, his rich patroness becomes tired of him and his homages, and one day the poor wife reads in her morning paper the following:—"News in brief. 'An accident is recorded among the young artists of the French school. Mr. George Dupin, who won the first prize at the Academy exhibition, has severely wounded himself with his revolver. His condition is critical.'" Forgetting everything but the love she still bears to her husband, she goes and nurses him during his long illness. After recovering, the painter entreats his wife to forgive his fickleness, which request she fondly grants, for he knows now that a devoted wife is better than all the riches in the world.

Gaumont Company.

THE BURNS—JOHNSON FIGHT.—Mr. Hugh D. McIntosh has disposed of the French rights of the Burns—Johnson pictures for £5,000. The deal was consummated through the Gaumont Company. The Burns—Johnson pictures are being exhibited this week at Ashton-under-Lyne, Leeds, Liverpool, Birkenhead, Middlesborough, Hyde, near Manchester, Pontefract, Yarmouth; and next week at Oldham, Lowestoft, Preston, Burnley, Wakefield.

A BACHELOR'S SUPPER.—Travers is a lonely old bachelor. It is the eve of a holiday, and everyone is abroad on pleasure bent, so he goes to his club for companionship. Unable to find any companion, he wanders into the street to watch the people. Lovers, happy in a world of their own, go by. Then proud parents, delighted with the children's joy at the gay sights, pass along. This makes Travers' isolation more intense, so he hastens to his bachelor quarters, where his faithful Japanese servant greets him. Memories still haunting him, he decides he will not sup alone, so gives his man-servant orders to lay the table for seven, with flowers and favours. Dismissing the servant for the night, he places before each plate a card bearing the name of a former loved one, and adds a souvenir or keepsake to remind him of the past. Dining alone, in the quiet and solitude of his chambers, he drinks to each fair face as memory brings it to view. As he drinks the vision of the fair one arises before him, and, in fancy, partakes with him, until one by one the chairs are occupied. Each former sweetheart responds to his toast. Then the lights grow dim, the shadows deepen, and—at the stroke of twelve—the last candle flickers out—he is alone! His head sinks on his breast, and when his faithful servant arrives in the morning finds his beloved master is lonely no more, for his spirit has gone to join his loved ones in the Shadowland.

THE SALES-LADY'S MATINEE IDOL.—Diana, a romantic minded sales-lady, looks with contempt on ordinary suitors, and longs to meet an actor who will win her too-willing heart. Fortune favours her, for she comes face to face with her ideal on a theatrical poster advertising the romantic actor, "Tremayne Marblebrow," at the entrance of the Olyric Theatre. Occupying a box on the opening night, Diana—by frequent applause—tries to attract his attention, but is not successful. She sends him a foolish note signed "A Devoted Admirer." Waiting at the stage door, she is in raptures as he brushes by. Following him on the car, she drops a flower on his lap and blushingly retreats, delighted at her daring. At night she dreams she is the wife of her "Idol," and is kept busy driving other female admirers away, then wakes and goes to work. Next day she nearly faints when she sees him coming through the shop, feeling sure that he is looking for her—but he goes by to another counter. She is sent by her mother to the dressmaker's. The house is an old-fashioned one let off to tailors, music teachers, &c., and she is directed up several flights of stairs. Knocking at the wrong door, she is ushered in by Mrs. Marblebrow, to find her "Idol" seated at the fire cooking ham and eggs, and caring for the baby at the same time—and her "Idol" is shattered.

Kinemacolour.

At the Palace on Friday afternoon, the 26th ult., a special invitation matinée was given with the object of introducing "Kinemacolour," the Urban-Smith natural colour cinematography. The scenes were taken by an ordinary Urban Bioscope camera, fitted with a prismatic screen, or colour filter. This screen, or filter, divides all the colours of the spectrum into two groups—one ranging through white and yellow, then orange and scarlet, to the darkest reds; the other, through white and yellow again (those two being at the head in luminosity and requiring the fullest representation) to green, blue-green, blue, violet and indigo, to black. The Urban-Smith system, by enlisting Nature herself as a substitute for the hand of the artist, takes the picture in the afternoon and exhibits it in all its prismatic animation during the evening.

An exceedingly interesting programme of pictures was submitted, the natural colours being admirably represented. Thus, the spectators were shown views of Brighton front, a band of the Queen's Highlanders marching on West Pier, sailing and motor boat scenes at Southwick, carnival scenes at Nice and Cannes (photographed as recently as Feb. 21), Riviera coast scenes, with panoramas of Cannes, Nice, and Monte Carlo, and many street incidents; some vivid examples of rocky coast scenery, of Riviera fisher folk, of a water carnival at Villefranche, of the Cascade de Courmes, of a church parade of the 7th Hussars and the 16th Lancers, in addition to pictorial studies of animals, plants, and flowers. Altogether it was a most delightful exhibition that was most highly appreciated by the audience. A selection of these remarkable pictures became from last Monday a permanent feature of the Palace programme, and the management of that establishment will no doubt in future be able to present all the leading events of the season in Nature's incomparable hues—the State, civic, and diplomatic functions, the naval and military demonstrations, the historic and other pageants, and the great sporting events.

The Empire Improved Safety Shutter (Patent applied for).—Messrs. W. Butcher and Sons are fitting to their No. 2 "Empire" machines the improved safety shutter, as exhibited at the London Hippodrome. The special feature of this safety shutter is the fact that its release, in the event of a break, is controlled by the film, and not dependent upon the operator stopping the machine. It is impossible to fire the film in the gate, as the shutter cannot remain open unless the film is travelling through the machine in the ordinary way. In addition, when the cinematograph is driven by a motor, means are provided whereby, in the event of a break, the electrical circuit is automatically broken, and the machine instantaneously brought to a standstill. The improvement can be fitted to all existing "Empire" machines and most other types of projectors manufactured.

Cinematograph Fires.—At the weekly meeting of the London County Council on Tuesday, Mr. Walter Reynolds asked the Chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee whether, in view of another cinematograph fire having occurred—the third one resulting in deaths and injuries since Christmas—he could give any information as to the progress of the short Bill promised by the Government to bring all cinematograph exhibitions under the control of the Council?

Mr. H. J. Greenwood replied: I have no information as to the progress of the Bill dealing with cinematographs which the Home Secretary stated he would introduce in the present Session of Parliament. No such Bill has yet been introduced, but it should be remembered that scarcely five weeks have elapsed since the intimation to the Council of the Home Secretary's intention to introduce legislation on the subject.

GAFFES, KING OF DETECTIVES.—Mr. Gaffes is a comic Sherlock Holmes, and he has many mad adventures in search of a stolen duck, the fun being increased by the fact that the lost property has been hooked on to his own coat tails by a mischievous boy. Mr. Gaffes, when he goes out searching, takes with him plenty of paraphernalia. He thinks nothing of invading bedrooms and ransacking wardrobes, of entering the kitchen, and peering into all the stewpans. He is set upon and chased several times, and in the end he does not find the stolen duck. A sagacious dog retrieves it, and Mr. Gaffes gets a good beating for mistaking a lady's hat for his quarry.

THE BLIND PILGRIM.—The Lux firm have produced a number of good dramatic films recently, and this is one of the best. It is a tale of the Crusaders, and takes place in an old Norman castle. A young man leaves home for Palestine, to fight under Richard the Lion Heart. In the battle he is wounded, and falls captive to the Turkish commander, who orders his eyes to be put out. Blind, and a slave, he toils in the quarries for many years, but at last is released, and by painful stages finds his way back to the old home. But he has been thought to be dead, and his betrothed has married another man. It is her little child who gives the poor blind man a drink of water in the courtyard, and when he realises the truth he determines to go away without telling anyone who he is. It is a pathetic story, and one that will be very popular in this country.

EARTHLY PARADISE.—A comic film, in which we see the idea of a modern gaol, showing the manner a convict is treated. He is awakened by the warder, who assists him to dress, brings the morning paper; the servant brings in his breakfast, the jailer going out, allowing him to make love to her. On the day of his release he begs to stay, but is not allowed to do so. He then tries his utmost to be arrested, having many adventures. Finally he is successful, and we leave him back in the cell.

CINEMATOGRAPH TRADE PROTECTION SOCIETY, LTD.—A meeting of the council of this Society was held on Wednesday, the business transacted being:—(1) Solicitor appointed, Mr. H. V. Harraway, 12, South-square, Gray's Inn, W.C.; (2) draft of rules and objects drawn up and approved; (3) solicitor instructed to proceed with the registration of the Society.

AT the Queen's Theatre, Pembroke Dock, animated pictures are the attraction this week, and some very fine films are shown.

FAIRGROUNDS IN FICTION.

By CONGREVE HORNE.

The "fairgrounds of our fatherland" are more than a national institution; they are a national asset. For their right to exist they look back to antiquity. For their means of existence they anticipate to-morrow. When you find yourself on a fairground and, like a sensible fellow, are enjoying the newest sensation mechanical ingenuity can thrill you with, you are really only enjoying a privilege a Norman king granted the loyal townsmen as a reward for relieving him of temporary embarrassments close on a thousand years ago. When the Hibaldstowe yokel shies at cokernuts on his village green at his village feast, he is, if he only knew it, having three a penny in honour of St. Hibald. Among all the glitter and clatter of the modern fairground, it is difficult to remember these ancient origins of it all; but there are two people who will remind you of it. The one is the historic showman. Give him cause and he will never hesitate to bring his chartered liberties into court. The other is the historical novelist. Give him a chance and he will never hesitate to drag a fairground into his romance. It makes such splendid local colour.

Any novel reader will call to mind descriptions of fairgrounds in fiction. Whenever he may come across one he is ready to welcome the fairground as part of the living tradition of Merry England. What old English pantomime is complete which has not an old English fairground as one of its scenes? The Statutes Fair or the village wakes came, like Christmas, once a year, and like Christmas, it was welcomed right royally. The mumming booths and the merry-go-round, the ginger-bread stall, the cheap-jacks and the fairings were the visible signs of spiritual merry-making, the outward sign of high spirits. Wherever you meet with them in the pages of fiction you recognise old friends. You are grateful when Mr. Stanley Weyman gives you a glimpse of mediæval mummers; you are delighted when "Q." lets you spend an hour in passing at Bodmin Fair in the "Splendid Spur," and when he gives you a whole day at the regatta with the hapless Mayor of Troy, you vote him your favourite author. Because the fairground appeals to your imagination, you do not much mind if a novelist draws on his imagination. You do not pause to criticise even when he makes his local colour too rosy a colour.

That is why it probably happens that when you go to a village fairground you are, like Lancelot in "Yeast," a little disappointed. You have shared with him, it may be, "a hope of something melodramatic, dreams of Maypole dancing and athletic games," somewhat of village belle rivalry of the Corin and Sylvia school, or, failing that, a few Touchstones and Audreys, some genial buffo humour here and there. You have found, apparently, nothing of the sort. But neither have you found what Lancelot found. "Yeast" of course, was written to point a moral. It is an exposure of certain social conditions in the middle of the last century. The sketch it gives of a village "revel" shows to what depths revelry had sunk. If Kingsley had not told us he was describing a village fair we should not have believed it was a village fair he was describing. This is what Lancelot found:—

"Two or three apple and gingerbread stalls, from which draggled children were turning slowly and wistfully away to go home; a booth full of trumpery fairings, in front of which tawdry girls were coaxing maudlin youths, with faded southernwood in their button-holes; another long low booth, from every crevice of which reeked odours of stale beer and smoke, by courtesy denominated tobacco, to the treble accompaniment of a jigging fiddle and a tambourine, and the bass one of grumbled oaths and curses within—these were the means of relaxation which the piety, freedom, and civilisation of fourteen centuries, from Hengist to Queen Victoria, had devised and made possible for the English peasant!"

We have changed all that! To-day if your hope of something melodramatic is disappointed, it will be because you cannot see the essential melodrama of to-day. You have not yet learnt that it is romance which "brings up the 9.15." Instead of the Maypole dancing of Corin and Sylvia you will find upon the village green the very latest thing in motors whirling round in a blaze of unaccustomed electric arc lamps to the blare of unaccustomed steam brass bands; you will find an open-air vaudeville preceding the latest and greatest wonders of the cinematograph ever seen, and until your quiet country ears are hardened you will be dazed by that concatenation of the competitive fairground which is called in more sober language "all the fun of the fair."

In a word, you will find that amazing product of modern science, ingenuity, and enterprise—the modern fairground. You will find the public amusement caterer in his glory. And this is his glory: to cater for the amusement of the public, so that all may be amused and unashamed.

But you must not think that your imaginative picture of mummers and Maypoles on the village green is all imaginary. The genial author of "Tom Brown's Schooldays" gives us, so he affirms, "a true sketch, as far as it goes, of one of the larger village feasts in the Vale of Berks," when he was a little boy. We may take it as a typical picture of how our fathers' fathers kept up the customs of their fathers' fathers. "There was," he says, "no longer any remembrance of why the 'veast' had been instituted, but, nevertheless, it had a pleasant and almost sacred character of its own. For it was then that all the children of the village, wherever they were scattered, tried to get home for a holiday to visit their fathers and mothers and friends, bringing with them their wages or some little gift from up the country for the old folk. . . . Every household, however poor, managed to raise a 'feast-cake' and bottle of ginger or raisin wine, which stood on the cottage table ready for all comers, and not unlikely to make them remember feast-time—for feast-cake is very solid, and full of huge raisins. Moreover, feast-time was the day of reconciliation for the parish. If Job Higgins and Noah Freeman hadn't spoken for the last six months, their 'old women' would be sure to get it patched up by that day. And though there was a good deal of drinking and low vice in the booths of an evening, it was pretty well confined to those who would have been doing the like, 'veast or no veast,' and, on the whole, the effect was humanising and Christian." On the day before the "veast," old Benjy takes young Master Tom for a preliminary inspection of the morrow's scene. The feast was held in a large field below the old church which towered up with its grey walls and lancet windows overlooking and sanctioning the whole, though its own share therein had been forgotten. "Past the old church and down the footpath, pottered the old man and the child hand in hand early on the afternoon of the day before the feast, and wandered all round the ground, which was already being occupied by the 'cheap Jacks,' with their green-covered carts and marvellous assortment of wares, and the booths of more legitimate small traders with their tempting arrays of fairings and eatables, and penny peep-shows and other shows, containing pink-eyed ladies and dwarfs, and boa constrictors, and wild Indians.

"On the day of the feast itself they find the field thronged with country folk, the men in clean white smocks or velveteen fustian coats, with rough plush waistcoats of many colours, and the women in the beautiful long scarlet cloak, the usual out-door dress of west-country women in those days. The air resounds with the pipe and tabor, and the drums and trumpets of the showmen shouting at the doors of their caravans, over which tremendous pictures of the wonders to be seen within hang temptingly; while through all rises the shrill 'root-too-too-too' of Mr. Punch, and the unceasing pan-pipe of his satellite. Presently they inspect the penny peep-show, at least Tom does, while old Benjy stands outside and gossips, and walks up the steps, and enters the mysterious doors of the pink-eyed lady, and the Irish giant, who do not by any means come up to their pictures; and the boa will not swallow his rabbit, but there the rabbit is, waiting to be swallowed—and what can you expect for tuppence?"

And then our author gives us a long passage which describes in Homeric vein great bouts of back-swording and wrestling which were the characteristic feature in those days of these country fairs.

Your imaginative picture of the old English fairground is not, then, all imagination. It had its actual prototype. Perhaps it is because you do not bring enough imagination to bear upon the modern fairground that you do not find there what you look for. It is as much the development of the fairground of fiction as the motor-car is of the post-chaise. Next time you see a shooting gallery, use your imagination. You will see the lawful successor of Queen Elizabeth's archery butts. Next time you see a fairground boxing booth, salute it as the heir of a long line of athletic sires. Next time you are caught riding on a roundabout, remind your cardid and superior friends that it is nothing other than a mechanical Maypole, around which you were dancing.

THE GREATEST FAIR IN THE WORLD.

Nijni-Novgorod, where the greatest fair in the world is held, is picturesquely situated at the junction of the Volga and the Oka, two of the mightiest rivers in Russia—the Volga, the largest river in Europe; the Oka, the river which flows through the most fertile and the most densely populated lands in all Russia. The fair is held in the plain on the left bank of the Oka, where there is no lack of open ground, there being more than sufficient to accommodate all comers.

Coming down from the higher part of the town one crosses the Oka on a bridge of boats 1,500 yards long, and one finds oneself at the entrance of a city after the American model; that is to say, monotonous, regular, and modern.

In the centre of this town is the bazaar, wherein are spread out over 4,000 stalls. One passes through streets of iron goods, wool, furs, tea, &c., but these stalls are not capable of taking the mass of merchandise poured into Nijni by rail, water, and land carriage.

To the east of these general stalls two bridges lead to a long narrow island, where wheat, fish, and iron are for sale, and on the west the 3,000 other stalls whose lines are coterminous with that of the fair are erected.

At all times Nijni is a veritable Babel of tongues—Russians, Siberians, Caucasians, visitors from Central Asia, Persians, Chinese, jostle each other in the enormous throng and by the barbaric splendour of their costumes render the scene a veritable kaleidoscope of colour.

The fair is always opened with a religious ceremony, at which the Archbishop of Nijni presides. After the orthodox Mass, a procession, headed by the Archbishop, is formed; priests, deacons, and the faithful bringing up the rear. All go to the Chapel of St. Macaire, patron of this immense fair field, where more prayers are said, and a number of little flags blessed and sprinkled with holy water. These flags are all thrown up into the air together outside the chapel, and as they are borne away by the wind their uncertain progress is anxiously watched by the people. The merchant near whose stall one of these flags happens to fall considers himself supremely fortunate in having obtained this sign of saintly favour, and treasures the flag as a harbinger of good luck. Business is carried on during the day in comparative silence; the shops open as early as 6 a.m. to allow for the lengthy bargainings which are conducted with the characteristic impassivity of these Eastern peoples. One feels far from Western modes of thought and expression, but at nightfall, business over, all the fun of the fair begins. Restaurants, cafés, and drinking saloons are filled up, and, under a brilliant electric light, the long lines of shows, theatres, cinematograph booths, circuses, panoramas, temples of mystery, menageries, shooting saloons—all of which are laid out in streets like the stalls for the sale of merchandise—drive a roaring trade.

The shows at Nijni are not to be compared with our English variety shows, either in size, magnificence, or talent. They indulge in no elaborate carved front, nor do they have the magnificent Gavioliphones which are necessary corollaries to good shows in England. The front consists of a painted representation of what is to be found inside; paraders display their feats of strength and dancing on a raised platform high above the heads of the people, and the entrance to the booth is beneath this platform.

The fair lasts from July 16 until Sept. 5, consequently the showman, relieved of the necessity of travelling from place to place, has every opportunity in the midst of such a vast and changing population, of making enormous return on his capital outlay.

Although the commercial side of Nijni fair remains unchanged, yet its character is changing, and there is no doubt but that the fair will ere long lose much of its pristine glory.

As the network of railway spreads throughout Russia and Siberia, and with the perfecting of rapid means of transit, Nijni must inevitably lose its raison d'être and the fair will cease to be.

GEORGE LEYTON AND THE OLD SOLDIERS.

Mr. George Leyton has received the following letter from Sir Wm. J. Hills-Johns, Lieut.-General, V.C., G.C.B.:—

Telegrams: Pumpsaint.
Dolaucorthy,
Llanwrda, R.S.O.,
Sonth Wales,
March 2, 1909.

Mr. George Leyton.

Dear Sir,—Commandant C. Maggs, United Service Brigade, Swansea, duly sent me a report of the Happy Evening's Entertainment given by you at Swansea, at which I fully intended to have been present, but was prevented by a sudden and sad call to the north of Scotland, which call has delayed this acknowledgment of your most kind and generous gifts to the old veterans of the Crimea and Indian Mutiny campaigns—the proceeds of the sale of your songs whilst staying in Swansea. I now do so, and as President of the United Service Brigade, I give you—for myself, for the vice-presidents, the Commandant, and officers and men of the brigade—our most hearty thanks for this and all the good and generous acts you apparently make the rule of your life to carry out for the benefit and comfort of old and infirm soldiers.

May your health continue good, and thus enable you for many years to go to rest with a cheery heart, thinking of the happiness given by the good deeds of the day, is our most sincere hope and desire. Commandant Maggs tells me he thinks you would be pleased to get my photograph; I therefore enclose it, and hope you will accept it, as it is the likeness of an officer who feels much beholden to you for the many kind and generous gifts given to old soldiers.

I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully,
J. Hills-Johns, Lieut.-General, V.C., G.C.B.,
President U.S. Brigade, Swansea.

ABRIDGEMENTS OF SPECIFICATIONS.

20,927.—Roundabouts. Monk, J., of Blackpool, Lancashire.

Relates to the type of roundabout that is mounted on two vertical spindles carrying gear-wheels, meshed together so that the arms of one roundabout cross the path of the other. Arms (G, G1 and J J1, Figs. 1 and 4) carrying cars (K), rotate about centres (D, E), geared together as shown, the arms being shaped, as in Fig. 1, to allow the necessary crossing. To avoid strain on the spindles (D, E), the gear-wheels (B, C, Fig. 1) are supported on rollers (F), or the like. The arms are also supported by angle-pieces (H). Guards (T, T1) are mounted above the gear-wheels, which are driven by a spur-wheel (L1) geared to a shaft

FIG.1.

FIG.4.

(O) provided with fast and loose pulleys, and a brake wheel (U). The cars are shaped as shown in Fig. 3, having a gangway (k) and seats (*k*1). Platforms for entering the cars are arranged as shown in Fig 4, the entrance being at R2, and the exits at S, S1.

20,971.—Amusements, scenic exhibitions. Kannel, T. van, of New York, U.S.A.

In amusement or illusion apparatus, a flexible floor is given an undulatory motion by means of cranks and link-work, and imparts undulatory movements to a vehicle supported and travelling thereon.

The surroundings are constructed to imitate a shore-way, and two vibratory floors are placed on opposite sides of a platform or island (A, Fig. 1), the floors being connected at one end by rapids (C), down which the vehicle descends by gravity, and at the other end by a fixed floor (C1), across which the vehicles are moved from the disembarking pier (F), to the embarking pier (E). The line of the floor is made to correspond to a wave form by suitably disposing the supporting beams (J), which may be covered by floor-plates made of pliable steel sheets (I, I1), bolted together, the lower sheets being fastened to the beams. The floor beams (J) are jointed to side uprights by ball-and-socket joints (K, Fig. 7), and are also connected centrally by a hook (N) on one part resting in a socket (M1), carried by the other part. The beams are lifted by means of rods (O) engaging shoulders (M2) on castings (M) bolted to the beams. Lifting-rods (O4, O8, Fig. 2) one-half wave length apart, are supported by bell-crank levers (P2), arranged in opposite directions, and jointed to the same driving-bar, so that the weights of the two corresponding floor sections are transmitted in opposite directions to the driving-bar, and thus balance one another. Each driving-bar is also balanced by dividing it at the middle of its length, connecting the halves together by a link, and arranging one-half of the bell-crank levers acting in an opposite direction to the other bell-crank levers.

In a modification, the weight of a driving-bar is balanced by a weighted lever. The arms and legs of the bell-crank levers are preferably forked, or made with double plates, so that the pivots of the lifter-rods may be supported at both ends. The driving-bars are of I-section (Fig. 7), and extended bearings for the pivots of the legs (P2) are formed in the driving-bars by bushings, each extended through a hole in the plate of the I-bar, and shouldered upon one end to fit such plate. A collar secured upon the opposite end holds the bushing to the plate. The bell-crank levers are kept in place upon the shaft (d) by collars (s). The driving-bars are reciprocated by means of connecting rods (S), divided shafts (T), carrying discs, and crank-pins (c), toothed gearing, and a shaft (V) driven by a belt or motor. The crank-pins (c) are set in such a relation to one another that the connecting rods (S) are reciprocated successively, actuating the bell-cranks in the desired progression to give the undulatory movement to the floor. To connect the undulatory floor with a stationary floor, a few of the pivoted beams adjacent to the edge of the fixed floor may have a less motion than those beams that have the normal wave movement. The wave motion of the rapids is preferably of variable character to produce choppy waves; the floor beams are hinged at their outer ends (C2, Fig. 1), are vibrated at their inner ends (C3), and are made divergent towards their pivoted ends. The beams (H1) supporting the end portions of the side floors are extended from their pivots at the outer end directly to the terminal beams (H1) of the rapids, where they are suitably jointed to such beams to facilitate the transfer of the vehicles smoothly from one floor to the rapids, or vice-versa.

22,805.—Theatre seats. Mackay, A. J. H., and Butcher, F. N., both of London.

A theatre seat, easy chair, &c., is provided with a bottom part (B) in the form of a box or receptacle mounted on castors, and an upper part (A) consisting of back, arms, and seat-bottom adapted to be turned as a lid about hinges at the front, back, or sides.

22,715.—Theatrical appliances. Graham, W. J., of London.

Consists of a portable miniature stage, proscenium, curtains, and effects, particularly adapted for marionette performances in which the head of the performer, with a dwarf dummy figure attached, appears through the curtain, and the arms and legs of the dummy are worked by the performer.

A box (A) into which all the parts are packed when disconnected forms a foundation and support for side-pieces (B, C, E), and a stage (D). An ornamental headpiece (B1) is pivoted at *b*1 to one side piece (B), and is clamped to the other by a screw (*b*2). A roller curtain (*c*1) is carried by a cross-piece (c) between two wings (C1) hinged to the sides (C). Velvet curtains (H), forming a V-shaped opening for the passage of the performer's head and the dummy body, are stretched between a lower roller (*h*1) and an upper bar (h) by two vertical spring laths and an elastic band, and are suspended by vertical parallel links, or rollers running on an horizontal rail. The parts of the framework are connected together by screws and cord lashings. The doll or marionette body is fastened by hooks and eyes to a block (*j*1) attached to a collar (J) secured round the neck of the performer.

CINEMATOGRAPH PICTURES IN NATURAL COLOURS.

By a new process, the joint invention of Messrs. Charles Urban and Albert Smith, photographs are now taken by means of colour filters fitted to the camera, and reproduced on the screen by a projector similarly equipped. A delighted audience witnessed the first exhibition of the invention at the Palace Theatre, London, one afternoon last week, when the variety of pictures exhibited showed the tests to which the process had been put. Views were shown of the front at Brighton, the West Pier, with the band of the Queen's Highlanders thereon, life on the Brighton beach, and motor-boat and sailing races at Southwick, and so perfect were the pictorial effects that such details as the glistening sunshine on the varnished boats were clearly visible. Loud applause greeted some beautiful sheep-grazing pictures, and the dashing of waves on a rock-bound coast with a girl and a scarlet sunshade moving above. Some wonderful colour-effects were got from views recently taken of the French Riviera graduated in beautiful tints. We understand that it is claimed for this new cinematography that it will revolutionise motion-picture displays, and also that an offer of £50,000 for the American patent was made by the representative of an American firm, and refused. We heartily congratulate the clever inventors. All that is wanted now is the perfect non-flammable film. Cannot some British inventor and reader of this column oblige?

COLLINS'S GONDOLA WORKS.

Collins's Gondola Works, Walsall, is the scene of much activity. It is here where old shows and roundabouts are made new, not magically, as by Aladdin's lamp, but in quite a regular, systematic, workmanlike manner. It is an industry that is, seemingly, never ended. Shows, roundabouts, haunted castles, cake-walks, and all the rest of the paraphernalia of the British fun fair are brought into the works at Walsall, crippled and disabled after the rough usage of the past season. Here the different machines are dismantled and dismembered by the various specialists at work. Painters, carvers, joiners, electricians, blacksmiths, engineers, and wheelwrights are busy from early morning till late at night. It would be a transformation scene of great interest to many showmen to see a large roundabout come within the doors of the Gondola Works and, after what seems an incredibly short space of time, go out upon its circuit "spanking" new.

Nothing appears too small and nothing too large for the busy band of workers here—anything from a packing-case to a scenic railway is made by them. Every Katzenjammer Castle operating in the open air has been specially designed and made at the Gondola Works. The offices are no small item. It would be an education to many open-air amusement caterers to look within their doors. Six clerks are always at work; several telephones, typewriters, and stenographers are necessary. It is the proud boast of the secretary that every letter received is answered and then filed. Correspondense is conducted with equal facility in several languages.

Working in conjunction with these offices are numerous agents always on the move outdoors booking old positions and securing new ones. As you leave the office you conclude that a trip to the Gondola Works is necessary to realise that a roundabout business is conducted on such a large scale.

To the left of the offices are Mr. Collins's private stables and motor sheds. Under these roofs such past champions of the trotting world as Lady R., Lottie Allen, and Black Pearl have had their quarters. Mr. P. Collins, as might be expected, is a very busy man. Three or four days every week are spent at the works, superintending, advising, and otherwise consulting his numerous heads of departments. Week-ends are spent making a circuit of his fun fairs and other enterprises.

It would perhaps be as well to here mention that Mr. Collins's operations are not confined to amusements only—his business interests take him in many other directions. Mr. Collins is one of the first to join issue in anything that has reasonable prospects of a dividend. A couple of motor-cars and several horses are necessary to race Mr. Collins and his managers over the distances they have to travel, not to mention some of the longer journeys by rail. It is common knowledge that the amount spent in telegrams to and from the firm would represent a goodly income to many.

DEATH OF JESSE JEWELL.

It is with a feeling of deep regret that many of our readers will learn of the sudden death of that popular and well-known cosmopolitan showman and traveller Jesse Jewell, who succumbed very suddenly to an attack of apoplexy in Brooklyn, U.S.A., on Feb. 10 last, at the age of sixty-two. He was born at Dudley, England, and almost from his infancy had been on the road, travelling with his photo. studios, shows, and amusements to all parts of Great Britain, Continental Europe, the United States, and Canada. It is now nearly five years since he took his first trip with his marvellous marionettes across the Atlantic, and from the very date of their first appearance in America Jewell's Mannikins have been a great success, both artistically and financially, and poor Jesse, with his ever-pleasant manner, had very much ingratiated himself into the good graces of the managers, agents, and patrons of the really superb theatres in which he played. He had for several weeks prior to his death been actively preparing a new and novel act, and had the same so far advanced that he was looking forward with much pleasure to rejoin his wife and family, who were then giving their entertainment on the great Orpheum Circuit of the Far Western States. At the time of his decease the wife and family were at Oakland, California, 3,800 miles away, whence they had to journey to the sad ceremony of burial. He was interred in the magnificent cemetery known as Greenwood, one of the finest in the world, and amongst the followers were Messrs. J. Bostock, F. Ferari, Pat Casey, F. Brant, a committee of the White Rats, also of the Freemasons', of which order he was a member. The floral tributes were very numerous and beautiful, and, completely filling two carriages, were from the widow and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bostock, Mr. and Mrs. James Holden, White Rats of America, United Booking Offices, Mr. Frank C. Bostock, Mr. and Mrs. F. Ferari, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Inshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Scattergood, Mr. and Mrs. Henri Stuart, Mr. and Mrs. P. Wartenberg, Mr. Pat Casey, Mr. F. Brant, and numerous others. Mrs. Jewell, on behalf of herself and family, desires to thank all friends for the numerous cablegrams and messages of condolence, and to say that herself and family are staying for the present at the apartments of Mrs. James W. Bostock, Bonita Mansions, West 145th-street, New York City, where any correspondence will reach her.

"THE EGYPTIAN MUMMY."

Produced at the Bedford Music Hall, Monday, March 1, 1909.

Mabel ..... Miss Lily Langley
Sandy ..... Sandy McNab

This is a new version of a sketch which has been before the public for some little time, and the new version is as big a laughter-producer as we have met with for some time. The slight story which serves as a basis for the sketch is of an eccentric old Doctor, who believes he has produced a potion which if ministered to a mummy will immediately revive it. The professor asks his daughter to procure him a mummy, and promises her a handsome reward, and she, to gratify his wish, induces Sandy—a wily Scot looking for work and hoping to evade it—to impersonate the mummy, which he does with exceedingly comic results. Sandy McNab, a genuine Highland comedian, extracts every possible grain of fun out of the part, and keeps the audience in shrieks of laughter with his various contortions, and the funny positions he finds himself in are most mirth-provoking. Miss Lily Langley also lends capital assistance as Mabel, and the little absurdity is carried through with great spirit. The reception accorded to it was a decidedly hearty one, and should augur well for the future success of the sketch. The scenery is good, and general staging most adequate.

The police have not yet obtained the slightest clue as to the perpetrator of the robbery at the Palace Theatre, Aberdeen, a fortnight ago, when the manager's safe was broken open and nearly £100 stolen. It is conjectured that, unknown to the attendants, the robber had managed to secrete himself in the building either after the dispersal of the audience at the second of the entertainments on Saturday evening, or the afternoon religious service on the following Sunday. Only the contents of the safe were stolen. It was easy for the plunderer to make his escape, as the emergency doors can be opened by a push from the inside.

RINKING GOSSIP.

THERE are now 143 registered roller skating rinks in Great Britain. As Olympia closes this week, the Empress Hall, Earl's Court, takes premier position as the largest and best-equipped rink in the metropolis.

THE fact must not be lost sight of that Earl's Court really engineered the present skating boom, for it was the first to be opened, and led the way on Nov. 5 last, thus securing a five weeks' start of Olympia. The theatrical and music hall professions at once took the delightful pastime up, and Earl's Court became the rendezvous of stars. Those who from time to time have been seen disporting themselves on the Empress Rink include Eugene Stratton, Zena Dare, Joe O'Gorman, Carlton, Arthur Reece, Blyth Pratt, Auguste van Biene, Jimmy Britt, Madge Temple, Winifred Hare, Alec Hurley, Geo. Mozart, Max Darewski, and many others. Miss Marie Lloyd prefers the seductiveness of the Aldwych Skating Palace.

RINKING is undoubtedly something very much more than a mere ephemeral craze of the ping-pong order, and although Olympia closes to-night, and Earl's Court must make way for the "Golden West" in April, it has been absolutely decided that London shall have a permanent skating palace, and that in the West. It is to be in the Bayswater-road, nearly opposite Holland Park "tube" station. Negotiations are in full progress to acquire the land, on which houses at present stand, and when these are completed "wrecking" will take place at once, and a magnificent structure will be run up. It is not anticipated that this "rinking palace" will be ready before the end of the summer.

A PEEP at the plans reveal several interesting facts. The skating area will be considerably greater than that found at Olympia. Provision, too, has been made for spectators, and there are many tea and general refreshment rooms dotted about. Several dressing-rooms will also be built, and it is whispered that many novelties common to American rinks will be seen here for the first time in this country.

IT makes one's mouth water to listen to the gloating utterances of the chairmen of the rinking companies whenever one is privileged to attend a meeting. The other day, for instance, Mr. Louis N. Schoenfeld, presiding at a meeting of the Aldwych Rinkeries shareholders, made the delightful statement that "on the basis of the last few weeks the takings amount to more than 300 per cent. per annum on the present issued capital of the company, or, in other words, 75 per cent. on our actual cash investment in two months after the registration of the company."

AGAIN, it almost reads like satire for Mr. Schoenfeld, having been revelling in what may be termed "diamond-studded statements," to blandly say:—"I shall be pleased to answer any questions you may wish to ask." But a happy shareholder made an admission that should be handed down in the history of company meetings when he replied for all present:—"I think we are all so satisfied that we do not want to put any questions."

TAKE a look at the bookstalls just now. They are simply flooded with sixpenny and shilling handbooks on the all-absorbing topic of "How to Skate." Many of them purport to give full instructions and diagrams, showing how a "rocker," or a "bracket," or a "counter" can be made on rollers.

IT is a sign, at least, that roller-skating has boomed, but it may be stated that half an hour spent in the capable hands of a good instructor is worth the entire bookstall, and is not so expensive.

OUR principal cousins are quite as keen on rinking as any cockney. At Leeds, for instance, at the Headingley Rink, they pride themselves on being the most graceful skaters in the country, which is claiming a great deal. Tests of graceful skating take place periodically here, and last week "A Graceful Skating Contest" was held, and prizes given "for perfect time, stroke, and carriage." Mr. G. Taylor and Miss Taylor, brother and sister, were the winners.

BLACKPOOL boasts two excellent rinks—one at "Switzerland" and the other at the Lytham-road Colosseum. Limelight and snowstorm effects are the great feature of the last-named palace. There is a big band, and the place is packed daily from 11 a.m. till 10 p.m.

EVEN the Isle of Man boasts four rinks, and all of them in Douglas too. Those who know Manxland's delightful capital will have no difficulty in recalling the Palace, Derby Castle, Onchan Head, and Buxton's entertainment houses, famed in summer-time as the haunts of thousands of pleasure-seekers and expert waltzers. Hitherto in winter these huge palaces have looked silent and grim with closed doors. Roller-skating altered all that in 1909, and since just before last Christmas the native population almost to a man and a woman have availed themselves of the advantages the huge area of the floors offer at the theatres and ball-rooms named for a delightful whirl on wheels. On Thursday last the fancy dress carnival held at Buxton's was crowded to the doors.

CHATHAM is not behindhand either in rinking; but they keep things very exclusive in the military town. They call it a club, not a rink or assembly, when they strap on skates at the Drill Hall. Further, nobody can indulge in the pastime unless he or she is proposed and seconded by somebody who already is a member. At the Garrison Gymnasium there is a good rink too, but it is strictly confined to the officers of the garrison and their friends. The fun, it is stated, at times here waxes fast and furious.

To many a deserted-in-the-winter south-coast pier roller-skating has come as a boon and a blessing. At Bournemouth, for instance, the past week's receipts show that the number of persons who paid for admission to the pier for rinking purposes was 21,271. Last year, in the corresponding period, less than 5,000 paid the pier toll. At Portsmouth the South Parade Pier made a profit on the week of £53 6s. 7d on its rinking receipts.

SCOTLAND has the "fever" badly. North of the Tweed they do not believe in half-measures, and the Skaterics in Victoria-road, Glasgow, is packed at every session. Fancy dress carnivals are very popular, and no Continental fête could outdo in splendour the picturesque and brilliant functions held here. At the carnival held last week it is interesting to note that the first prize went unanimously to a wee lassie on rollers for her neat impersonation of Miss Vesta Tilley in male attire. A "Harry Lauder" make-up also got a prize.

MAYOR SHARPLEY, of Louth, opened the first rink in the town last week, declaring it to be a unique task in the annals of the Mayoralty. Professor Hiley, late of Earl's Court, gave an exhibition of figure-skating. Other rinks to open during the past week have been one at St. Leonards—an offspring of the Aldwych Rinkeries—and a splendid "gliding-for-pleasure palace" at Stratford.

ILFORD is determined not to be out of the running, for a site has been secured at Ilford Hill for a rink, with a capital of £10,000. Out of this sum £4,000 will be spent on the building, which it is anticipated will be in working order by May. The skating area of this rink will be 22,000 square feet, and the promoters hope to induce a large proportion of the 250,000 in the district to become regular patrons.

THE long line of automobiles and carriages to be seen daily at the entrance to the Empress Hall, Earl's Court, is in itself a proof that the fascination of skimming along a smooth surface on wheels has charmed the men and women of the leisured and moneyed classes. But even the habitués and directors of this picturesque palace were astounded the other evening when an entire wedding party, after the ceremony at St. Peter's, Kensington, and a "breakfast" at Prince's, drove over to the Empress Hall, and spent an enjoyable time on the rink there. The bride was Miss Eva Murray, and her newly-acquired "lord" Mr. Augustus Pomeroy, a relative of the famous "skate king." There were twelve bridesmaids, all garbed in silver-grey dresses, with picture hats to match, trimmed with "Nell Gwynne" white feathers; in fact, the whole aspect of the scene was worthy of a lady fashion-writer's expert pen, but for once the Press agent was caught napping, and so there were no glowing accounts in the next day's papers.

ONE of the most reliable and speedy skates used throughout the country at the present time is Mr. Arthur Pomeroy's "Baltimore Flyer." Mr. Pomeroy himself describes these rollers as "the motor-car of the feet." They are light, graceful, swift, and ingeniously manufactured. As the name indicates, this skate is American made, and costs, according to quality, from 15s. to a guinea per pair. The mechanism cannot get out of order, and a very small boy can understand it the first time it is explained to him.

ALLIE MOORE, who lost the one mile professional championship of the roller-skating world to Harley Davidson at Olympia last week, is stated to be dissatisfied with the result of the race, in view of the fact that he not long ago skated a mile on a flat floor in Chicago in 2min. 27sec., and that his time for five miles is given as 13min. 18.3-5sec. He has won all the American championships during the past two years.

BIRMINGHAM has soon been provided with another skating rink, this being a "new one for an old one," the Edgbaston Skating Rink, to wit. Here roller skating has been the vogue for years, but to cope with the "boom" the lessees—Messrs. Salter—have had the building entirely refurbished and the floor relaid. The floor itself measured 210ft. long by 60ft. wide, and an entirely new stock of skates has been laid in, all of the latest improvements. Mr. F. A. Millin, the manager of the Edgbaston Reservoir Grounds and Rink, has engaged a permanent orchestra, and the reopening, which took place last Tuesday, was well attended, and augured well for the continued success of this old-established concern.

THE final race for the one mile roller-skating championship of the world, which took place at the Olympia Skating Rink, resulted in a victory for Harley Davidson, of America, who covered the distance in 2min. 51 3.5sec. He used the celebrated Richardson ball-bearing roller skates. All the world's records, both fast and fancy, have been won on Richardson skates, and for quality of workmanship, finish, durability, and reliability, they are absolutely unequalled. Richardson skates may be obtained from all the leading athletic outfitters, department stores, and ironmongers throughout the kingdom.

PEACE AT THE LAST.

George Wombwell, the nephew of Wombwell the Great, died at Edmonton on Friday, Feb. 26. He had reached the great age of over ninety-two years, and although (because of his lineage) he must be counted a showman, he had ceased to follow the fairs or to get his living in the show business for well nigh fifty years past.

"The pathetic story" which we were obliged to correct (in the greater interests of truth) told by the daily Press at the end of October last, was such an interesting blend of memories of the old man's life and his recollections of the life of his uncle, Wombwell the Great, that only the strongest sense of duty induced us to venture upon a correction. We did this without in the least reflecting upon the character of George Wombwell, the younger, and the subject of our present memoir.

THE LATE GEORGE WOMBWELL

Gathering up the threads of the old man's somewhat tangled skein of life, it was evident that from the rich store of a good memory he was able to recall incidents in the career not only of the Wombwell family and the Bostocks, but of some of the greatest names in Showland that figured in the first thirty-five years of his life.

There are one or two interesting facts connected with the latter part of his chequered career that it would be well for us to place on record.

In the first place, it ought to be remembered that there never was the least need for the old man to enter the Edmonton Workhouse Infirmary; that he was not at that time or at any previous period of his life in a state of actual destitution. Contrariwise, he has been for the past sixteen years of his life in receipt of a weekly allowance of 10s., and was receiving help in other ways which quite raised him above the need of appealing to the public for assistance.

There is an old saying that it is only right to speak good things of the blessed dead, and we should not have mentioned this apparently unnecessary appeal made by him to the general public on entering the Edmonton infirmary but that we happen to know the real inside story of this somewhat doubtful incident. The real story makes that appeal for public help (an appeal which it will be remembered The Era was largely the means of preventing going forward) extremely creditable—though at the same time quixotic—on the part of the deceased.

The Chaplain to the Showmen's Guild investigated the matter fully at the time, and it was entirely the old man's original idea and plain that he had received no inspiration or encouragement from his son-in-law and daughter with whom he lived, and, further, that his purpose in entering the infirmary was utterly unknown to them. His scheme was to appeal to the general public under the cover of a great historic name (the name George Wombwell) for a fund ostensibly for himself, but really to help his grandchildren, to whom he was passionately attached, because their parents had fallen upon poor times owing to bad health and unemployment.

As soon as the Chaplain ascertained the old man's devotion and intense love for his grandchildren, he had not the heart to oppose the old man's urgent wish to be taken from the infirmary and restored to them.

By the generosity of Mr. Moriand (a descendant of the great Mrs. Wombwell), who for the past sixteen years had helped, together with the old man's married daughter now in America, to find the weekly allowance we have referred to above, he was still paid 5s. a week. This, coupled with the ready help of Councillor E. H. Bostock, of the Glasgow Hippodrome—who placed 10s. a week with the Guild Chaplain to help the old man, arrangements were made by which he left the infirmary.

For a time he was placed in rooms with every comfort and kindly attendance, near enough to his married daughter's home for the grandchildren to frequently visit him. This, however, did not satisfy him, and he returned to his daughter's home. Arrangements were made for a trained nurse to visit him daily, and money was paid to his daughter for his maintenance. The end of the story is that he died of sheer old age with his beloved grandchildren sleeping under the same roof. He passed away quietly in his sleep, for when his daughter took his early morning cup of tea she found that he had fallen on sweet sleep at the last, and had departed to that "bourne from which no traveller hath yet returned."

The funeral takes place to-day (Saturday, March 6). The place of burial is the Edmonton Cemetery, and the service is strictly limited to the immediate members of his family.

TWO RAILWAY SCENAS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—In your edition of Feb. 27 I note amongst gossip:—"Mr. Neil Kenyon produced at the Hippodrome, Manchester, a wayside station scena." Allow me to inform you that I have been working for some time my railway scena, entitled On the Railway. In this I introduce troubles on the line, arrival of train, &c., and carry a special country wayside station scene. According to your notice of Mr. Kenyon's new act it seems to be somewhat similar to mine. In case I should be accused of plagiarism I should esteem it a great favour if you will insert this in your next issue.—Yours truly, MARK BRUE (late Chas. Dixon).

Hippodrome, Hastings, Feb. 27.

MARRIAGE OF MR. W. F. JOHNSON AND MISS EMMIE FORTMAN.

A fairly large congregation remained after the morning service at the Parish Church, Chertsey, on Sunday, Feb. 14, to witness the marriage of Miss Emmie Fortman, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fortman, of "The Snuggery," Chertsey, to Mr. William Frederick Johnson, formerly a member of the teaching staff of the School of Handicrafts, and now of Hayes, Middlesex, and the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson, of Reading.

Both bride and bridegroom are well known and popular in the town, where for some years past they have rendered assistance at concerts and dramatic performances. The bridegroom has also often figured in the Chertsey cricket and football elevens, for some time acting as captain of the mid-week section of the latter club. Previously to taking up her residence in the town the bride was a member of one of the finest English troupes of aerial artists which ever toured the Continent, the quartette being composed of—in addition to herself—her father, sister, and brother. Almost every town of note throughout Europe was thus visited, and they had the honour and distinction of appearing before many of the crowned heads.

MARRIAGE OF CEE MEE'S DAUGHTER.

Her father, the famous aerial gymnast, Cee Mee, who gave her away on Sunday, has by command performed before three Czars of Russia.

The bride was charmingly attired in white silk trimmed with old lace, with orange blossom, myrtle, and lilies. The Brussels net and lace veil was the gift of her mother, and she was carrying a beautiful sheaf bouquet. Attending her as bridesmaids were the Misses N. and A. Emberson, of Walton, who were wearing pink crêpe de chine, with black picture hats, and carrying sheaf bouquets composed of white and pink tulips. Mr. T. Sculley, of Brockley, discharged the duties of best man, and Mr. Charles Johnson, of London, acted as groomsman. The Vicar and the Rev. G. Adams officiated at the ceremony, which was fully choral. The hymn was "How welcome was the call," and Mr. Monk played Elsa's "Bridal Procession," Mendelssohn's "Be thou faithful," and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The sun was shining brightly as the happy couple left the church amidst the felicitations of many friends, and the boys of the School of Handicrafts cheered lustily. The reception took place at "The Snuggery," where the company included Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Fortman, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Holden (Forest Gate), Mr. and Mrs. Austen (Finchley), Mr. and Mrs. Fredericks (Stratford), Mr. and Mrs. H. Fortman, Mr. and Mrs. Sanger Coleman, Mrs. H. Jones (Blackpool), Mr. Robert and Miss Emmie Fossett (Northampton), Misses Ida, Maud, and Daggie Sanger, Misses Ethel and Winifred Johnson, Mr. Charles and Jack Johnson, Mr. G. and Mr. P. Sculley, Mrs. G. Emberson (Walton), Mrs. N. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. J. Emberson, Mr. T. E. H. Chaldecott, Mr. A. Howard, Mr. John Holgate (Leeds), Mr. Housell (Chiswick), Mr. Frank A'Court (Walton), Messrs. W. H. Ottaway, E. Rose, A. Stevens and H. Whitwell. Mr. Arnold Kuhn was in charge of the catering arrangements, which were eminently satisfactory.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Johnson subsequently left for Brighton and Worthing, the bride's travelling costume being of navy serge, with moleskin hat and sables.

Among the numerous presents were the following:—

Mr. and Mrs. Fortman, Crown Derby tea service, Sheraton table and Sheraton bedroom suite, drawing-room suite and piano.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, case of silver.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Coleman, silver and cut glass salad bowl, set of china and fancy table linen.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Holden, silver egg service.

Mr. S. Ethardo, silver-mounted oak biscuit barrel.

Miss Emberson, table covers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Emberson, silver egg service and cruet.

Mr. and Mrs. Austen, cut glass and brass rose bowl.

Mrs. G. Emberson and family, brass crumb brush and tray.

Mr. Frank A'Court, silver and cut glass pickle stand.

Mr. and Mrs. Ottaway (School of Handicrafts), hat stand.

Messrs. G. and P. Sculley, clock.

Mr. Hounsell, set of carvers.

Miss Hoffman, silver inkstand.

Chertsey Amateur Dramatic Club, handsome inlaid Sheraton coal box.

Mr. George and Georgina Sanger, tea service (modern German, art design).

Miss L. A'Court, hand-painted satin mats.

Mr. Rose and Mr. Cole, Sheraton inlaid occasional table.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams, brass letter rack, stamp case, and buckle set in crystals.

Mr. T. E. Harland Chaldecott, solid silver sugar basin and tongs.

Mr. Arthur Howard, solid silver teapot.

Mr. and Mrs. Alsker, hand-painted fire screen.

Mr. and Mrs. Tidy, Royal Crown Derby coffee cups.

Many presents were received in addition to the foregoing, including some from the staff of the Hayes Industrial School for Jewish Boys.

"THE BROKEN MEDAL."

A Domestic Episode in One Act, by Arthur Skelton, Produced at the Gaiety, Birmingham, on Feb. 22.

Cape Smoke Jim.....MR. CLINTON BADDELEY
Nelly.....MISS DORA LYONS
Hesba.....MISS JESSIE M. LYONS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The above attractive dramatic episode is full of stirring situations, and was highly appreciated by a crowded audience. The scene opens on the veldt in South Africa, where Nellie, a little "orphan," is cared for by an old Kaffir nurse, Hesba, her mother being dead. Her father, a ne'er-do-well gaolbird, begs hospitality one night, pretending to be wounded. When the nurse and Nellie have retired for the night the beggar turns out to be a thief. While in the act of taking a little silver box belonging to Nelly, he discovers that she is his daughter, and later on a reconciliation is effected between the child and her now reformed father. The piece is well written and played. Mr. Clinton Baddeley gives a clever piece of character-acting in the part of Jim; Nelly is dramatically presented by Miss Dora Lyons; and Miss J. M. Lyons gives an interesting rendering of the difficult part of the nurse.

"FATHER" SCOTTIE, as the Press have lately called him, gave 800 breakfasts to the poorer kiddies in Wakefield last Saturday morning. He has already given over 277,000 meals to the hungry bairns at the various towns where he has performed The Cry of the Children.

THE Barnsley Empire was packed at both houses on the opening night. Ernie Mayne, comedian, the chief attraction, is extremely funny, fairly bringing down the house; the Tenka troupe of Japanese magicians give a novel and interesting performance, some of their tricks being exceptionally clever; Fox and Melville, song illustrators, give a pleasing performance; Cleland causes roars of laughter by his eccentric juggling; the Lannons are fine high pedestal dancers; the Brothers Missouri, in their comedy act, Fun in a Canteen, give a good performance; Elmer Spyglass is a pleasing vocalist; and the Palacescope completes a good all-round bill.

Irish Independent, Feb. 23:—
Of course this new housemaid is funny—she is shriekingly funny—a more farcical farce, in fact, than the Aunt of Charley. . . . The audience looking on rocks with laughter at the delightful nonsense of the whole proceedings. . . . The one object of farce is to create laughter. This piece at the Gaiety achieves its object. The company are hard-working, and they keep top-key throughout.

WANTED, Wanted, Known,
Sir,—
I inserted an advertisement, asking for Music Hall Artists in the last week's issue of "The Era." May I say that I am absolutely astounded at the number of replies I received to my small advertisement, no less than 270 Artists favouring me with applications. May I by this means thank the many artists who sent in their terms, as it is impossible for me to reply to each individual. I thank all for their very kind promptitude in responding to my advertisement.
I remain, yours faithfully,
Alfred Ball.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS.

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office. Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns. Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking Engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follow:—

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING, Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON, Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT MITCHELL, Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON, Empire Palace, Leeds.

LIVERPOOL, MANCHESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALBERT BULMER, The Empire, Liverpool.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. J. CHRISTIE, Empire Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

Artists and Agents are requested to note that the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, and the Terriss Theatre, Rotherhithe, come within the areas absolutely barred by us. Artists and Agents are also requested to note that the Hippodrome, Aston, Birmingham, comes within the area absolutely barred by the Grand Theatre and Empire Palace, Birmingham.

INSTRUCTIONS TO ARTISTS.

Artists must have at least Fourteen Band Parts for English Orchestrations, and Seventeen Band Parts for Foreign Orchestrations. Matter of Bill, Blocks, and Specimens of Pictorials FOR ALL THE ABOVE THEATRES must be sent to Co-operative Offices, at above address, THREE WEEKS before Opening, failing which Artists will run the risk of having their Engagements cancelled.

IMPORTANT.—Artists must forward Copies of Songs to the STAGE DEPARTMENT, ABOVE ADDRESS, TWO WEEKS previous to opening, with Assignments for same, which will be returned. Artists are requested to note carefully that the clause in their contracts relating to rehearsals will in future be strictly enforced. Artists' Scenery, Properties, &c., MUST be fireproofed in accordance with the regulations of the Licensing Authorities.

ARTISTS WILL CLEARLY UNDERSTAND THAT THEIR BUSINESS MUST BE FREE FROM ALL VULGARITY.

No order or contract for goods or services must be accepted for any of the foregoing theatres except upon receipt of an Official Form, issued from the Co-operative Offices, London, and signed by either Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Frank Allen, or the Chief Accountant, otherwise the Company concerned will not be responsible for same, and will refuse payment. In special cases, where goods are required at once, suppliers must look to the individual placing the order, who will be personally liable, unless an official confirmatory order, signed as above, is received within forty-eight hours. Invoices must be sent to the Theatre, but monthly statements should be sent to the Co-operative Offices. The individual Company on whose behalf orders are signed is solely responsible for payment. The Management will not hold themselves responsible in the event of loss of or damage to any MSS., Songs, &c., submitted for consideration.

N.B.—Applications for engagements on the DE FRECE CIRCUIT, matter for bills, &c., &c., must be sent direct to Mr. Walter de Frece, at the Co-operative Offices.

THIS WEEK'S NOVELTIES.

A WEEK'S ABSENCE.

Code Word, "GASTRITE."

During the absence of their masters, the Grumbler family, who have been put in charge of the house, invite their friends to "the inauguration of their new villa," which they pompously call "Rose Villa." The ball is in full swing when the masters arrive unexpectedly. The guests, who have been drinking the whole evening, force the newcomers to join in their wild dances, while the frightened little maid calls in the police. Mr. Grumbler and his friends sneak out of sight of the constables after hastily scribbling the following note:—"I hope you are not going to get us into trouble, for if we have drunk your champagne, we have also minded your house for a week." This argument seems so logical to the policemen that they withdraw, after expressing their anger at having been disturbed for nothing, and the masters of the house look at each other in dismay amongst the remains of the feast.

YOUR TURN, MARQUIS.

Code Word, "GENRE."

An old marquis falls in love with a country girl, who laughs at him at the same time as she sends kisses to her sweetheart, a young peasant of the same village. The old man, more in love than ever, has the lad kidnapped and placed at the bottom of a deep ditch. A shepherd, attracted by his cries, calls some men to the spot, who set the prisoner free. This time it will be the marquis's turn to have the "ducking" at the boy's hands for his pains.

SPORTIVE DRUNKENNESS.

Code Word, "FROMENT."

In an inn near the river a rather unsteady gentleman is playing skittles with bottles. Having been shown the door, he shuts the mouth of a blind beggar with quoits, then, perceiving two gentlemen talking together, he aims with his revolver at two flower-pots on a balcony, and reduces them to pieces on the heads of the two astounded people. Outside a shop he whirls about amongst hoops and pulls down everything. In the avenue he throws down a row of soldiers at their drill. After a number of other extraordinary things, he climbs up on a roof, from which he takes his flight in a parachute. Alas! his experiment lands him in a lighted portable stove.

THE SHROVE-TUESDAY TURKEY.

Code Word, "GAZON."

The maid has just put a superb turkey on the table, stuffed with truffles, and Jane and George Darling, aged eight and five respectively, think they would like to taste it; but the servant, coming in at that very moment, threatens to give the fowl to the Bogey Man at the same time as she puts it on the window-sill. A young man friend of the family takes the dish away in order to play them a trick. Just then he perceives, coming towards him, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Darling, who shake hands with him and invite him to partake of the Shrove Tuesday turkey, which is by now in a sewer-main, for Gilbert has disastrously thrown it away at sight of his friends. The poultry is taken by an urchin, and carried to his humble home; but his mother, after inquiring as to the source of supply, orders him to restore the turkey to its owner. Meanwhile, the guest, having promised to the desperate Darlings to replace the missing fowl, finds the little boy near the entrance to the sewer, and, taking the turkey from him, gives him some money, and restores the appetising turkey to its former place on the table, where everybody does it justice.

HARRY IS TOO FOND OF WOMEN.

Code Word, "GAUCHE."

Harry has a tender heart. He cannot see a woman without falling in love with her. This unlucky disposition makes him successively lose his berth as a waiter and as a pastrycook. After several failures he finds himself one fine morning filling the place of a cabman, for he thinks this will enable him to make love to his pretty fares, but the ladies do not relish the idea, and they put in claims against the unlucky Harry. He is set free after a lengthy explanation, and now he swells the ranks of the unemployed. Poor Harry!

To the Publisher of "The Era."

EXTRAORDINARY RESULT

FROM AN ADVERTISEMENT.

Dear Sir,

I inserted an advertisement in "The Era" advertising Messrs. Barney and Berry's celebrated Phantom Skates. You may guess my satisfaction at the successful result of my speculating in your advertisement columns when I tell you that I have sold no less than 2,700 pairs of these Skates, the sale of which I directly trace to the advertisement in "The Era."

Yours faithfully,
Managing Director,
Messrs. BARNEY and BERRY.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1909.

"The Era" Almanack and Annual for 1909 is just published. It contains a useful list of new plays and important revivals produced in the London theatres last year, and similar lists of productions in Paris and Berlin. The leading feature is a number of short stories by well-known people. Mr. George Alexander records a cabby's retort, which is worth repeating. Mr. Alexander, while looking for a taxi-cab, was solicited by an old cabman to enter his hansom, but declined. "So, Mr. G. A.," commented the cabby, "you've no use for 'osses, but you'll 'ave to 'ave one to take you on the day you're buried!'"—Morning Advertiser, Jan. 14, 1909.

BUSINESS MANAGERS.

How the Affairs of a Theatre can be Most Efficiently Controlled by the Adoption of Systems of Internal Check.

BY CUTHBERT E. SMEDLEY, A.C.A.

Price 3/6. Post free, 3/9.

All concerned with the business side of a theatre will find much useful information and many valuable hints in "Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Mr. Cuthbert E. Smedley, published at The Era office.—Referee, Jan. 31, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers," by Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. (The Era, Ltd., London, 3s. 6d.), is a most concise and comprehensive little work, calculated to prove of assistance to the theatre-manager. It shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given, and the chapters treating of receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, and audit will be found to contain much useful information. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Liverpool Daily Post and Mercury, Feb. 3, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts" ("The Era," Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.), we should say, is a very useful compilation for business managers of our places of amusement. It is practical, exact, and analytical; it should stop leakages, and needs only good houses to keep it fully employed.—Sportsman, Feb. 8, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts." By Cuthbert E. Smedley (The Era, Ltd., 3s. 6d.). Shows how the affairs of a theatre can be most efficiently controlled by the adoption of systems of internal check. Specimen pages of the books to be kept are given. Receipts, tours, book-keeping, and accounts, audit—each is allotted a separate chapter. In the appendix is given "a form of agreement with artists for touring engagements."—Morning Post, Jan. 27, 1909.

"Theatrical Accounts for Business Managers." By Cuthbert E. Smedley, A.C.A. 3s. 6d. The Era, Ltd., 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. The work of accountants has now been brought to a fine art, and in almost every branch of business a different system has been elaborated. The present work deals in a small compass fully and clearly with all the special features of theatrical management on the business side.—Financial Times, Feb. 1, 1909.

Skeleton schemes of book-keeping, &c., with explanations, showing how the affairs of a theatre can be efficiently managed by the adoption of systems of internal check in all departments. Contains also a draft agreement as between manager and artist.—Birmingham Daily Post, Jan. 27 1909.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERAMAN.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. A. Jackson Withers; Resident-Manager, Mr. Archie Ainsleigh.—Mr. Ernest Bodkins is here this week with The Thief. Mr. Ernest Bodkins is a great success as Raymond Leyton; Miss Kathryn Stocks is dramatic as Marise Chelford; Mr. Paul Lovett appears to advantage as Richard Chelford; Mr. C. W. Lindsey is responsible for a capital rendering of the rôle of Harry Leyton; Miss Mary Forrester makes a charming Isabel Leyton; and Mr. T. Taylor-Vinson is seen to advantage as Mr. Protheroe. The play is preceded by The Man in the Street.

ABERDARE.—New Theatre.—Proprietors, The Aberdare Public Hall Theatre and Billposting Co., Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manager, Mr. B. Richards.—Mr. Julian Malvern's company is here in I Defy the World. Mr. F. B Woulfe in the rôle of Leon Darville is effective; Miss Florence Delmar is prominent in the part of Blanche Darville; Mr. Alfred Denning makes a success as General Delaporte; Mr. Max Coutts is an excellent Count de Beaulieu; Miss Maude Lillian does well as Marie Wozzle, and Miss E. Loraine is an admirable Pauline.

ABERDEEN. — H. M. Theatre. — Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Adair Nelson.—The Bondman was played here to a full house on Monday by Mr. Wentworth Croke's company. Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves gave a most skilful portraiture of Michael Sunlocks; Mr. R. Scrope Quentin made a fine appearance as Jason; and Miss Georgina Wynter's Greeba was also a fine piece of acting. Mr. W. H. Rotherham most successfully doubled the parts of Father Ferrati and Grandfather; and Mrs. Fairbrother was excellently well impersonated by Miss Madge Laverton. All the other members of the company gave the principals highly efficient support.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The Andos Troupe of Japanese jugglers gave a singularly clever and graceful display, in which many completely novel feats were introduced; Mr. Archie Roger delights the audience as much as in his former visits; Miss Mabel Fairchild, who seems to be one of the finest and most artistic dancers on the British stage, appears successfully in a pretty scena, A Belfry Dream; Wallan is a very clever juggler; Mr. Harry Ray and Miss Lillie Calder appear in a novel and highly amusing comedy act; Mr. J. G. Grahame, jun., and Miss Zerlina Harrington play cleverly the deeply interesting sketch, A Daughter of Pleasure; Bi-Bo-Bi contributes a capital musical turn; and Miss May B. Brilliant sings and dances gracefully.

Alhambra and Empire Music Halls.—Managers, Messrs. R. Calder and J. Montague.—The principal artists this week are the Morrells, clever and attractive instrumentalists; Miss Jessie Dudgeon, a graceful vocalist and dancer; and those popular favourites, Miss Marie Rose, Mr. Jack Marson, and Mr. Archie Murray. Mr. Marson, who is a particularly fine tenor singer, as well as a very quaint raconteur, took his benefit last week, when the Empire was crowded to the door.

ABERTILLERY.—Theatre Metropole.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. J. Seaborn.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's powerful company appeared here for three nights in The Prodigal Son. Mr. George Edwin Clive gave a forcible rendering of Oscar Stephenson, and was highly applauded; Magnus Stephenson, his brother, was very effectively and dramatically delineated by Mr. T. W. Dunscombe, and Mr. Herbert Franklin made an ideal father; Helga Neilson was portrayed with great feeling by Miss Chrissie Dunbar, and Elin was in the capable hands of Miss Dora Gregory; Miss Ethel Lodge was a capital Anna, the wife of Stephen Magnusson, and Mr. Arthur E. Holland scored highly as Oscar Neilson. The rest of the parts were in excellent hands. The mounting of the piece was admirably carried out.

Pavilion.—Lessees, Messrs. E. and H. Tilney; Manager, Mr. E. Pryce.—A-Bo-Kou, a clever juggler, performs some skilful as well as daring tricks; the Three Alskarnos, delight with their clever balancing and tumbling; Stanley and Vandyke provide in A Broken Promise a sketch full of merriment; Bros. Lester are a pair of expert dancers, and May De Rowse is a dainty comedienne and dancer; Carter's Ten Dixie Girls provide a pleasing item in their vocal and terpsichorean scena, The Silver Coon. The Bioscope this week forms a big attraction, as the fight between Johnson and Burns is shown.

ACCRINGTON.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company is paying a return visit this week, with The Village Blacksmith. Mr. Sam Livesey's fine physique and exceptional dramatic ability specially fit him for the title-rôle; Miss Kathleen Saunders gives a clever presentation of Harry, the blacksmith's child; Mr. Albert Sinclair as Captain Leo displays sufficient villainy to suit the most exacting; Mr. Edwin Maydew submits an excellent portrayal of Lucas Marler; and Mr. Thomas E. Marshall is very good as Jeremiah Parkins. Mr. Fred Haming is humorous as Billy Twig, and is ably assisted by Miss Edith Giddens as Martha Mopps; Miss Maggie Edwards plays with intelligence and emotional power the part of Kate Strong; Miss Cassie Le Grande secures much appreciation by her capable acting as Ruth Parkins; and a clever character-study is presented by Miss F. Dooley as Sal Parkins.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Accrington Hippodrome Co.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Mould.—Miss Maidie Scott, the popular comedienne, makes a welcome re-appearance here this week, and delights with her capital character songs. Witty Wattie Walton contributes various impersonations, and is deservedly applauded; the Dinaro Bros., juvenile acrobats, give an exceedingly smart turn; and the Strolling Players have a hearty reception in their pot-pourri act; Miss Mimie D'Aubyn is a dainty comedienne; Harley and Melton are mirth-provoking comedians; the Westbrooks prove themselves expert dancers; and the Hyde and Cody Trio are successful as comedy acrobats. The Bioscope completes a most attractive and varied bill.

ALDERSHOT.—Royal and Hippodrome.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Gladwin.—Mr. Chas. Constant's Blue Beard is being greeted by good audiences twice nightly. The principals have a good selection of songs, Miss Daisy Lake (as Selim) singing "Kate, Kate, come for a skate" and "A white man"; Miss Marie Duncan is an acceptable Fatima, and with Selim sings a capital duet; Mr. Johnnie Clegg as Sister Ann keeps the ball of fun rolling, and is backed up by an able quartette of humorists in Messrs. Jock Parker, Hanlon and Harlin, and Frear; the Florodorians are seen to advantage in a clever dance; while Miss Dolly Moore makes a distinct hit in her songs.

ASHINGTON.—Miners' Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Gould.—Mr. Chas. Elderton's company is paying a welcome return visit here with Robinson Crusoe. Miss Rosa Revell is a capital Robinson; Miss Gertie Gavagan a dainty Polly Perkins; Miss Lena Lewis as Captain Kettle is as great a success as ever; Miss Bartinelli is a pleasing Dolly Dimple; and Miss Nellie Stuart an ideal Princess. Mr. James Grant as Mrs. Crusoe, Mr. Teddy Worth as Billy Crusoe, Mr. Fred Boulton as Will Atkins, and Mr. Carson Hicks as Friday are responsible for the comedy, to which they do ample justice. The specialities are excellent. Miss Olive Sara, in her musical and Indian club turn, proves herself an artist of great ability; other smart numbers being contributed by the Three Eltons, in their comedy bar act; Stuart and Worth, comedians; Carson Hicks, coon dancer; the Marblesque Trio, in living pictures; Rowe and Holden, coloured cake-walkers; Miss Bartinelli, contortionist; and the Boultons, comedy entertainers.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill, jun.—Mr. Robert Macdonald's company with The Dairymaids is here. Miss Empsie Bowman as Peggy is brimming over with vivacity; Miss Dorothy Belmore as Lady Brudenell scores a success in the part; then we have Miss May Casson delightfully arch as Winifred; Miss Doris Dickens as Helen, a really charming interpretation; Miss Kitty Kirwin as Miss Pyechase; Miss Edie Martin, a pert Eliza; Mr. Johnny Osborne as Joe Mivens is irresistibly funny; Mr. Richard Telford as Lieut. Sam Brudenell gives a clever character study; Mr. J. Scott Melville does good work as Lieut. Frank Meredith, and Mr. Bernard Vaughan is happily cast as Dr. O'Byrne.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Jesse Burslem.—An attractive programme is provided in variety this week at the Empire. A good sketch, The Pawnbroker, is presented by Mr. George Ricketts, as Ikestein, and an efficient company; Ben Silvo presents the clever gymnast and the clown combined; the Lovelaces are a characteristic turn; La Belle Duchess introduces her two boxing stallions, ponies, dogs, and high-jumping hounds; Wynnie Darrell, comedienne; Coram, ventriloquist, and the Bioscope are other attractions.

New Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Chas. F. Wilson.—The animated picture section of the entertainment for the week at the Pavilion is pleasantly varied. Two vaudeville artists introduce interesting business when the lights are up—Will Nosam, a study in chocolate and white, and Sidney Brandon in Dickens sketches.

The Picturedrome.—Lessees, Messrs. Weisker Bros; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Marks.—The prime film of this week's cinematograph series of pictures is Lucy of Lammermoor.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manageress, Miss Ethel J. Hope.—There is a most attractive selection of pictures here this week. The cinephone, with selections of popular songs, is a popular feature; and illustrated songs are successfully rendered by Miss Ciesie Coman.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Bert Dent.—Tarro Miyake, ju-jitsu wrestler, was to have been the star attraction here this week, but owing to sudden illness was unable to appear, his place being taken by Imrie's Six Juggling Girls. The Kraggs are seen in a clever gymnastic display; Captain Kettle is a smart card and coin manipulator; and interesting turns are given by Miss Lisle Roland, equilibrist; Little Babe, child mimic; Mr. Wilfred Burnand, character impersonator; Miss Marie Kay, vocalist and dancer; and the popular "Attergraph" Pictures.

AYR.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—Mr. Edward Compton and his company opened on Monday with Davy Garrick. Mr. Compton's conception of the title-rôle is irreproachable, and he had loyal support from each member of his company in making the interpretation as near perfection as could be. Miss Kathleen Leigh as Violet was admirable; the Rumbelow of Mr. Philip Gordon was very clever; and Mr. Henry Crocker made a capital Alderman Gresham. A word of praise is due to Mr. Harry Worrall for his smart study of the Hon. Tom Tallyhaut. On Tuesday The Rivals was produced, and on Wednesday A Reformed Rake was staged. The house was completely filled by an enthusiastic audience, and Mr. Compton and other members of the cast were called before the curtain repeatedly.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood.—Miss Maud Hildyard's company is appearing here this week with The Great Awakening. Miss Maud Hildyard as Lola Selby displays much malignant intensity; Mr. Wallis Clark as James Selby does full justice to the character; in the dual rôle of Sir Henry Merton and Jack Merton Mr. Bernard Copping is seen to advantage; and Mr. Gordon Laws as Guy Rogan is powerful throughout. As Captain Harry Lambert, Mr. Charles Ashwell plays in a convincing and earnest manner; Richard Wilson is faithfully represented by Mr. Gifforde Reynolds; Miss Lillian Deane invests the enactment of Molly Merton with much grace and feeling. Suitable comedy is provided by Mr. Willie Scott as Billy Brass and Miss Isa Bellington as Selina Worts. The play is capitally staged.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. Morton Powell's company in How Girls are Brought to Ruin is here. Miss Rona Merrick plays Jessie Burton sympathetically, and Mr. W. Steele is a breezy Harry Hailing; Mr. Tom Robertson plays powerfully as Philip Daze, and Mr. Alrick Burton is a hypocritical Solomon Slick; Miss Bessie Elvin is good as Mrs. Annie Burton, and Mrs. Morton Powell is exceptionally clever as Miss Winnie Waters.

His Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. Norman V. Norman's company in The Adventure of Lady Ursula is paying a return visit here. The two principal characters, the Lady Ursula Barrington and Sir George Sylvester of Miss Beatrice Wilson and Mr. Norman V. Norman, are again exceedingly artistic impersonations. Under the Red Robe is also billed for presentation.

Tivoli.—Lessee and Manager, Signor R. Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edgar G. Laban.—A really first-class programme is presented here this week. Haley's Juveniles are in the premier position. Their voices blend beautifully, and their dances are dainty and artistic. Reg. Bolton has a capital sketch, The Editor's Imp; and Parker and Parr, the Welsh duettists, introduce humour; Newco and Sulto are expert dancers; Georgina Winstanley is a pleasing vocalist; and Vernon's Bioscope adds considerably to the attractions.

New Hippodrome.—Owners and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. C. Routledge; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ralph D. Fenton.—An excellent series of interesting pictures is to be seen here.

Bakry Dock.—New Theatre and Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brogden.—Mr. Henry Swinerd's company, under the management of Mr. J. W. Cordiner, is presenting Dare-Devil Dorothy to crowded houses. Miss Nellie Valentine is pleasing in the title-rôle, her vocal efforts being much appreciated; Miss Nellie Harcourt acquits herself admirably as Judith; and the same remark applies to Miss Gertie Douglas (Ruth). Mr. Arthur Verne (Atkins), though suffering from a cold, did well as Captains Fielding and Dudley; Messrs. Walter Ashley and Walter Nugent leave nothing to be desired; Mr. Deane Cliffe is efficient as Featherstone Haugh. Misses Florence Corri and Daisy Holbrook prove themselves expert dancers; Mr. Edward Aldworth fills the part of Hawkins creditably. The production is well staged.

BATH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—The Silver King is once again staged here, and Messrs. Polini and Melford still present the famous drama with every attention to cast and general mounting. A newcomer, as far as Bath is concerned, is Mr. Fred W. Daviss, who, as Wilfred Denver, worthily upholds the traditions of this character, and throughout acts with care and distinction; Mr. Edward J. George remains the Daniel Jaikes, and nothing to enhance this well-known comedian's conception of the part can possibly be written; Miss Madge Morley portrays Nellie Denver with sincerity, and wins the sympathies of the audience; Cissie Denver is naturally played by Miss Flossie Hall Daviss; Mr. E. Stanton Sharp enacts the Spider upon recognised lines, his three companions in crime (Corket, Coombe, and Cripps) finding good exponents in Mr. Leslie Ellis, Mr. Arthur Wright, and Mr. Fred May; Miss Lila Barclay is Olive Skinner; and Mr. E. Stidwell does well as Baxter.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schuberth. — Roma and Romani discourse harmony here this week, their musical instrumental act proving greatly to the liking of the audience; Harwood's Juveniles are once again presenting their pretty scena, A Children's Christmas Eve, with all their former success; hilarity reigns supreme while Mulvey and Miriam hold the stage with their comedy turn; Clack and Clack give a varied interlude, the barrel-jumping of one of the ladies being exceedingly skilful; Nellie Walton, the singing mill girl; J. H. Greener, the singing pit lad; and Lisbon and Barker, comedians, all secure appreciation. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux continue popular.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—The Idol of Paris is played by Mr. James Bell's company. Miss Annie Bell as Flare-Flare gives convincing evidence of her fitness for the difficult rôle; Mr. Gordon Roby renders the character of Prince Sergius Zoresky lifelike and natural; the unscrupulous Philippe D'Esterre is admirably impersonated by Mr. Charles Stafford, and Mr. C. St. John Medley is very effective as Gustave Langloise; Mr. Sidney Arnold plays Victor Cashelle with considerable ability; Mr. Frank H. Dale as the precocious Tatave is most amusing, as also is Miss Annie Megson, who undertakes the part of Ann Sancterre. The scenery is worthy of special mention.

BELFAST.—Grand Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. Murray Carson and Company opened here on Monday in the romantic Irish comedy Terence, which met with a capital reception. The title-rôle was filled by Mr. Carson in an exceedingly clever manner, and high commendation is due to Miss Lilian Hallows for her charming interpretation of Maureen D'Arcy. Mr. J. R. La Fane was quite inimitable as the boots, Patrick Ryan; and Miss Gwladys Morris as Lady Nita Fanshawe deserves much praise for her excellent impersonation. Mr. Edgar Kent was all that could be desired as Sir Greville Fansshawe; and a really capital impersonation of the landlady, Mrs. O'Hara, was submitted by Miss Eugenie Vernie. A humorous impersonation of Simon Foulcher was given by Mr. Ernest A. Douglas; and other rôles were adequately presented by Miss Maude Abbott, Miss Hilda Dick, and Messrs. Philip Leslie and T. N. Weguelin. A Silent Woman forms a capital curtain-raiser, the various characters being cleverly sustained by Miss Elsie Wood, and Messrs. E. Kent and T. N. Weguelin.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. A. Salmond.—The attraction here this week is the powerful drama, The Great White Chief, presented by Mr. Lingford Carson's company. Mr. Hugh Brady furnishes a clever impersonation of Reindeer, the dumb chief; and the rôle of Leo Stanley—the Great White Chief—is ably sustained by Mr. Charles Homen. The iniquities of Black Forest are realistically portrayed by Mr. Norman Purnell; and Miss Pollie Denville admirably sustains the rôle of Latika, afterwards known as Nell Ellington. The part of Hester Stafford could not be in better hands than those of Miss Dulcie Lawrence. The humour of the piece is ably sustained by Miss Amy Ross Clyde as Martha Jane Curley; and Mr. Leonard Maitland as George Rupert Walker. Mr. George Butler furnishes a skilful impersonation of Hartley Deane; and other rôles are adequately presented by Messrs. J. Dobson Clyde, J. Wright, B. Melrose, &c.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fred Willmott and Will Sley; Resident-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The Frank L. Gregory troupe of hoop rollers and jugglers top the bill, and create quite a sensation. The Bros. Horne return with their boxing speciality, The Biter Bit, which has been accorded a terrific reception; and Mr. Sam Thomson, the droll Scotch comedian, creates roars of laughter. The Birkenhead Family gain much favour in their juvenile vocal comedy act, entitled Her Boy's Birthday; and Lydia and Amelys perform the Apache Dance; Mr. Dave Carter's tenor voice has been heard to advantage; and also here are Wright and Lawson, eccentrics; the Twin Andersons, in their original speciality; Mr. Fred Hastings, comedian; and the Hipposcope.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Limited.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—The leading attraction here is provided by Miss Helen Robarte, who appears with success in a Salome dance and Mendelssohn's Spring Song Dance. The Stein Eretto Troupe, hand jumping acrobats, perform some extraordinary feats; and Mr. Gus N. Blake and Miss Maud Granby, comedy duologue artists, are very smart. Mr. Whit Gray, a clever Irish and American comedian immediately makes himself a favourite; and the San Remo Girls, in their capital dances, gain immense approval. Miss Odeyne Spark, a fascinating comedienne; Miss Lena Brunton, talented mimic; and the Bioscope conclude.

New Alhambra Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Will White.—A large measure of support is being given to the pictures here. Naughton and Gold, comedians; and Mr. R. C. MacGill, a capital Scotch comedian, also appear.

St. George's Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—Some really excellent pictures have been exhibited here. Mr. Fred Orme is a good character comedian; and Mr. George Le Bart (assisted by Mlle. Mansell) proves a smart lightning painter in oils, and society juggler.

Cliftonville Hall.—General-Manager, Mr. O. E. Laumann.—The graceful skating contest on Thursday of last week for ladies was entirely successful, and valuable prizes were awarded. Professor G. S. Monohan commenced an engagement on Monday, and his remarkable skating feats have created much amazement.

BILSTON.—New Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. John M. Dawson; Musical-Director, Mr. J. E. Machin.—Messrs. Clayton and Lorne's grand pantomime Cinderella occupies the boards here. Fun is provided by Mr. Gus Granville (Blustering Jim), Mr. C. Turner (Nervous Joe), and Mr. Tom Gilbert (Gertie). Miss Amy Allnut makes a dashing Prince and Miss Daisy White a charming Cinderella.

BIRKENHEAD.—New Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Grant; Secretary, Miss Isabel Morris.—An initial visit from Mr. George Edwardes's company in the musical play, The Merry Widow, has naturally proved a great success. Beautifully staged and costumed, the production reflects every credit on Mr. J. A. E. Malone, under whose direction the piece is produced. Miss Mysie Devine is bright and charming in the title-rôle, and acquits herself both vocally and histrionically with distinction; Mr. Edward D'Arcy is a capital Baron Popoff; Mr. Frank Greene displays exceptional ability as Prince Danilo; and the Vicomte Camille de Jolidon is finely played by Mr. Ripley Evans. Nisch is represented with humour and ability by Mr. Fred Fowler; Miss Ada Thomas is admirably suited as Natalie; and remaining parts are, without exception, in able hands. The chorus is numerous and effective, and the orchestral arrangements are under the direction of Mr. E. Vousden.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. Charles R. Whittle, a comedian of resource, heads an excellent company. Miss Carlotta Levey, always a favourite here, is prominent with some fetching chorus songs; and a good company also includes the Rollicking Ralstons, in a comedy song-scena; the Lorrisons, comedians; the Charbons troupe of juvenile vocalists, in A Picnic Up the River; Bromley and Fontein, comedians; Charles Banks and his sagacious dog; and pictures on Brown's Royal Bioscope.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Ball. — Haley's company of lady vocalists and dancers, in an act entitled The Garden of Girls, have made a hit; Ted Moxon's trio of acrobats are clever; and some smart turns include those of the Three Sisters Allison, acrobatic dancers; Clara Reid and John Power, in their well-sustained sketch, Chambermaids; Phinas and Aida, pedestal jugglers; Charles Carew, comedian; Marcus Boyle, comedian; the Sisters Lotus, duettists; Cara Magda, lady gymnast; and the Hippodrome pictures.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—There is a great rush here to see An Englishman's Home, which Mr. Frank Curzon's company is playing quite up to its London form, and the public have filled the theatre at every performance Mr. Cecil G. Calvert's acting is thoroughly true to the typical character of Mr. Brown, and so good that when the fatuous, albeit sturdy, old Englishman goes out to his death, sullen but calm, amusement turns to admiration; Mr. Bertram Steer is especially fine as Geoffrey Smith, whose tragically sudden death comes as such a dramatic surprise, the hideous, mirthless laugh, and the blatant speech being absolutely true to the type; the prescient and serious-minded volunteer, Paul Robinson, is well played by Mr. Howard Sturge; the fussy incompetence of Captain Finch are amusingly depicted by Mr. Littledale Power; the invading Prince is portrayed with cool humour and due authority by Mr. Chas. B. Vaughan; and the general support is excellent. The Heart of the City, which precedes the play, is noticed elsewhere in our columns.

Prince of Wales's Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. T. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—Boy Blue will close down on Saturday next, to make way for Mrs. D'Oyly Carte's Savoyards. The pantomime has since Christmas Eve been playing to "capacity business" almost invariably, and will be long remembered among the "Wales" successes.

Alexandra Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. T. Guest.—Little Red Riding Hood shows no signs of closing, but looks like running till Easter. The company continues in fine form, and the principal girl, Miss Dolly Denton, has just been adjudged by popular vote and acclaimed the winner of that much-coveted prize the "owl cake."

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Andrew Melville; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hindle Taylor. — Home, Sweet Home, with Mr. Frank Lindo and company, is fulfilling a very successful engagement here. Mr. Lindo's fine, manly acting as Stephen Armitage meets with unlimited admiration; and Miss Marion Wakeford as the truant, but finally contented, wife, Joan, is sweetness and dignity itself. Mr. Leo R. Neilson as Lucas Lyle puts in all the lurking villainy of the rôle; Mr. D. Lawrence Doyle repeats his clever study of the rugged old sailor and foster father David Armitage; Mr. Richard Walsh is appropriately strenuous in his acting as Dick Redmayne; and Mr. Bernhardt Turner and Miss Helene Thompson make hits of the lighter rôles.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Alexander. — The Babes in the Wood furnishes the second course of pantomime here, this being per the admirable resources and company of Mr. and Mrs. John Walters. The two Babes are prettily portrayed by the Misses F. Parkinson and Kitty Chester; the two Robbers are presented with great humour and success by Messrs. Martin Haley and Dan Rayner; Mr. Tom Lewis enters into the fun of the piece well as the Baron; Miss Violet Thorne shows considerable charm and spirit as Robin Hood; Miss Lily Miller makes a prepossessing Maid Marion; the Dame Flossie of Mr. Ally M. Benson is a truly humorous performance; and the Misses Lottie Harper, Edie Bracewell, Clara Nottingham, Elsie Kedward, Elsie Naish, Mr. Tom Hulme, and the Sweet Sixteen Ballet Troupe are prominent.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Robertson.—The King and the Unknown Woman is paying its first visit to Aston, with the author's (Mr. E. Hill-Mitcheison) company. The play has attracted immensely, and the applause has been great. Mr. James Stillwell has for his fine presentment of Prince Loris been highly acclaimed; Miss F. Conyer Radcliffe in the accompanying rôle of Zora makes a delightful impression; Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan invests the character of Prince Menski with all its villainous qualities; Miss Muriel Inglis as his familiar, the Countess Melvitch, proves a formidable personage; and the humour of the piece is well interpreted by Mr. William E. Passmore as Corporal Stack and Miss Cissie Podmore as Schnapps. Mr. W. R. Winning is undoubtedly good as General Platz; Mr. Cyril Harrison is also successful as Captain Gara; and Miss Nora Dumayne scores as Else.

Palace Theatre, Bordesley.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Goodwin Woodward.—Her Road to Ruin is drawing crowded houses here, with Mr. Fredk. Melville's production and company. Miss Beatrice Edwards' acting as Jess Willoughby positively holds the audience spellbound with its deep dramatic intensity; and Mr. Henry Wolston as the curate, Frank Temple, carries the audience completely with him. Mr. Alex. Bradley thrives exceedingly in his old rôle of "the man who was to blame," Philip Hardy; Miss Alice Bowes is charming as ever and sweetly sympathetic as May Willoughby; Miss Nellie Bonser keeps in thorough touch with the audience in her clever triple rôle as "the girl from Lamacashire"; Mr. Harry Talbot as Boots and Miss Marie Wright as Jennie do a good amount of work; and Messrs. Dane Clarke, V. R. C. Moors, and Duncan furnish clever studies.

Grand Theatre of Varieties.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—The artistic living art tableaux vivants presented by Henriette de Serris are the leading feature here; the Brothers Griffiths supply some amusing burlesques; the Miles-Stavordale Quintette of banjoists are a great attraction; and popular turns are done by the Dandies, in a song scena; the McConnell Trio, Fily Adair, Adams and Ward, Barry Lupino, and the Vetter Brothers.

Empire Palace.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The principal item here is a dramatic playlet, Wake Up, England, adapted from "Britain's Awakening," which is presented in an excellent manner by Mr. Norman Wrighton and company; George Gilbey is repeatedly encored for his funny songs; Austin Rudd is clever; Annie Schubert has an original song scena, "The Deputy," which goes well; Helen Forsyth sings an illustrated song; the comedy element is well represented by Johnson and Bert in their Queer Customer sketch; Perceval, comedy pianist; and Nell Emerald, comedienne.

Hippodrome. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Harry Lyons.—Mr. and Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons are appearing here in a playlet, A Man's a Man for a' That, which is smartly rendered; the humorous juggling of Radford and Valentine is entertaining.

Gaiety Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell. — Harriett Vernon is the bright particular star here. She has a new song, "A Yuletide Story," which wins loud applause. Austin Lenton and company have a sketch, The Bigamist, which is well played; the Three Delaries in their demon grotto act are smart; Morny Cash and Leslie Race are clever comedians; the dancing of Moon and Morris is above the average; and Wyndham and Waters and Ruby and Laws add largely to the mirth of the evening.

King's Hall.—Sole Owners and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—The attractions at King's Hall continue to be well patronised. This week's pictures are of a novel and well-varied order, including Rifle Bill, Blind, &c. Some of a more humorous nature include The Monkey Man, The Ragman's Bargain, and others. Pleasing variety turns are given by Gravetta and Parr and Miss Elsie Lewis, who won a local singing competition. The skating rink is also an attraction.

Curzon Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Waller Jeffs; General-Manager (at Curzon Hall), Mr. Irving Bosco.—The entertainment presented at this hall appeals both to young and old. The "travel" pictures are both interesting and instructive, whilst the cinematograph films cause laughter. The exhibition is admirably varied by Miss Ducie Saunderson, who sings several illustrated ballads.

Queen's Hall.—Sole Owners and Managers, Messrs. J. P. Moore and B. Kennedy.—An entirely new series of pictures is being shown here this week, and includes a pathetic film, entitled The Zulu with the White Man's Heart. Among many other entertaining pictures are The Miracle of Roses, The Chauffeur and the Cabwoman, and Women are Flirts. An excellent vaudeville element is supplied by Mr. Maurice Lee.

BISHOP AUCKLAND. — Eden Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. R. Addison, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. Huntley.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Draycott's repertoire company opened on Monday in A Modern Adventuress. Mr. Draycott (Pietro Donelli) and Mrs. Draycott (Violet Meredith) reappeared in these parts, and enjoyed a very hearty welcome; Mr. Wilfred J. Scott was painstaking as Harry Delby, and Mr. George Arthur as Wallace Danton proved himself an actor of no mean ability; Miss Marie Ellis was charming as Vivette Delby, and Miss Eva Norman was a clever Sally Hodges. The scenic effects were capital. Shadows of a Great City and The Heart of a Hero are in the week's bill.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Mr. C. F. Leighton's company is playing The Gold Ladder here this week. The Rev. Frank Thornhill is portrayed with marked ability by Mr. Harry Cullenford; whilst Mr. Leighton very creditably depicts the villainous Michael Severn. The highest appreciation is won by Miss Violet Ennis Lawson as Lilian Grant; and the humorous parts of Samuel Peckaby and Victoria Peckaby are in the able hands of Mr. E. W. Cubb and Miss Dorothy Trellyholse respectively.

J. Johnson is a capable comedian and dancer; and Cissie Dryden, comedienne and dancer, Walter Wallis, comedian, and Camplin, trick cyclist, are also entertaining. Animated pictures conclude.

CRADLEY HEATH.—EMPIRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jno. H. Morton.—Gus Levaine's pantomime Dick Whittington holds the boards here. Miss Marie Collins is principal boy, and captivates the hearts of the audience; Miss Lizzie Levaine as Alice is winsome and pretty, and full of dainty lightness; Mr. Fred Terry as the Cook has scope to show his versatile powers; the Bros. E. and G. Farmer as the two rodents are highly to be praised; Messrs. Gower and Williams as Shuffle and Shirk are brimming over with fun and humour; Mr. Lew Vance makes a smart Emperor of Morocco; Mr. Chas. Towers is a power in himself, and as Idle Jack keeps the ball rolling; as the Cat Mr. G. Baronni is most feline.

CREWE.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. G. Dudley Bennett; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Cuthbert.—A hearty reception was accorded Mr. Chas. M. Bestic's company in the musical comedy The Flower Girl on Monday. Mr. John T. MacCullum is a good comedian, and throws himself wholly into the character of Joe Wheeler; Mr. John Latham gives an excellent account of Johnny Wheeler; Mr. Robert Cranny as the Honourable Billy Greenhill is a good representative of the lover; Mr. Louis du Cane as Reginald Rackit is to be highly commended upon his successful efforts; the characters of Alphonse and Lizzette de Racquet are ably sustained by Mr. Henry Adnes and Miss Lilian Drake respectively; Miss Eva Nelson as Lily (the flower girl) plays her part with much grace and ease, and her singing is tuneful; Miss Georgie de Lara, as Miss Greenhill, a Suffragette, makes the most of her part. The chorus acquit themselves excellently.

CROOK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, Wallace Davidson, Ltd.; Resident-Manageress, Mrs. Wallace Davidson.—The management has again secured an excellent company in Mr. Fred C. Summerfield's powerful drama, Geoffrey Langdon's Wife. The character of Mary is well depicted by Miss Mary Lovett, and Mr. Charles Phelps as Geoffrey Langdon is very good. An enthusiastic reception is accorded to Mr. Paul Beckett as Felix Beverley; Jack Stirling, the hero, is in the capable hands of Mr. Edward E. Ashby; and Miss Kathleen Magee is effective as the Hon. Mrs. Sands. Mr. Cyril Grier as Colonel Mills is above the average. The lighter vein is cleverly supplied by Mr. Percy Brown as Thomas and Mr. Victor T. Raymond as Charles; and Miss Hettie Senior as Sweet Nancy is all that can be desired.

CROYDON.—GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Roland Daniel; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Ernest Archer.—Mr. George Alexander's company in The Builder of Bridges is giving much pleasure here this week. Miss Dorothy Green handles the rôle of Dorothy Faringay with all the skill and tact of an accomplished actress; Mrs. Kemmis makes a pleasing impression as Mrs. Debney; Miss Beatrice Smith makes capital out of the part of Miss Closson; and Miss Ella Collins is pretty as Minnie. Mr. Leonard Pagden submits a scholarly rendering of Edward Thursfield; Mr. Lewis Fielder is adequate as Arnold Faringay; Mr. Arthur Vezin gives a sound performance as Walter Gresham; Mr. Alfred Harris exactly fits the part of Sir Henry Killick; and Mr. Percy D. Owen just touches the right note as Peter Holland. Mr. V. Chalder, the very able musical director, deserves warm congratulations.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. Anthony.—Animated pictures and illustrated songs continue to attract good audiences here, and they are of the best.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Walter Gibbons and Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Eustace Jay.—Kelly and Agnes are a smart pair of comedy artists; Alec Hurley and company in Cockneys in Japan make a big hit; Woodhouse and Wells, comedians and patterers, work hard and successfully; Lena Wylie, South American soprano, is received with much favour; the Warsaw Brothers are funny in musical act; Charles Carr is a rising young character vocalist and dancer; Evelyn Taylor submits her latest song, "Mr. Poverty"; the Sisters Caselli are clever duettists and dancers; L. B. Athol, vocal comedian, is excellent; and the Bioscope completes.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's company in Her Forbidden Marriage is the attraction this week. Mr. Henry Lonsdale has an immense amount of work to do in the part of George Madison, and does it in artistic manner; a powerful impersonation is that given by Miss Isla Garnet Vayne; Miss Florence Hunt plays with great passion as Lady Lucretia Lancaster; a softer study of womanhood is submitted by Miss Grace Lester as the Mother Superior; Miss Grace Emery as Patty Lovejoy causes a deal of mirth; Mr. J. Stewart as Jenkins is smart in the humorous part; Mr. Louis Hector does well in the heavy rôle of Charles Devereux; Mr. Fred De Vere is excellent as Timothy Tuttutt; and Mr. Wilfred Mansfield gives a manly representation of Sir George Lancaster. The dressing of the piece is excellent.

HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Signor Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Hersee.—An appreciated programme is headed by Bella and Bijou, in their latest successes, which cause roars of laughter; the Four Royal Scots are clever in their musical sketch, When the Cat's Away; a popular turn is Arthur Stacey, comedian and dancer. Other good items are those of Chimes, the crazy butcher; Esta Stella, the military maid; Edi Coolville, vocalist; and the Pepiscope Pictures.

CENTRAL HALL.—Edison's Picture Co.; Manager, Mr. Victor Branford.—The pictures are earning excellent opinions this week. The chief films are The Life Story of Captain Dreyfus, The Martyrdom of Thomas A'Becket, and The Fisherman's Daughter.

DARWEN.—Picture Palace and Theatre Royal. Lessees, The Animated Pictorial Enterprises, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. A. Whitehouse.—In addition to a good array of pictures Miss Marion Adelaide, soprano ballad vocalist, gains applause; Mlle. Le Briton, a refined lady gymnast, does some smart feats; the Louisiana Trio of coloured song and dance artists are well received; and Lieut. Harper, a clever ventriloquist, creates amusement.

Public Hall and Palace of Varieties.—Lessees, Messrs. Thomson, Leivers, and Bennett; Manager, Mr. J. E. Thomson.—Percy Johnson, comedian, is recalled again and again; Gracie Bard, a chic comedienne, is well received; and excellent films are shown on the Bioscope.

DERBY.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor and General-Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charles Denley.—Miss Mary Austin and Mr. E. Vivian Edmonds' company are here this week with Woman and Wine. Mr. Edmonds repeats his success as Dick Seymour; Miss C. St. Elmo cleverly enacts Marcel Ragadout; Mr. Ashmore Vincent gives a careful study of Phineas Collins; Miss Violet Sims appears to advantage as Mary Andrews; Mr. J. Milne Taylor well plays Hugh Seymour, Mr. R. Foulis is good as Brandet; Mr. Edwin T. Kirby is clever as Calsbon; and Miss Octavia de Noel is in every way successful as La Colombe. Considerable amusement is provided by Mr. W. Manning as Professor Sauter and by Mr. Harry Harrop as his son, Charley, the latter introducing several very amusing songs and receiving every assistance from Miss Ethel Vinroy, who plays Janet Marlow, a widow, and who also sings several good songs. Some excellent dancing is given by the Lottie Stone Troupe.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes.—The star turn this week is provided by the Four Burnells, musical and knockabout comedians, who prove themselves capable all-round entertainers. At the other end of the bill are Viviana and company in a distinctly clever and amusing scena entitled The Toy Shop. Among other good items are Stidder and Dunbar, who achieve well-merited success in their musical comedy act. The McAleavey Marvels are smart trick and barrel jumpers; Master Richard May, a boy tenor, is heard to great advantage; Fred Dunstone, topical comedian, submits rousing chorus songs; and Ena Corella is a popular quick-change speciality dancer and comedienne. The Bioscope pictures are of an excellent variety.

DEVONPORT. — Hippodrome.—Manager, Mr. Herbert Taylor.—Miss Madge Grey's mimicry is realistic and her patter extremely funny; Rousby's Greater London is a picturesque item, the various electrical and mechanical contrivances being effective; the Austral Trio in A Musical Evening supply some delightful melody; the Gilberts perform some daring feats on the tight-rope; the three Sisters Lee entertain with some well-executed acrobatic dancing; Billy Farrell, the popular coloured comedian and cake walk expert, is in his best form; and Lily Arthur is an attractive vocalist and comedienne.

Metropole Theatre.—Manager, Mr. G. S. King.—Mr. Lingford Carson's company in The Power of the Cross is creating an excellent impression. The piece is brimful of exciting incident, to which full justice is done by a very capable company. Mr. George A. de Gray as Baron Woulfe Curzola, cleverly plays a character hedged round with mystery; Miss Annie Hylton does well as the much-persecuted Margaret Seaton; Miss Stella Carmichael works very hard as the intriguing adventuress Rita Lascelles; and Mr. Robert Hall gives a commendable rendering of Gerald Fairfax.

DEWSBURY.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. Herbert Asquith.—Rollicking Rory is here this week. Mr. Chalmers Mackey in the title-part evokes laughter and applause, his singing and dancing being greatly appreciated; Mrs. Chalmers Mackey as Mrs. Ashleigh plays with tact and skill; Mr Wallace Campbell and Mr. St. John Stuart give excellent illustrations of the parts of Stephen D'Arcy and Shaun Brady; Mme. Constance Bellamy sings Irish melodies sweetly; Mr. J. P. McBride as Desmond Fitzgerald is excellent; and the singing and dancing of Miss Nana Flensburg as Rosie meet with approval.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. George Weldon; Stage-Manager, Mr. Jack Harris; Musical-Director, Mr. A. D. Willcox. — The Haverleys, American song illustrators, sing sentimental songs here, accompanied by fine coloured pictures; Tom Joy, comedian, earns much applause by his drollery; Miss Nancy Renshaw, negro comedienne and bone soloist, finds favour; a clever contortionist is Sim Marco—his performance is remarkable; Zasmas is a clever gymnast, his performance on the flying rings being striking; Vasey and Ramsey are smart dancers; and Lettie and Florence, duettists, the Bros. Hannaway, and the animated pictures complete an altogether enjoyable entertainment.

DONCASTER.—New Grand Theatre and Empire.—Manager, Mr. J. W. Chapman.—A variety combination has succeeded in giving a delightful diversion this week. The Dayton Family, who are easily the finest pedestal risley performers in the world, do some magnificent work; Down the Mine, a vocal scena by the Four Elwyns, is a rich musical treat; agility and smartness characterise the contributions of the Three Milfords; a bright and effective display is that of the Wigham Family, drawing-room entertainers and expert dancers; the Martines are popular in their topical songs; Frank Coyle, comedian, is warmly applauded upon reviving pleasant associations; Howard and Wallace infuse comedy into their sketch, Taming a Wife, and Hillett and Hallett, comedians and dancers, are humorous in their songs and patter.

DOVER. — Royal Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. S. W. Winter.—At the top of a strong bill is Miss Eileen Douglas, very dainty and captivating, who repeats her success with "The Musical Comedy Girl," and introduces a pretty new number in "Rosie's Young Man." In a bright duologue, entitled An Appointment, Marjory Clark (a clever vocalist) and Percy Hayden (a talented and finished light comedy actor) have an excellent opportunity for artistic work; the clever trick-cycling of the Betsons is combined with comedy; and George Don, the quaint oddity, sings and dances in a style all his own; Kerr and Dene, a bright comedy pair, appear in a little sketch, It's a Walk-over, which is well received; as is the absurdly-amusing George Prince, the crazy comedian. The rapid charcoal sketches of Fred S. Howard are meritorious, and equal success attends his efforts in impersonations. Much interest has been aroused by the Amateur Carnival, which occupies a goodly portion of the programme, prizes and engagements being given to the winners.

DUBLIN.—Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mrs. Michael Gunn; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Hyland.—A large and appreciative audience on Monday witnessed the production of A Waltz Dream, as played by Messrs. George Edwardes and Charles Frohman's excellent company. Miss May De Souza's charming interpretation of Franzi Steingruber delighted all, her singing being frequently applauded; Mr. Eric Thorne gave a richly humorous representation of Joachim XIII.; as Count Lothair Mr. Leslie Holland was also successful, and Miss Amy Augarde imbued the part of Friedrike with humour and charm. The rôle of Lieutenant Montschi was well represented by Mr. John Hamilton, and Miss Ethel Cadman was seen to advantage as Princess Helene; Lieutenant Niki had an able exponent in Mr. Wilson Pembroke, and Miss Mary Hamilton was excellent as Greta; Messrs. Langford Kirby, Albert Kavanagh, and Willie Warde, jun., made the most of the parts of Wendolin, Sigismund, and Max Bauer; and as Fifi, Mitzi, and Hana Misses May Marton, Kathleen Hayes, and Polly Lorraine were also satisfactory. The chorus and orchestra under the bâton of Mr. Hamish MacCunn were all that could be desired.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—A strong bill is headed here by George Robey, whose amusing patter and songs are loudly encored. Leoni Clarke, with his cleverly-trained animals, has a rousing reception; Amandus, facial mimic and impersonator of celebrities, scores a distinct success; Miss Doris Gilbert wins much applause for her charming vocalism; Charles Pastor, a smart and happy comedian, is decidedly popular; the singing and dancing of the Twelve Hippodrome Girls proves a great attraction; and the Royal Pictures complete a good entertainment.

Empire — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—Mr. George Lashwood, who is the star turn here, had a hearty reception on Monday, having to respond to many demands for encores. The Gascoignes (Paul and Ivy) are particularly smart jugglers and equilibrists, and the Sisters Herbert are warmly applauded for a clever vaudeville act; in a duologue entitled A Society Butterfly the Brasques are highly successful, and as a comedienne Miss Edith Fink is as engaging as ever; Wilbert and Lealand in their Continental novelty act win hearty applause, and Mark Milton, comedian, scores another success. Estrella, international and barefoot sand dancer, and the Empire pictures conclude an excellent programme.

Tivoli.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Assistant-Manager, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—An excellent bill is headed here by the Four Rio Brothers in a daring gymnastic performance, which elicits loud applause; the Mezzettis extract much fun out of their comedy act The New Recruit; the Gelders give a capital exhibition of their skill as magicians; Blanche and Powell submit a pleasing vocal and musical act, which is warmly applauded; the Sisters Du Cane, vocalists and dancers, are well received; Farrell and Dunn, the Caledonian Duo, meet with approval; Ralph Goggin, baritone vocalist, renders his songs in good style; Ivy Dene is a comedienne and dancer of ability; and the remainder of the programme is supplied by Wyllie, an amusing tramp musician; Mark Stuart, a smart comedian; and the Bioscope, with a very laughable picture.

World's Fair and Music Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. C. A. James.—The newcomers here this week include Witt and Wynn, duettists; Queenie Voone, comedienne and dancer; Harry Hewitt, ventriloquist; Dan Leslie, pedestal dancer; Annie Bamford, comedienne; the Blydons, duettists and dancers; and the Cinematograph.

DUDLEY. — Opera House. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. Maurice Clement; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. Tilley.—Mr. Fred Karno's company, in His Majesty's Guests, is here this week. The fund centres round Mr. Geo. Hestor, who, as Sergeant Lightning, is hilariously droll, and gives a true test of stage humour by making the orchestra laugh; the handsome stage presence and artistic acting of Miss Aggie Morris as Lady Maud Easem; and the winning ways of Miss Edith Ager as Dolly Miffin, were much admired; Mr. E. O. Freshwater capably filled the part of Lord Easem; Mr. C. Richardson as Bunkey, Mr. S. Bolton as Fritz, Mr. Tom Manardo as Selina, and another artist, formed a quartette of clever pantomimic knockabouts. Mr. Charles Usher combines effective stage-management with the part of Mr. Miffin (universal provider). The piece is well staged, and the ladies well gowned.

Empire.—Proprietors, the Midland Entertainment Corporation; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. H. Waters.—Mlle. Marvelle, with her performing cockatoos and macaws, proves a strong attraction here. Olive and Owen, the road tinkers, are responsible for really good singing; Zaida, slack-wire artist, with her performing doves, is a charming and pleasing turn; clever acrobatic work is given by Pongorila, "the man of the woods"; Sydney Bach as "Mrs. James, the Welsh landlady," is most entertaining; Nellie Neil is a dainty comedienne and dancer; and Lauri Howard is an efficient comedian and dancer

DUNDEE.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. Louis Karpe.—Mr. Fredk. Melville's thriller Married to the Wrong Man is staged here. Miss Gertrude Boswell plays well the exacting part of Ruth; Mr. Oswald Cray as Jack Gladwin bears himself bravely; Mr. H. Lane Bayliff as Captain Deering makes a clever stage villain; Mr. Charles Vivian's Jasper Skinner is an unusually convincing character study; Mr. Arthur T. Lennard is a capital Sergeant Manners; Miss Dorothy Haigh sustains the rôle of Rose O'Connor with much grace and charm; Miss Rosalie Notrelle impersonates Nurse Manners cleverly; Dr. Archie Bird has a capable representative in Mr. Paige Lawrence; and Mr. Syd Claydon as Timothy Clinker and Miss May Davis as Dolly Fritter are admirably suited.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, The United County Theatres, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. S. McIntosh.—Topping a varied and interesting bill here is Harry Tate's No. 1 company in Fishing, in which some capital fooling is introduced; some startling acrobatic feats are presented by the Gaudsmidts Brothers; Louie Bright sings delightfully and dances elegantly; Matthews and Brown are entertaining in coon comedy; Stanley, the singing collier, is well received; Henri Bekker, assisted by Mlle. Maie, patters and juggles in amusing style; the Zeenas give a comical and exceptionally clever exhibition on the triple bars; George Hyatt performs some difficult juggling feats with neatness and precision; Spry and Austin are smart and breezy in their act; and the Palascope concludes.

Gaiety Theatre.—Lessee, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Licensee, Mr. W. E. Potts; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. E. Evans.—Mr. John Clyde and company are presenting twice nightly here a grand production of the great Scottish national drama Rob Roy. The new and elaborate scenery has all been painted specially for this production by Mr. R. Miller, while Highland pipers and dancers further add realism to the scenes. Mr. John Clyde makes a particularly strong and realistic Rob Roy; Mr. W. G. Robb instils much pawkiness into the part of Bailie Nicol Jarvie; Mr. A. Young Ritchie scores as the Dougal Cratur; Mr. J. W. Bowie as Francis Osbaldistone acts the polished gentleman to perfection; a handsome and attractive Diana Vernon is found in Miss Jones; Miss Clara Cowper makes a stately Helen Macgregor; Mr. Clavering Power enacts the villainous Rashleigh Osbaldistone thoroughly well; Mr. H. W. Needham is very good as Owen; Mr. D. Blair is a dashing and handsome Captain Thornton; and Mr. Alec Hamilton an excellent Major Galbraith.

Empire Theatre.—Lessee and Manageress, Mrs. Lillie Williams; Business-Manager, Mr. Frank Percival; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alfred Ross.—Mr. Fred J. Webb's company is drawing large audiences here with The Hour of Her Triumph. The part of Zelia Clairmont is cleverly interpreted by Miss M. Danvers Smith; Mr. Fred J. Webb appears to advantage as Eugene Harberry; Mr. Will Henderson plays feelingly the part of Harold Clavering; Mr. Clive Hall displays fine dramatic acting as Jack Vernon; Mr. Louis Nanton as Ben Brodie keep the house in merriment; Miss Nellie Lambert makes a pleasing Nellie Clavering; and Miss Lallah Price is responsible for a clever impersonation of an inebriate.

Newman's Picture Palace. — Mr. Fred Newman has an attractive programme on top at this popular house this week, several very fine pictures being on view. In addition the Cedrics in an amusing act, Chish and Fips, and Vela, a remarkably clever wire equilibrist, lend variety to the entertainment.

Kinnaird Hall.—The U.S.A. pictures, under the capable management of Mr. Archie Hamilton, of Hamilton's Excursions fame, commenced a two-weeks' stay here on Monday. The films are nicely varied, and a capital variety turn is provided by Aerian and Ostara, gymnasts.

Gilfillan Hall.—The B.B. pictures continue to draw good houses here. Quite a feature of this week's programme is the singing pictures, which are proving very popular.

American Roller Skating Rink.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. C. P. Crawford and F. A. Wilkins; Manager, Mr. Bert Crump.—This magnificent rink continues to maintain its popularity. The first grand skating Cinderella took place on Tuesday, all skaters appearing in evening dress.

DUNFERMLINE.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. E. Potts.—Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Levy and Mr. J. E. Cardwell's juvenile company, in The House that Jack Built, opened a successful week's engagement here on Monday. Miss Fanny Adamson is a dashing Jack; Mr. H. Hillerby as Aunt Purdy works hard and his method of fun-making is much appreciated; Wee Gladys Wyse as Wee McGregor gives a capital impersonation of a Scotch comedian; Mr. MacNorton contributes largely to the success of the show; Doyle and Gibson as Scraggs and Scraggles put in good work; Miss Evelyn Major makes a dainty Jill, her singing being praiseworthy; Miss Olive Purcell as Fairy Twinkle Star possesses a good voice, which is effectively used. Specialities are given by Doyle and Gibson, Horance Hillerby, MacNorton, Florrie Edwardes, Wee Gladys Wyse, and Vivian Wakeman. The staging and dressing are excellent and appropriate.

EASTBOURNE.—Devonshire Park Theatre.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Murray King and Clark.—Mr. Frank Weathersby's company is appearing here in The Marriage of Kitty. Miss Helena Parsons is a charming Kitty; Miss Kathleen Russell, beautifully gowned, plays with great cleverness as Mme. de Semiano; Miss Dot Seilby does all that is necessary as Rosalie; Mr. Leslie Owen as the self-satisfied Sir Reginald makes excellent use of his opportunities; Mr. Bert Morley is a distinct and interesting John Travers; Mr. Edward Mervyn does excellent duty as Norbury; and Mr. Theodore Kelly helps ably as Hampton. Bitter Sweet is played each evening as a front piece.

Royal Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; District-Manager, Mr. G. Egbert; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Holloway.—Heading the bill here is Mr. Randolph King, in an interesting ventriloquial and protean mystery act, Mystery No. 1. Mr. Dan Austin, with Mr. R. Harcourt, has an original comedy duologue, His Wedding Morning, which provokes much laughter; Florence Ellis and Victor Ellis display great cleverness; Miss Ida Brophy is a pleasing singer and smart dancer; Mr. Bert Ridley is a local whistler, whose imitations are astonishingly realistic; Hemsley and Ambrose have an amusing motor-car act; Miss Lou Langley is a dainty comedienne; and new pictures are shown.

Pier Pavilion.—Manager Mr. George Hayes.—Mr. W. George Lestocq and company are appearing here in The Sportsman. Mr. George Lestocq as Harry Briscoe is funny and natural; Mr. H. Donaldson does able work as Dr. Halroyd; Mr. Sidney Bransgrove is an amusing Mr. Perkins; Mr. Gordon Smythe does well as Bob; and as the Inspector Mr. T. Dennis is effective. Miss Dora Comyn contributes an animated study of the part of Mrs. Briscoe; Miss Agnes Maude plays with much point and effect as Mrs. Critchly; and Miss Pauline Emeric is a capital Emily. Following The Sportsman, a new and original one-act musical play was given on Monday evening, entitled The Garden of the Gods.

ECCLES.—Crown Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert Rogers.—Messrs. Matthew H. Glenville and Fred Osmond's company is playing A Soldier of France. Miss Beatrice Shirley gives a capable rendering of Pauline Lorraine; Zippe, a Creole slave, is well portrayed by Miss Phœbe Jones; Master Louis Lorraine is ably depicted by Miss Gertie Renaud; Miss Rose Charlesworth is successful as Rita, Duke de Laval's niece; much fun is derived from the efforts of Miss Maggie Hobart and Mr. Freddie Edwards in the respective characters of Margot and Pollyput Jollyboy; Mr. Fred Rivers gives a characteristic presentiment of Corporal, later Father, Jean, of the Fighting Fifth; Mr. Gerald Kennedy does full justice to the part of Judas Delara; and as Captain Louis Lorraine Mr. Edward Hobart displays cleverness.

EDINBURGH.—Royal Lyceum Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—The popular comedian, Mr. Lionel Rignold, has been here this week, bringing Mr. F. Lonsdale's successful farce, The Early Worm, on its first visit. As Allan Marchmount, who supplies the title of the piece, Mr. Rignold has a part in which his natural gifts of vocal and facial expression are heightened by a sound artistic method; and the company gathered round him is a most capable one. The two feminine rôles in the cast are happily filled by Miss Marie Daltra, who puts all the necessary force into her acting as Lady Steyne, and Miss Fyfe Alexander, whose Sybil Annesley is very prettily and gracefully rendered. Mr. T. Warburton Gamble plays the Duke of Tadcaster with easy refinement; Mr. Frank Graham exploits all the humour afforded by the part of Lord Steyne, a down-trodden husband; Sir Wm. Mayton is effectively represented by Mr. Raymond Dudley; and the other characters are well-handled by Messrs. W. H. Pierpoint, Eric H. Albury, Donald Dawson, Robert Melrose, and Geoffrey Ellis. The Wedding Morn, put on as a curtain-raiser, proved quite a charming little sketch, in which Mr. Dudley, Mr. Albury, and Miss Christine Jenson made an admirable appearance.

Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Whitehead.—Continuing its run, for the concluding week of its present season in Edinburgh, the matinée and evening performances of Peter Pan have attracted large and well-pleased audiences. The charms of Peter and Wendy, as portrayed by Miss Pauline Chase and Miss Gertrude Lang, and their varied adventures; the atrocities of the Pirate Captain, Mr. Robert Harwood, and his crew (including the notorious Smee, of Mr. George Shelton); and all the round of characters familiar now as household names, seem to retain their fascination for playgoers to an extraordinary degree. The piece is well staged, well acted, and warmly applauded.

King's Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Amand Mascard.—Miss Irma Lorraine is the principal attraction here in her poses representative of works of art, like "The Flute Player," "Bacchante," "The Indian Snake Charmer," and "A Vision of Faith"; Mastro and Mlle. Oretta are wonderful equilibrists; Marstro does some exceedingly clever juggling feats, and his concluding performance of balancing himself on a billiard table—supported by Mlle. Oretta—on two billiard balls placed on the top of two cues evokes much applause. There are other admirable artists, Mr. Bert Branitford, Mr. George Grenville, Mr. Vivian Foster, Miss Agnes Asher, Mr. R. Brown (the miniature Hercules), and Mr. F. G. Grahame's company in Mr. Mark Melford's trifle, Non-suited; but, perhaps, the most spontaneous applause of the evening is called forth by Miss Ethel Erskine and Miss Jane Eyre, two popular actresses who were in the cast of Dick Whittington at the Theatre Royal. Miss Erskine sings with conspicuous humour and expression, and by her accompaniments approved herself a pianist of ability. Miss Eyre's brightness and vivacity in several tuneful songs rouses the audience to enthusiasm. Miss Eyre is assisted in two of her selections by little Miss Eva Burnley, who dances with great neatness.

Empire Palace Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Aynsley Cook.—Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, an exceptionally clever trio of conjurers and illusionists, lead the van in an attractive bill, and their mystifying sleight-of-hand tricks provide excellent entertainment. The accomplishments of the Selbinis, as trick cyclists, are well known, and their exhibition of skill continues to be marked by all its usual grace and dexterity, as well as by the performance of novel and startling feats; Mr. and Mr. H. A. Meymott appear with great success in an amusing comedy sketch, entitled Semi-detached; Howell and Scott create much diversion with their Hebrew patter; and the Rawsons, boy and girl artists, give a most pleasing musical seance; the blind musician, Mr. George Young, gains warm approval as an instrumentalist, especially for selections played on the English concertina; and commendable single-handed turns are contributed by Mr. J. W. Hall, a quaint comedian; and by Miss Lily Esplin, a character comedienne. An interesting series of animated pictures is shown by the Bioscope.

The Oriental Original Picture Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. W. C. Burns.—Mr. Burns's venture is proving successful here, including admirable views shown by the Bioscope, and music, both vocal and instrumental, of an agreeable sort.

EXETER.—Theatre Royal.—Chairman and Managing-Director, Mr. Edward J. Domville, J.P.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy M. Dunsford.—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch was presented here on Monday by Mr. Gaston Mayer's London company, which included Miss Augusta Haviland, who as Mrs. Wiggs scored a great success. As Miss Hazy Miss Armine Grace was both clever and amusing; Mr. Burton Cooke as Mr. Stubbins was characteristic; Miss Dorothy Clifton gave a well-studied representation of Lovey Mary; the matrimonial agent was in the capable hands of Mr. Forester Harvey; Mr. Guy Addison as Bob did well; and Miss Beatrice Bell as Miss Eichorn and Miss Violet Chamier as Mrs. Schultz worked ably.

New Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Resident-Manager, Mr. Frederick Sandy.—The top of this week's bill is Albert Toft's living statuary entitled "Makers of History"; Signor and Mme. Borelli are accomplished pianists; the equilibristic feats of the Lombards are marvellous; Walter Curtis is aptly described as the "merriment merchant"; David Poole's ventriloquial efforts are deservedly applauded; Lilian French, comedienne, has an excellent reception; and Donald Macdougall, Scotch comedian, is funny. The Hippodrome pictures round off an excellent bill.

FALKIRK.—Grand Theatre and Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. W. Ebbutt.—The Gay Goddess is meeting with much success. The play is prettily staged and dressed. The onerous part of Juno, a statue, is admirably impersonated by Miss Kate Graham-Beck, who gets through her work in talented style, her powerful singing being quite a feature of her impersonation; Mr. Arthur Staples as Timothy Twinkle is a host in himself, and acts in inimitable style; Mr. Fred Hammond makes an ideal Samuel Strong, and his wit and humour literally "bring down the house"; as Priscilla Strong, Miss Leah Howard proves herself a charming young actress of undoubted talent, singing and dancing smartly; Miss Louie Grey as Lottie Stimson is a highly cultured soloist, and her acting is faultless; Miss Amy Wood gets through her part of Mrs. Marie Strong with distinction. In the rôles of Anthony Somers and Sherlock Blake, Mr. George Watson and Mr. Richard Teasdale are really clever; exceptionally neat is the dancing of Misses Dolly Shaw, K. Sullivan, and Louie Grey.

FLEETWOOD.—Queen's Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—The clever American drama Rags is being presented here by a powerful company. Mr. Edward Leroy is a forceful hero as Brant Yorel; Mr. Chas. E. Lambert enacts the part of Major Timothy Seymour in true Yankee style; Charles Kingston finds a capable exponent in Mr. F. E. Chabot; Mr. F. Wheatley is an exceptionally good villain as Pedro Velasquez; the comedy—and there is plenty—is in the able hands of Mr. Alfred Lafolle, whose portrayal of the nigger, George Washington, is decidedly clever; Miss Blanche Leroy, in the title-rôle, acts with much power; Miss Hilda May as Esme Deering, a Boston belle, both sings and acts acceptably her several songs receiving unstinted approval; Miss Louie Walton has a difficult part in Miss Timothy Seymour, but she acts it excellently.

FOLKESTONE. — The Pleasure Gardens Theatre.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland. — The Private Secretary is being played by Mr. Eugene C. Stafford's company, and an excellent all-round performance is given. As the Rev. Robert Spalding, Mr. D. Price-Evans could scarcely be bettered, his acting being genuinely humorous; Mr. Hargreaves's Mr. Cattermole is a capital conception, finely played throughout; Mr. Frank Stanley is good as Mr Marsland; and Mr. Begbie and Mr. Herbert Garthorne deserve credit for their natural and easy acting. Mr. F. Tyrrell commands a special word of praise for his Mr. Gibson. The ladies all acquit themselves well, Mrs. A. Davis as Miss Ashford being perhaps the best. Miss Dulcie Conry and Miss Nan Macrae as the two high-spirited girls act with great vivacity and charm; and Miss M. Scharming as Mrs. Stead does well.

GAINSBOROUGH.—King's Theatre.—Lessees, Gainsborough Theatre Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Leighton.—For the first three nights this week we had a variety company, consisting of Cissie Ferndale, burlesque artist; Sisters Hula, clever dancers; George Edney, a good descriptive singer; and Edie Stuart, who on Monday introduced a new number entitled "Kangaroo," which she gave in a captivating manner The pictures included excellent views of the streets of London.

GATESHEAD.—King's Theatre.—Proprietors, United County Theatres, Ltd.; Resident-Manager Mr. Harold Arnold.—A very welcome return visit is paid this week by Tom and Marie Motramo with an entertaining sketch combining music and comedy; Alman Correze presents a gorgeous juggling scena, and is assisted by the droll Keith; Hamilton Hill, a pleasing baritone, finds numerous admirers; Harry J. Crane and company present a pathetic episode, Truth in Absence, and are successful; Leo and Roland have a novel equilibristic act, which is well received; Beaty and Blanche, dainty dancers and duettists, and the Kingcsope complete the bill.

Metropole Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. F. W. Bolam; General-Manager, Mr. Robert G. Elder; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Dixon.—Mr. Frank Adair's company in The Heathen and the Christian is here. Mr. Adair is seen to great advantage in the part of Li; Mr. Hugh Mewburn is sufficiently repulsive as Lung Hi; Mr. Dudley Wynton makes a capital study of George Berresford; Lord Allendale is well looked after by Mr. Herbert Robinson; Miss Louie Adair is a tender May Berresford, and the important part of Mira Sampson is in the capable hands of Miss Adeline Raby.

GLASGOW.—Theatre Royal, Ltd.—Managing Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager Mr. Percy Humphreys.—The Moody-Manners Opera company opened here on Monday with The Meistersingers. Mr. Philip Brozel was in good voice, and gave an excellent rendering of the part of Walter; Mr. Lewys James as Hans Sachs specially distinguished himself, both vocally and histrionically, and fully deserved the enthusiastic applause bestowed on him; Miss Kate Anderson was particularly well suited as Eva, and Miss Josephine McCarthy ably sustained the part of Magdalene; Mr. William Dewer infused a touch of quaint humour into the character of Sixtus Beckmesser; Mr. Charles Magrath's fine voice was heard to advantage as Veit Pogner, and the part of David was cleverly played by Mr. F. Davis. The augmented band and chorus responded well to the baton of Herr Richard Eckhold. Faust, The Bohemian Girl, Lohengrin, and Madame Butterfly were given on the later evenings of the week.

King's, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company in My Mimosa Maid opened here on Monday. Miss Marie Studholme's Paulette is a fine performance, her gaiety is infectious, and she acts with delightful animation; Mr. Charles McNaughton plays Victor Guilbert on broadly humorous lines; Mr. Charles E. Paton is exceedingly funny as Max Guilbert; Master Archie McCaig as Bock is deserving of praise; Miss Ruby Gray as Marcelle Pilaine is heard to advantage; Miss May Garstang is a delightful Madame de Pilaine; Mr. Powis Pinder makes a satisfactory Captain Louis du Laurier; Mr. Percy Carr does good work as Mr. Emile Gerard; as also does Mr. Arthur Jackson as Grove.

Royalty, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Carpenter.—Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson and their Shakespearean company have opened here with Macbeth, in which Mr. Benson gives a highly-finished rendering of the ambitious Thane; Mrs. Benson impressively depicts the varying moods of Lady Macbeth; the part of Macduff is safe in the hands of Mr. Edward A. Warburton, and Banquo is well rendered by Mr. G. F. Hannam Clarke; the three weird sisters are portrayed by Mr. H. O. Nicholson, Mr. J. Moffat Johnston, and Miss Leah Hanman; a venerable figure is the Duncan of Mr. Murray Carrington, who also doubles the part of the Doctor; Malcolm and Donaldbain are well expressed by Mr. F. G. Worlock and Mr. J. Ward; Mr. Guy B. Rathbone and Mr. W. Ribton Haines are excellent as the Murderers. Richard II., The Merry Wives, and Richard III. are also in the répertoire, varied by The School for Scandal and The Belle's Stratagem.

Grand, Ltd.—District-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. Christie Grant.—The Carl Rosa Opera company is here. On Monday Lohengrin was given under the direction of Mr. Eugene Goossens. The tenor rôle was undertaken by Mr. Walter Wheatley, whose singing throughout was refined and expressive; Miss Elizabeth Burgess sang and acted with much feeling as Elsa; Mr. Arthur Winckworth made an imposing Henry the Fowler; Mr. Dillon Shallard displayed a thorough grasp of the part of Telramund; the Ortrud of Madame Marie Alexander was an intensely dramatic performance, and as the Herald Mr. Frederick Clindon declaimed with good effect. Carmen was given on Tuesday, with Mr. E. C. Hedmont and Miss Doris Woodall in the leading parts.

Royal Princess's.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Hugh Murdoch.—Diccory Dok finishes here to-night (Saturday) with a run of eighty-one nights and thirty-eight matinées to its credit. On Monday the popular second boy and girl, Misses Edith Haley and Maggie Fraser took their benefit, and those charming duettists, who are immense favourites here, were rewarded with a bumper house. On Thursday Mr. Rich. Waldon rallied his supporters round him on the occasion of his 22nd annual benefit, and, as usual, the night was made a very special one. Messrs. Peter Bermingham, Syd Walker, Cliff Lake, Harry A. Gribben, Ainslie Burton, and Walter Dale have all worked well together as comedians, and the popularity of the ladies has been a prime factor in this year's success, Misses Flora Cromer and Ella Retford (principal boy and girl) sharing the honours well with Misses Fraser and Haley, Sisters Bartholomew, May Beatrice, and Ivy Proudfoot. The useful work of Messrs. Charles Stevens and Harry Brett as knockabout comedians must not be overlooked, and an important item was the scenic splendours, devised by Mr. J. C. Bontor.

Metropole, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Gordon Jefferson.—Mr. Andrew Melville's powerful company in Driven from Home, is attracting large audiences here. Mr. Felix Pitt as Anthony Raybrook is a great success; as also is Mr. P. G. Beresford as Walter Hatherleigh; Miss Ada M. Ryder in the dual part of Laura Raybrook and Walter Hatherleigh, the younger, shows great histrionic ability; Mr. Chas. Burdon as Geoffrey Waring in the villain's part is very realistic; Willie, an outcast, is very well portrayed by Mr. Henry Helling; the comic element, in the hands of Mr. C. Imbert and Miss Susie Bevan, is well sustained. All the other parts are in capable hands, and the staging all that can be desired.

Lyceum.—Proprietor, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Oakden.—Miss Kate Clinton's production of Jeanie Deans is here. Miss Clinton gives a very fine performance of the faithful and heroic Jeanie, and her erring sister Effie is acted with much pathos by Miss Mary Campbell; Mr. Mackintosh Clyde contributes a clever character sketch as the Laird o' Dumbiedykes; Mr. Stuart Black plays with striking effect as the stern old father David Deans; Miss Belle Cecil is particularly good as the half-witted Madge Wildfire, and Margery Murdockson is enacted with weird power by Miss Clara Armitage; Mr. Denis Hogan's style is impressive as the Duke of Argyll; Mr. A. Wilson Gunning does well as Geordie Robertson, and Mr. Arthur Edwards is good as Reuben Butler; Mr. Neil Fitzwilliam delivers the speech for the defence with fine effect in the Trial scene. The play is well staged.

Empire.—District-Manager, Mr. S. Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Manners.—Fred Karno's amusing sketch The Football Match provides a lively three-quarters of an hour here, and the fun provided by Harry Weldon and Will Poluski, jun., as the rival goalkeepers, is brisk and mirth-provoking. Two of the ladies from the Grand pantomime are accorded a hearty reception here, Queenie Finnis (Cinderella) for a clever monologue sketch, and Nellie Wigley (second boy) for two songs, given in her own bright and fascinating manner; the Stockham Ladies' Grecian Band proves a special treat to music lovers; Arthur Kenny, sensational cyclist, does some feats of unusual daring; the St. Johns, in musical selections and neat step dancing, again prove an enjoyable turn; George Westland, Scotch comedian, also secures his meed of applause; Nina Wood takes well in her songs at the piano, and the Bioscope is well up-to-date.

Zoo-Hippodrome.—Proprietor, Councillor E. H. Bostock; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E. H. A. Bostock.—The Harmony Four create uproarious mirth here; Maude Elliston and company appear in Dobson's Day Off, and add greatly to the general hilarity; also on the programme are Phern and Phern, who present a rather unique musical act; Shrilla, an operatic whistler of decided merit; Ray Maskell, in some good singing and dancing; Edith Chantler, a juvenile soprano, whose efforts were very promising, and Chorley and Connor, a pair of clever patter comedians and dancers; the equestrian performance vocalists and dancers; and the Bioscope pictures complete a pleasing programme.

HIPPODROME.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Harry L. Skivington.—Doody and Wright top the bill, and this clever Australian duo have been very successful; Robert Trebor and company are well received in their sketch, The Reptile's Devotion; Picitt and Lizette are particularly clever in their mysterious act, The Crazy Cook; and other entertaining turns are those of Charles Santon, double-voiced vocalist; the Musical Keiths, instrumentalists; Halma, Society juggler; and Bert Terrell, Dutch comedian. The pictures are again a capital collection.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. W. North.—There is a novelty here this week, in the shape of the first venture of the Grimsby and Cleethorpes Amateur Operatic Society. Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado is the work slected, and it is the first time light opera has been attempted in Grimsby on an ambitious scale by amateurs. The representation of the popular opera is very successful.

THE PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—Hayman and Franklin give a capital exposition of Hebrew humour; Les Vails, athletes, give a smart gymnastic turn; Arabella Allen's impersonations of Shakespearean and Dickens characters are warmly appreciated; Frank Whitley is a skilled dancer and performer on the bones; Jock Mills is a capital Scottish humorist; Will Sullivan has some good patter; and Madeline Rossiter is a pleasing coon singer and dancer.

GUERNSEY.—THEATRE ST. JULIANS.—Lessee, Mr. Ed. Marris; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley Hope.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company is here with The Lancashire Lad. Miss Harriett Russell plays Mother Wardle with artistic skill; Miss Nellie Fletcher gives an effective rendering of the odious rôle of Lorna; Miss K. V. Rose creditably portrays Jane Alice; Miss Maude Hastings sympathetically enacts Jessie, and Miss Dorothy Hildebrand as Kitty is a great favourite; Mr. Sydney Bland portrays David with earnestness; Mr. Wilton Reed admirably represents Jem Wincote; Mr. J. L. Courtney smartly and cleverly plays Max Carton; Mr. John Hignett's John Willie is very funny, and Mr. J. W. Wilkinson is a capital representative of Tum.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling.—Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company is here this week with the Lyceum production, Pete. Mrs. Frederick Victor's representation of Pete Quilliam adds considerably to this popular actor's laurels; Mr. Percy Rhodes makes a good Philip Christian, his later scenes as the Deemster are excellent. Ross Christian finds an able exponent in Mr. Pennington Gush; Mr. Tom W. Ford's Cæsar Cregeen is a fine character study; as Nancy, Miss Amy Grace is excellent; Miss Marjorie Murray displays fine abilities in the part of Kate Cregeen.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Jennie Johns, with fascinating style, a clear delivery, and a smart appearance, is attractive here this week; Rowlands and Ford create considerable amusement as a Welsh and a Scotch comedian; King Luis and partner give a clever hand-balancing turn; Florence Kay is a fine contralto singer; Bert Williams, ventriloquist, gives a good turn, introducing some laughable patter; Barton and Franklin Trio, vocal and dancing speciality. Sid Bandon, descriptive vocalist, Cromo and Hamilton, comedy entertainers, and some fine pictures, complete a good bill.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Reg. H. Foster.—A varied and entertaining programme at the Palace this week includes Minerva, the woman jail-breaker, who gives an interesting exhibition of her powers, and meets with hearty approval; Dan Whitley, a very eccentric comedian, keeps the house in a constant roar whilst he is on the stage; the Czar Troupe are good Russian dancers; Morton and Elliot get some phenomenal results in paper-tearing; Ethel Scheffer meets with a good reception for her illustrated songs; Kinniard is a good conjurer; and Lily Luraine, an accomplished musician. Mark Merry, comedian, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux complete.

HAMILTON, N.B.—HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Managing-Director, Mr. René Clayton; Resident-Manager, Mr. Jack Bostock.—Phil Rees' stable lads are topping the bill here in a smart turn, entitled Not a Crook; Star and Leslie are amusing in a speciality act; and Walker and May submit an interesting turn; Palles and Cussick, droll knockabouts; Irve Hayman and company in Christmas Eve; Ivey Aberdare, a dainty comedienne and dancer; Dave O'Toole, comedian; Harry Vardon, ventriloquist; and the Bioscope complete the bill.

HANLEY.—ROYAL, LTD. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Douglas Elphinstone.—The Builder of Bridges, in the hands of Mr. Geo. Alexander's clever company, is successfully staged here to capital audiences. The truly trying part of Dorothy is undertaken by Miss Rosalind Ivan, an accomplished actress, who bears the brunt of the burden in a most meritorious manner; Miss Claire Paunceforte as Mrs. Debney is excellent, her voice, manner, and appearance being admirably suited to the rôle; Miss Jessica Thorne is a sweet Miss Closson; and Miss Angela Mosley is a good maid. Mr. Stephen T. Ewart plays the strong character of Edward Thursfield excellently; Mr. Henry Ludlow as Arnold is good; Mr. Brisco Owen is a success as Walter Gresham, the unrequited lover; Mr. W. R. Staveley makes a capable "chief"; Mr. Eric R. Ward plays Peter Holland skilfully. The scenery and dresses are superb.

GRAND, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. G. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Arthur Rand. — Ye Colonial Septette tops the poster, and makes a great success; the Primrose Quartette of vocalists are clever; Jenny Hartley is a sweet singer; the Garganis are expert acrobats; Addie Dorina makes a great hit in a clever quick-change scena; Marie Vere is loudly applauded; La Dorando is a marvellous lady juggler; the Grand pictures show Days of Pompeii; and Billy Howard and Katheryn Harris make their usual hit with "The Adventures of a Tramp."

KING'S.—Lessees, Messrs. Moore and Kennedy; Manager, Mr. H. Kennedy.—Once again a capital series of pictures are shown, the chief being Face to Face. Burns and Johnson, and Hilarious Powder. Herr U. C. Hugo is a mystifying conjurer.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Eric Fielding-Smith.—Miss Ada Fawn, the bright particular star here, scores with her burlesque song as well as her popular chorus ditties; the Adras are a clever pair of acrobats, and the Maltans contribute an amusing sketch; Blair and Allen in song and dance; Edmunda, a clever ventriloquist; Miss Beatrice Allen in a pretty song; Miss Tots Davis in a slavey song; Phil and Nellie Peters, American hustlers, and Niagara and Falls are also in the bill.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Managing-Director, Mr. S. H. Carter; Resident-Manager, Mr. Fred A. Parker.—Several interesting films are on show here this week, notably a beautifully coloured series of the Eclipse of the Sun.

HARTLEPOOL.—EMPRESS.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Albert Mathams.—Pictures by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope continue to hold sway here. An interesting film depicting A Travel Through Savoy and one of Glimpses of Italy are thoroughly enjoyed. Bob, the Scullion Tom Thrull, A Friend in Need, A Suffragette's Dream, and The Prestige of Uniform are all good films. W. E. Hilton gives a clever and amusing ventriloquial entertainment, and Alf. Millington's songs are prettily illustrated and well sung.

TOWN HALL.—Excellent pictures continue to be shown by the Walturdaw Company. A Convict's Revenge is very interesting, as is Eileen. Bobby Sportsman, Weary Willie, and The Persistent Suitor keep the audience amused, and romance is supplied by The Crafty Usurper and Marco Visconti.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—A return visit is paid this week by Mr. George Dance's company in The Girls of Gottenberg. Miss Maisie North was in the cast as Elsa, but owing to her absence her place on Monday was filled by Miss Geraldine Burne, who succeeded admirably. Mr. Bertie Wright, as Max Moddelkopf, was the cause of continual merriment; Mr. Tom Shelford did well as Otto; Miss Simeta Marsden played Mitzi with much energy. Effective oddities of character were supplied respectively by Mr. Morgan Rickards as Burgomaster, Mr. Edwin Stanley as Kanenbier, Mr. Tom Squire as Town Clerk, and Mr. George Vaughan as Corporal Schmidt.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Harry Boyd; General-Manager, Mr. Walter Norman.—Miss Lena Pinaud, a versatile comedian and dancer, heads a good programme; a clever jumping act is shown by Cosselly; Will Cracklee's effusions are much enjoyed; the Alhambra Pictures exhibit some highly dramatic films; a very amusing comedy duologue, Miss Summerson's Baby, is given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shelley; Herman and Evelyn gain applause for their slack wire act; a vivacious and winsome comedienne is found in Miss Florrie Robina; a romantic legend of The Mistletoe Bough is remarkably well enacted by Mr. Geo. Wood, Miss Hilda Ross, and Miss Harrie Brookes; and a wrestling tournament by local amateurs concludes.

PAVILION.—General-Manager, MR. J. D. Hunter.—A varied entertainment is holding the boards here. One of the principal features is the effective pictures shown by the Pavilion Bioscope. The dramatic pieces include the amusing comedietta, The Silent Woman, and the farcical sketch, My Daughter's Dowry. The first piece is of the simplest kind, but Miss Eva Bayley, Miss Cherry Wardroper, and Mr. J. E. Cowell manage to extract a good amount of fun in its performance. In the sketch, Mr. J. D. Hunter as Diogenes is delightfully amusing; Mr. J. E. Cowell is excellent as Sniggins; Miss Eva Bayley makes a charming wife; and Miss Wardroper plays the daughter with a light and effective touch.

HUDDERSFIELD. — HIPPODROME, LTD.—Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—The top of the bill is taken by Miss Lilian Dundas and company, who are playing The Doom of Delilah. Also in the bill are the Godfreys in their amusing musical act, entitled The Slave and the Coon; Miss Rose Harvey, ballad vocalist; Fred Maitland, comedian, in an amusing skit at the expense of the Suffragettes; Dancit, in a trio of well-varied and cleverly-executed dances; the New Macs, diverting comedians; Sisters Dorrell, duettists and dancers; Miss Annie Purcell, a dainty comedienne, and some good pictures on the Bioscope.

HULL.—GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Morton's, Ltd; Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Here this week is The Flag Lieutenant. The part of the Flag Lieutenant makes an appeal upon the powers of Mr. Lionel Atwill to which he is not slow to respond; as Colonel Thesiger Mr. A. Montagu Love wins the sympathy of the house; the Admiral could need no better representative than Mr. George Mallett; Mr. Petley was a pleasing surgeon, and the two middies were realised by Messrs. H. Wakefield and L. Watts; Miss Florence Jackson with much skill caught the idea of Mrs. Cameron. Other characters are well filled.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Mortons, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. George Morton.—The Woman Pays is here. Miss Kate Blair plays the leading part with much success. In heroic style Mr. Phil Harper enacts Sid Armstrong, and Mr. Treadgold has a capable representative in Mr. Beresford Innes.

ILKESTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—The Nihilist is the attraction this week, the players being Messrs. O. Silverstone, H. Wright, and company. Miss Edna Clare plays with pathos and feeling as Alexina Orloff, and Mr. William Armour as Ivan Nowasky is an artist of merit. Little Alexina is charmingly taken by little Ella Nixon; Mr. Cowell Clarke makes a good Karl Orloff; the part of Father Gourko being suitably represented by Mr. J. B. Harvey. Miss Florry Kelsey as Princess Olga exhibits great skill; Mr. Henry Wright is very funny as Bobbie Smart; and Miss Jessie Ford is an amusing Katrina; Mr. O. Silverstone as Prince Alexander is a clever villain, and is ably assisted by Mr. C. Newton Buckland as Piertree Petoff.

HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers. — This cosy and comfortable little hall was opened for the first time as a vaudeville and picture venture on Monday on the twice nightly plan. The hall has been fitted with electric light, and various structural alterations have been made. The stage, which is 8ft. deep, has been fitted with scenery, and the proscenium opening is 12ft. The pictures are all excellent. Walter Levalle, coster comedian, is a favourite; Miss Nellie Belmore is a pleasing vocalist; and the musical act of Phil Lister is applauded.

IPSWICH.—LYCEUM.—Mr. Stanley James's company occupies the house this week with the charming three-act comedy My Wife. Mr. C. H. Croker-King's interpretation of the exacting part of Gerald Eversleigh is powerful, and he is supported by the talented Miss Mary Carnegy in the difficult part of Trixie; Miss Katherine Harrington as Miriam Hawthorn is excellent; Miss Olivia Edwards as Mrs. Denham Lane, Miss Barbara Fenn as the Baroness, and Miss Winifred Bradnell as Madame Dupre are all good; the part of Gibby by Mr. James Geldred is funny; Captain Fuzby is by Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald; and Mr. Cecil Brooking is a capable Mons. Dupre. The one-act play The Vengeance of Jim is the curtain raiser.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Drummed Out is being presented here by Mr. A. C. Lilly and company; Don and Mabel Kerr, in a Scotch scena, sing solos and duets with excellent effect; the Two Wallys have a clever juggling performance; H. C. Lovell and company produce a musical comedietta entitled Mam'selle Pom-Pom, and Miss Kitty Wager, Fred Poplar, and Horace Jones are also in the bill.

PICTURE PALACE.—Mr. John R. Poole has become lessee for a considerable period of the Lecture Hall in Tower-street, and after making internal structural alterations, has opened the building as a Picture Palace, giving two shows nightly. The moving pictures are clear, and a gramophone discourses the songs of well-known artists. Miss Eileen Russell is a solo singer with a charming voice, and Mr. F. Kingsley is a capital accompanist. Mr. A. C. Rogers is the manager.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Lionel Locke.—Messrs. Levy and Cardwell's Juvenile pantomime company is here with The Babes in the Wood. Little Peggy McDonnell and Little Cissie Wyse are excellent as the babes Leslie and Marjorie, and Miss Daisy Wood gives a good account of Robin Hood, her singing making her quite a favourite; Mr. Neil Hardy as Baron Strangeways is very droll; Mr. Jimmie Watson revels in the part of Lucinda Lovejoy; Mr. J. G Aitkin causes much amusement as Sandy Simple; Mr. Harry Leander is quite at home in the part of Friar Tuck, and Messrs. Graham and Baron are well placed as Willing and Weary, the ruffians; Miss Jennie Hughes is simply charming as Fairy Dewdrop, and Miss Dolly Dodds is a captivating Marion, her singing and dancing being highly appreciated. The scenery and dresses are excellent.

EMPIRE.—Lessee, Mr. Jas. A. Lauder; Manager, Mr. Edward Ranier.—Captain W. V. Simmons Lynn gives a unique entertainment of ventriloquism and shadowgraphy; Mone Cristo, the flexible comedian; Miss May Waugh, comedienne; Benson Clive, in his song scena, "Chorus, Gentlemen!" Will Dare, swell comedian, and Adonis, in some classical poses, constitute the company.

KEIGHLEY. — QUEEN'S THEATRE. — Proprietor, Mr. R. S. Kendall; Acting-Manager; Mr. W. Carson.—Mr. Charles Carey and company are her this week in The Madeira Maid. The part of Maidie is ably played by Miss Lacey, and her smart dancing is much applauded; Miss Marie Ault is a decidedly clever Ann Chovey; Mr. Charles Carey, Mr. Harold Perry, and Mr. W. E. Matthews are good in their respective characters.

KING'S LYNN.—NEW ROYAL THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. B. Pareezer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Reginald Pareezer.—For three nights this week Mr. J. B. Hart has presented Mrs. F. Wybert Clive's company in the sensational drama The Outcast of the Family. The play has been well received, and the efforts of the artists much appreciated. The honours fall to Mr. C. A. Olgar as Harry Thorne, and Miss Florence M. Daley as Ruth, each of whom faithfully portrays the parts allotted them; Mr. Frank Hertie is excellent as Stepney Barry, and as Richard Martin Mr. J. W. Bayling makes the typical villain of the play, a part in which he is well assisted by Miss Ethel Tooney as Grace Redfern; Mr. Miles Platting as Sir Henry Thorne performs with precision; Mr. Reg Oldroyd as Joe Bushell, and Miss Vera Neville as Nancy Bray successfully introduce comedy business; Mr. Wm. Hayward is effective as Abram Wasper, and the remainder of the company interpret their parts satisfactorily.

KIRKCALDY.—HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The Lukushimas, at the top of the bill this week, are a really wonderful troupe of Japanese acrobats; Mr. J. K. Macfarlane is a Scotch comedian above the ordinary, and an exceptionally clever dancer is Mr. Charles Ousley. Worthy of particular mention is the capital turn by Mr. Johnny Beveridge, blind pianist and humorist. Other good turns are presented by Louie and Wally, a smart comedy duo; Mr. James Miller, baritone, and Miss Cissy Gordon, comedienne.

LANCASTER.—GRAND THEATRE—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. C. Howitt.—For the first three nights this week, Mr. Wentworth Croke's company presented the new version of The Christian. Glory Quayle as played by Miss Margery Fane was a pleasing and painstaking effort; Mr. P. Gedge Twyman gave an able performance of John Storm; Mr. John Hastians Batson made an impressive Father Lamplugh; Mr. G. Montague Lane a successful Robert Ure; and as Horatio Drake Mr. Edward Ouston did well. The rôles of Mrs. Callender and Polly Love were successfully essayed by Miss Alice Maude and Miss Gladys Vernon. Miss Augusta Tulloch's company in The Woman Who Sinned is billed for the remainder of the week.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. John Porter and W. J. Fergusson.—The head of the bill this week is Victor Widdicombe and company in Her Devonshire Dad; the Hodginis Troupe, two ladies and a gentleman, supply a remarkable gymnastic turn; Ned Graydon plays many instruments with success; and Mike Nono, Irish comedian, is paying a welcome return visit. The Dooley Girls dance well, as also do Metz and Metz; and Edna West, vocalist, sings pleasingly. The Hippograph is also an attraction.

LEAMINGTON. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Manager, Mr. George G. Ridley.—After being closed for a week, the local playhouse reopened on Monday, when Messrs. Murray King and Clarke's company presented the amusing play Toddles. Mr. Murray King himself appears in the title-rôle, and proves himself a most diverting Toddles. He receives very substantial support from Mr. J. V. Bryant, who plays the useful friend Fiddy Gunner; Miss Naomi Nelson, who impersonates the match-making aunt; Mr. A. Linden, whose sleepy old parvenu is a quaint piece of character-acting; Miss Doris Langdon, Mr. M. Cheshire, Miss Evelyne Shelley, and Miss Mabel Ormonde.

LEEDS.—THE GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Theatre and Opera House, Leeds, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. John Hart; General-Manager, Mr. Wynn Miller.—Mr. George Alexander's company in The Thief is here. Mr. Grendon Bentley shows much dramatic ability in the character of Richard Chelford; and the part of Marise Chelford is well sustained by Miss May Congdon. Raymond Leyton and Harry Leyton are in the capable hands of Mr. Gerald Ames and Mr. Alfred Lugg respectively; Mr. Cyril Cattley makes the most of the part of the detective; and Miss Mary Dibley well depicts the emotions of Isabel Leyton.

THE ROYAL THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaughton; Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—Sunday is here. Miss Janet Lind in the title-part makes the most of her chances; and as Colonel Brinthorpe Mr. Wm. Giffard is quite equal to requirements; as Arthur Brinthorpe Mr. Boyce Wellams is good; and as Tom Axley Mr. Richard Trieve does well. As the boys, Mr. Richard F. Symons, Mr. A. Cotton Holmes, Mr. Jas. Hussey, and Mr. George Marriott all give delightful performances, and other characters are ably sustained by Mr. Thomas Nixon, Mr. Harry Lenton, Miss H. Graham Edwins, and Miss Jessie Stone.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Gerald Morton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex. Galley.—Canny Neil Kenyon makes a welcome appearance here after his illness, and is appreciated; Terry and Lambert make a big hit in their humorous character studies; Tom Edwardes, the immensely popular ventriloquist, is also here again; Ida Kathrena dances cleverly as an automatic doll. Other capital turns include E. J. Sheldon, Burnetti, Maud Rochez (who presents a variety theatre controlled by monkeys), and Harry Leybourn.

THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Acting-Manager, Mr. Collingwood.—Lalla Selbini is a Spanish singer, trick cyclist, dancer, and juggler. In every item she excels. Hal Godfrey, a very droll comedian, appears again with his company in A Very Bad Boy; the Arthur Gallimore Trio give an excellent account of themselves; Paul Vandy is a very smart juggler; Gus Harris sings for the first time, "Back, back to Palestine," which bids fair to equal his previous successes; W. Fulbrook and company, in a comedy concoction, Astronomy, create much laughter. Charles F. Best, Tod Lowan, W. T. Ellwanger (in The Peacemaker), and the Four Canadians are successful.

THE QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Wood; Manager, Mr. Frank Bush.—A smart comedy sketch, entitled The Amber Light, is presented here by Fred Eustace and Co.; Rowland sings songs with success; and the amusing antics of Little Ganty are enjoyed; Sterling and Love appear in an original sketch; Zaleski as the Golden Spider proves acceptable; Fremel and Fremel, clever eccentrics, Madge May, a dainty singer, and Russell Brandon, a smart dancer, complete the programme.

CITY PALACE.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Wood; Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—The Waldrons top the bill here with success; in a funny sketch Harry Russell and company excel; Burns and Bentley appear in a refined vaudeville act; Watson and Bates are a meritable turn in singing and dancing; Lily Eyton (comedienne) and Charles Lewis (ventriloquist) are also popular and capable artists.

LEICESTER. — OPERA HOUSE. — The Merry Widow, in every way admirably presented by Mr. George Edwardes's company, is on a second visit here. The two principal parts are now played by Miss Nora Barry as Sonia and Mr. Leonard Mackay as Prince Danilo, both of whom well deserve the appreciation bestowed by a house delighted with their clever performances. Mr. T. Redmond makes the audience rock with laughter as Nisch; and Mr. Lionel Victor is extremely funny as Baron Popoff. The other parts in a numerous cast are also enacted in thoroughly successful style. A feature new to Leicester is the Apache dance, which is executed with great success by Miss Dora Langham and Mr. Alfred H. Majilton.

Theatre Royal.—We have as the attraction here this week Mr. Montague Beaudyn's company in The Power of a Wicked Woman, which is capitally performed and staged. Mr. Montague Beaudyn plays exceedingly well as Philip Carey; and Miss Irene Monro is also a conspicuous success as Helen Terraire. Miss Winifred Rutland is deserving of praise as Denise; and others who portray their allotted parts in a satisfactory manner are Miss Cecilia Crawford (Nellie Montague), Mr. Arthur Cresswell (Guy Oliphant), Mr. Rupert Talbot (Lord Arthur Dumbey), Mr. Arthur A. Tomlin (Bransby), Mr. C. D. Pitt (Horace Winter), and Miss Phyllis Rae (Marie).

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton Wharton; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. S. Buccleuch.—Roars of merriment greet Fred Karno's company in the farcical absurdity The Bailiff, in which Albert Bruno as the "man in possession" is really funny. He receives effective support from Gilbert Childs, Julia Bassett, Lydia Weber, and J. Frere Vernon. Fred Kitchen and Frank Lister and company are retained over another week, and are scoring a big success in their well-played and thoroughly interesting Australian sketch, The Sundowner, Mr. Lister in the chief part displaying high histrionic talent. Kara is a juggler who does many remarkably clean and clever tricks; James Eadie and Cissie Ramsden score their usual success in their smartly-enacted item, Charlie's Visit; Frank Lynne, an excellent comedian, with good patter, is a favourite; Beatrice Bonnie, possessed of a fine stage presence, is a chic comedienne; Billy Hobbs is a coon impersonator and dancer who is always welcome; Stylo gives a good show in a hoop-juggling act. The Bioscope is also a feature.

Pavilion Theatre.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Joseph Lawrence.—Premier position is worthily held here by Fred S. Peake and company in a cleverly constructed and well played sketch entitled The Gambler; Charles Bignell, the well-known comedian, sings three songs to the delight of all; Les Tripellos are most entertaining in their musical speciality, introducing a smart youngster in Child Roy; J. J. Mannil proves a popular coon impersonator and dancer; Carl Million is a capital ventriloquist; and Alma Campbell is a vocalist who pleases. Walter F. Pallister's Bioscope and Cinephone are special items.

The Empire.—Lessees, the New Bioscope Trading Company; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles R. Craig.—There is the usual diversified assortment of moving pictures here this week, interspersed with musical items by D. W. Watson, the clever one-armed cornet and post-horn artist.

The Empress Rink.—Managing-Director, Mr. P. W. Willard; Manager, Mr. R. J. Aginton; Floor-Manager, Mr. T. P. Blakesley.—The popularity of this establishment is increasing by leaps and bounds, the exhilarating pastime drawing the very best class of town and country society. Mr. Bobby Aginton, the champion fancy skater, on Saturday last gave a fine exhibition of the intricacies of the art. The maple floor is the admiration of all the patrons.

LEIGH.—Theatre Royal and Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. W. H. Chippendale.—This week Mr. Fred Granville's company is presenting The Better Land. Miss Nina Blake-Adams gives an impressive rendering of Doris; Marcedes is admirably portrayed by Miss Agnes Collier; Mr. Stanley Radcliffe as the villainous Hubert Radcliffe plays well; Mr. Leonard Aardale is a satisfactory Philip Radcliffe; Mr. Leonard Marshall and Mr. Grey P. Ellis are effective as George Grant and William White respectively; and Mr. Herbert Fuller is an amusing Tom Tadpole, his efforts being well seconded by Miss Bella Moody as Polly Perkins.

Grand Theatre and Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Leigh Grand Theatre and Hippodrome, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Benson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Woolstencroft.—Heading the bill here this week is Mr. Andie Caine's pantomime in two scenes, entitled Goody Two Shoes. Mr. Andie Caine in the rôle of the Dame is very successful. Miss Aggie Nolan, comedienne and clog dancer, finds much favour; Mr. Albert Lee, tenor, has many admirers; Miss Lalie Brooke is excellent in her scena, "Girls, Past and Present"; Mr. Gus Garrick, comedian, causes much merriment; Ralph and Nellie Howard gain much applause for their musical act; and the Bioscope is very interesting.

LEITH.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Licensee and Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—The Leith Amateur Opera Company have occupied this house during the week with an excellent production of The Mikado. The performances have been uniformly well attended, and charities will benefit to a gratifying extent.

LIVERPOOL.—Royal Court Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur Lawrence.—On Monday Mr. Martin Harvey and company opened here in The Breed of the Treshams. Mr. Harvey repeated his admirable representation of the adventurous Reresby; Miss de Silva again assumed the part of the light-hearted, rollicking Batty; that sterling actor, Mr. Charles Glenny afforded the utmost pleasure to his many admirers with his Colonel Hungerford; Miss Madge Fabian made a sweet Margaret; and credit was due, in a large measure, to Messrs. C. J. Cameron (Viscount Dorsington), Leonard Craske (Francis Tresham), A. E. Raynor (Sir Henry Curwen), and Philip Hewland (Captain Stanhope). The other evenings of the week were occupied with The Only Way and The Corsican Brothers, the curtain-raisers being The Conspiracy and The House of Pierre.

Shakespeare Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wentworth Croke; Manager and Secretary, Mr. John Gaffney.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company is here in Grit. A very admirable conception of the part of Erith Winter came from Miss Gladys Purnell; as Jim Barr Mr. Leslie Carter distinguished himself, earning hearty applause; the Dick Travers of Mr. T. A. Shannon was marked by much earnestness and care; good work was done by Mr. Philip Sanders and Miss Elspeth Dudgeon as Mr. and Mrs. Winter; and Miss Violet Vorley proved a sympathetic Mrs. Percival.

Rotunda Theatre.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—The Old Folks at Home, presented by Mr. J. A. Campbell's company, has been here. Miss Mary Fulton gave a careful rendering of the trying part of Dorothy Robin; the heroic rôle of Andrew Ross was capably undertaken by Mr. H. E. Herbert; a well-drawn character was that of Lord Kenilworth by Mr. Frank Liston; and worthy support also came from Miss Kate Froude (Patricia), Miss Amy Rale (Bonita), Miss Clara Santley (Martha), and Mr. Eugene Santley (Christopher Robin). The drama was well put on.

Star Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—East Lynne has been performed here by Mr. Tom Watt's company, under an arrangement with Mr. Pitt Hardacre. Mr. Edmund Kennedy was the Archibald Carlyle, and acted with much dramatic force; Miss Julie Kennard did admirably as Lady Isabel; Miss Ida Heron made a sweet Barbara Hare; Miss Lilian Mason did every justice to Cornelia; as Francis Levison Mr. Frank G. Bayly showed to advantage; and others deserving of mention were Mr. Joe Rowland (Bullock) and Mr. Rayon Cousens (Richard Hare).

Empire.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Cole.—Miss Vesta Tilley should have headed the bill here this week, but, owing to her illness a few days previous to opening, the management had to make a change, and Miss Sylvia Cavalho and company delighted everyone with the burlesque, What's Charles Worth? A capital item on the programme was a dramatic sketch entitled Sunshine, submitted by Miss Margaret Parker and company; great laughter followed the work of King and Benson, with the musical burlesque, Around the Town; Hilda Jacobson rendered several dainty songs in good style; Mr. Frank Sylvo gained loud applause for his comedy juggling; the military scena, Back to Barracks, given by Mr. Dennis Drew, proved acceptable; Barrington at the piano was a smart turn; and also in the list were Rosa and Kitty Simms, vocalists and dancers, and Baby Boden, comedienne and dancer.

Queen's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Fred Granville.—Two Little Drummer Boys, played by Mr. and Mrs. Kimberley's No. 1 company, has done good business here this week.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold.—Heading the bill here this week was Lily Morris, who had a most flattering reception for her songs, which included the popular "He's a white man." The Sisters Macarte had a neat scena, "The Land of the Lotus"; much laughter was provoked by the merry comedians, Tennyson and Wallis; some remarkable feats of strength were shown by John Grun Marx; Talbot and Pearce had a pleasing musical item, "Yo San and Cherry"; the Brothers Milford were expert dancers and smart patterers; and others who appeared were the Sivronis, with a funny turn; Fred Herbert, comedian; and Cora Carina, character dialect artist.

Royal Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Walter Hassan.—Julian Rose was the big card here this week, and drew as strongly as ever; Mabel Green, principal girl at the recent Royal Court pantomime, came in for a hearty reception, among her songs being "Naomi" and "If you mean what you say, good bye"; the Eight 'Varsity Girls gave a pleasing musical turn; S. and G. Auer caused great laughter with their jumps, bumps, and rags turn; the Three Spoons went through a clever juggling performance, which contained a deal of fun; Harry Levaine, as a patter comedian, kept his audience in a good mood; an excellent eccentric comedienne was Edie Veno; and there also appeared Renroff and his dancing horse; the Sisters Marion, juvenile duettists; and Phil Bransby, coster comedian.

Royal Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The stock dramatic company here have this week given Ancestors of the King, by Max Goldberg. Mr. Harry Tresham, returned after a long stay in London, was given a hearty welcome for his depiction of Edward, Prince of Wales; Mr. R. Seath Innes did well as Bertrand Guesclin and Friar Anselm; Mr. Sydney Grant made a powerful Raymond de Mountford; Miss Lillian Radbourne worthily sustained the rôle of Blanche; Miss Gwynne Warren pleased as Joan; and other good parts were Charles (Mr. Leo Montgomery), Nicola (Mr. Tom H. Solly), Black Judas (Mr. E. D. Allen), and Walter (Mr. Cecil Ravenswood). Mr. Anthony Brown's Bioscope showed the latest films.

Westminster.—Lessee, Mr. Fred E. Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—In addition to a series of attractive moving pictures, the following artists appeared during the week: The Keppels, operatic vocalists; the Lyntons, with musical act; and Jim Clarkson, with a smart scena, "The Farm Hand."

Olympia.—District-Manager, Mr. Albert Bulmer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ernest Wighton.—Victoria Monks was prominent here this week, and had a cordial reception for her efforts, which included her latest success, "The sequel to Moving Day," also "Take me back to home, sweet home," and "Jacksonville"; roars of laughter followed the Bogannys, with their lunatic bakers turn; a merry couple were the Anartos; De Canty's illuminated water grotto aroused much enthusiasm; Boyd and Gilfain presented their diverting operetta, Sunny Spain; a most amusing sketch, Ananias II., came from Stratton Mills and company; the several charming dances by La Danseuse were watched with deep interest; and also in the list were Tom Stuart, mimic, and Mazie Hibbs, speciality dancer.

Pavilion.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Manager, Mr. Henry Hearn.—Captain Woodward's sea lions and seals were an interesting turn here this week; Shirley Liggins and company had a pleasing farmyard scena; the Gladenbecks went through a much-appreciated speciality act; Barney Ives showed himself an illusionist of high merit; the Seener and Fridkins troupe of Russian singers and dancers gave an acceptable turn; Wallace Whitney caused much laughter with his comedy character impersonations; Phillips and Bristow gained loud applause for their wooden-shoe dancing; Jack Hartley, the Yorkshire dialect comedian and patterer, provoked a deal of merriment; and also in the programme were Sig Arvi, a particularly clever illusionist; Armiens, with the musical scena, "Entertainments in Camp"; and Beattie Foster, comedy actress and vocalist.

Grand Tivoli.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—Here during the week Harry Burn's pantomime, Robinson Crusoe, afforded large audiences much pleasure. Mlle. Du Roche held the title-part, and specialities were introduced by Bert Coote's Yankee-Doodle Girls.

Park Palace.—Lessee, Mr. Jasper Redfern.—The principal bioscope picture shown here this week was The Blind Boy, and the variety artists who appeared included the Milsted-Bell Trio, with the sketch, Three Sharps in a Flat; Mollie Doon, vocalist; Willar's Mannikins; the Northcotes, vocal duettists; Revill Hall, entertainer; and Grapho and Jackson, with an amusing sketch.

New Century Picture Hall.—Proprietors, the New Century Animated Picture Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter W. Hook.—The exclusive bioscope picture of the Johnson-Burns Fight continues an attraction here. In addition there are shown The Stolen Legacy, Choosing Her Fiancé, and A Policeman for an Hour.

LLANELLY.—Royalty Theatre.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Z. Andrews; Acting-Manageress, Miss Alice Rocheforte.—The Merry Widow is meeting with a warm welcome here this week. The piece is produced under the direction of Mr. J. A. E. Malone, and is splendidly mounted and dressed. Miss Daphne Glenne in the title-rôle acts and sings with bewitching charm, and receives great applause; Mr. Alec Worcester as Prince Danilo deserves unstinted praise for his fine impersonation; Mr. H. Sinclair Cotter as Baron Popoff is a great favourite; Mr. Arthur Geary as Vicomte de Jolidon being also very good. As Nisch Mr. Harry Emeric does exceedingly well; Mr. Cecil Warwick as General Navokovitch, Mr. C. L. Steward as M. Radja, and Mr. Clinton Reynold as the Waiter at Maxim's are all capable and painstaking. Miss Violet Hobson as Natalie is admirable, and wins much applause. As Frou-Frou Miss Mabel May does some charming dances. The Misses Beatrice Maude, Alice Humphreys, Ethel Darsley, Beatie Wills, and Neste Laurel are captivating as the Maxim Girls. Miss Eileen Clanford as Olga, Miss Mary Florence as Sylvanie, and Miss Enid Forde as Proscovia are all also effective. The augmented orchestra is ably directed by Mr. W. Brightwell.

LONGTON.—Queen's Theatre.—Proprietors, The Longton Theatre, Ltd.; General-Manager, H. Sherriff Howard.—Messrs. F. Marriott Watson and Sanderson Moffat's company, in the musical comedy drama, What a Woman Did, met with a hearty reception from a crowded house on Monday. Mr. F. Marriott Watson gives a telling portrayal of the heavy part, Raefaelle Duroc; Mr. Sanderson Moffat, an old favourite here, submits a manly and vigorous impersonation of Conrad; and Mr. Owen Edwin's representation of Peter Pippin keeps the audience in the best of humour. Miss Florence E. Florence makes a most attractive Elsie, and Miss Phyllis Hamilton appears to advantage as the adventuress La Papillon. Several of the songs and dances were enthusiastically received, notably so the dances by the Clancy Girl and the song and eccentric dance by Mr. Owen Edwin. Other parts are adequately filled.

LOUGHBOROUGH.—Theatre Royal and Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Payne Seddon and George Robertson; Resident Business-Manager, Mr. W. Payne Seddon.—Mr. Chas. M. Daly's Hippodrome company has been delighting patrons here; Messrs. Belton and Osborne are good as variety entertainers; Mr. Frank Sley and his marvellous nipper give some excellent specimens of clog dancing; Miss Jean McDuff sings Scotch songs with success; Mr. Jack Belton is a versatile comedian and dancer; and the Three Hodginis in their ladder act give a sensational display.

MACCLESFIELD.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. K. Gatley.—Man and Wife has been successfully presented by Messrs. Van Biene and Traynor's company. Paul Revere is played by Mr. John F. Traynor with ability; Miss Kate Hallam's portrayal of Marcelle is effective; Captain D'Esparre is skilfully presented by Mr. Edward M. Hamilton; Mr. George Overs contributes an excellent impersonation of the cripple Jean; Colonel Latour has a capable exponent in Mr. Edward Van Biene; Mr. A. Horton is eminently satisfactory as Sergt. Jacques; as Bimbo and Bambo Mr. E. Hall Eldon and Mr. George Vinning are exceedingly amusing; Miss Millie Doris makes a vivacious Rosette; and Miss M. Thorne does well as Ruth Revere.

MAIDSTONE.—Palace Theatre.—Manager, Mr. S. Baskerville.—The following are appearing here this week: Jose G. Levy's company in the dramatic episode, The Irony of Fate; Les Xentrix in The Garden of Terpsichore, a clever singing and dancing act; Ezra, mimic and whistler, with novel methods; the Three Gartis, dancers; the Athlones, in an original balancing and trapeze act; Stuart and Stuart, society entertainers; J. H. Crewe, comedian; and the Bioscope.

MARGATE.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. E. Michael; General-Manager, Mr. W. W. Keene.—Mr. Arthur Crichton's company, which includes Mr. Harry Paulton in his original character of Peter Amos Dunn, has been presenting the farcical comedy Niobe here this week. Mr Paulton comes out as fresh as ever in his amusing impersonation of the head of the Dunn family, and as Niobe Miss Agnes Imlay plays most effectively; Mr. H. C. Lloyd is good as Cornelius Griffin; Mr. Phil Cooper does well as Philip Innings; Mr. A. M. Seton puts in some capable work as Hamilton Tomkins; Mr. Stanley Brown is effective as Parker G. Sillocks; Miss Blanche Ripley is a delightfully aggressive Caroline Dunn; the Misses Clara Nicholls and Katrina Morris capably sustain the rôles of Helen and Hattie Griffin; Miss Lilian Stafford is excellent as Beatrice Sillocks; and Miss Dent, as Mary, and Miss Winifred Wood as Madeleine Mifton are good.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—Elroy, the armless wonder, uses his feet with as much facility as an ordinary person would use his hands; the Breton Troupe, in the pantomimical sketch, The Tramp's Picnic, create great merriment, and Charles Williams, comedian, meets with a good reception; Dora Dean, transformation dancer; Peter Shannon, coloured comedian and dancer; Harold Heath, comedian and dancer; and Queenie Dell, comedienne and dancer, all give excellent turns.

MANCHESTER.—Theatre Royal.—Lessees, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edmundstone Shirra.—Following on the close of pantomime, which had a very successful run, Mr. Brandon Thomas's company opened on Monday in Charley's Aunt. Mr. Arthur Chesney as Lord Fancourt Babberley plays in capital spirit, and he is cleverly supported by Mr. Hastings Lynn and Mr. Robert Burnett as the victimised undergraduates; Mr. Theo McCausland Stewart as Colonel Chesney is, as usual, quite at home in the midst of it, and Mr. Roy Byford is equally effective as Spettigue; Mr. Sydney Compton as Brasset is quaint, and the other parts are very agreeably filled by Miss Vere Gerald, Miss Estelle Winwood, Miss Ethel Fifield, and Miss Sylvia Morris. A one-act play, The Colour Sergeant, by the same author, precedes.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietors, the United Theatres Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Lee.—The D'Oyly Carte Répertoire Company is here this week. On Monday The Mikado was given. Mr. Fred Billington's appearance as Pooh-Bah was the signal for positive enthusiasm; Mr. Leicester Tunks as the Mikado, and Mr. Strafford Moss as Nanki-Poo were decidedly well placed; and Mr. Henry A. Lytton scored unmistakably as Ko-Ko, a rôle made difficult by the achievements of some notable predecessors; clever and amusing work was added by Miss Ethel Morrison as Katisha, and, as the three sisters, by Misses Clara Dow, Beatrice Meredith, and Mabel Graham; while in the other parts Mr. Sydney Granville and Mr. Fred Drawater were efficient. The same brightness, charm, and excellence characterised the performance of Iolanthe on Tuesday, when, in addition to most of the artists already named, Miss Bertha Lewis and Miss Lillias Engholm appeared. The company includes also Mr. Allen Morris and Mr. Hugh Blackmore, who were seen in later pieces, the week's répertoire being further enriched by The Gondoliers, H.M.S. Pinafore (preceded by After All), and The Yeomen of the Guard. In the way of chorus, orchestral accompaniment, and setting, nothing was wanting to make each performance perfect.

Gaiety Theatre.—Proprietress, Miss A. E. F. Horniman; Manager, Mr. B. Iden Payne; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edwin T. Heys.—The Moody-Manners Opera Company is here. Madame Butterfly was given on Monday in excellent style before a large and appreciative audience. Miss Enriqueta Crichton in the title-part was in superb voice, and Mr. Charles Carter as Pinkerton, the naval lieutenant, matched her in dramatic ability as well as in vocal achievement. Among many other interesting rôles that of Susuki was admirably rendered by Miss M. Dennis. Orchestrally, as well as in respect of the chorus, considerable body was contributed to the rendering, which gave full value to the emotion and pathos, and ensured a performance which could scarcely be excelled.

Royal Osborne Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Mason.—Mr. C. Watson Mill and his company are here in For Love and the King, in which Mr. Mill (the author) is playing most successfully the picturesque rôle of Jarval, and Miss Rosalind Tate is supporting him as Princess Athene; Mr. Villiers Stanley as Prince Dragomir is also notably good; Mr. Geoffrey Chate gives an engaging performance as Duke Fernand; and the strong dramatic parts of the Obrenovics are powerfully rendered by Messrs. John Burton and Henry Earlesmere; a capital character study of a German artist is given by Mr. Jim K. Woods; Miss Joan Ellis as Natila well earns the sympathy of the audience; and others commendable are Miss Lily Wynter and Miss Frances Tierney.

Metropole Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Day.—A strong variety programme here includes Radie Furman, the jolly Dutch girl; the Wakeman quintet of comedy sketch vocalists; H. O. Wills, comedian; Jim Cheetham, juvenile whistling mimic; Dorien, in an electric comedy act; Pueblo and Cropp, creole artists; Little Tichbourne, the little lump of comedy; Carr and Rose, in a charming operettas; and Lillie Le Main, in Lilliputian specialities.

Grand Junction Theatre.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Brearley.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is here in A Broken Heart. Miss Sheila Walsh as Mary Barnard scored a big success, and considerable talent was displayed by Mr. Clinton Dawson as the husband, John Barnard; Little May was played finely by Miss Daisy Rocheford; on the side of wickedness Mr. J. Moreton Williams gave a virile rendering of Stephen Raylton, and was capably supplemented by Mr. Edward Rawlinson as Gash Gills; in the way of humour successes were made by Mr. Quinton Pearce as Tony Tibbets, Miss Nancy Mitchell as Sally Travner, and Mr. George Addison as Skrimp.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—Big turns here this week are Carrie De Mar, a very good character comedienne; and the Poluski Brothers, in their latest success, Pictures. Very good also is Elsie Roby, the slavey at the piano; the Brothers St. Clair are both clever and funny on cycles; Marie Santoi and her Japs present a novelty scena; Tom Lloyd's parodies are very well received; and other striking turns are Doreen, played by Fred Moule and Lola Patey; Rich and Rich, comedians; McCann's performing dogs; and Frank F. Street, a smart second edition of R. G. Knowles.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—The G.P.O., played in fine style by Mr. Fred Karno's company, including the one and only Fred Kitchen, is here for the first time. It has many happy moments, and causes much laughter. Frederic Melville presents the Moto Girl ably; May Henderson, as usual, is full of vim; Walter Munroe, Irish character comedian and dancer, is well received; Arthur Aldridge, tenor vocalist, sings beautifully; Lionette Roberty and her whirlwind transformation dancers are excellent; Dorothy and Alexander, juvenile instrumentalists, give a very pleasing turn; and Sybil St. Elmo, ballad vocalist, sings well. Striking pictures of Wilbur Wright and his flying machine are shown on the Bioscope.

Palace.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Manager, Mr. A. J. Carter.—Alfred Lester, with his quiet, effective manner, assisted pleasingly by Gwen Howard, is highly amusing in A Restaurant Episode; Harry Ford makes his usual hit with quaint songs and style; Tom Leamore scores in songs and eccentric dances; and Capt. Fred Woodward's sea lions go through their astonishing performance. In addition we have that sterling actor J. H. Barnes; the Melody Makers, in phantom scena, The Burglar's Dream, a clever turn; Sinclair and Whiteford in comedy episode, Getting Even; Burley and Grean, eccentric acrobats; and Julian Mack, the chatterbox. Pictures complete.

King's, Longsight.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. James E. Trippett.—A nicely-varied programme here comprises turns by Clown Barker, in his parade of clever animals; Edwin Garth, comedy character artist; Vanando, a distinctly smart ventriloquist; Gala and Norris, in Down South; the Breen Family of accomplished jugglers; the Rangers, expert cyclists; Frank E. Solby, child mimic and comedian; W. H. Merson, comedian; and Will and Alicia Frohman, artistic instrumentalists.

Tivoli.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles A. Wilkes; Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Sadie Jerome, burlesque artist, tops the bill here this week, and meets with a good reception.; Alice Hollander, the Australian contralto, sings well; Mart and Pep give a smart hand-balancing turn; Rosie Bartlett is a pleasing comedienne; and Dickson Moffatt and company are amusing in Six and Eightpence. Others who contribute to the programme are Reed and Stevens, in funny sketch, Married or Photographed; the Sisters Allen, duettists and dancers; Marie Beresford, musical comedy artist; Blanche Marion, comedienne and dancer; and Mimosa, in Japanese novelty.

Queen's Park Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Meek.—Martin Conway, a great favourite here, is warmly welcomed, and Walter Ellis presents Captain Duncan and His Airship, a very amusing sketch, with elaborate scenery and effects; Mabel Roberts is very good in illustrated songs; the Five Paulos are exceedingly clever acrobats; Britain's Military Heroes as produced in living statuary by L. and R. Edmond are a great success; Tiny and Mite, twin sisters, are charming juvenile vocalists and dancers; Robb Gilmore scores as an eccentric comedian and dancer; J. F. Franklin, comedian, makes a hit; Conan Dawson is a clever mimic at the piano; and Dolly Ross, comedienne, completes an excellent programme.

Hulme Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Broadhead and Son; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas Baker.—Richard Corbin and his clever dogs give a really wonderful performance. Told in a Flat, a comedy dramatic episode, is well played by Harry Rogers and company; J. W. Gallagher, comedian, causes much laughter; Lidden and Hayward are a smart comedy couple; Adela Crispin sings "The sunshade girl" in pleasing style; Kenway and Emery are amusing in duologue, Turtle Doves; Rezene and Rezene are smart acrobats; Jack Crawley, in neat act, Lights Out, takes well; and Harry Kirk, comedian, completes. Angus Strong, baritone did not appear on the occasion of our visit.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessees, The South Wales Entertainments, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Albert Jackson.—Miss Hook of Holland is paying a first visit this week, under the auspices of Messrs. Dudley Bennett and T. C. Wray. The staging and dresses are admirable, and the chorus excellent. Mr. Charles D. Maclagan makes a typical Mr. Hood, creating roars of laughter by his whimsicalities; Messrs. J. B. Fox and Mr. Sam Lockridge as Captain Haup and Van Vuyt respectively sing with much taste and discretion; Mr. Fred Dark is very amusing as Simon Slinks; Miss Ethel James, who plays the title-rôle, has a good voice and a charming personality; Miss Muff Carew as Mina and Miss Molly Tidevoi as Gretchen also sing and act well.

Temperance Hall.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—The premier place is held by Charles Fisher's Pocket Opera Company, who provide a rich musical treat, with excerpts from popular operas; Netty Janowsky Troupe of acrobats give a smart exhibition of head and hand balancing; Carl Lymn makes a hit as an animal mimic; the Royal Quintette of dancers secure hearty appreciation; other enjoyable turns are contributed by Massona, an eccentric juggler; Sisters Clare, popular duettists and dancers; Mlle. Martha, a graceful gymnast; and the Wedburns, who score as vocalists and instrumentalists; the Biograph completes the programme.

MEXBOROUGH.—Prince of Wales' Theatre.—Manager, Mr. W. H. Melton.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Willard's company is this week presenting The Midnight Mail.—Mr. James Hare plays with vigour as the engine-driver, Harry Steyne; a humorous and interesting character study of the ne'er-do-well, Billy Brewer, is submitted by Mr. E. W. Avery; Mr. Chas. H. Longden plays capitally as Leonard Royle; the Turkish adventurer, Hassan Padisha, has an able exponent in Mr. C. P. Wentworth; Miss Trissie Humphries plays in sympathy and charm the rôle of Mary Steyne, the engine-driver's unfortunate wife; Nancy Brewer is invested with spirit by Miss Daisy Clifford; and Miss Jeannie Weston is great as Lady Phyllis Eustace.

New Picture Hall.—Lessee, Mr. Will Hunter.—Manager Mr. E. H. Jones.—A leading feature among many good films this week is a fine pictorial delineation of the famous story, "She."

MIDDLESBROUGH.—Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Ed. Jowsey; Manager and Licensee, Mr. W. Ker Chatto.—The Dairymaids is being presented here by Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company. Monday was "a grand Territorial night," and was under the patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress (Councillor J. F. and Mrs. Pannell), Sir Samuel and Lady Sadler, and members of the Town Council. Mr. Nelson Keys maintains his reputation in the part of Sam Brudenell, and keeps the audience laughing continually. He is ably seconded by Mr. Dan Agar as Joe Mivens. Miss Gladys Silvani as Eliza creates roars of laughter; Miss Clare Marsden gives a delightful performance as Peggy, her fine voice being heard to great advantage; Miss Vera Crichton is charming and vivacious as Winifred, and sings very sweetly; Mr. Herbert Willis is good as Frank Meredith, R.N.; and as Dr. O'Byrne Mr. Percy Marshall is excellent; Miss Carrie Lacey is very pleasing as Lady Brudenell; and Miss Hazel Saqui is good as Helen.

Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Charles Imeson.—Mr. Dudley Bennett and Mr. T. C. Wray's company is here this week with A Country Girl. The title part is admirably played by Miss Anna Hickisch, who has a beautiful voice; Mr. Conningsby Brierley is well suited to the rôle of Barry, and is very amusing; Mr. Hardy-Jackson is excellent as Geoffrey Challoner; and Mr. W. O. Billington does full justice to the part of Sir Joseph Verity; Mr. H. Besley Beltram is good as Douglas Verity; and Mr. Frank Sealey as Lord Anchester and Mr. J. A. Valentine as Lord Grasmere are all that can be desired. Miss Victoria Seevens is very pleasing as Marjorie; and Miss Lucy Lever is a charming Princess; Miss Florence Hylton as Mrs. St. Quinton and Miss Hilda Darnell as Lady Anchester and Miss Elsie Beetham as Lady Vivian are delightful.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles G. Rembges.—The Leslie Bros., besides providing a delightful musical turn, create roars of laughter by their antics; Tom Foy and company are very amusing in the sketch, The Yorkshire Lad in London; and Menotti does some smart feats on the wire. A pleasing turn is supplied by Boden and Bell; and the Ormesby Quartette are exceptionally fine vocalists; Miss Maude Murray is exceedingly good in her electrical dances; and Issa Steel (a charming soprano), Arthur Royce, and Fred Hallam add to a capital programme.

MOTHERWELL.—New Century Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. Arthur Hales.—Mr. F. R. Benson's Shakespearean company (North) is paying a return visit in a répertoire including Richard the Third, The Merchant of Venice, The Taming of the Shrew; Twelfth Night, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Julius Cæsar, and Hamlet. On Monday Richard the Third was staged, and Mr. Henry Herbert submitted a scholarly embodiment of the title-rôle; Mr. James Berry admirably sustained the double rôles of Buckingham and Richmond; Queen Elizabeth was finely played by Miss Gladys Vanderzee; Miss Edith Howards being excellent as the Duchess of York.

NEATH.—Castle.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Haggar, jun.—The Avenging Hand was well received on Monday night. Frank Lomond and the Gipsy part of Balthazar by Mr. W. Haggar were clever pieces of acting. As Rupert Dashwood Mr. Will Percy was successful; Mr. Geo. Stanley was a dignified General Lomond; Mr. Arthur Stanley was highly entertaining as Benjamin McManus; Mr. Fred Hilland was original as Pietro Mascar; Mr. Bob Chapman made a popular P.C. Bee; Mr. Courtney scored as the butler, Phillips; Alice Lomond was portrayed with dignity and grace by Mrs. Will Haggar; Miss Frances Giddings had a good reception as Jim, a waif; Miss Lloyd was an engaging Kitty O'Kay; and Mr. Will Fyffe kept the fun going and was accorded a good reception. Lady Audley's Secret and Who Is the Woman? were on the bill for Wednesday and Thursday.

Victoria.—Proprietor, Mr. John Johnson.—The Woman Who Sinned was staged on Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Fred D'Albert was excellent as Jack Carrington; Mr. J. Desmond skilfully represented Eugene D'Arville; Mr. H. McDonald was a capable Silas Norris; Mr. W. Bennet, Sergeant Jones, was highly amusing; Mr. J. Watson gave a good portrayal of Percy Hogg; Mr. John Johnson faithfully represented Bill Scamp; Mr. H. Reynolds was well placed as a K.C.; Miss L. Pearce supplied an excellent study of Judith Sarton, "the woman who sinned"; Miss G. Vane scored a success as Hester Norris; Miss O. Lyndall as Maud gave a good account of herself; Miss T. Bennet was a stately Lady Munro; Miss Frances Atkin won sympathy as Blind Meg. Several new pictures were shown on the Bioscope.

NELSON.—Grand Theatre.—Proprietress, Mrs. T. Greenwood Croft; Business-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Mand.—Miss Ethel Van Praagh and Mr. J. E. Whitty's company in The Eyes of the World has attracted good audiences here. The former gives a fine presentation of Helen de l'Orme; Miss Beatrice Fitzhugh makes a very acceptable Mme. Esme de Carnac; Miss Nellie Garside is a vivacious Mlle Pomfleane; as Avice Miss Elsie Capell displays much charm; the part of the renegade husband is cleverly played by Mr. Geo. W. Waiper; Gaston de Carnac receives admirable treatment by Mr. Will Casey; whilst both Mr. J. E. Whitty and Mr. C. Stirling are exceedingly good in their respective rôles of M. Achille Fanfarade and Octave de Carnac.

NEW BRIGHTON.—Winter Gardens.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. H. E. Jones and A. Douglass.—The Aeolians, presented by Mr. Charles Parker, head the bill, and by their brightness, beautiful costumes, and clever dancing score a marked success; Beattie and Babs, two remarkably clever children, cause great enthusiasm by their vocalism, dancing, and extremely quaint acting; Mr. John Bland gives his humorous dialect characters with skill, and is ably assisted in his sketch by Miss Poppy Lytton; a singer of exceptional merit is Mr. William McIvor; whilst a smart and up-to-date coon delineator is found in Mr. J. H. Wakefield. In a drawing-room scena Miss Lena and

SHILLING COLLECTION FOR THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

2,785½ SHILLINGS.

In again directing the attention of our readers to The Era's Shilling Fund on behalf of the Music Hall Home we are in the happy position of being able to associate with the appeal thus being made the name of the foremost music hall comedienne—Miss Marie Lloyd. It seems scarcely necessary to remind our readers of the deep interest Miss Lloyd has ever taken in matters affecting the welfare of her brothers and sisters of the variety profession. It is her desire that her "year" will be marked by a considerable increase in the subscriptions of previous years, and she therefore, through The Era, commends the Music Hall Home to the charitably-minded. Mr. Thomas Barrasford, the President of the Fund, is again this year exerting himself in its behalf, and this fact is sufficient indication that he is satisfied as to the way in which the institution is being conducted, and that he considers it worthy of support.

Mr. Ben Woodger, the secretary of the Music Hall Home, tells us that in 1907 the inmates averaged ten, but that in 1908 there have been as many as twelve. The address of the Home is 31, Wilson-road, Camberwell, and there the matron (Mrs. Fruin) busies herself for the comfort and convenience of her "family." At present there are eleven of these, and the desire is to increase the number, which can only be done when sufficient funds for the purpose are collected. During the past twelve months three or four of the inmates have recovered their health and strength sufficiently to enable them to look for engagements. These secured, they left the Home, and the vacancies thereby created were immediately filled up. Now, this Home requires keeping up, and it cannot be kept up on air. There is no need for us to refer to all the good work which has been performed by the institution in the past, as that must for the most part be within the recollection of our readers. The ages of the inmates range from fifty to seventy-six. In all probability these men will be maintained in the Home until the day of their death, and their funeral expenses paid for out of the funds of the Home.

The Era's Shilling Fund is the main source of income to the Home, and this means of sustenance is added to by the donations of artists, either given directly, or through the collecting boxes through which many managers of variety theatres collect pennies from "dead-heads" and from artists who desire free admission.

Anyone can be supplied with a collecting-card by sending a postcard to Mr. Woodger.

Briefly, we may once more repeat that the objects of the Music Hall Home Fund are to provide shelter for deserving members of the variety profession who have been stricken with poverty or illness in their declining years, or who have in other ways fallen on evil times. Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, the hon. treasurer, will be pleased to receive filled-up collecting cards addressed to him at The Era, 5, Tavistock-street, Strand, W.C., and to acknowledge them in these columns.

ing the "Invasion of 1910" and Miss Victoria Monks "If you want to have a row." The Bioscope, showing a pretty subject, A Child's Love, completes the bill.

NORTH SHIELDS.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Horace Lee.—Mr. J. A. Campbell's company is warmly greeted in The Little Breadwinner, Mr. J. Monkhouse gives a capital rendering of Lord William Dorrington; Mr. Reginald Brown displays undoubted ability as Richard Lawrence; Mr. Alfred Maurice makes the most of Joseph Prior; Mr. Sydney Lynn is clever as Charles Prior; and Mr. William Casey scores as Dr. Chadwick. Little Irene contributes a clever impersonation of Meg; Miss Josephine Richards fills the part of Margaret Daventry with much success; Bridget O'Flinagan has an able exponent in Miss Clara Hunt; and Miss Millie Ford as Kate Cherry is seen to advantage.

Central Palace.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—Pride of place in this week's bill is held by Mr. Will Todwin, actor vocalist and comedian, who is deservedly popular; Mr. Tom Colgnitt, champion jumper, performs some marvellous feats, for which he is loudly applauded; the Three Spangelettis, with their Comedy Canine, Pony, and Baboon Hippodrome, are heartily greeted; Miss Gladys Todwynne, juvenile vocalist and dancer, meets with a cordial reception; Miss May Davies, with illustrated songs, is well received; Mr. John Grant, vocalist, with "An old warrior," meets with favour; and the Pictures are, as usual, interesting.

NORTHWICH.—Pavilion.—Proprietress, Mrs. P. E. Fletcher; Manager, Mr. Phil Royston.—The Follyettes are very clever in their comedy skit, Drama and Opera; Ru Allan proves an amusing ventriloquist; Peakman and Walsh are skilful and amusing jugglers; Miss Eva Bailey has a very pleasing soprano voice, and her songs are well received; Alec Godfrey is a refined comedian; and the Biograph presents some of the finest pictures which have been given during the season.

NORWICH.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Lessee, Mr. Fred Morgan.—Mr. Charles Frohman's excellent company in The Hypocrites is appearing here. Mr. H. Lawrence Leyton admirably portrays the rôle of the Rev. Edgar Linnell; Mr. Fred E. Morland is a good Mr. Wilmore; Mr. I. Dennys an excellent Leonard Wilmore; and Mr. Charles Harley a successful Mr. Viveash. Mr. Charles Tyrel does well as Sir John; Mr. F. G. Thurstans is humorous as the Rev. Everard Daubeny; Miss Grace Murielle deserves praise as Mrs. Wilmore; Miss Muriel Mason is an attractive Helen; Miss Violet Harley acts well as Rachel; Miss Millie L. Emden is good as Mrs. Blaney; and Miss Madge Severne as Mrs. Linnell and Miss Eva Turnour as Patty give most able support.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. Councillor F. W. Fitt.—Miss Lilian Lee heads the bill this week and has a good reception; the Brothers Lawrence, Scotch dancers, are good in their act entitled All Scotch; Gerard, a herculean juggler, gives some astonishing feats; the Concoran Brothers are pleasing as musical specialists; Les Rallas and monkey display some amusing tricks; the Harvey Boys create fun; and Arthur Holland, comedian, finds favour.

NOTTINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. Howard Finney.—Mr. George Edwardes's company is here with The Dollar Princess, the mounting and dressing of which are all that could be desired. The music is pleasant and tuneful, and is excellently rendered by a capable orchestra under the guidance of Mr. Carl Kiefert. In the rôle of Olga, Miss Kitty Gordon makes hosts of friends by her charming appearance, acting, and singing; Mr. H. Corson Clarke is a comedian of great merit, and the scenes in which he and Miss Gordon are engaged are artistically executed; Mr. Robert Michaelis is a most engaging actor, and with Miss Hilda Moody to assist him success is assured. Another pair who play up to each other in first-class style are Mr. Vernon Davidson and Miss Alice Pollard, their duets and dances being of the daintiest. Good work in small parts is done by Mr. Willie Warde, as the aristocratic footman, Messrs. Howard Cridland, Harry Parker, Robert St. George, and Phillip Simmons. Miss Alice Moffat looks very dainty as Dulcie, and the Misses Mabel Duncan, Kathleen Owen, Evelyn Powys, and Betty Selwyn add to the success of the production.

Grand Theatre.—Manager, Mr. Harry Upton.—The Midnight Wedding is proving a big success this week. Mr. Alfred Paumier acts with natural force and intensity in the trying rôle of Paul Valmar; Miss Yvonne Orchardson looks charming, and plays with womanly tenderness as the Princess Astra; Mr. Adrian Lovett makes a bold and dashing villian of Captain Von Scarsbruck; as a minor scoundrel, Lieut. Von Strelsburg is well depicted by Mr. A. E. Barnes; Mr. John Nesbitt makes a creditable Crown Prince; and the comedy element is well to the fore as supplied by Messrs. James E. Page, Vernon Vayne, and Algie Spalding; a pert Kathie is seen in Miss Gwlady's Faunce; Miss Prudence Lawrence as Marie and Miss Nesta Sandford as Rozel are also to be commended; and Mr. Forbes Harrison adds dignity to his part of Father Gerrad.

Empire Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—Jack Pleasants is making a huge success of all his songs this week, and hearty laughter is continuous while he occupies the stage; the musical farce, Passing the Time, is exploited with an energy and dash that may be expected of Daley Cooper, and he is capably assisted by Mabel Lait, in a burlesque on the "Apache Dance"; the wonderful dancing of La Pia is enhanced by mechanical and electrical effects; the Ten Zerbinis add to their popularity in a novelty, entitled "The Enchanted Glen"; Arthur Gill receives a warm welcome for his singing; and the Eight of Hearts dance themselves into favour; Gladys Mavius looks attractive and sings with taste; Lily Palmer contributes a song and dance; and there are excellent films shown by the Bioscope.

Royal Hippodrome Theatre of Varieties.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Barrasford; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic Carnell.—The engagement of Miss Decima Moore has brought crowded houses nightly, and this delightful artist charms her audiences by several songs delivered in her own inimitable style; Sammy Shields causes abundance of laughter by his Scotch stories and songs; Frank Fenton, as David Garrick in a little sketch, submits a fine piece of work; Rappo and Ella offer some really expert work as equilibrists and hand balancers; while Bostock's baboons prove an interesting turn; the eccentricities of the Bros. Werds are entertaining; and an enjoyable illusionist item is given by Philip Levard; the Camplins, musical comedy duo; Webb and Branston, operatic duettists; and the Barrascope also add to a pleasant evening.

OLDBURY.—Palace of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. Jas. Tyrer.—Business is extraordinarily good. Ernie Garner, the Black Country comedian, causes keen enjoyment with his patter, which is extremely funny; Little Ivy Rochfort is a comedienne and dancer of merit; Will Harris is a funny comedian; Miss Florrie Delemere is a dainty comedienne; the Bioscope films complete a very enjoyable entertainment.

OLDHAM.—Grand Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Mayall.—Mr. Oscar Asche and Miss Lily Brayton are here with The Taming of the Shrew, and a large and enthusiastic audience gave them a hearty welcome on Monday. Mr. Asche as Petruchio was powerfully humorous; Miss Brayton as Katharine is delightful in her portrayal of the various moods of the shrew; Miss Elfrida Clement appears as Bianca, acting in a really clever manner; Miss E. Mullock has little to do as the hostess, but is most capable; Mr. R. Ian Penny as Hortensio is highly successful; Mr. Ewan Brookes as Lucentio and Mr. Caleb Porter as Gremio are excellent; Mr. J. F. Russell as Vincentio acts in well-finished style; Mr. Tripp Edgar is a capital Tranio; and the part of Grumio is capably played by Mr. Athol Forde. Mr. Arthur Franton is very good as a Pedant; and the remainder of the company give excellent support. The staging is most elaborate. Mr. E. Ch. Gittins, so long associated with the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company, has charge of the business-management On Friday Othello is also in the bill.

Colosseum Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Wm. Eastwood.—Miss Mary Neil and Mr. George Kirk opened the second week with From Shop Girl to Duchess, and their reception was most gratifying. Miss Neil, in the rôle of Sylvia Grey, acts in accomplished style; Mr. Douglas Cecil as Arnold Vyvian makes a manly Duke; Mr. T. Lionel Ellis in the character of Sir Morris Maitland, M.D., makes a clever study of the part; Mr. Douglas Tremayne is excellent as Gilbert Spate; and Mr. Roy Wharton is capital as Pelham. Miss B. Hudson gives a clever study of Lady Celeste; Miss F. Groves as Tilly Dobson and Mr. Henri Gerald as Tommy Tinkler are responsible for really smart comedy; Mr. E. S. Nuttall is smart as Corbet; Miss Amy B Ellis as the Dowager Duchess is most successful; and Misses Hawkins and France are equally applauded. The remainder of the company do full justice to their respective parts.

Empire Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hulme.—Carl Hertz heads the bill in his marvellous illusions; Kitty Colyer could not appear owing to indisposition after Monday; Joe Reichen provides a smart show with his highly-trained dogs; Annie Lang is an excellent dancer, and sings very sweetly; Carrie Laurie's Kindergarten is full of smart singing and dancing and good comedy; Mlle. Jenny Mills provides a pretty electrical spectacle in three numbers; Fred Carey is very amusing with his funny songs; Duncan and Godfrey are smart in a cockney comedy sketch, Me and 'Er.

Palace Theatre, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter De Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. Thorne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. E Sharrocks.—Roland produces his latest illusion, "The Bachelor's Dream," assisted by Miss Marjorie Russell. Fred Edwards and company, including Miss Bertha Northam, in Kleptomaniacs, cause hearty laughter; Margaret Ismay and Coons provide a really smart and clever singing and dancing act; Floria, a phenomenal equilibrist, has a hearty reception; Bains and Reed are clever in their eccentric tumbling act; Fred E. Terry is a good comedian; Harry Bedford has a capital burlesque "Salome" song; and Jas. Bassett sings well. The Palace Pictures are again very good.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Kilrow.—Chas. Baldwin's Bank Clerks are capable comedians; Damerell and Rutland are good in a comedy sketch, Clever Mr. Fugg; Rosie Archer at the piano gives some delightful imitations; and Foley and Francis are a merry pair. The Sisters Henderson are smart in a musical speciality; Martino is very good in his original contortions; Barfoot and Carson give a refined comedy act; and Frank Boyce sings character songs. The Dottoscope depicts a good dramatic film.

Hippodrome.—General-Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. King.—The Johnson-Burns film is adding to the attractions.

OXFORD.—New Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. C. C. Dorrill; Assistant-Manager, Mr G. T. Lucas.—This week we are having a most welcome return visit of Miss Horniman's company, under the direction of Mr. B. Iden Payne. Opening on Monday with Widowers' Houses to a most appreciative house, on Tuesday The Return of the Prodigal was the attraction. In the play Mr. Charles Bibby gave a sterling performance of Samuel Jackson, the irate parent of the prodigal; Mr. Lewis Casson was highly successful as the priggish and unpleasant brother Henry Jackson; Mr. Basil Dean made us all in love with the prodigal and worthless son Eustace Jackson; and Sir John Faringford, Doctor Glaisher, and the Rev. Cyril Platt all found most capable exponents in Messrs. Jules Shaw, Edward Landor, and Leonard Mudie; while the Baines of Mr. Henry Austin was a well-thought-out and finished performance. Miss Ada King well realised the part of the weak and frail mother Mrs. Jackson; Miss May Saber was a charming wholesome English girl as Violet Jackson, Miss Sybil Thorndike was well suited as the proud Lady Faringford; while her daughter Stella was played in most delightful and taking fashion by Miss Hilda Bruce Potter. The Return of the Prodigal was preceded by Bringing it Home, played in a finished style by the company. The plays billed for the rest of the week are The Silver Box, When the Devil was Ill, Cupid and the Styx, and the ever-popular Candida. The company keeps up its excellent reputation, and the plays could not be more cordially received.

East Oxford Theatre.—Lessees, East Oxford Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Stuart.—Mr. Frank J. Pitt's company is here with A Victim of Villany. Mr. Frank J. Pitt impersonates the hero, Frank Manton, with due restraint, and Mr. H. Creagh Hunt is smart as the villain, Stephen Cavanagh; Mr. Fred Carroll is entertaining as Tom Leckie; Mr. John Campling does well as Walter Lennox; and Mr. Frank Dallas is diverting as Patrick Maloney; Mr. Wilson Roberts is successful as Dick Carson. Miss Olive M. Pitt makes a bright Norah Maloney; Miss Florence Halton sustains Alice Cavanagh very creditably; Miss Dollie Lester makes the most of Eric; and Miss Katheryne Eckart gives a capital and sympathetic rendering of Mary Manton.

PAISLEY.—Paisley Theatre.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—Miss Adria Hill and Mr. Robert Ayrton's company is here this week, three nights being devoted to each of the plays A Gambler's Daughter and The Woman from Russia.

Hippodrome.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. Stead.—Harry Dent and Fanny Harris, in their mystic musical comedietta The Indian Bottle, top the bill here, and have made a great hit; Frank Elliston and company, which includes Miss Nellie Stevens and Mr. Richard Oliver, present in powerful style the romantic comedy episode My Lady Betty; Willie Garvey, comedian, a prime favourite here, is very diverting; Arthur Croxon, mimetic comedian, supplies an entertaining turn; the Dancing Gilberts contribute a smart and novel dancing act; Queenie May scores with her latest successes; Poole and Maguire, vocal comedy duo, are deservedly applauded; Julian Ross, light comedian, is excellent; and up-to-date pictures are shown on the Bioscope.

PEMBROKE DOCK.—Queen's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Tom Barger; Business-Manager, Mr. Norman Barger.—Animated pictures on the Bargerscope are again the attraction here.

PERTH.—Perth Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Aldridge.—Her Marriage Vow is being performed here this week by a powerful company, headed by Miss Lillian Herries, who submits a fine piece of acting as Kate Walters. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles as Ned Benton is capital; Mr. Edward L. Garside makes a thorough villain in a quiet but masterful way; Mr. Vincent Wardle cleverly plays the part of Daffy Dan; and the comical parts are in the capable hands of Miss Effie D. Crawford as Maggie Clair and Mr. Owen Remonde as Larry Leary. Miss Grace Garside as Almira, Miss Nellie Shirley as Hester Morton, Mr. Wilford Bailey as Eben Chubb, Mr. Chauncy Morris as Jim Burke, and Mr. R. Carthew as Jenks are all good.

PETERBOROUGH.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Winter; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Watson.—Mr. Lewis Waller's company, under the direction of Mr. F. Clive Ross, is appearing here in Robin Hood. Mr. Ethelbert Edwards, who is well suited in the title-rôle, scores a great success; as King Richard Mr. J. N. Briant displays ability; Prince John is capably handled by Mr. H. Elliot Ball; Mr. Ernest Grays plays with success in the part of FitzAlwynne; Mr. F. Clive Ross is seen to advantage as John Little; the Abbot of Jorvaux is in the capable hands of Mr. Lambert Plummer; Mr. Ralph Leon as Tracy is well chosen for the part; Miss Cahill wins approval as Lady Marion; Miss Roberta Pulleyne as Eleanor is worthy of praise; and Miss Madge Devereux is all that can be desired as Alison.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fred Karno and A. H. Edwards; Manager, Mr. Percy Hart.—Horace Pollack and company in Hester's Mystery are topping the bill here; A. G. Uno, comedian, on his first visit to Peterborough, has a good reception; and McAskell, comedy talking conjurer, Robert's sporting dog act, Cyril Dane, light comedian, Macintosh and Royal, speciality singers and dancers, the King's College Boys, and the pictures, complete a capital programme.

PLYMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—The Girl Who Wrecked His Home is again drawing large crowds to the popular parts of the house. Miss Louise Hampton as Bertha Marshall performs the part excellently; Mr. Edward Thane as Leonard Kenyon furnishes an excellent rendering of a part requiring great delicacy of treatment; Mr. Fred Goddard is a manly Jack Marshall; Mr. Francis Hope is smart as the somewhat advanced Juvenile Tommy Biffin, and Mr. George P. Lester is very realistic as the beer taster Joss Crocket; Miss Winifred Whyte is a good exponent of the villainous Val Raymond.

Palace of Varieties.—Manager, Mr. Jack Field.—Mr. Edwin Boyde is starred and fully sustains his well-established reputation; Wee Mona Vivian proves very popular, her representation of a Gibson Girl being clever; the Bros. Ford furnish a skilfully daring turn; Fred Vallance supplies some original ventriloquial business in a sketch The New Orderly; F. A. Martell is an accomplished equilibrist, balancing himself on his finger-tips, and Lucy Gillett is a smart juggler and conjurer; Hampton and Baunor, coloured duettists, and the Three Orleans, dancers, also contribute.

PONTYCYMMER.—Bodie's Hippodrome and Opera House.—Sole Proprietor, Dr. Bodie; General-Manager, Mr. T. N. Mills.—Mr. Ernest Abbot this week presents The Mariners of England, and on Monday night a good house was enthusiastic in its appreciation. Mr. Abbot plays the principal rôle of Lord Nelson in a most realistic manner, and his dramatic portrayal of the death scene earns well-deserved applause. Miss Ada Abbot makes a charming heroine, evincing sympathy and feeling. Much appreciated comedy is provided by Mr. Edwin Keene, and excellent support is rendered by Mr. Bonhate Wilson, and the rest of the company. The scenery and dresses are distinctly good and tasteful.

PORTH.—Palace.—Proprietors, Poole's Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. C. W. Poole; Manager, Mr. Walter Bynorth.—Topping an excellent bill here this week we have Jan Rudenyi in The Power of Music, whose violin playing is immensely appreciated; the Sisters Desmond, character duettists; the Vanderbilts in their song scenas; the Indiana Troupe of lady acrobats; Khan and Khan, illusionists; Dunning, a clever ventriloquist; W. G. Webber, the Lancashire Basso; the Maros, quaint triple bar performers; and pictures of the Burns v. Johnson fight are other attractions.

PORTSMOUTH.—Theatre Royal.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Bell.—Miss Lena Ashwell's company is here with Diana of Dobson's, the play being excellently performed throughout. The title-rôle is in the capable hands of Miss Emelie Polini; the rôle of Captain Victor Bretherton is well developed by Mr. Leslie Rea; Sir Jabez Grindley has a capital exponent in Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce; Mrs. Pringle, Mrs. Cantelupe, and Mrs. White-Fraser receive effective impersonation from Misses Daisy England, Ada Palmer, and G. de Serville. The Bishop's Candlesticks afforded scope for some fine acting by Mr. W. Kingsford Pearce (the Bishop), Mr. J. Benedick Butler (the Convict), and Miss Daisy England (Persine).

Prince's.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. J. W. Boughton; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Agate.—Arthur Shirley's exciting play Her Life in London is this week being presented by Mr. Stanley Carlton and company, the telling situations being developed with marked effect. A robust impersonation of Rev. Allen Gordon is given by Mr. Stanley Carlton; Astra Bell is exceedingly well played by Miss Maud Rubie, whose benefit was fixed for Friday, with A Secret Wedding in the bill.

Empire.—Managing-Director, Capt. E. H. Warren-Wright; Secretary, Mr. W. Pratt.—The foremost turn of an all-round good programme is John Clempert, described as the original Siberian gaol-breaker, who escapes from a water tank securely locked. An amusing sketch, Half-a-Dollar, is enacted by Haines Borthwick and company; a clever cycling balancing act is performed by the Two Woodwards. Carina Sisters, Adah Payne, Fred Barnes, Gertie Lewis, and some capital films from Payne's Biophotoscope find favour.

Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris; Assistant-Manager, Col. F. Roberts.—The largest audience seen here for some time was present on Monday, when Miss Margaret Cooper was the recipient of vociferous applause for her refined singing. Mr. Mark Sheridan on Monday was unfortunately absent, owing to temporary indisposition; the Schiavonys provided an amusing acrobatic entertainment; Mr. Allan Shaw's deft manipulation of cards and coins kept the audience on the qui vive; Will Driscoll, Karr and Kooney, Florry Cooper, and Sisters Ford supplied the comedy-serio portion of the bill; and Slippére, the eightless musician, displayed his talent on the piano and 'cello. Russell's Bioscope attracted attention and pleased.

PRESTON.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, the Executors of the late W. Johnson; Resident-Manager, Mr. Stephen Pritt.—Miss Hook of Holland, presented by Mr. George Dance's principal company, is as popular as ever. Mr. Hook is in the hands of Mr. Fred Wellesley, who gives an excellent portrayal; Mr. Walter Balfour as Captain Adrian Paap sings well, and Mr. Tom Robertson is capable in the small part of Lieutenant de Coop; Mr. George Mudie as Ludwig Schnapps is as breezy as ever; Mr. Frank Crimp possesses a good voice, which is heard to advantage in the songs allotted to him as Bandmaster van Vuyt; the drolleries of Mr. Fred Lyne as Simon Slinks are inimitable, and Miss Gertrude Melville well deserves the applause she receives for her clever and winsome presentation of Sally (Miss Hook). Too much praise cannot be given to Miss Cissie Sephton for her Mina; Miss Tattie Leonard is as bewitching as ever as Gretchen; Miss May Leslie and Miss Dora Woodruffe are both very capable as the old market woman and Thelka.

Prince's Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Sawyer and Woodruff.—Mr. T. Edward Ward is this week presenting The Love of the Princess. Mr. Wilson Coleman gives an excellent account of himself as Prince Conrad; Mr. Ernest E. Imeson is sufficiently repellant as Count Nicholas; Mr. E. H. Dobell as the profligate monarch Josef plays with force; Mr. Beckett Bould and Douglas B. Watson as Lieutenant Orlans and Lieutenant Zaroff are equally good; Mr. Graham Winsford is an impressive Prince Regent of Narava; Mr. Francis Serle is good as Duke Scarfe, and Mr. Edgar Morgan is a capital Boris; Miss Olive Lloyd is to be congratulated on her Lady Irena; as is also Miss Nellie Grahame on her excellent portrayal of Constantia; as Princess Idalia Miss Maisie Hanbury fully deserves the calls she receives.

Royal Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Son; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank E. Burdett.—Cullen and Carthy's pantomime The Babes in the Wood is the particular attraction this week, and included are specialities by the Melbahs (Dolly and Elsie), Les Belles Americaines, Cullen and Carthy, and Bessie Cohen, a bonnie Robin Hood. Miss Ruby Roya is a dainty Maid Marion, and as Bantam Little Cluley is a most grotesque; Mr. Tom Drew is a capital Dame Peggy; Misses Dolly Cullen and Elsie Jordan as the two babes, Reggie and Cissie, are really clever juveniles, their singing and dancing being exceedingly good; as Bill Morgan and Dick Rockyfeller Messrs. Cullen and Carthy succeed in keeping the "pot a-boiling" with their eccentricities; Miss Mollie Edwards is an engaging Fairy Queen, and Mr. Fred Melville is a capital Herne the Hunter; Miss Kitty Kearns as Phyllis, Miss Violet Ray as Marjorie, and Miss Una Ellis as Dorcas are each good in their respective parts; Mr. George Melbah creates considerable mirth as Friar Tuck.

RADCLIFFE.—Grand Opera House.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Santé; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jas. Boothman.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company is here in the production of Mother. Duncan Fairweather has a fine exponent in Mr. J. O. Stewart; Mr. Alex Alexander is good as Frank Rodney; and the villainies of Stephen Carrington are well shown up by Mr. Bartlett Garth; Mr. Evan Roland is worthy of praise as Jasper Randon; and Mr. Roy Gordon does good work as Old Crump; Mr. Teddy Myles deserves a word as Tommy Noblets; Miss Nellie Waddington is a typical Mrs. Fairweather; Miss Grace Stafford is all that can be desired as Polly; and Miss M. Thorne Hallam distinguishes herself as Nellie Fairweather.

RAMSGATE.—Royal Palace Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Ernest Mansell.—Good audiences have again patronised the above theatre twice nightly during the past week, when Mr. Mansell has presented admirably-varied programmes of graphic life-motion pictures. The films are of excellent quality, their steadiness being a marked feature. Acceptable variety turns have been introduced by Ted E. Rose (comedian and dancer) and Miss Maude Evelyn in a répertoire of new American chorus songs. Wednesday night was observed in the town as Territorial night. Mr. Ernest Mansell kindly placed the theatre at the disposal of the committee, formed to organise the event, who enjoyed the patronage of the Lord Lieutenant of Kent (Marquess Camden), the Mayor and Corporation, and other influential residents of the town and district. A splendidly-attractive programme, a feature of which were tableaux, had been arranged, and speeches were delivered by General Sir W. H. Mackinnon, K.C.B., and others. On each evening of next week the well-known drama The Eve of Her Wedding will be presented.

RAWTENSTALL.—Grand Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; General Business-Manager, Mr. A. B. Feather.—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hinton, Travis Green, and Ruth Zillwood's company is here this week with the powerful and exciting drama, Her Fatal Marriage. As Zaco Malletto Mr. Arthur Hinton is powerful; Mr. Norman Tracy is successful as Wilfred Gray; Mr. Gerald Byrne makes a capable Paul, and Mr. Percy Morton Wright an excellent detective. Mr. Frank Brunell displays ability as Peter Pimple; Miss Ruth Zillwood is an imposing Myra Malletto; Miss Lydia Audre is charming as Lily; and Miss Laura Wright is a capital Dolly.

READING.—Royal County Theatre.—Proprietors and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Benton.—A Country Girl in London is being played this week by a capable company, under the direction of Mr. W. V. Garrod, who himself enacts the leading character of Frank Gordon in excellent style. The part of the heroine, Marjorie Hamilton, is well sustained by Miss Bertha Kingston. The plot, which is of great interest throughout, depicts scenes of modern English life.

The Palace.—Managing Director, Mr. G. Howard Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. E. Draco.—The Bros. Wright present an expert and graceful acrobatic turn; the Celestials, a clever comedy quartette, introduce a very funny musical and burlesque medley; the sketch In the Midst of Life, which is of an unusually pathetic and tragic nature, is well acted by Mr. Herbert E. Terry and Miss Jessie Danvers; Monty Walker, the Lancashire comedian, is very droll; George Acre is successful as a comedian and character vocalist; Madoline Rees sings effectively; Shirley and Ransome appear in a comedy and pathetic episode; the Four Netherlands give a smart performance, including a bare-footed dance, and some good pictures are displayed on the Palace Bioscope.

ROCHDALE.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Robinson; General-Manager, Mr. Otto C. Culling; Resident-Manager, Mr. S. Burton.—The boards are occupied this week for the first time with Mr. Herbert Sleath's company in A White Man. The play is finely staged, and holds the audience interested throughout. Mr. Frank Tennant admirably sustains the part of Captain James Wynnegate or Jim Carson; Mr. H. T. Richardson is effective as the Earl of Kerhill; Mr. H. Wilmot Jackson makes the most of Sir John Applegate; and Mr. Wm. Dempsey is all that can be desired as Malcolm Petrie. Mr. R. A. Brandon submits a convincing portrayal of Big Bill; Mr. Henry Hare is a capital Bud Hardy; and Mr. F. Thornton and Mr. Eric Hudson submit lifelike portrayals of Baco White and Tab-y-Wana. Miss Leila Russell skilfully enacts the part of the Dowager Lady Kerhill; and Miss Eleanor May shows ability in the part of Diana, Countess of Kerhill.

Empire.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—George Formby is a comedian with irresistible mirth-provoking abilities; F. W. Purcell's company, in That Brute Simmons, evokes roars of laughter; the Zelovas are clever acrobatic equilibrists; the Sisters Barnes, comediennes and dancers; Rita and Roma, vaudeville entertainers; George Reeve, comedian; Nance Elder, comedienne; Alpho, ventriloquist; and the Empire Bioscope complete an attractive bill of fare.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, The Jackson Family; Business-Manager, Mr. Jno. H. Scotland, who is well received; Bert Woodward, the steeplechasing cyclist; and the American Bioscope.

GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—The stage this week is occupied by Mr. Ian Maclaren's company, in Shakespeare and old English comedy. On Monday the performance was that of Hamlet, Mr. Ian Maclaren giving an impressive interpretation of the title-rôle; Miss Ruby Maclaren displayed sweetness and charm as Ophelia; and Mr. Mathew Boulton distinguished himself as Claudius. These able artists were also seen to advantage in the other Shakespearean plays of the week, which comprised The Merchant of Venice, Othello, Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth, and David Garrick.

WARRINGTON. — ROYAL COURT.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Beecham; General-Manager, Mr. A. M. Loader; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Smiley.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is here with The Christian. Mr. Henry Renouf as the Hon. John Storm is powerful; Miss Doris Gilham as Glory Quayle looks charming and acts admirably; Mr. Oswald Marshall scores repeatedly as Horatio Drake; Mr. George R. Montford is seen to advantage as Lord Robert Ure; and a dignified Father Lamplugh is Mr. Edwin Ling. Mr. C. T. Turpin is good as Archdeacon Wealthy; Mr. Charles Dickens does well as Rosenberg; and an effective Parson Quayle is Mr. Arthur E. Maskell. As Polly Love Miss Margaret Brodie displays much pathos; and as the outspoken Mrs. Callendar Miss Sinna St. Clair scores well; Miss Mima Renouf as Mother Kent makes the most of her opportunities; and a sympathetic Lady Ure is Miss Katherine Maude.

PALACE AND HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Eric Longden.—That smart juvenile, George Wood, scored an immense success here on Monday evening, and his remarkable imitations are very lifelike; the Bouncing Dillons again score; the Seven Wulfrunas supply a comedy speciality act, Fun in a Café; J. W. Rowley's songs and patter gain a firm hold on the house; and Cosgrove and Burns do well; Jack Hayworth is a smart Scotch comedian; and Sybil Montague sings sweetly.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Franco-British Animated Picture Co.; Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Jack Waters.—The Reays on the silver bars head the bill here; Billy Clincy and Dan Clancy are clever dancers; and the Reays, equilibrists; Ena Richards, soubrette; and Bastow and La Comet score in The Lily and the Sunbeam.

WATFORD.—PALACE THEATRE.—Sole Responsible-Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Mason; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Wright.—Hardie and Von Leer's company is drawing large audiences in The Sailor's Wedding, excellently staged and well acted. Messrs. Richard A. Green, Cecil Klein, Harold Weston, Hodgson Taylor, Finch Smiles, Walter Pemberton, Gerald Ford, Harry Reynolds, Miss Laura Hansen, Miss Mary Pemberton, Miss Winifred Pearson, Miss Ciccly Wade, and Miss M. Sadie have met with great favour, and the drama may certainly be set down as the best yet staged here.

WEDNESBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. Harry Battersby.—Mr. Chas. Harrington's company in Uncle Tom's Cabin is proving a most successful attraction here. Mr. Carr, in the rôle of Uncle Tom, gives a sympathetic rendering; as Phineas Fletcher Mr. Chas. Harrington leaves little to be desired; Mr. Geoffrey Broughton's delineation of St. Clair meets with hearty approval; the important part of George Harris is effectively portrayed by Mr. G. Ridgway Thorne; Mr. G. Lubimoff as Legree makes a decided impression; Marks is admirably presented by Mr. John Jackson; Mrs. H. Hathaway ably depicts Eliza Harris; and as Mrs. St. Clair Mrs. May Turner does excellent work. The part of Aunt Ophelia is entrusted to the safekeeping of Miss Ethel Mildmay; and as the ever-mischievous Topsy Miss Annie Watson proves a huge success. Miss Doris Brereton makes a charming Little Eva; and as Cassy Miss Hetty Johnson is warmly applauded.

WEST BROMWICH. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessee, Mr. R. Nightingale.—There is a welcome return visit here this week of the powerful play The Crimes of Paris, which is being admirably produced by Mr. Frank Bateman and Mr. Geo. Conquest's company. The acting is of a high order. Mr. Clavering Craig as Pepin Cardel, the detective, has a part to which he does full justice; the Vicount de Vismes is well portrayed by Mr. Alfred D. Adams; Miss Vera Clavering Craig is very fine as Jacques Martel; Miss Marie Barrett as Angele Martel, Miss Flora Hastings as La Bella Helene, and Miss Chrisie Bickerstaff as Lizette are all exceedingly clever; while the other members of the company give them excellent support.

NEW HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. Tom Kuner.—Mr. C. W. Poole is providing a very excellent entertainment at this place of amusement this week, the bill being headed by Amasis, the Egyptian man of mystery, whose performance is indeed a wonderful one. The Royal Banzias are Japanese jugglers of more than usual ability; the Seven Bramusas, a family of juvenile musicians, give a very clever turn; while Harry Raymond, assisted by his daughter Joy, proves himself a clever comedian and dancer. Willie Dean also provides an enlivening turn; and the eight tableaux depicting Trafalgar are exceptionally good the whole show being remarkably smart.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—GRAND.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Granville; Manager, Mr. H. E. Feather.—A Prodigal Son is here, presented by Mr. George D. Day's company. Mr. Albert Ward gives a masterly and finished portrayal of the character of Oscar Stephenson; a well-studied rendering of the rôle of Magnus is given by Mr. Alfred Goddard; a success is scored by Mr. A. J. Williams as the Pastor; and the part of Stephen Magnusson is capitally played by Mr. Jackson Hayes. As Thora and Elin Miss Dorrie Roberts gives a piece of impressive acting, and Miss Pearla Gardner portrays Helga realistically.

PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—The Cumberlands in their comedy cycling exhibition do some marvellous acrobatic feats, and create considerable amusement; Miss Henriquette Maude is a great favourite here, and her description of her tour round the world is listened to with breathless interest, and warmly applauded; Hicks and Hunter, vocalists and dancers, do a novel pedestal dance on ice skates; a smart and clever exhibition of Diabolo manipulation is given by Master Day; the Four Garricks in song are well received; an amusing comedy turn is provided by Marion Armitage, vocalist; and other attractions are Ted Gill, vocalist, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux.

WEYMOUTH.—PAVILION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. R. Wallis.—Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's company is appearing in Mrs. Dot. Mr. Frank Lacy as James Blenkinsop was capital; Mr. Hugh Kennedy did well as Gerald Halstane; Miss Emma Hutchison was a charming Lady Sellinger; and Miss Nancy Beresford a vivacious Mrs. Dot. Miss Ethel Grahame as Nellie Sellinger and Miss Sybil Brooke as Eliza McGregor were excellent; and Mr. Charles Staite as Freddie Perkins, Mr. Wm. Midgely as Charles, Mr. H. Allistoun Samson as Mr. Rixon, Mr. K. Brandon as Mason, and Mr. Frank Leach as Mr. Wright, were all good in their respective parts.

WIDNES.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. James Kiddie; Secretary, Mr. Tom Swinton.—This week Mr. Kiddie's Cinderella company returns home after a successful tour, and is drawing huge houses. Miss Hettee Gale is a winsome Cinderella; Miss Edie May plays with plenty of dash as the Prince; Miss Lye Jeffereys, a charming Dandini, sings prettily; Mr. Johnnie Groves is most amusing as Maud; and Mr. Harry Bliss as Ethel helps to keep the fun going. Mr. Joe Huda as Pimples is responsible for some clever knockabout work; Mr. Creslie Hawkins is a humorous Baron; Miss N. Riberio is at home in the part of Sunbeam, the fairy. On Friday evening Mr. Kiddie took his annual benefit.

WIGAN.—ROYAL COURT THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—Crowded audiences are attending here to witness Mr. Seymour Hicks' production of The Gay Gordons. Angus Græme finds a talented exponent in Mr. Charles Childersone; Miss Marie West is a vivacious Peggy Quainton; Miss Daisy Burrell a jovial Victoria; Miss Rosa Wynford a dignified Lady Millicent; Charlotte Siddons is depicted excellently by Miss Louie Emery; Miss Tessie D'Albert sings brilliantly as Mary McLeod; and Miss Emily Levetezz leaves nothing to be desired as Janet. Mr. Edward Carlton is eminently successful as Nervy Nat; while Mr. Aubrey Stowell, Mr. Stafford Dickens, and Mr. Cyril Stowell all fill their respective parts in capital style.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, The Wigan Entertainments Co.—The Four Holloways are a clever troupe of trick cyclists; Cestria, a juggler entirely out of the ordinary, does some astounding tumbling; W. Churchill is successful with his songs; and Mlle. Eldee poses in an artistic manner. The Eduns sing pleasantly together; Prof. Charlton mystifies with his conjuring tricks; Madge Brownie dances herself into favour; Tee and Tee give an eccentric musical turn; and Helm and Cozens and Jack Hayton conclude.

THE EMPIRE.—Lessees, The New Bioscope Trading Co.; Manager, Mr. H. C. Woon.—The pictures at this popular place of amusement still maintain their reputation.

WOLVERHAMPTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Charles Barnard; Resident-Manager, Mr. Gerald Spencer.—Despite the inclement weather there was a large house on Monday to welcome Mr. Wentworth Croke's No. 1 company in The Prodigal Son. Chief interest, of course, was centred around the two brothers, Oscar and Magnus, and the opposite nature of their characters was skilfully portrayed by Mr. Gordon Macintosh and Mr. Hugh Montgomery. Mr. Philip Renouf as Oscar Neilson, in acting and make-up, was the Factor to the life; Mr. Bellenden Clarke was very effective as Stephen Magnusson, the Governor; and Mr. Bruce Lindley as Dr. Olsen made a typical family medical man. Miss Mildred Cottell gave a bold and striking performance as Helgar Neilson; Miss Valerie Crespin fully realised the hapless Thora, especially in the second act; Miss Marie Harcourt's method of giving vent to the acid utterances of Margaret Neilson caused much amusement; and Miss Barbara Gott was very successful as Anna Magnusson.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Vivian Evans.—Messrs. Fred Ginnett and Wal Pink's company, in Claude Duval, holds the chief place in the bill this week. Mr. Arthur Max in the title-part not only makes a courteous highwayman, but sings well; Mr. Harry Calver as Lord Leicester plays with ease and dignity; Miss Ray Heydon is a charming Lady Doris; Mr. J. Collinson as Fritz an charming Lady Doris; Mr. J. Collinson as Fritz and Miss Victoria Douglas as Polly cause much amusement; and the horse "Rol" is a marvel of equine sagacity. The Smart Set, on a return visit, are as attractive as ever; Hillman and Russell have a neat little sketch in The Somnambulist, in which they introduce some good singing; the Brothers Roland are splendid specimens of humanity, and perform astounding feats of strength; Willie Gardner elicits rounds of applause with his clever skate-dancing; and Harry Lawson, comedian, and Miss Raie Walters, as the fisher girl, provide acceptable turns. The pictures this week are, if anything, better than ever.

WORCESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. Le Wards.—Mr. Wentworth Croke's company is paying a week's visit in the new version of Hall Caine's The Christian, and is doing good business. The cast is an unusually strong one, and the play as presented is most convincing. The story of John Storm's life has been little altered in the revision, and his association with Glory Quayle remains much the same. Mr. Roy Redgrave gives a realistic impersonation of John Storm, a part which he makes very human by reason of its unconventionality. Miss Daisy Scudamore achieves a like measure of success as Glory Quayle, rising fully to the demands of the part in the more dramatic scenes. Mr. Herbert Hewetson's Lord Robert Ure is a finished impersonation; and Mr. Wilfred Noy is well suited as Horatio Drake; Miss Cora Deane proves herself a resourceful Polly Love; and Mrs. Callender is admirably presented by Miss Molly Hayden. The part of Father Lamplugh is safely entrusted to Mr. Thos. Barry; and Mr. John J. Hooker as the Archdeacon contributes considerably to the success of the production. The numerous minor parts are satisfactorily filled.

WORKINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. McKenzie Morgan.—The pictures here include the King's Recent Visit to Berlin. The variety is contributed by Marquis and Truly, Sid Archer, and Albert Lawrence.

OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Stanley Rogers; Acting-Manager, Mr. Falconer Jackes.—Rubie and Elsie Redfern have paid a welcome return visit; Mr. J. C. Scatter, a Tyneside comedian, is also good; and the pictures are interesting.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. J. Scott.—The attractions this week are the Dunlops, in their comedy knockabout bicycle and skating act; the Roxbys, who gave a unique performance on three legs, entitled The Old Man's Garden; Miss Kitty Willis, a smart comedienne; Edgar Cook an amusing illusionist; and Miss Lillian Sivado, aerial artist. The pictures are excellent.

YORK.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessees, Messrs. Waddington; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. J. Dacre.—Mr. Wm. Maclaren and Miss Lily C. Bandmann have been appearing in Claudian to large audiences. Mr. Maclaren's rendition of the title-rôle loses nothing of its force by repetition, and he has been well received; Miss Bandmann Palmer's Almida is a womanly impersonation, natural to a degree; Mr. Bernard Elliott, in the disagreeable rôle of the Tetrarch, plays in forcible style; and much light humour is judiciously introduced by Mr Ch. T. Chaloner are Belos and Miss Ruth Trafford as Edesca. The play is sumptuously mounted.

OPERA HOUSE AND EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Miss Nellie Wallace is amusing her admirers this week with her quaint sayings; Luna Love is a comedienne with a very taking style; Mona Garrick is an impersonator with an original style; Roxborough and Wright give an amusing sketch successfully; Aeronauts and company also produce a sketch; Hunter and Maris are applauded for their efforts; the Musical Tritons are genuinely clever; and the Sisters Lavender complete the bill.

AMUSEMENTS IN BOMBAY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BOMBAY, FEB. 19.—BANDMANN'S THEATRE.—Carter, the marvellous American magician, paid a return visit to Bombay after his tour of India, en route for Egypt. Needless to say, after the wonderful business done on the previous occasion, packed houses could only be expected. The great feature of his show are the clean American witty sayings with which he invariably accompanies each and every trick, and which completely captivated the hearts of the Bombay public. Miss Abigail Price, who assisted him in his thought-reading entertainment, proved a wonderful draw, and many of her answers have been absolutely correct in every detail. We could do with many more shows of this type in India. The opera company opens here next week, and the bookings show the visit will be a successful one.

THE merit of the "Green Room Book" for 1909 is best described in Mr. Beerbohm Tree's introduction to it, which runs as follows:—"I have always felt a certain diffidence in giving my testimony to the worth of any work. Indeed, I do not remember ever having given a testimonial save one, and that was to this effect: 'It adds a new terror to life and makes death a long felt want.' You will therefore appreciate that in my present brief tribute I am animated solely by a genuine appreciation of the useful work which is rendered by the 'Green Room Book.' It should certainly be on the table of every manager, and of all other persons interested in the affairs of the theatre in this kingdom. I know that in His Majesty's Theatre the 'Green Room Book' is referred to almost daily, and proves an indispensable work of reference. With complete confidence I commend the fourth issue of the 'Green Room Book.'" We can only say "ditto" to Mr. Tree. A list of dramatic and musical deaths extending over 350 years, and containing nearly 2,000 names, has been added, and also 250 biographical notices of artists, authors, and managers of the French and German stages; and the print and binding of the work are admirable.

THE Clarendon Hall, Watford, hitherto the centre of the majority of touring companies visiting the town, has been sold to the local Territorials, subject to the War Office sanction.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

ART IN THE THEATRE.

We have received from Mr. J. D. Rider, of 36, St. Martin's-court, a recent number of The Mask, which contains a most thoughtful and able article by Mr. Gordon Craig on "Plays and Playwrights, Pictures and Painters in the Theatre." In the course of his argument he says:—

"Let us take the whole front row of the London pit, consisting of twenty people.

"Ask them the reason why they have come to the theatre. Five reply, 'I come to see Mr. —— act.' Three reply, 'It is such a great play, I like to hear it so much.' Two giggle and reply, 'We don't know why we come, but we think it is such fun.' Two are there from a sense of duty both to the actors or the play, and to the audience; and the other eight will give us several elaborate and conflicting reasons for their presence.

"One will say, that it is the extraordinary sense of the impossible, the grim absurdity of the whole thing, which fascinates him (excellent judge!).

"The second will tell you that after having spent the day among dull and matter of fact people, it is quite interesting to find a body of people who will sit still while actors and scenery are pretending on the stage.

"Then there is the third, the critical man; one who having read how Edmond Kean illuminated Shakespeare by sudden flashes of genius, and that the Kemble family were of the 'classical' school, and that Charles Fechter was a romantic actor, and having read a history of the stage which skips over the first couple of thousand years in two pages and only begins to go into detail when it comes to the Shakespearean era, this man will be there, because somehow he feels that the thing would be incomplete without him; he is one of the men who know—has he not read all about it?

"Then next to him is sitting a young lady, who, with the intelligence which is natural in her sex, is ready to see all that is there and more (or less), if required; and yet indeed she leans towards the 'more' and is ever the champion of the 'more' when she finds it.

"Next to her sits the grumbler, one who goes to a theatre because he must, and who, I believe, is always the one who is most deeply moved by what he sees. Yet when the curtain is once down he will tell you that was not the way to do it at all. 'Why,' he says, 'the actors are so many sticks; nothing real about them.' He draws our attention to the flapping scenery and grumbles about the incidental music which he says spoils the effect; and he detests all those flashing lights, which, he says, spoil the illusion. But what illusion is destroyed he is totally unable to define. The rest of the row say that it is very nice indeed, and they all applaud heartily, while he continues to grunt and mumble and keeps on repeating that 'that isn't the way to do it.'

"And so we see that very nearly each single man or woman is come there for a different purpose, sees the thing in a different light, and composes what we can term an 'audience'; that is to say, a single idea; that audience which the actor always looks on as one man, and which we must accept as the 'ideal spectator.'

"One thing is irrefutable. They cannot keep away from the theatre. And another thing which we must admit is this: that out of the twenty, fifteen have come to see something. I will even go so far as to say that the entire twenty have come to see something; because the first on our list, the first five who came to hear Shakespeare more or less admit that they came to see it performed, for had they wished they could have joined the many thousands who sit at home and read it silently, and in this way hear it in their mind's ear with all its amazing and wonderful accompaniment; or joined those who read it together in societies.

"So we can say somewhat surely that all have come to see the play. This desire is as fierce as any in the nature of man. Only when seeing does a man thoroughly believe. There are innumerable proofs of this, and many will occur to you at this moment without my mentioning them. So now; it is reasonable to ask that that which the people desire and go to the theatre to find, should be given to them.

"They go to see something; they should be shown it. Only by showing them will they be satisfied. Therefore I hold that properly to satisfy their eye, and through that their being, we should not confuse them or confuse their sense of sight which is most delicate, by pounding at the same time at their ears with music or with words, nor by attacking their minds with problems and shaking their bodies with passions."

The number also contains an erudite and interesting essay on the "Architecture and Costume of Shakespeare's Greek Plays" by E. W. Godwin.

THE cause of the "Great Unacted" is to be taken up by the Unacted Authors' Association, under whose auspices a meeting will be held in the Green Salon of the Eustace Miles Restaurant, Chandos-street, Charing Cross, on Monday, at 5 p.m. The business of the meeting is to elect officers, readers, committees, and formulate the rules of the society. All authors will be welcomed.

Waterman's Ideal FountainPen

ON its "first appearance"

some five-and-twenty years ago, Waterman's Ideal made an "instantaneous hit;" in fact its success was at once assured. Since then, Waterman's Ideal has appeared in every important city and town in the world, and its performance has given unbounded pleasure to millions of people of almost every nation and tongue. Waterman's Ideal has won its way by sheer merit alone.

LONDON & SUBURBAN THEATRES.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, March 8, the Farce-Comedy by Charles Marlowe, entitled

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD."

Very prolonged laughter was heard at the King's on Monday evening, when Mr. James Welch and company appeared in this funniest of comedies. The dream experiences of that very modern young man Sir Guy de Vere, as he encounters all his friends and adherents in the "good old times" were all wittily illustrated and thoroughly enjoyed by a crowded audience. The part of Sir Guy de Vere fits Mr. Welch's style of humour like the proverbial glove, and he succeeds admirably in inducing hearty laughter; Mr. Arthur Grenville renders Isaac Isaacson very capably and with much dramatic effect; as the Hon. Charles Widdicombe Mr. Henry J. Ford is capital, the inanity of the character being well sustained; Mr. Guy Lane makes an able Rev. Peter Pottleberry, and Sir Brian Ballymote is well played by Mr. Cecil Kinnaird. Wittle is intelligently depicted by Mr. George F. Tully, and Barker amusingly represented by Mr. Gordon Tomkins; the Lady Rowena Eggington of Miss Audrey Ford is a clever and charming performance, for which she receives much praise; the Ladies Millicent and Marjorie Eggington are delightfully rendered by Miss Maev O'Hea and Miss Doris Marshall; Kate Pottleberry finds a bright personage in Miss Amy Broadwood, and Miss Annie Chippendale is an animated Alice Barker; Miss Daisy Cordell gives a striking representation of Sarah Isaacson, which is generally approved, and Miss Helen Palgrave undertakes the Hon Mrs. Waldegrave with every distinction; Mr. Leopold Profeit is a dignified Herald. The chorus is effective, and the scenery and properties are the subjects of much admiration.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

Messrs. W. H. Hallatt and Walter Howard's Her Love Against the World company, which has been winning golden opinions in the provinces, is at the Marlborough Theatre this week, and its performances of the popular play have been received with hearty enthusiasm. As Eric, Earl of Strathmere, Mr. Howard acts with an elevation and power which completely enthral his hearers. Miss Grace Heywood as Princess Idalia wins all hearts by her exquisitely pathetic portrayal, and as Prince Ulric Mr. Lewis Gilbert endows the character with force, vigour, and cruel resolution. Nello is portrayed by Miss Rossie St. John very simply and sweetly, and Mr. W. H. Hallatt as Prince Othmar is admirably genial and manly. Mr. Fred Emery as Prince Maurice and Mr. A. E. Cushman as General Geseler supply good renderings of those rôles. Mr. Victor Rowland does well as Sergeant Kaspar; Miss Blanche Steele is successful as the Countess Shulah; and Miss Gertie Reid (Katinke), Miss Hettie Ferguson (Gretchen), Mr. Henry B. Lewis (Heinrich), and Mr. John Mill (Fritz) create roars of laughter by their vivid comicalities. Mr. Charles R. Hann and Mr. John Chesson as Prince Maurice's leading officers do well, and Mr. A. H. Hallatt makes the most of the Surgeon-Captain. The company is excellent all round, and the performance of the play which it gives is well worthy of the striking success achieved by it.

CORONET THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8, the Play, entitled

"THE THIEF."

Mr. George Alexander's company is appearing in this powerful piece. The company has been carefully selected and rehearsed by the actor-manager himself, and the same scenery, furniture, and accessories are used as at the St. James's Theatre formerly. Mr. Rupert Lister plays the part of Richard Chelford with naturalness and conviction, and he aptly portrays the agony of mind and the fierce desire to learn the truth, however unpalatable it may be, and the intensely virile and human, though honest and manly nature of the man. Miss Marie Polini's style is admirably adapted to the part of Marise Chelford. Mr. Owen Nares is admirable as Harry Leyton, his face, manner, attitudes, and demeanour being all effective. Mr. Cyril Harcourt acts with much feeling and natural pathos as his distracted parent, Raymond Leyton, and Miss Frances Leighton is exceedingly pretty and sweetly sympathetic as Isabel Leyton. Mr. Luke Forster (the stage-manager) is duly impressive as the detective, "Mr. Protheroe," alias Garratt, and Mr. Bernard Stevens essays a small part of a servant, besides assisting in the stage-management.

The Thief is preceded by The Nursery Governess, a most amusing curtain-raiser. Miss Eileen Kerin is a delightful Mrs. Trent, and Mr. Charles King wins all hearts, including his nearly-divorced wife's, by his admirable embodiment of Captain Trent. Mr. Luke Forster is vastly entertaining as Mr. Simpson Brigg.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8,

"THE PASSING OF THE THIRD FLOOR BACK."

Mr. Jerome K. Jerome's delightful play The Passing of the Third Floor Back, in which Mr. Forbes Robertson displays his fine qualities of rare human sympathy, has been presented at Kennington Theatre this week, and has drawn huge houses nightly. The audiences have been keenly responsive to the spirit of the play. The Passing of the Third Floor Back is faultlessly produced, and Mr. Forbes-Robertson's company contains many artists of merit, so that Mr. Jerome's masterpiece is seen under the best possible conditions. Mr. Robertson's beautiful performance of the Stranger has gained rather than lost since the first production. Nothing could be more reverent or free from offence than his handling of the part, to which he brings a dignity which cannot fail to leave its impress on the minds of all who see it. The acting all round is on a high level. Miss Gertrude Elliott as the servant is intensely effective. It is a vivid bit of stage portraiture and equal to the best she has yet done. Miss Amy Brandon Thomas is a glorious Vivian—beautiful, clever, and happily placed. She makes a big hit with a not easy rôle. Mr. Ian Robertson furnishes a lively and interesting study of the retired military officer as Major Tompkins, and is a great favourite with the house; Miss Keith Lytton is really great as Mrs. Percy de Hooley, the snob; and Mr. David Powell is effective as Christopher Penny, Vivian's lover. Miss Kate Carlyon presents a cleverly-drawn sketch of Mrs. Tompkins; Miss Haidee Wright scores a big triumph by her brilliant interpretation of the caustic-tongued Miss Kite; Mr. Ernest Hendrie deserves warm praise for the able manner in which he enacts the part of Joey Knight, the bookmaker; Mr. Edward Sass is very fine as Samuels, the Jewish financier; Mr. Wilfrid Forster is full of high spirits as Harry Larkcom; while Miss Agnes Thomas displays histrionic talent of a high order by her delineation of the character of Mrs. Sharp, the landlady.

The piece is preceded by A Play in Little, in which opportunity is given for Miss Ulcely Bareham to win high encomiums as Marianne, the supposed daughter of a fencing-master.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, March 8, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled

"A NOBLE BROTHER."

This concise and well-written drama is chiefly remarkable for the wonderful impersonation of Jerry the tramp, which has been given now by Mr. Charles Carte for upwards of 2,000 nights. There are few, if any, actors who could play this part with greater effect than Mr. Carte does, for he does not simply act it—he lives it; and not for many a long day have the West Londoners shown such a keen interest in any character put before them. Mr. Burton Ford made the most of his opportunities as Jack Elsworth; Mr. Howard Thorne lent dignity to the rôle of Colonel Leigh; whilst Mr. Frank Plumes enacted Henry Travers with easy indifference. Miss Jenny Braydon was a motherly Mrs. Leigh; Miss Winnie Rose was pert and piquant as Rosie Rapid; Miss N. Faithful did well as Clare Flaurence; and Miss Ethel Faithful enacted Nana Leigh in a particularly tender yet withal forceful way, in addition to which she sang two pretty ballads very sweetly. The play was preceded by Ward Bailey's new sketch entitled The Bandit's Blunder, a notice of which appears in another column.

ELEPHANT AND CASTLE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8, the Drama, entitled

"A GIRL'S CROSS ROADS."

After ten weeks of pantomime, the dramatic season at this house reopened on Monday with Mr. Walter Melville's production of A Girl's Cross Roads. This strong domestic drama with a moral was presented by a well-chosen company. Mr. Harry Cane gave an admirable character study as the old farmer, John Meadows, and Miss Nita Langford submitted an impressive portrayal of the farmer's daughter, Nellie Meadows, who "took the wrong road." Mr. H. J. Butler was her unscrupulous companion, Cuthbert Lumley; Mr. Norman B. Cannon supplied a very natural impersonation of the sorely-tried Jack Livingstone, "the man who married the wrong girl." Miss Muriel Dean is to be complimented upon a very fine study as the young schoolmistress, Constance Cornell. Her elocution was perfect, and her delivery of the long speech in the third scene of the drama was an admirable piece of work. Miss Hilda Beverley acted in a powerful and convincing manner as Barbara Wade, whose terrible craving for brandy drags her down to the gutter, and eventually causes her death. Mr. Fred Hodson as Toby Turvey and Miss Jeannie Thomas as Tilly Vane were responsible for the comedy element, supplying some very amusing situations throughout. The minor characters were all well enacted, and the drama was well staged. Mr. Sydney Barnard, the genial manager, promises some very excellent dramatic attractions during the season. The Bioscope pictures are much appreciated.

THE SHAKESPEARE, CLAPHAM.

On Monday, March 8, the Drama, in Four Acts, entitled

"TRUE TO THE QUEEN."

The above military drama, from the pen of E. A. Elton, fills the bill at the Shakespeare Theatre this week. Founded on the late Boer war, the play opens with the degradation of Captain Gerald Pierpoint, who has had the misfortune to lose certain dispatches entrusted to his care, and which were stolen by General de Berg, a Boer Commandant, with the cognisance of Pierpoint's superior officer, Colonel L'Estrange. Pierpoint is sentenced to be shot, but, with the aid of his soldier servant, Kennedy, contrives to escape, and eventually rejoins the Army as a private soldier. In the meantime, Col. L'Estrange forces his attentions on Pierpoint's wife. Believing her to be unfaithful, Pierpoint seeks his wife to demand an explanation, but is discovered and denounced by L'Estrange. At this juncture De Berg, who has been hiding in the house, makes his appearance, and in a fit of remorse confesses the truth, and the curtain falls with the arrest of L'Estrange and the re-union of Pierpoint, restored to his original rank, and his wife. Mr. Alexander Loftus as the unfortunate Gerald Pierpoint contributes an energetic and powerful impersonation; Mr. J. K. Walton submits an effective portrayal of General de Berg; and an earnest and convincing embodiment of the villainous Colonel L'Estrange is given by Mr. Vernon Sansbury. Mr. Arthur Rodnay is satisfactory as General Holmes, and Mr. Johnny Schofield, jun., renders good support as Lieut. Courtenay; Tom Kennedy is played in humorous style by Mr. Whimsical Walker, and Mr. Harry Collier as Corporal Brice is also efficient. Miss Lena Flowerdew gives a natural representation of the sorely-tried Rose Pierpoint, and is accorded sympathetic applause; Miss Violet Esmund acts brightly as Ivy, and Miss Marian Vynes is a pleasing Hetty.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8, the Musical Comedy,

"THE GAY GORDONS."

There was no doubt as to the success of Mr. Seymour Hicks's production at this theatre, for it went with a roar from start to finish, and Mr. J. Bannister Howard is to be congratulated on another excellent engagement. Mr. Frank Lincoln was at high pressure throughout as Angus Graeme, the Highland soldier, and his witticisms and asides had an air of spontaneity which gave an added zest to their rendering. As Nervy Nat Mr. Tom Graves let himself go completely, and his grotesque get-up and bland behaviour made his agreeable fooling doubly comic. When he donned the kilts the laughter became loud and long. In direct contrast was the inane bearing of Mr. Edward Nainby, who represented the son of the last-named character, and who obtained his effects by quaint and original acting. Andrew Quainton, the American millionaire, was quietly and naturally acted by Mr. Ernest Ruston; and Mr. Norman Forrest as Corporal John Smith was useful in the development of the story. Miss Dorothy Giles had plenty to do as the heroine, Peggy Quainton, and appeared to take a genuine pleasure in her work. She had many songs, both grave and gay, and for each and all she obtained lavish applause and many encores. Miss Mabel Dent gave much point to the part of Victoria Siddons, the show-girl, her song about the Cockney-Italian organ-grinder being perhaps her best effort. As Charlotte Siddons Miss Ida Laurie did not spare herself either in her make-up or acting, and was really very funny as the showman's wife. Miss Emily Mellon as Janet McLeod supplied almost the only bit of pathos in the piece, and Miss Gwynneth Hughes was sweet and bright as Mary, her daughter. Mr. Buchanan Wake represented the Scotch solicitor, Archibald Speedy, in an unexceptionable manner; and there was a quintette of titled sportsmen well enacted by Messrs. Mervyn Dene (with a song), Melville Florence, J. Cranston Neville, W. Terriss, and J. Austin Green. Mr. Charles Tyers made a meteoric appearance as one Jack McPhrisky, an inflamed Scot, whose dancing and general antics caused roars of laughter. An assembly of extra ladies gracefully adorned the "garb of old Gaul" and other handsome and appropriate dresses, and, with the special scenery and augmented orchestra, lent efficient aid to a most praiseworthy production.

NEW LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, March 8, the Drama, by Lilian Clare Cassidy, entitled,

"IN HOLY RUSSIA."

Mr. Wentworth Croke still continues his attractive list of bookings at the popular Hammersmith playhouse, the entertainment this week being supplied by Mr. J. Rice Cassidy's well-known company in a couple of dramas quite dissimilar in character but equally alluring in their appeal to a popular audience. On Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday was presented In Holy Russia, a sensational and well-written drama, which has attained much success in the provinces and at the outlying London theatres. The company responsible for the production is an excellent one throughout, the all-important and exacting character of Renée Rubinoff being cleverly enacted by Mrs. J. Rice Cassidy. In the first act, where Renée is seen as an escaped captive from the salt mines, Mrs. Cassidy graphically depicted the sufferings and privations of the plucky girl; and her acting in the succeeding scenes, where she passes as a fascinating American lady and the wife of various personages in the play in order to enter Russia, enabled her to display her undoubted gifts as a versatile and finished actress, her performance throughout being one of much merit. Colonel Richard Forrest, of the Guards, who befriends the heroine, has a convincing and natural representative in Mr. Henry Compton, especially effective being the scene at the end of the second act, where the Colonel, partially intoxicated, attempts to make love to Renée. Count Gregori Petrolski, "the people's friend," has an earnest and quite satisfactory representative in Mr. Rolf Leslie; and Mr. Geo. H. Doyle as Laurice Steragoff, a Nihilist leader, who chafes under the restraint imposed upon him by Petrolski, acted with spirit and conviction, his delivery of his lines being marked by much fervour and effectiveness. Mr. St. George Frere as the villainous Captain of the Russian Guard, Michael Natolski, left no doubt as to his sinister intentions; and the cruel and crafty Chief of the Russian Police, Baron Von Pleve, was quite satisfactorily enacted by Mr. Carl Beechey. The humour of the piece rested largely in the hands of Mr. J. Rice Cassidy as the Irish servant of Colonel Forrest, Mickey Nolan, and his performance throughout was responsible for much merriment, particularly humorous being his business in the railway scene. Miss Amy McNeill as the spy in the pay of the Russian police, Catska Lavotski, played with the aplomb and finish one expects from so experienced an actress; and the numerous other parts all had excellent representatives. The special scenery and properties by Harry Masterman and Robert Goulden added considerably to the effectiveness of the production, which was evidently exactly to the tastes of the audience in the night of our visit. A notice of The World and the Woman, which was played on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, appears in another column.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8, the Musical Play,

"THE CINGALEE."

Mr. Haldane Crichton's company, in the musical play The Cingalee, is meeting with a very good reception at the Dalston Theatre this week. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Ivey, accompany both solo and concerted pieces admirably. Mr. Alan Turner as the Hon. Harry Vereker has a part admirably suited to his style, and his rendering of the song "My Cingalee" is encored. Vanoya is played by Miss Molly Wolstenhulme, who becomes quite a favourite with the audience. Perhaps the prettiest song in the piece, "My Cinnamon tree," falls to the lot of Miss Wolstenhulme, who is encouraged by a determined encore. Generally speaking, her impersonation of the character is pleasing. Mr. Jack Crichton is responsible for a good deal of laughter by his quaint enactment of the part of Chambhuddy Ram, a Baboo lawyer, and his scenes with Peggy Sabine, a part artistically played by Miss Alice Nixon, are most amusing. Their duets, "I'll make a fuss of you" and "The Golliwog," go remarkably well, specially aided by Mr. Crichton's eccentric antics. Another decidedly interesting couple in the piece are Mr. Scot Cullen as Bobby Warren and Miss Pauline Hague as Lady Patrica Vane, and the scene between them while they are compiling a paragraph for the society papers, which culminates in an announcement of a forthcoming fashionable marriage, is excellent. Mr. Douglas Munro is well received as Boobhamba, a noble of Candy, and a topical song which falls to his lot has the inevitable number of encore verses. Mr. F. W. Ford is decidedly humorous as Sir Peter Loftus, High Commissioner and Judge, and the variety of moods which he attributes to "the climate" are as ingenious as quaintly expressed. Others included in the cast are Mr. Harry E. Ray, Mr. E. Trichler, Miss G. Somerset, and Miss Mercy June.

THEATRE ROYAL, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, March 8, the Drama, entitled

"THROUGH THE DIVORCE COURT."

Messrs. Chattel and Denton's company is giving this week a highly-satisfactory representation of Max Goldberg's drama Through the Divorce Court, which is meeting with appreciation and proving itself attractive to the patrons of this house. The interest of the play, centring in the tribulations of a Spanish lady, who is wed to an English peer, offers an opportunity for the introduction of well-assumed foreign characters, and some contrasty scenic effects, the play throughout being well mounted. Mr. Cecil A. Cotton has a good stage appearance, takes advantage of his opportunities, and supplies a capital portraiture of the jealous nobleman, Lord Robert Penarth; Miss Katherine Carew as the accused though innocent wife, Lady Dolores Penarth, sustains the rôle with delicacy and feeling, and submits a pathetic rendering; Sybil is capably undertaken by Miss Genna Lyndon, who displays much ability; Mr. C. H. Matthews has a finished delivery, and scores highly as Guzman Di Mendoza; Mr. Malcolm Strachan stands out prominently in the character of Leon Di Voldiz; Mr. Jack Denton creates much laughter as Algy Fitzmaurice, and is well received; Mr. Edward Beecher as Mr. Peter Pettigrew, K.C., merits commendation for a capable study; Mr. W. Wilson Blake gives a good delineation of the part of Sir Edward Sharp, K.C., and Mr. Horace Hammond is equally successful as Sir Philip March; Patsy Rafferty is amusingly portrayed by Mr. Harry Colbeck; Mr. Walter Crompton is suitably placed as the Usher; Miss Pattie Groves attains distinction in the character of Rachael Dobbins; Miss Edith Cruikshank gives a careful rendering of Lady Hilda Fitzmaurice; and Miss Nellie Sheffield imbues the part of Dinah with much humour.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, March 8, the Comedy by W. Somerset Maugham,

"MRS. DOT."

Miss May Palfrey and her company in W. Somerset Maugham's witty comedy Mrs. Dot had a very cordial welcome at the Stratford Borough Theatre on Monday. The scenic effects are very handsome and appropriate, and the dressing is quite on the high standard required. Much interest is evoked in Miss May Palfrey's performance in the name-part, and Mrs. Dot is depicted by her with such charming coquetry and vivacity, allied to such an artistic touch, that Miss Palfrey's success is unbounded. Mr. F. Kinsey Peile as the cynically humorous bachelor James Bleakinsop plays in fluent and polished style; and Mr. Hugh C. Buckler as the chivalrous Gerald Halstone acts with buoyancy and looks the part well. Mr. A. W. Tomlinson (in the absence of Mr. Basil Hallam) undertook on Monday night the part of the self-esteemed, easy-going Freddie Perkins, and made a decided hit. Miss Evelyn Kerry is very dainty and charming as Nellie Sellinger; Lady Sellinger is very appropriately played by Miss Emily Patterson; and Miss Annie Hill presents a natural portraiture of Miss Eliza Macgregor. Charles is well depicted by Mr. A. McIntire Wicksteed; and Mr. A. E. Ackerman as Mr. Wright, Mr. T. Richards as Mason, and Mr. C. Morgan as George satisfactorily account for their respective parts. Mrs. Dot was followed by the one-act piece by "An Englishman," played for the first time in London, and entitled

"THE MYSTERY OF REDWOOD GRANGE."

Mr. Wilkins .....Mr. Weedon Grossmith
Coachman .....Mr. H. C. Buckler

This piece serves the purpose of introducing that clever actor Mr. Weedon Grossmith in the predominating part of a one-act play. Mr. Wilkins is one of those who believes in "trying before buying," and as the prospective tenant of Redwood Grange he is "trying" it. He arrives on an awfully tempestuous night, minus "his man," who has got delayed, and sitting at a table with but one lamp to light the spacious room he jocularly discusses with the coachman who has driven him from the station, over "something to keep the cold out," his excellent fortune in getting such a fine place for such an insignificant rent. And then he learns the reason of the bargain: Why the daily papers took such an interest in Merrydale Farm—or Redwood Grange, as it was previously called; why the pantry was particularly pictured; what the cross in the corner meant—not "where the band played," as the coachman grimly remarked as he narrated. And as Wilkins listens to the story of the old man who was murdered by burglars, and whose ghost now walks at night, his sang-froid gradually oozes away. But what to do? The last train is gone, and on no account will the coachman stop the night. Left alone, the unhappy Wilkins fortifies himself with liquid refreshment and prepares to sit the night through. Then commences the most weird sounds, and suddenly a door opens in most uncanny style, while to crown all, footsteps and a distinct rapping are afterwards heard. This is too much for Wilkins, and he fairly collapses. But the next moment his fear is changed to joy, for it is only his overdue servant, and quickly regaining his imperturbability he explains away his previous fright, and even remarks that the old gent carrying the light in the pantry, whom the servant had seen, is only the caretaker. Nevertheless, the curtain falls on Wilkins strongly resolved to return to London next morning. Mr. Grossmith is splendidly suited as Wilkins, and has a rousing reception at the conclusion of the playlet. He is rendered valuable aid by Mr. Hugh C. Buckler as the Coachman.

FULHAM THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8, the Play, by Wilson Barrett, entitled

"THE SIGN OF THE CROSS."

Mr. W. Greet has organised a capital company to tour with that old favourite The Sign of the Cross, which still retains a large measure of its popularity. Mr. Cyril Austin Lee makes an excellent representative of Marcus Superbus, and plays with fine power, aided by a remarkably fine presence and dignity of manner. Mr. C. Yorke contributes a clever study of that extraordinary character the Emperor Nero, and Mr. Charles Aldred acts with fine restraint and force as the sinister Tigellinus, to whom Mr. J. Weatherall as the bluff and soldierly Licinius makes an effective contrast. Mr. F. Wood makes the most of the humorous eccentricities of Glabrio, and Mr. Harry Jones does well as the effeminate Philodemus. Mr. H. Thurston Harris plays strongly as the spy, Servilius, and Mr. Ernest Duggan supports him ably as Strabo. Mr. G. W. Rutt ably fills in the part of Virturius. Miss Beryl Hamilton does very well in the comparatively small part that falls to Poppœa, and Miss Mary Newcombe acts with spirit as Ancaria; Miss Cissy Carlton is appropriately spiteful and scandalous as Dacia, while Miss Lily Ward is to be commended for her work as Berenice. She shows rare dramatic power in this study of a love-sick, jealous, and revengeful woman. Miss Edith Drayson did well in the trying part of the boy, Stephanus, and Messrs. Fleet, Blunden, and Chapman played with dignity as the Christians. Miss Constance Little filled the rôle of Marcia with considerable success, and her work was well received. The piece is well staged and dressed, and the performance all round does credit to the management.

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, March 8, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Hall Caine and Louis N. Parker, entitled

"PETE."

Messrs. Smith and Carpenter's company, who are presenting Pete to a London suburban audience this week, will have no reason to complain of their visit to the Brixton Theatre, for that establishment has been well filled every night up to the time of the penning of these lines, and we doubt not that the latter part of the week will prove even more profitable to the company and the theatre management. Mr. Frank E. Petley is enacting the title-rôle, and no one can possibly find fault with his interpretation. His sturdy frame is well suited to the character, and he is manly and sincere throughout. Miss Helena Millais is quite successful as Kate Cregeen. With convincing earnestness she portrays the heart-rending pathos of the many unhappy situations into which the poor young wife and mother is forced by circumstances. One felt that the emotion, stirring as it did many of the audience to tears on the night of our visit, was never exaggerated—a fact that means high praise for so youthful an actress as Miss Millais. Such a study in tragedy would be a great strain upon a more experienced artist than Miss Millais, and she is, therefore, all the more deserving of commendation for her remarkably able effort. Mr. Arthur Burne is entrusted with the difficult part of Philip Christian, and his embodiment of the selfish, worldly-minded lawyer, who lives only to fulfil the ambitions suggested by his vanity, is, on the whole, a creditable performance. Mr. Frank Stone furnishes a capital representation of the severe, uncharitable, and puritanical Cæsar Cregeen; and Mr. Kenneth Brampton as Ross Christian and Mr. E. H. Clarke as Black Tom submitted able portraitures. The part of Grannie is quite an interesting enactment in the hands of Miss Gertrude Price; and Mr. Charles Lake is most effective as William; while Miss Lucy Murray is amusing as Nancy. Of course, it need hardly be said that the scenery is all that can be desired, and the piece is presented in a manner quite worthy of the reputation that Messrs. Smith and Carpenter have now gained for themselves and their productions.

TRIAL PRODUCTIONS CLUB.

A further batch of trial turns was submitted to judgment at the Rehearsal Theatre, Maiden-lane, on Tuesday afternoon, with but little result in the way of exceptional talent. Only seven items were listed, and of these one failed to put in an appearance. The most favourable impression was made by Miss Lisa Coleman, a young lady with the comedy gift well developed, who delivered a couple of monologues about a French mademoiselle with unfailing vivacity. A captivating appearance was made by Doland's Nine Taxi Girls, who have the distinction of including among their number the winner of a recent beauty competition. No means of identification was supplied, and speculation as to which was the fortunate maiden among the comely group who occupied the stage was general. They sang and danced individually and collectively, and won cordial applause. Mr. C. Preston Wynne in songs at the piano displayed a pleasing voice and an agreeable method of playing, but neither of his three songs overflowed with humour, the most definite claim to that quality being made by his "coster carol," "She ought ter be a duchess," which, however, the vocalist was unable to finish owing to temporary loss of voice. Miss Maie Hoey, who was included in last week's programme, again appeared in picturesque Spanish dances, her agile movements arousing admiration. Mr. Oswald Battye displayed a sense of drollery in a couple of songs, one of which, entitled "Morals," is founded on a good idea. The trials, we understand, are now to be discontinued until later in the year.

Mr. Allan Wilkie staged on Monday for the first time his new set for the opening scene of The Merchant of Venice. It is a beautiful specimen of the scene-painter's art, and the audience at the Opera House, St. Helens, was not slow in manifesting its approval.

The authoress of The World and the Woman—originally produced at the Palace Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on May 11, 1908—has had considerable experience as a writer for the stage, and her latest play is an excellent specimen of the drama beloved by a popular audience, containing as it does an abundance of telling lines and exciting situations, leavened, of course, with plenty of laughable comedy business. The "woman" of the title, whom the "world" treats somewhat unjustly at times, is Nelly, an orphan, in the care of Terry O'Harris, an "honest thief." She meets and falls in love with Arthur Burleigh, heir of Lord Hartington; but their subsequent marriage is kept secret from the aged peer. The villain who compasses their unhappiness is Ludlow Burleigh, Arthur's cousin and next-of-kin, and the lovers are parted. Nelly eventually becomes a famous singer in London, and some twelve years later we see her in the grotto of a West-end gambling club. She and her child Nina have been befriended by the good-natured but impecunious Tut Harding, who apparently has squandered all the money made by his father, known as the "Jam King." Tut hints to Nellie, now famous in London as the Great Dorien, that the companions she is cultivating are a disreputable lot; but Nellie, who rebels against the aloofness and sneering remarks of society, is inclined to be reckless. Tut, who evidently has a fondness for the unhappy Dorien, suggests that they shall go away together; but the lady quickly convinces him that neither of them are really in love with each other. When she has gone Tut contemplates suicide, but the arrival of Nina, a precocious and lovable youngster, soon has a cheering effect on him, and the pistol is thrown aside. Arthur, now Lord Hartington, comes on the scene, as does also Lady Marion Chalmers, a drunken and dissolute creature, whom, we learn, also owes her downfall to Ludlow. In the last act (Dorien's Flat in St. John's Wood) Lord Hartington, who had previously met and taken a liking to Nina, not knowing she is is own daughter, calls to ask Dorien if she will allow him to adopt the child. Although her identity is unknown to him, she recognises Lord Hartington, and refuses his request. Eventually, of course, things are straightened out, the lovers are reunited, and the infamous scoundrel Ludlow told that he must quit the country. A shot is heard off, so it is to be presumed that he sees the game is up, and commits suicide.

Mrs. Rice Cassidy again distinguishes herself in this piece by her adroit handling of the difficult rôle of Nelly, the varying phases of this complex character and the many changes from gay to grave and vice versa being managed with a facility and realism which entitle her to warm praise. Particularly effective was her management of the scene with Tut Harding in the club grotto, and in the concluding episodes of the play she also displayed dramatic gifts of no mean order, her performance throughout being a very meritorious one. Mr. Cassidy as the impecunious Tut Harding had many opportunities for scoring, especially well managed and very humorous being his business with the burglars in the "Spotted Dog," where the latter, after rifling the "safe," encounters a tough customer in the son of the Jam King. His share of the scene with Dorien also deserves mention, and his embodiment of the good-natured, chivalrous spendthrift was altogether a most entertaining one, and very popular with the audience. Mr. George H. Doyle was impressive and earnest as the man of sorrow, Lord Hartington, the incident in the Haunted Gallery of Hartington Towers with his little daughter Nina being naturally enacted; and Mr. St. George Frere as the sneaking and scoundrelly Ludlow Burleigh, portrayed that unthankful rôle in a convincing and careful manner. Mr. Rolf Leslie as Terry O'Harris and Mr. Henry Compton as Sir Francis Chalmers submitted sound and finished portraits; Miss Amy McNeill as Lady Chalmers was painfully realistic in the scene where the drink-sodden woman is brought into the club, and submitted a well-thought-out and skilfully enacted performance throughout; Miss Madge Trevelyan contributed a clever and humorous little study of the Yorkshire slavey, Libby; and as the child Nina Miss Violet Parker is entitled to praise for an interesting, natural portrayal. The many other parts were all capably undertaken, and the piece was well mounted and dressed.

DEATH OF MR. FRED COULSON.

With deep regret we record the death of Mr. Robert Frederick Coulson, co-lessee of the Theatre Royal, North Shields, which took place at his residence, 9, Sydenham-terrace, South Shields, on the 5th inst. The deceased gentleman had been in ill-health for some time, and a few days ago serious symptoms set in, which ended fatally. The deceased, who was a native of North Shields, served his time with his father, Alderman Thomas Coulson, as a builder, and afterwards became acting-manager at the Royal for his uncle, the late Mr. L. M. Snowdon, at whose death he and his brother John took over the lesseeship of the Royal, which position they have held ever since. Deceased, who was in his thirty-sixth year, was well known in the harbour boroughs, and was highly respected. He leaves a widow, but no family.

The funeral took place on Monday at Presten Cemetery, North Shields, and was attended by a large gathering of personal friends, besides many representatives of the Masonic lodges in North and South Shields. The principal mourners were Alderman T. Coulson (father), Mr. John Coulson, Mr. W. Coulson, and Mr. T. T. Coulson (brothers), Mr. C. McKay, Mr. Atchison, Mr. D. Snowdon, and Mr. T. Snowdon (cousins), and Mr. Robert Coulson (uncle). The services in the church and at the graveside were conducted by the Rev. W. L. Cunningham, vicar of St. Augustin's, North Shields. At the close the Masonic brethren sang "Days and moments quickly flying," and the usual Masonic refrain. Sprays of acacia were then deposited upon the coffin. Wreaths were sent by Mrs. Fred Coulson (widow), Alderman Coulson and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Coulson, lady staff Theatre Royal, stage staff Theatre Royal, orchestra staff Theatre Royal, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. Thompson (Empire Palace), staff Empire Palace, Alderman T. D. Marshall, Councillor Wm. Johnston and family, Dr. and Mrs. Ord, Mr. J. R. Bell (Seamen's Union), and others.

Mr. Editor.—Sir,—In your eulogistic notice of my performance of Eliza in The Dairymaids at the Opera House, Stockport, last week you refer to me as Edie Morton. It should have been—Yours truly, Edie Martin. Theatre Royal, Ashton-under-Lyne, March 10.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association, held at 353, Strand, on Tuesday, there were present: Mr. Robson Paige, in the chair; Mr. H. W. Mote, Honorary Solicitor; Messrs. Gilbert Esmond, Hayden Coffin, Jackson Wilcox, Sebastian Smith, F. J. Arlton, Miss Rose Mathews, and Mr. Hubert Blount, secretary.

The Secretary read a letter from Kenneth Blackmore as to meetings and debates which the Actors' Union are holding every Tuesday, and inviting members of the A.A. to attend same, and the Secretary received instructions to put Mr. Blackmore's letter on the board; also a letter from Miss E. Alcock asking for an introduction to a hospital at Ventnor, and received instructions to refer her to the Actors' Benevolent Fund.

The Council discussed the question of a doctor's inclusion on the consulting staff of hon. medical officers, and the council asked Mr. Paige whether he would kindly call on the doctor and inform him that his name had been put on the list in error, and report this to the Council at the next meeting, and Mr. Paige consented to do so.

The Chairman read a letter from a member with reference to another member who had been struck off, and the Secretary received instructions to write to the member to the effect that owing to a resolution having been passed striking off those members who have not paid their last year's subscription, and in view of the bye-law to the effect that members who have not paid their subscriptions within 70 days will be struck off, they are unable to include this gentleman's name on the list of members. The chairman also read a letter from Mr. Langford Reed with reference to the Entertainment Committee and the work done by the Council, which letter was handed to Miss Mathews, a member of the Entertainment Committee, and the Secretary received instructions to write to Mr. Reed telling him that his letter will be placed before the Entertainment Committee.

The following nomination was made:—Dorothy Rundell, proposer Cecil Raleigh, seconder Lucy Sibley.

The following new members were elected:—Nancy Blackwood, proposed by Mildred Surrey, seconded by Arthur Davis; Thomas Fairbairn, proposed by Charles Magrath, seconded by Agnes Imlay; and Frederick Hill, proposed by J. Poole Kirkwood, seconded by Robson Paige.

On behalf of Mr. Wilcox, Mr. Smith asked the Council to elect a new member on the Correction Committee in place of Miss Imlay, and the Secretary received instructions to write to Mr. Reed asking whether he would be willing to serve.

The Council discussed the question of propaganda in Manchester, and the Secretary received instructions to write to Mr. Casson and Mr. Derwent as follows:—"The Council are delighted with the suggestion of holding propaganda meetings in Manchester, and they have such a complete confidence in them that they give their consent to hold meetings, provided that no expense is incurred; if any outlay is required, they would wish to be consulted beforehand."

ACTORS' UNION.

Mr. Henry Bedford presided at the usual weekly meeting of the Actors' Union held on Tuesday at Hummums' Hotel. Amongst those present were Messrs. A. George Fry, Walter L. Rignold, Langford Reed, George Goodwin, Fred Chesham, Watty Brunton, Frank Gerald, Charles R. Stone, James Skea, J. W. Braithwaite, Ernest Cole, Monte Maitland, Claude Haviland, Alfred Beaumont, Frank Harvey, Ruddle Brown, and Lewin Mannering; and Mesdames May Conrade, Kitty Marion, Bessie Bedford, Leslie Warner, Ena Rozant, Florence Tresilian, Marie Clavering, Dorothy Sparrow, Carina Macallister, Nelly Howitt, Ruby Lingard, Molly Haydon, Mildred Silvestre, Florence Creagh, A. Beckwith, Madeleine Maude, Lottie Cunningham Gordon, Betty Rylot, Nora Delany.

The Chairman, in his opening remarks, read the aims and objects for the benefit of the non-members present, and then called upon Mr. Walter L. Rignold to read a paper upon Actors' Organisation.

Mr. Rignold, in the course of his remarks, said: I think I might say that this Union has, from the first, done everything in its power to bring about a working agreement or an amalgamation with the Actors' Association, and an amicable understanding with every other Association connected with our profession. We were certainly the first to bring forward the minimum wage and the revised form of contract, and we are still most anxious to bring about an amalgamation with the Actors' Association, and hope shortly to make a certain proposition to them. In forming this Union, the founders adopted trades union principles, and registered us as a trade union. They did this because the experience of other societies showed that trades unionism was the most effective method to follow. Nobody can deny that trades unionism has done more to improve the conditions of the wage earners of this country than any other form of organisation. Many actors have objected, and do object to our form of organisation, but their reason appears to be, not so much a dislike to trades unionism, but a belief that it is not suited to our profession. It is argued that ours is an art, and that we are degrading ourselves and our art by joining a movement that includes navvies, labourers, and so so. That seems to me to be a weak argument. The success of our Union depends entirely upon the soundness of our organisation, and even if our progress is but slow, yet it is better to be quite sure of every step we take. If all the various organisations connected with the stage would adopt the same methods and come together and agree upon some common working basis on all matters of general interest, then we should soon become a very powerful organisation. Our club scheme should do much to bring the members of the various societies together and make them know and appreciate each other. We all want the same thing, we want to improve the stage in every aspect. We want to help the manager to give a good show and draw good houses, so that he will be able to give us better engagements. We want to perfect our organisation so that the humblest in our ranks may earn his or her living under happier and more prosperous conditions than he or she does at the present time."

In the debate which followed several members spoke on the subject.

Mr. Langford Reed then addressed the meeting in reference to the proposed cricket club, and the following were elected as the committee:—Misses May Conrade, Nellie Howitt, Messrs. A. George Fry, Fred Chesham, Watty Brunton, Frank Harvey, Monte Maitland, Langford Reed, and Walter L. Rignold.

Mr. Reed was elected hon. secretary and Mr. Walter L. Rignold hon. treasurer. At a subsequent committee meeting of the above committee the subscriptions for membership of the club were fixed at follows:—Member for full season, 5s.; Member for half season (to play in six matches only), 2s. 6d.; Non-playing members, 1s. The colours will be the Actors' Union blue. All communications with reference to the club must be addressed to the Hon. Secretary at 49, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

DAVENPORT, who acquired a considerable fortune with a good character, asked Foote for a motto for his coach. "Latin or English?" asked the wit. "Poh! English, to be sure; I don't want to set up for a scholar. "Then I have got one from Hamlet that will match you to a button-hole; 'List! list! oh, list!'"

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MR. HERBERT LAWRENCE.

An aspiring young actor who is coming into prominence as a player of boy parts is Mr. Herbert Lawrence, a native of Liverpool. Having studied singing and elocution under the tuition of Mr. Calder O'Beirne, who holds a high reputation for the production of Irish plays, and having a thorough musical training under the direction of Mr. Walter Bridson, at present organist of the Liverpool Cathedral, together with the advantage of a youthful and pleasing presence, Mr. Lawrence may be said to be fairly well equipped for a successful career. He first acquired a taste for his calling through enrolling as a member of amateur dramatic societies, namely those of Mr. Calder O'Beirne and Mr. Gerald Ransley, both at present being run successfully in Liverpool. Mr. Lawrence played various parts in these companies, including characters in such plays as East Lynne, Shaughraun, Octoroon, and The Boys of Wicklow. The last mentioned performance will ever remain in the memory of Mr. Lawrence, who had the unpleasantness of being howled down by a body of people known as "The Gaelic League," whose objection to certain scenes in Irish plays has more than once been manifested. Rather discouraged by the unkindness of which he was the object, Mr. Lawrence turned his attention to professional work.

His first venture on the boards was in the variety business in a sketch, entitled Mischievous Marcus. He played an Eton boy part, which allowed him scope for female impersonation, and he toured successfully for many months. Mr. Lawrence's first engagement on the legitimate stage was as Dick in Little Lord Fauntleroy under the management of Mr. Will Dennis, who is at present playing in the same piece at the Court. An opportunity to create a star boy part came with the production by Mr. George S. King, manager of the Metropole Theatre, Devonport, of

MR. HERBERT LAWRENCE.

His Love for Her Love, and Mr. Lawrence was the recipient of many kind congratulations. Following this engagement he played small parts in A Bunch of Violets, with Mr. Harold B. Neilson, and David Garrick with Mr. Will Dennis.

Mr. Lawrence intends going into sketch work again with a novelty from his own pen, he finding the variety business rather more profitable.

While on tour Mr. Lawrence finds his time fully occupied, as he devotes a great deal of his attention to music, enjoys a good game of golf, and is a keen cyclist.

MISS MARJORIE MURRAY.

Although little over nineteen, Miss Marjorie Murray has a good and honourable record of theatrical work. She was nine years old when she appeared as the child Cissie Denver in The Silver King, under the management of the late Austin Melford and G. M. Polini. She played this part close upon a thousand times, and while in the same engagement recited, at the mature age of ten, "The Absent-minded Beggar," by means of which she collected over £100 for the South African War funds. Before she was thirteen Miss Murray played the boy Stephanus in The Sign of the Cross, in Mr. William Greet's touring company. An inevitable school period followed, but before her sixteenth birthday she was again in harness, playing the leading part, Alice Faulkner, in Charles Frohman's Sherlock Holmes company. "I felt quite an important little person then," she asserts, "for I was the youngest leading lady in this country." Miss Murray sustained this part for some months, and then appeared as the ingénue, Claire Berton, upon the initial tour of Leah Kleschna. She was then engaged by Mr. Brandon Thomas to play Ela Delahay in Charley's Aunt, with the genial and kindly author as Sir Francis. From this typically feminine character Marjorie Murray jumped into the shoes—or, rather, as the ragged little fellow does not possess shoes—right into the skin of Dick in The Two Little Vagabonds. Now came an ordeal for Miss Murray, for she had to create the leading part in Mrs. Oscar Beringer's play, The Agitator, at the Hicks Theatre. She came through with flying colours—manager, Press, and public were unanimous in approval—and Miss Murray found she had leapt into London fame. In a letter to her Mr. J. M. Barrie said: "Having seen you, I believe in your future," and Miss Ethel Irving wrote: "I have heard so much about your charming talent, and the great sensation your acting has made." At the conclusion of the season at the Hicks Theatre Miss Murray left Mr. Charles Frohman to fulfil a special suburban engagement with Mr. Louis Calvert, as Sunday in the play of that name. Whilst appearing as Sunday in the early autumn of last year, Miss Murray was secured by Messrs. Smith and Carpenter, of the Lyceum Theatre, and will star under their management this year as Kate Cregeen in Pete on tour.

MISS MARJORIE MURRAY AS SUNDAY.

MISS CISSIE THOMPSON.

Although still young, Miss Cissie Thompson has already six years' stage experience to her credit, and, like most other artists starting at the foot of the ladder, encountered plenty of the rough before coming to the smooth. Her first essay before the footlights was in a sketch on the halls, and for about two years she went from one sketch to another, playing various minor parts. During this time she had many ups and downs. On one occasion in particular the sketch company was stranded in Barrow-in-Furness, and to raise enough money to get out of the town a small schoolroom at Askham, some six or eight miles away, was chartered for the day, and here a matinée and evening performance were given. Quite a respectable entertainment was got together, all the members of the sketch doing a single turn besides performing in the piece. Miss Thompson was deputed to take the tickets at the main entrance, while another lady member of the company was shouting at the highest pitch of her voice, "Walk up! walk up! this way to the early doors!" The result was that quite a nice little sum of money was taken, though economy had to be practised, the company walking back to Barrow in the early hours of the morning. A pantomime engagement followed, after which Miss Thompson was with Mr. Frank Curzon's and Mr. Lockwood's musical comedy companies for two years, and latterly she played the comedy part of Daisy in Sergeant Brue with considerable success. Another pantomime engagement followed, this time with Mr. Charles Constant's Bluebeard company, which had a record run of six months. This engagement was destined to prove a fortunate one for Miss Thompson, for on the closing night at Ryde Mr. Frank Macnaghten, who happened to be in the stalls, was so struck by her performance that he immediately offered her his tour of ten weeks. The engagement started with only a break of a week, and Miss Thompson often wonders how she managed to be ready in so short a time, as she had to get new dresses and learn new songs, &c. Despite the rush, however, she opened successfully, and did exceptionally well all through the tour. Since then Miss Thompson has booked or already played every tour of note, including the Moss and Stoll, Syndicate, and Gibbons' tours, and she is in the happy condition of possessing a date-book well filled up to 1911. She had some very good offers for pantomime both last year and this, but was unable to accept them owing to her music hall bookings; she hopes, however, to be seen in a big pantomime production before long. Miss Thompson attributes her success on the halls to her voice, which is considered good—a clear delivery, which is particularly essential in singing catchy song—and a plentiful supply of pretty dresses.

MISS MADGE BROWNIE.

Miss Madge Brownie does not come of a theatrical stock, she and her sister being the only members of the family who have appeared before the footlights. The subject of this sketch was born in Glasgow, and commenced her stage career in that city at the early age of nine. Her first appearance was with the Brescian Family of High-class Entertainers—really a concert party—and she played with them "off and on" for about two years. Mr. Ernest Stevens gave her the part of Allen Gordon in Bonnie Scotland, which was the means of her first appearance on the dramatic stage. She played Mignon in Bootles' Baby, Little Willie in East Lynne, and several other children's parts in different plays. Mr. E. H. Bostock engaged her for two seasons in the children's pantomime, in which she played Cinderella. After this she joined Mr. Charles Majilton's company, playing light and low comedy parts for two years. During the pantomime season 1906-7 she enacted Semalina, one of the ugly sisters in Cinderella, at Dundee, subsequently joining Mr. Dickie Clare's Lucky 'Liza company, in which she sustained the title-rôle for a very long period. She was appearing as 'Liza, which, by the way, is Miss Brownie's favourite part, at His Majesty's Theatre, Carlisle, when she was engaged for Messrs. Stevens and Buchanan's pantomimes as principal girl, and opened as the Fair One with the Golden Locks at the Theatre Royal, York, a tour following. Last Christmas she sustained the same part under the same management at the Grand Theatre, Hull. Miss Brownie is again taking up variety business, and has a number of dates booked as a "dainty comedy artist," working Dutch, coon, and other speciality songs and dances.

MISS MADGE BROWNIE.

MRS. ELLEN MAY.

The votes and interest of Freemasons are being solicited for Mrs. Ellen May for the May election for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Widows of Freemasons. Mrs. May is sixty-eight years of age, and is residing at 368, Camden-road, N. She is the widow of the late W. Bro. Samuel May, theatrical costumier, of Bow-street, W.C., who was initiated in the Temple Lodge No. 101 on Nov. 4, 1862, and remained a subscribing member till his death in 1876. He was also a member of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780, the Globe Lodge, No. 23, the Lewis Lodge, No. 1185, and the Grand Stewards' Lodge. He was also P.Z. of a Masonic chapter. The late Bro. May was life governor of all the institutions, and acted as steward on many occasions. The applicant also is a life governor of the boys' schools. Votes are respectfully solicited, and will be duly ackrowledged if sent to Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

A brother Mason sends us the following testimony as to the deserving nature of the above case:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

"SIR,—In your last issue you appealed to your readers for their votes in support of Mrs. Ellen May, widow of the late Samuel May, costumier, Bow-street, and it occurred to me that the younger generation of the members of the allied professions would not know who Sam May was. Permit me, through your columns, to inform them that the late Sam May possessed one of the greatest of Masonic charms—benevolence—in its fullest sense; and, in the old stock days, many an actor would have been unable to have reached the town for which he was engaged had it not been for poor 'Sam' putting his hand in his pocket and supplying the 'needful.'—Yours faithfully,

THE attraction at the Theatre Royal, Barnsley, this week is Mr. Walter Melville's four-act drama The Soldier's Wedding. Mr. Wingold Lawrence as Jack Brown acts with marked success; Mr. Beresford Whitcomb as Colonel James Graham is good; Mr. Johnny Chippendale as Tommy Spratt and Miss Mallee Everett as Lizzie Walker provide much amusement in their respective comedy parts; the villain, Charles Courtney, is well portrayed by Mr. Gerald Jordan; Miss Marie McAulay as Julie de Beauvrais is effective; Little Albert as Teddy Munroe is good; Mr. Frederick Biron as David Munroe gives a finished performance. Praise must be given to Miss Dorothy Richardson for her portrayal of Nancy Lee. The minor parts are in capable hands.

Adela Ray ..... MISS HILDA THORPE
Theresa ..... MISS MAUDI DARRELL

It has been our very unpleasant duty of late to pass censure upon several new pieces which have been produced on Sunday evenings, and we confess that we had rather looked forward to an agreeable few hours when we learned from the invitation ticket that Miss Florence Warden would "present" Miss Maudi Darrell (by kind permission of Mr. Tom B. Davis) in a new modern comedy in four acts, entitled The Case for the Lady. Miss Warden has a sound reputation as a novelist; she has done good work in the field of fiction—in book and magazine form—but, judging by Sunday's production, it can scarcely be said that her fiction for the stage is likely to find general favour. Sunday "congregations" at theatrical presentations are the most complacent and easily-satisfied of all classes of playgoers, but even Miss Warden's audience made no call for "author," although they did bestow applause upon the actors and actresses in the cast. But Miss Warden possesses no small measure of literary ability, and it may be that she may yet give to us a satisfactory dramatic work. If she should again attempt anything in this direction, we wish her all success with it.

The Case for the Lady is weak in construction and weak in dialogue, and it would fail to interest an ordinary audience. The story it tells is inconclusive and unconvincing. The aged Sir Willoughby Ray is married to the young, pretty, and vicacious Theresa. Sir Willoughby's cousin, Fabian Ray, who has the reputation of being a rake, had known Theresa on the Continent as a sprightly dancer, who then bore the name of Tilly Townley, and who had even appeared in tights. Sir Willoughby regards her as an innocent creature who knows nothing of the world and its wicked ways, and apparently it is Fabian's intention—the reason of which seems scarcely logical—when he now meets Theresa as the wife of his uncle to inform the latter as to her past life. But he does nothing of the kind, and it would be scarcely compatible with the character of a rake that such a proposal should, in the first place, suggest itself to him. There is, however, a malicious cad in the person of Gerald Tomlin, who makes an improper suggestion to Theresa, and he threatens to unfold her history to Sir Willoughby. Another worthy who is not averse from a bit of scandal is the elderly Horace Greene, who has noticed that Theresa is rather fond of the company of Fabian. So a ruse is planned by Mr. Greene with the object of opening Sir Willoughby's eyes, and the latter gentleman returns in a very hasty and unexpected manner from a motor ride to find his wife embracing Fabian, who indignantly repudiates the charge levelled at him that he was making love to the girl, but afterwards repents, becomes brave, and says that he was—thus taking the blame upon his own shoulders. However, in the concluding act, Theresa tells the truth as to her past, is forgiven and taken back to the heart of Sir Willoughby, and Fabian is accepted by the very charming woman (Peggy Waldershare) he really loves.

Chief honours in the acting fell to Mr. Athol Stewart for his interpretation of the outspoken and, after all, fairly clear-headed Fabian Ray. There was a certain fascination in the picture Miss Maudi Darrell presented of the lively and perhaps not too ladylike Theresa; and Mr. Stanley Lathbury furnished a satisfactory character-study of the jealous old man in love, Sir Willoughby Ray; while a word of commendation is due to Miss Hilda Thorpe for her very pleasing presentment of the quiet and dignified Adela Ray. Miss Florence Leclercq was a delightful and sympathetic Peggy Waldershare.

ACTORS' GOLF.

A match was played on the links of the Ashford Manor Club on Thursday between teams representing the London Press and the George Edwardes Golfing Societies. Play was by singles and foursomes, and scoring in the singles was on the principle of one point for each match and a quarter of a point for the bye, providing three or more holes had to be played. In the foursomes two points were counted for each match and half a point for the bye. The Press finished the morning round with a lead of 8½ points to 7½, and, winning the foursomes by 8 to 7, they gained the victory on the day's play by 16½ points to 14½. Appended are the scores:—

"THE BELLE OF BRITTANY" will terminate its run at the Queen's Theatre on Saturday.

THE proprietors of Condy's Fluid of 65, Goswell-road, London, E.C., are posting to all applicants, free of charge, a most useful little booklet entitled "Ailments of Animals, and How to Cure Them," which contains instructions by a large number of eminent veterinary surgeons for the treatment and cure of ailments affecting horses, dogs, cage birds, &c. Many actors and actresses who are interested in animals will be glad to write for this little veterinary book to Condy's Fluid Factory, 65, Goswell-road, London, E.C. No charge is made for the book or for the postage.

"WHEN IT WAS COLD."

This week When It Was Dark has been played at the Opera House, Buxton. The above photograph shows what matters climatic resembled. Snow lay on the ground to a depth of 18in., and several persons were conveyed to the Opera House on sleighs. What the members of the company felt can hardly be realised.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree, we are glad to learn, is now quite recovered from his recent indisposition, and is appearing nightly in The Dancing Girl. Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's play is drawing crowded audiences to His Majesty's. Mr. Tree's revival of The School for Scandal, with an exceptional cast, is provisionally fixed for April 10.

Miss Ellaline Terriss, to whose generosity the establishment of several soup kitchens in the poor districts of London is due, went on a tour of inspection to several of the centres on Thursday. The popular actress arrived at the Latimer-road Mission, Notting Hill, just before dinner, and received a rousing welcome from the assembled youngsters. Miss Terriss presided at the table, and during the meal chatted in her own engaging way with many of her little guests, by whom she seemed to be regarded as a real fairy. Nearly 7,000 poor children are being fed weekly at the ten centres, and since the kitchens have been in operation over 20,000 youngsters have been able to enjoy good, nourishing soup, meat, and bread.

Mr. Seymour Hicks is from this afternoon taking up the title-rôle in The Dashing Little Duke for the Saturday matinée, at the Hicks Theatre, in order to relieve Miss Ellaline Terriss, who finds the strain of two performances in one day excessive. Mr. Hicks will thus be resuming a part he created ten years ago in A Court Scandal, from which the present piece was adapted. Mr. Hicks and Mr. Leslie Stuart, by the way, have arranged to collaborate in a musical play, the book of which will be adapted from the American comedy, The Dictator, by Mr. Richard Harding Davis. The work, which will be produced by Mr. Hicks in May, will in no way interfere with Mr. Leslie Stuart's contract to write the next two pieces for the Gaiety Theatre.

Mr. George Alexander will read Stephen Phillips' poetical play Paolo and Francesca, at the St. James's Theatre to-morrow at four o'clock, on the invitation of the Council of the Sunday Lecture Society. The reading will be accompanied by Percy Pitt's original music, rendered by the St. James's Theatre orchestra, conducted by Mr. William Robins. Mr. Alexander will be pleased to see his professional friends on this occasion. Only a limited number of seats are available, and as there will not be sufficient time to send tickets by post, applications should be made personally at the box-office at the St. James's Theatre any time between 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. to-day.

Mr. H. B. Irving writes to the Daily Telegraph: "Under the above heading, in your issue of to-day, you report a case heard before Mr. Plowden, at Marylebone, in which a person giving the name of Joseph Thompson was charged with being drunk and disorderly. He described himself as an actor, and in answer to the magistrate, he is reported to have said, 'I take a small part; I finished up with Mr. H. B. Irving last Saturday,' whereupon, after some remarks from the Bench, he was discharged with a caution. Will you permit me to state that no one of this name is, or ever was, a member of my company? Of course, it is impossible to prevent those who have no right to the title from describing themselves in police-courts as actors or actresses, but such a state of things is obviously unjust to the members of an honourable profession." The protest is as truthful as it is necessary.

Mr. Martin Harvey, who has been playing to huge audiences at the Liverpool Court Theatre this week, has made a practical suggestion in the local Press. Noticing a large number of unemployed men waiting in queue to obtain a free plate of soup in one of the large Liverpool squares, Mr. Harvey addressed a letter to the papers, in which he drew attention to the fact that St. George's Hall, admittedly one of the finest buildings in Europe, if not in the world, was badly in need of exterior cleansing. He suggested that rather than pauperise so many men by this free gift of soup, their energies should be turned upon the task of bringing back the Greek temple, which is Liverpool's glory, to its original state. From all appearances Mr. Harvey's suggestion is likely to be taken up by the authorities of the Mersey city.

Mr. Harvey, Miss N. de Silva, and their company go next week to Edinburgh, where they are to appear at the Lyceum Theatre, with a fortnight at the King's Theatre, Glasgow, to follow.

Terry's Theatre will shortly be occupied by Mr. A. F. Henderson, who will start a season there at Easter, with a new farce by Mr. Arthur Law. The piece is at present without a title, but those suggested, namely, The Spider and the Fly, Artful Miss Patience, and A Game of Patience, may give some idea of the character of the novelty. Miss Annie Hughes has been engaged for the leading part, and others in the cast will be Mr. C. W. Somerset, Mr. Paul Arthur, and Miss Helen Ferrers.

Mr. Forbes-Robertson, in an eloquent speech at a meeting of business men at the Cannon-street Hotel on Wednesday, appealed to them to give their womenkind a broader horizon to their lives, and hope and opportunity to elevate and improve their minds. The objection that women were physically inferior Mr. Robertson met with the remark that Hackenschmidt, the wrestler, could break Lord Roberts's neck by a twist of the wrist. That, however, did not prove Lord Roberts was incapable of being a great General. It was not physique, it was mind which ruled the world.

Mr. Weedon Grossmith, who is this week appearing at the Borough Theatre, Stratford, will shortly be seen again in the West End, having acquired a farce from the pen of Mr. R. C. Carton for production at the Criterion at the end of the run of The Real Woman. The leading parts in the new piece, for which no title has yet been decided upon, will be played by the clever comedian and Miss Compton. It should be added that Miss Evelyn Millard is retaining her managerial interest in the Criterion Theatre, although she will not be appearing in Mr. Carton's play.

Mr. Walter Everard, who has been touring in Australasia for the past year, spent Christmas in Auckland, New Zealand. The weather was intensely hot, and he made immediately for a neighbouring lake on a fishing expedition. Every hole and corner, he reports, is full of fish, and his opinion upon trout just pulled out of the water and grilled on the spot is expressed in the words "simply delicious." After a month's sojourn among the mountains and the Maoris Mr. Everard set out on a visit to Mr. Julius Knight, who has taken a beautiful residence in Sydney for the season. Mr. Everard is booked to return to this country on March 31.

Mr. J. D. Beveridge has added another leaf to his laurels by his fine performance as James Browne in The Head of the Firm at the Vaudeville Theatre. His picture of the shrewd, genial, slightly cynical, humorous old ex-schoolmaster is full of dry humour and quaint, sly drollery, and his action as deus ex machinâ of the play is very important and effective. The embodiment is a masterpiece of quiet, clever character acting.

At the close of the performance of Carmen by the Moody-Manners Opera Company at Her Majesty's Theatre, Dundee, last Saturday evening, Mr. Manners, in the course of a speech, thanked the Dundee public for its support, and paid a high tribute to the management of Her Majesty's. He threw out a suggestion that an operatic society should be formed in Dundee to get up grand operas, either with a view to giving performances on their own account, when he would help them with principals, scores, dresses, &c., or else to sing with the Moody-Manners chorus when that company visited the town. There are already such societies at work in Dundee, and it would only require a little initiative and enterprise on the part of responsible people to take advantage of Mr. Manners' generous offer.

Mr. Matheson Lang's attack of influenza caused the postponement of Hamlet at the Lyceum from Tuesday last to this evening. Purchasers of seats for the former occasion can either have their money returned or the tickets exchanged for another night.

Influenza is also the cause of the postponement of The House of Bondage by the Afternoon Theatre at His Majesty's, two of the members of the cast having been laid up through the effects of the malady. Tickets purchased for yesterday, the original date, will be available for Tuesday next, for which the performance is now fixed.

A meeting of the committee of the Managers' Club, Savoy Mansions, Strand, was held on the 5th inst., when there were present Messrs. M. V. Leveaux (in the chair), E. Lockwood, A. Bertram, F. Weathersby, W. Muskerry Tilson (hon. solicitor), and M. Martin (secretary). Messrs. H. Dobell Lyle, H. Sherwood Martin, R. Courtier Dutton, and H. A. Langlois were elected members.

The committee of the Touring Managers' Association, Ltd., met on the same day at the Managers' Club. There were present Messrs. E. Graham Falcon (in the chair), F. Leslie Moreton, E. Lockwood, F. Weathersby, A. Bertram, G. Carlton Wallace, G. Brydon Phillips, Norman V. Norman, M. V. Leveaux, W. Muskerry Tilson (hon. solicitor), and M. Martin (secretary). A letter from a member with reference to the infringement of the copyright of his play by a manager was read, and the secretary reported that he obtained an apology from the offender, and an assurance that he would discontinue the use of the title. Letters from the Theatrical Managers' Association in reference to cinematograph performances were read. Mr. H. Sherwood Martin was elected a member of the Association.

Mr. Charles Hawtrey, by arrangement with Mr. Tom B. Davis, will produce Mr. Somerset Maugham's adaptation from the French, entitled The Noble Spaniard at the Royalty on Saturday. The scene is laid in Boulogne during 1850. In addition to Mr. Hawtrey the full cast will consist of Mr. E. Lyall Swete, Mr. Athol Stewart, Mr. Leon M. Lion, Miss Kate Cutler, Miss Gladys Cooper, Miss Fanny Brough, Miss Vane Featherston, and Miss Joy Chatwyn.

Miss Decima Moore and her husband, Major F. G. Guggisberg, have collaborated in a new volume, entitled "We Two in West Africa," which Mr. Heinemann announces for publication on March 19. The book deals with the British West African colony, and combines with a cheery account of the country and people much useful information about land-surveying and the gold-mining industry.

Miss Marie Dressler's season at the Aldwych came to an abrupt conclusion on Wednesday, owing to the sudden indisposition of the comedienne who started the venture. On the following evening the members of the company assembled, but were told that Miss Dressler was not going on. Later on, it is stated a letter arrived from the manageress which read:—"To my company,—That I am not able to continue the fight with you all is due to fate, which, I fear, has been against me. I only care for my company, which I was proud of and loved, and I am too ill to explain myself as I should like to; but I want you to know that I mortgaged everything I had in the world to pay you last week. I thank you for your attention and able support, and God knows I wish you all good luck. I did my best."

Miss Lena Ashwell will bring the run of The Truants and her present season at the Kingsway Theatre to a close this evening. The theatre will be reopened on the evening of Wednesday, April 14, when Miss Ashwell will present, in conjunction with Mr. Otho Stuart, a new modern play from the pen of Mr. James Bernard Fagan, whose clever play, The Prayer of the Sword, made such an impression on its production at the Adelphi nearly five years ago.

Mr. Acton Bond and Miss Margaret Halstan took the parts of King John and Constance, respectively, in a dramatic reading of King John, given on the 4th inst., at Stratford-on-Avon, under the auspices of the British Empire Shakespeare Society, the remainder of the cast being drawn from members of the local branch. Several prominent residents took part, including Mr. A. D. Flower (chairman of the Shakespeare Memorial Association), as the Bastard.

The inaugural performance of the Dramatic Sub-committee of the recently instituted "Authors' Board" will be given at the Lyceum Club, Piccadilly, on the afternoon of Tuesday, March 30, when two one-act plays, written and acted by members, will be submitted to judgment.

"Henry of England," described as a new romantic play, in a prologue and three acts, by Olive Lethbridge and John de Stourton, was copyrighted at the Victoria Hall, Bayswater, on March 4.

The Theatre Royal, Whitehaven, which has been closed for a considerable time, has been purchased by Mr. Stanley Rogers, the lessee of the Theatre Royal, North Shields, the Grand Theatre, Lancaster, and the Opera House, Workington. Extensive alterations are contemplated, and the house will be considerably enlarged and brought thoroughly up to date. It is expected that the theatre will be ready for opening early in the autumn.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Sydney Leyton, which took place at the Royal Infirmary, Liverpool, on Friday, the 5th inst. The deceased gentleman was a member of Mr. Harry Foxwell's Mother company, which was playing at the Queen's Theatre in Liverpool, and had appeared up to the Wednesday night. He became ill, and sank rapidly, the cause of death being pneumonia.

Mr. Leyton had had a long and varied experience, his principal engagements during the last twelve years being with the Cowper Calvert company, the Compton Comedy Company, Mr. George Alexander's company in The Prisoner of Zenda, Mr. Percy Hutchison's company in The Liars, and Mr. Edward Marris's company in The Dandy Doctor. A few years ago he went out to South Africa with the late Willie Edouin, and there he remained for some considerable time with the late Kate Vaughan, and also under the managements of Mr. Leonard Rayne and Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler. The funeral took place on Sunday at the Roman Catholic Cemetery at Ford, near Liverpool.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison presented Lady Frederick to a big audience on Monday evening at the Broadway Theatre, New Cross. Miss Mabel Love played the title-rôle in Mr. Somerset Maugham's great London success, and was supported by a strong cast, including Mr. Robert Minster, whose finished performance of Paradine Fouldes contributed largely to the success of the production. The booking ahead for Lady Frederick is extremely gratifying, and the stability and general brilliancy of the production, which has drawn to the theatres many thousands of the public, proves conclusively that the Hutchison management have an ever-increasing clientèle.

Mr. E. Oswald Brooks has his hands full at present. His own New Housemaid company, the Ian Maclaren Répertoire Company, and the Grand Theatre, Swansea, all call for his attention at the same time. A born "hustler," hardly a week goes by which does not see Mr. Brooks racing round the country on his Darracq car, inspecting companies, booking dates, &c., and yet managing somehow to spend a quiet week-end at his charming home, Underhill, Mumbles, a few miles out of Swansea.

The Ian Maclaren Shakespearean company is "starring" this week at the Grand Theatre, Walsall, this being the first visit of Mr. Maclaren and his talented company to that city. A completely new set of armour, costing upwards of £200, has just been added to the equipment of this now justly celebrated combination.

Mr. C. W. Ramsay, the acting-manager of the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield, took his annual benefit last week, when a crowded house gave evidence of his popularity. A special programme was submitted, the first item being a scene from Her Marriage Vow, the drama which was the attraction for the week. The entertainment also included contributions by the Grimesthorpe Prize Brass Band, Miss Rosie Batt, Mr. George Smith (comedian), Mr. Lauri Clare (comedian), Mr. Johnny Watson, Mr. Curley Jackson, Mr. George Loukes (comedian), Messrs. Wm. Mackenzie and George Urquhart (pipers from the Caledonian Society), Mr. James Lodge, Mr. Henry Scorah, Mr. Will Groves, Marsello (juggler), Mr. T. A. Crookes, Mr. H. Middleton, Master Willie Bray, and Mr. Cliff Dixo. Miss Edie King came from the Empire Palace to sing and dance, and the proceedings concluded with an exciting wrestling contest between two local wrestlers.

The beneficiaire was the recipient of many presents, including those from Mr. W. D. Forsdike, the managing-director, and from the staff of the theatre and members of the orchestra. Mr. Ramsay met with an overwhelming reception when he acknowledged the many gifts, and took the opportunity of giving to Messrs. E. L. Garside and J. Forbes Knowles, who kindly undertook the whole of the stage-management, a piece of Sheffield cutlery.

Miss Constance Drever, the popular young Scotch soprano, has been engaged by M. Franck, of the Théâtre du Gymnase, to create the part of the Merry Widow with his French company, in the first production of this musical piece in Paris.

Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl, who has just concluded an engagement as acting-manager for Mr. Robert Arthur's pantomime season at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, has been re-engaged by Mr. Arthur as treasurer until the end of the season at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne. He takes up his new duties on Monday

"Tried for Her Life," a Free Trade play, by Mr. Ernest Wyon, the agent of the local Liberal Association, was produced at Brighton on the 5th inst., and met with a cordial reception from opponents of Tariff Reform.

Fulham Football Club, in its match with Oldham, at Oldham, this afternoon, will be represented by Fryer, Lindsay, Sharp, Collins, Suart, Mouncher, Lee or Smith, Freeman, Dalrymple, Millington, and Lipsham. In the South-Eastern League match Fulham Reserves v. Clapton Orient Reserves at Fulham, this afternoon, the home team will be Archer, Harper, Leigh, Prout, Littlewort, Waterson, Lee or Smith, B. Millington, Wyllie, McCourt, and Bradshaw. The kick-off is at 3.30.

The Play Actors, who give their first performance of this season at the Court to-morrow (Sunday), when several one-act plays will be produced, have selected for their second production Sister Beatrice, by Maurice Maeterlinck, which will be staged under the direction of Miss Edith Craig at the Court on March 28. The incidental music will be specially composed for the occasion by Mr. Hubert Bath, who wrote the music for Hannele when that play was produced by the Society. His music was subsequently used at His Majesty's.

Miss Violet Vanbrugh and Miss Marie Löhr will be the guests of the evening at the ladies annual dinner of the O.P. Club at the Criterion on Sunday, March 21, and will answer for "The Ladies," whose health will be proposed by Mr. T. McDonald Rendle. Mr. Henry Neville will give the toast of "The O.P. Club," and Miss Ethel Irving that of "The Chairman," Mr. Max Pemberton.

A very agreeable incident marked the performance at the Theatre Royal, Sunderland, on Saturday evening by Mr. Augustine Knight's company of Mysteries of the Thames. As Miss Ella Vane made her entrance in the third act, a beautiful and valuable little pure white toy Pomeranian was handed over the footlights from an admirer. The little dog had a collar displaying the Sunderland football colours, and this so pleased the audience that they cheered for some minutes.

At a meeting of the Northwich District Council, Cheshire, plans of the new Theatre and Pavilion which is to be erected in the town for Mrs. P. E. Fletcher were submitted and passed. The building, which will accommodate 1,200, is to be entirely constructed of reinforced concrete, and will be fire-resisting throughout. The stage will admit of large productions. It is hoped to have the building completed by the autumn.

Miss Florence Glossop-Harris has been sitting for Mr. Louis Tussaud for the figure of Mary Magdalen in connection with his scheme of presenting the life of Christ in tableaux at the Albert Hall. Miss Glossop-Harris was also to have designed all the feminine costumes for the series of thirty-six tableaux, but work in connection with her répertoire company prevents her undertaking the task.

An interesting wedding was that of Mr. Victor Rea and Miss Mona Hall, daughter of Mr. Matt Hall, of the Burslem Theatre, which took place quietly at the Paddington Registry office on Monday last, the happy couple having first met in Mr. Harry Tilbury's company now playing His Dishonoured Wife at the Stratford Theatre Royal. Before the curtain was finally rung down on Monday night the newly-wedded pair were the recipients of many congratulations and gifts, including handsome bouquets handed across the footlights to the bride. The orchestra, grasping the situation, felicitously joined in with the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The Crystal Palace Theatre will have a distinguished visitor next week in Mr. Edward Terry, who will appear in some of his most famous characters. Sweet Lavender will be given on Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday evenings; the Wednesday evening and the Saturday matinée will be devoted to Liberty Hall; The Passport will be put on at the Wednesday matinée and on Friday night; and on Thursday The Magistrate will occupy the bill.

A company under the name of the Provincial Play Productions Company has been formed and will shortly tour several first-class dramas and sketches, under the direction of Mr. C. Elliman. The manager and secretary of the company is Mr. H. Elliman, and the head offices are at Birmingham. The company will begin with the well-known drama A Heart's Desire.

Miss Ethel van Praagh and Mr. J. Edward Whitty will produce at the Grand Theatre, Fulham, on Monday, for the first time in London, Mr. Charles Darrell's play The Eyes of the World, a conflict of sex, in three encounters. Miss van Praagh will appear as Helen de L'Orme, supported by a carefully-selected company.

Mr. Fowler Thatcher has just completed a three months' tour as Abanazar and producer of Messrs. Glenville and Osmond's successful pantomime of Aladdin. He is now disengaged. In comedy, character, or eccentric old men, either for musical comedy, drama, or sketches, Mr. Thatcher can boast a wide experience.

The fourteenth pantomime visit of the Rocket Club took place last Friday week at the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, when some three hundred members and friends (many of whom were attired in fancy dress) were present. Twenty-eight presentations were made during the evening to the various managers and artists, and Mr. Lester Collingwood welcomed the club from the stage. In addition to the pantomime Little Riding Hood, extra turns were provided by Mr. Will Gardner and Mr. W. J. Pashley.

The Old Morality Everyman will be given at Mr. Robert Arthur's various theatres on seven afternoons during Lent. The series will begin at the Coronet on Wednesday, March 24, and will conclude at the same house on April 8, performances being given at Kennington and Fulham in the meantime.

The next productions of the Incorporated Stage Society will be The Fountain, a comedy in three acts, by G. Calderon, and Unemployed, a play in one act by Margaret M. Mack

The Wakefield Opera House was prettily decorated last (Friday) night on the occasion of a special territorial performance of The Ladder of Life. The entertainment was under the patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress of Wakefield, Lady Catherine Milnes Gaskell, the Right Hon. C. G Milnes Gaskell, Captain Heslegrave, and a number of officers and civil officials.

The Glasgow Repertory Theatre, says the local Record, will begin operations at the Royalty in that city early next month with Bernard Shaw's You Never Can Tell. The cast is to include Mr. Hubert Harben and Miss Mary Jerrold. After You Never Can Tell will come Ibsen's An Enemy of the People, for which Mr. Beerbohm Tree has given the use of his own "prompt copy." Mr. Tree, it may be added, is on the list of shareholders in the Glasgow Repertory Theatre, along with Lord Howard de Walden, J. M. Barrie, Albert Chevalier, H. B. Irving, Neil Munro, and others.

The pantomime supper and dance of the Grand Theatre, Glasgow, was held in the local Albert Hall, and a merry party which included most of the principals of Messrs. Buchanan and Stevens's Cinderella company, with the theatre staff and a number of friends, kept the fun going briskly from midnight till dawn. The affair was unanimously voted a huge success.
